Mr. LEWIS. I announce for the RECORD that the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. DUFFY] and the Senator from Georgia [Mr. RUSSELL] are absent on official business as members of the committee appointed to attend the dedication of the battle monuments in France.

The Senator from Arkansas [Mrs. CARAWAY] is unavoidably detained.

The Senator from New Jersey [Mr. SMATHERS] is absent because of illness in his family.

The Senator from Tennessee [Mr. BERRY], the Senator from Virginia [Mr. BYRD], the Senator from New York [Mr. COPELAND], the Senator from Delaware [Mr. HUGHES], the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. NEELY], and the Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS] are detained on important public business.

Mr. AUSTIN. I announce that my colleague the junior Senator from Vermont [Mr. GIBSON] is absent in the performance of official duty as a member of the committee appointed to attend the dedication of the battle monuments in France.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I announce that the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. NORRIS] is detained from the Senate because of illness.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Eighty-one Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

ORDINANCES, ETC., OF COUNCIL OF ST. THOMAS AND ST. JOHN, VIRGIN ISLANDS

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a letter from the Acting Secretary of the Interior, transmitting, pursuant to law, copies of ordinances, resolutions, etc., adopted by the Municipal Council of St. Thomas and St. John and approved by the Governor of the Virgin Islands, which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on Territories and Insular Affairs.

LOANS ON ARIZONA COTTON

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, I have not very often sought the privilege of inserting telegrams in the RECORD, but I have one from Mr. M. A. Anderson, president of the Pinal County (Ariz.) Farm Bureau, on a very important subject, and I ask that it be inserted in the RECORD.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the telegram will be printed in the RECORD.

The telegram referred to is as follows:

CASA GRANDE, ARIZ., August 7, 1937.

Hon. HENRY ASHURST,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.:

News articles here indicate possibility of 12-cent loan cotton this year. Wish to remind you again of awful whipping the State of Arizona and particularly Pinal County has taken on all other measures of this kind as compared to older sections. If loan is made as under previous programs the very best a Pinal County cotton farmer cooperating 100 percent with present program could expect would be approximately 65-percent coverage. Sentiment of A. A. A. Administration tends to charge this State with new development, particularly cotton production, because of increase price caused by A. A. A. programs. This very definitely not the case. Practically all lands now in cultivation and some lands not yet developed are the direct result of bond issues sold or signed contracts dated in the early twenties, at least several years prior to any A. A. A. program. Interest bond redemption and high taxes make the cultivation of these lands an economic necessity. In all fairness may we again ask that you make every effort possible to the end that this acreage and present yields be given equal recognition with old producing sections of the Nation in any legislation tending to regulate agricultural production.

M. A. ANDERSON,
President, Pinal County Farm Bureau.

REPORT OF A COMMITTEE

Mr. THOMAS of Utah, from the Committee on Education and Labor, to which was referred the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 161) authorizing the Bureau of Labor Statistics to collect information as to amount and value of all goods produced in State and Federal prisons, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 1146) thereon.

BENEFITS TO WORLD WAR VETERANS

Mr. GEORGE. From the Committee on Finance I report back favorably, without amendment, the bill (H. R. 6384) to liberalize the provisions of existing laws governing service-connected benefits for World War veterans and their dependents, and for other purposes, and I submit a report (No. 1147) thereon.

This is a bill which amends the provisions of existing law giving additional benefits to service-connected World War veterans and their dependents. I had thought I would ask for the immediate consideration of the bill, but I shall not do so, but merely report it for the calendar.

ENROLLED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTION PRESENTED

Mr. LONERGAN, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that that committee presented to the President of the United States the following enrolled bills and joint resolution:

On August 5, 1937:

S. 176. An act for the relief of George Smith and Ketha Smith;

S. 972. An act for the relief of Ethel Smith McDaniel;

S. 1047. An act to authorize the city of Pierre, S. Dak., to construct, equip, maintain, and operate on Farm Island, S. Dak., certain amusement and recreational facilities; to charge for the use thereof; and for other purposes;

S. 1379. An act to authorize the Five Civilized Tribes, in suits heretofore filed under their original jurisdictional acts, to present claims to the United States Court of Claims by amended petitions to conform to the evidence, and to authorize said court to adjudicate such claims upon their merits as though filed within the time limitation fixed in said original jurisdictional acts;

S. 1401. An act for the relief of Willard Collins;

S. 1453. An act for the relief of Maude P. Gresham and Agnes M. Driscoll;

S. 1935. An act to authorize and direct the Comptroller General of the United States to allow credit for all outstanding disallowances and suspensions in the accounts of disbursing officers or agents of the Government for payments made pursuant to certain adjustments and increases in compensations of Government officers and employees; and

S. J. Res. 171. Joint resolution relating to the employment of personnel and expenditures made by the Charles Carroll of Carrollton Bicentenary Commission.

BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTION INTRODUCED

Bills and a joint resolution were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. BULOW:

A bill (S. 2926) to amend section 13 of the Classification Act of 1923, as amended; to the Committee on Civil Service.

By Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma:

A bill (S. 2927) to regulate the times and places of holding court in Oklahoma; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. SHEPPARD:

A bill (S. 2928) granting a pension to Creed M. Click (with accompanying papers); to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. SCHWELLENBACH:

A bill (S. 2929) granting a pension to Lottie B. Smith; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. HERRING:

A bill (S. 2930) for the relief of Ray C. McMillen; to the Committee on Claims.

LEASE OF AMERICAN DESTROYERS TO BRAZIL

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, I ask permission to introduce a joint resolution of a somewhat unusual character. It is entitled "A joint resolution authorizing the President to lease destroyers to the American republics." I present this joint resolution by request of the State and other departments, and I desire to have it printed in the RECORD in connection with a letter addressed to me by the State Department, a similar letter having been addressed to the chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations and to the corresponding committees of the House.

Mr. President, briefly, as I interpret the Secretary's letter, the Brazilian Government has requested the United States Government to loan them six American destroyers in order that the Brazilian Government may train officers and men to man the new vessels that they are purchasing and constructing.

The Brazilian Government is concerned with certain tendencies of the world political situation, especially the desire on the part of some nations for access to raw materials, and the forceful action taken by those nations to consummate these desires. They are, therefore, building up their very modest national defense.

If the joint resolution is agreed to, the American Government would loan them some of our overage destroyers now out of commission.

The resolution has the approval of the President, the State Department, and the Navy Department.

The Secretary of State states:

> If the government of the other countries of this hemisphere find it necessary to turn to foreign governments for assistance in a matter of this character, it would be preferable, for obvious reasons, that such assistance be extended by the United States rather than by some other foreign government.

The Secretary of State requests that the resolution be adopted at this session of the Congress.

The resolution includes other countries of this hemisphere.

I submit the resolution for appropriate reference and without any personal opinion on the subject at this time ask unanimous consent that the letter from the Secretary of State be printed in the RECORD at this point, together with the resolution.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator will state it.

Mr. LEWIS. I ask to what committee the communications and the resolution presented by the Senator from Massachusetts are to be referred?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair understands they are to be referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Mr. LEWIS. I respectfully urge that inasmuch as the resolution is one touching upon the relations of the United States with the Republic of Brazil, the subject matter ought to go to the Committee on Foreign Relations. I make that statement because the matter calls for consideration by that committee.

Mr. WALSH. I request that the resolution be referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations, as the subject matter deals with our relations with foreign countries. It is clearly a foreign-relations question and the Navy is only interested in the national defense aspect of the proposal.

The joint resolution (S. J. Res. 200) authorizing the President to lease destroyers to the American republics was read twice by its title, referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations, and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

> Resolved, etc., That the President of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized, upon application from the foreign governments concerned, and whenever in his discretion the public interests render such a course advisable, to lease destroyers to the governments of the American republics under such terms and conditions as he may prescribe.
> SEC. 2. As consideration for such lease the United States shall be paid an amount equivalent to the total cost of marine insurance on the vessels involved for the entire period of the lease, which amount shall not be covered into the Treasury of the United States but shall under the direction of the President of the United States be expended for the purpose of obtaining such insurance.

Mr. WALSH. I also request that the letter addressed to me by the Secretary of State be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, August 5, 1937.

The Honorable DAVID I. WALSH,
Chairman, Senate Committee on Naval Affairs,
United States Senate.

MY DEAR SENATOR WALSH: During the last 4½ years the administration has been making a determined effort to place the relations of the United States with the other American Republics on a solid basis of friendship, mutual respect, and fruitful cooperation. The result of this effort has been extremely gratifying. The American Republics which heretofore have viewed the United States with suspicion and even distrust today hold the United States as a friend and real neighbor, sensitive to their rights and interests and desirous of cooperating with them to the fullest measure.

Indicative of this growing friendship, which is one of the most heartening developments in our foreign relations, have been the numerous requests for friendly assistance which have been received from the American Republics. We have been requested to loan the services of technical experts or to give technical advice regarding a wide range of subjects, such as highway construction, education, agriculture, government finance, sanitation, aviation, etc., and whenever appropriate we have been glad to comply with these requests. In the present letter I should like to present you with information regarding a somewhat different type of request and to lay before you the views of the President and bespeak for them your interest and cooperation.

Recently the Government of Brazil has informed this Government of its increasing concern with certain tendencies of the world political situation. The desire on the part of some nations for access to raw materials and the forceful action taken by those nations to consummate these desires has made Brazil, a country of vast territory and relatively small population, particularly apprehensive. The Government, therefore, has thought it the part of prudence to improve its relatively modest national defense, but, being deficient in trained military or naval personnel and equipment, it finds its task a considerable one.

With respect to naval defense, the Brazilian Government is constructing certain vessels and purchasing others abroad. Upon the construction or delivery of these vessels, the Government will be the possessor of what it considers to be necessary naval material, but, unless steps are taken meanwhile, there will be a dearth of trained personnel to operate its ships. In order to remedy this deficiency the Government of Brazil has inquired whether the Government of the United States would be disposed to lease six of its decommissioned destroyers until its own vessels are ready.

This request of the Government of Brazil has had the very careful consideration of the President, of the Navy Department, and of this Department. The President believes, and his views are shared by the two executive departments concerned, that there are two weighty reasons which commend the proposal. In the first place, if the governments of the other countries of this hemisphere find it necessary to turn to foreign governments for assistance in a matter of this character, it would be preferable, for obvious reasons, that such assistance be extended by the United States rather than by some other foreign government. Secondly, it would appear to be in the interest of this country were its overage vessels now decommissioned because of the expense involved to be kept in running order and available for instant use, which would be the case if they were leased under the proper terms and conditions to other countries of this hemisphere. These overage vessels are being retained by the Navy Department at the present time only because of their value in case of an emergency, but their value is greatly lessened because it requires approximately 2 months working at top speed 24 hours a day properly to recommission vessels which have been retired from active service. For these principal reasons the President is disposed to consider favorably the Brazilian request, it being understood, of course, that no such equipment would be loaned by this Government except when the public interests rendered such a course advisable, and when the equipment in question could be spared without any impairment of the defense requirements of the United States.

In order that this Government may be in a position to take such action as that indicated above, the President has requested me to submit for the consideration and study of your committee a draft resolution which will authorize him under certain conditions to loan destroyers to the American republics. You will observe that such action would be predicated upon the application of the foreign government concerned, and would be authorized whenever, in the discretion of the President, the public interests rendered such a course advisable. In section 2 of the draft resolution it is provided that there shall be received as consideration for the lease of such vessels an amount equivalent to the total cost of marine insurance on the vessels for the entire period of the lease. It is understood, of course, that this Government would not proceed to make available any of its naval vessels to Brazil without making a similar offer to the other countries of this hemisphere.

At the President's direction I am addressing similar letters to the chairmen of the House Committee on Foreign Affairs, the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations, and the House Committee on Naval Affairs. The President would appreciate your conferring with the chairmen of these other committees, and if you concur in his views, to arrange for immediate consideration by the Congress of the attached resolution, which it is hoped may be adopted at this session of Congress.

Sincerely yours,

CORDELL HULL.

THE ARMY AIR CORPS TODAY—ADDRESS BY SECRETARY WOODRING

[Mr. SHEPPARD asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD a radio address on the subject The Army Air Corps Today, delivered by Hon. Harry H. Woodring, Secretary of War, on Aug. 6, 1937, which appears in the Appendix.]

POLITICAL CONTRIBUTIONS—ARTICLE BY FRANKLYN WALTMAN

[Mr. BRIDGES asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an article by Franklyn Waltman on the subject of Contributions for Political Purposes, published in the Washington Post of June 29, 1937, which appears in the Appendix.]

SALE OF POLITICAL CAMPAIGN BOOKS

[Mr. GUFFEY asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an article from the New York Daily News of Aug. 7, 1937, entitled "Both Sides Paid Same Man for Campaign Books", which appears in the Appendix.]

FARM RELIEF—ARTICLE FROM THE MISSOURI FARMER

[Mr. CLARK asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an article relating to farm relief, written by William Hirth, editor and publisher, and printed in the Missouri Farmer, which appears in the Appendix.]

ANTILYNCHING LEGISLATION—EDITORIAL FROM BRISTOL (VA.) HERALD-COURIER

[Mr. CLARK asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an editorial from the Bristol (Va.) Herald-Courier entitled "Southern Press on Lynch Law", which appears in the Appendix.]

CONSIDERATION OF UNOBJECTED-TO BILLS ON THE CALENDAR

The VICE PRESIDENT. Under a previous order made by the Senate the clerk will call the calendar, beginning at the point where its consideration was left off yesterday, for the consideration of unobjected-to bills.

HAWAII NATIONAL PARK

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 1995) to add certain lands on the Island of Hawaii to the Hawaii National Park, and for other purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys with amendments.

The amendments were, on page 10, to strike out section 3, as follows:

SEC. 3. (a) That the Secretary of the Interior is authorized to lease, under such rules and regulations as he may deem proper, land ascertained by him to be suitable for home-site purposes in the Kalapana extension as described herein, to native Hawaiians when such occupancy does not encroach on or prevent free access to any points of historic, scientific, or scenic interest or in any manner obstruct or interfere with protection and preservation of said area as a part of the Hawaii National Park: Provided, however, That occupants of home sites shall reside on the land not less than 6 months in any one year: Provided further, That on all construction projects within said area preference shall be given in employment of labor, first to native Hawaiian occupants of home sites provided for in this section, and, second, to other native Hawaiians living in the vicinity: And provided further, That fishing shall be permitted in said area only by native Hawaiian residents of said area or of adjacent villages and by visitors under their guidance.

(b) The term "native Hawaiian", as used in this section, means any descendant of not less than one-half part of the blood of the races inhabiting the Hawaiian Islands previous to 1778.

And in line 23 to renumber the section.

The amendments were agreed to.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

COLUMBIA NATIONAL FOREST, WASH.

The bill (H. R. 3866) to add certain lands to the Columbia National Forest in the State of Washington was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That, subject to any valid existing claim or entry, all lands of the United States within the areas hereinafter described be, and the same are hereby, added to and made parts of the Columbia National Forest, in the State of Washington, to be hereinafter administered under the laws and regulations relating to the national forests; and the provisions of the act approved March 20, 1922 (U. S. C., title 16, secs. 486, 487), as amended, are hereby extended and made applicable to all other lands within the said described area.

Sections 1 to 3, inclusive, and 11 and 12, township 2 north, range 4 east; sections 1 to 3, inclusive, 6 to 8, inclusive, and 10 to 36, inclusive, township 3 north, range 4 east; sections 1 to 28, inclusive, 34 to 36, inclusive, township 4 north, range 4 east; all of township 5 north, range 4 east; sections 1, 2, 11 to 15, inclusive, 22 to 27, inclusive, and 33 to 36, inclusive, township 6 north, range 4 east; sections 4 to 9, inclusive, 16 to 21, inclusive, 28 to 33, inclusive, township 6 north, range 5 east, all in the State of Washington, Willamette meridian.

FRED P. HALBERT

The bill (H. R. 827) for the relief of Fred P. Halbert was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 992) to make electricians licensed officers after an examination was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I observe that the Director of the Bureau of Marine Inspection suggests an amendment, and that with such an amendment he has no objection. I do not believe the amendment has been made. Therefore, I suggest the bill be passed over.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be passed over.

REPORT ON INVESTIGATION OF POTASH INDUSTRY

The Senate proceeded to consider the resolution (S. Res. 148) extending the time for submittal of a report of an investigation of the domestic potash industry and matters relating thereto.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, the title of the resolution as it appears on the printed calendar reads "potatoes" instead of "potash." The committee merely asks further time to submit its report. It has made a considerable investigation and wishes further time to submit its report.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That the report required to be made by the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys pursuant to Senate Resolution 274, Seventy-fourth Congress, second session, agreed to June 18, 1936, may be made at any time prior to the expiration of the Seventy-fifth Congress.

PROTECTION OF PROPERTY OWNED BY FOREIGN GOVERNMENTS

The joint resolution (S. J. Res. 191) to regulate the use of public streets and sidewalks within the District of Columbia adjacent to property owned or occupied by foreign governments for diplomatic purposes was announced as next in order.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN] give us an explanation?

Mr. PITTMAN. I should be glad to do so.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, I shall be delighted to have the Senator from Nevada explain the joint resolution, but I shall ask that it may go over until I have further time to look into it. I shall withhold my objection until the Senator makes his explanation.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, I ask that the joint resolution may be read.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the joint resolution will be read.

The joint resolution (S. J. Res. 191), which had been reported from the Committee on Foreign Relations with an amendment to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert, was read, as follows:

That it shall be unlawful to display any flag, banner, or device designed or adapted to bring into public notice any party, organization, or movement, or the political, social, or economic acts, views, or purposes of any individual, party, group, or organization within 500 feet of any building or premises within the District of Columbia used or occupied by any foreign government or its representatives as an embassy or for diplomatic or other official purposes, except by, and in accordance with, a permit issued by the superintendent of police of the said District; or to congregate within 500 feet of any such building or premises, and refuse to disperse after having been ordered so to do by the police authorities of the said District.

SEC. 2. The police court of the District of Columbia shall have jurisdiction of offenses committed in violation of this resolution; and any person convicted of violating any of the provisions of this resolution shall be punished by a fine not exceeding $100 or by imprisonment not exceeding 60 days, or both.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, the committee has substituted an amendment for the text of the original joint resolution as introduced. Senators will note that it is very short. It simply provides—

That it shall be unlawful to display any flag, banner, or device or design adapted to bring into public notice any party, organization, or movement, or the political, social, or economic acts, views, or purposes of any individual, party, group, or organization within 500 feet of any building or premises within the District of Columbia used or occupied by any foreign government or its representatives as an embassy or for diplomatic or other official purposes, except by and in accordance with the permit issued by the superintendent of police of the said District; or to congregate within 500 feet of any such building or premises and refuse to disperse after having notice so to do by the police authorities of the said District.

It will be observed that the joint resolution has nothing to do with streets or alleys. It merely prohibits the display of flags or banners within 500 feet of an embassy or legation or consulate when the flags or banners or devices are intended to bring into public notice an organization or party or group.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I have read the joint resolution and heard the Senator's explanation, and I am entirely willing that it should pass. I have no objection.

Mr. PITTMAN. Let me finish my statement for the benefit of the Senator from Wisconsin.

It will be observed that such parties or groups may go within 500 feet of an embassy with any banner or flag or device they wish, provided they have the permission of the chief of police. The reason for that is obvious. There might be a perfectly peaceful parade down the street past an embassy, having nothing to do whatever with the embassy or the ambassador or the country which he represents. On the other hand, the very purpose of the parade might be to criticize the ruler of some government or its ambassador or minister, in which case I personally believe it should not be permitted.

As to congregating near an embassy, there is no punishment provided except and unless the parties refuse to disperse when so ordered.

I realize there has been considerable opposition manifested to this character of legislation and to this particular joint resolution from certain sources. The opposition is based upon the theory of certain societies that the restrictions infringe upon their constitutional right of peaceful assemblage and petition. Certainly I have never made any opposition that I know of, at any rate, not on this floor, in 24 years, against the right of peaceful assemblage and petition. I think these are rights, and yet they must be reasonably exercised, so as not to nullify other rights nor to obstruct the other constitutional functions of our Government.

Let us see the situation in which some of our citizens find themselves today throughout the world. In Peiping, China, which is several hundred miles from the coast, there are 500 men, women, and children who are American citizens. They are in a little compound of probably 10 acres in extent. It is not protected by high walls. There is a wall in front and a small wall around the sides, over which anyone could climb. We have there probably three or four hundred marines.

In Tientsin we have congregated 700 men, women, and children, citizens of the United States, whom we are trying to protect. There the situation is possibly even worse than in Peiping, because we have no compound in Tientsin, but we have a place allotted to us across which anyone may easily run.

Away back in Hankow, several hundred miles up the Yangtze River, we have 200 men, women, and children, mostly, of course, missionaries and their families.

They have been gathered together in Hankow. We have no compound there. There are probably not to exceed 25 or 30 marines in that place. The press tells us that the Japanese are sending their fleet up there to protect their own nationals and that they have landed several hundred Japanese marines. On one side of a street are the Japanese soldiers and on the other side are several thousand Chinese soldiers facing them. The Japanese contend they are there for the purpose of evacuating the Japanese subjects. Be that as it may, a conflict may occur at any moment.

So far as Peiping is concerned there has not only been fighting around the city, which has a population of two or three million people, but there has been hand-to-hand fighting inside the city. The Japanese, I believe, are now in control of Peiping, in a military sense, and yet while they were in control the other day in Tientsin what happened? There was twenty or thirty thousand Chinese soldiers in civil uniforms who were not recognized as soldiers, and suddenly the battle broke out in Tientsin. The French have a compound there. They had the French citizens in that compound and a fight nearly ensued because some Japanese attempted to enter the French compound.

The situation with regard to our citizens in that country is extremely delicate. We cannot evacuate them now. It is out of the question. We have to keep them in the compounds in these places until some arrangement is made by which we may safely transport them to the coast.

We are not afraid of the armies on either side. The armies are under the control of officers, and recognize discipline. But in a city of 3,000,000 people, such as Peiping—and there are probably the same number in Tientsin—there are camp followers. They exist in China the same as in every other country. There are guerillas that hang on the outskirts of the fighting forces only for the purpose of murder and loot. Those are the persons that we are afraid of.

Let me say that our Government has been striving for over a month in every possible way to get the warring factions there—the Japanese officers on one side and the Chinese officers on the other side—to give us safe conduct out of the country for our citizens. We have not been able to accomplish that, because the fighting is so intense all around those cities that the combatants will not stop the fighting long enough to give safe conduct; but we have begged them and urged them to aid our small forces in those places to keep mobs at a reasonable distance away from the compounds.

If a mob of 10,000 angry persons, no matter what nation it belongs to, sweeps across one of the compounds, the few marines we have there will be swept off the face of the earth, and the men, women, and children will go with them. We are appealing to the Ambassador of Japan and the Ambassador of China here to communicate to their governments in Japan and China, and through them to communicate to their generals in the field—and they are a long way from their headquarters—and give instructions to protect our embassies, our legations, and our consulates; not only to keep their soldiers away from them, but to keep mobs, which are the chief source of danger, away from those compounds.

That is our situation all over China. It is a desperate situation. I wish to say that so far, both the Japanese Government and the Chinese Government apparently have done everything in their power to protect our embassies and our legations and our consulates against attack. They have even attempted to keep their forces from bombing anywhere in the vicinity. In the very nature of things, however, those who are conducting war with airplanes sometimes cannot be controlled.

In this situation, when we are appealing to the justice and the humanity of other governments to protect our embassies and our legations and our consulates, at least we must show some intent upon our part to treat their embassies and their legations and their consulates in our country in the same way.

Those who communicate with me say, "Why are we paying so much attention to foreigners?" As a matter of fact, the motive that actuates us today is to have the foreigners upon whom we must depend for the protection of our citizens friendly to us. The action that is proposed in this bill is not for the purpose of suppressing or subduing any expressions on the part of any of our people; but I say to you that in a city as large as this, where we have such numerous parks and so many places in which societies may express their opinions, with the conditions that exist, and which at any time may be just as bad in other parts of Asia and Europe as they are in China today, when we have 435 legations and consulates where our people may assemble, it is unreasonable to give consideration for a single moment to a matter of so little moment as the demand of persons to be allowed to go up to the door of an embassy or a legation or a consulate for the purpose of putting up and displaying signs in criticism or condemnation of the country there represented.

That is our situation, and it is a most serious situation. No foreigners in our country have any reason to fear, but we are the ones who have reason to fear for the safety of our citizens in many countries. I think it would be unfortunate if such a simple resolution as this were not allowed to pass, I will say to the Senator from Wisconsin, but to compel us to wait until later on to take it up.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CLARK in the chair). Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, I have listened with a great deal of interest to the statement of the Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN]. I wish to say, however, that while his statement concerning the situation confronting our nationals abroad is accurate, and all of us are concerned about this situation, I cannot see the force of his statement that the protection of our nationals is dependent upon the passage of this resolution.

We have been established as a government for a long time, and this is the first time so far as I know that any such proposal as this has ever been suggested. I am sure the Senator from Nevada did not desire to leave the impression that the efforts of the Chinese and Japanese Governments to protect American nationals in the critical situation in China are dependent upon the adoption of this resolution.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Wisconsin yield to the Senator from Nevada?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I yield.

Mr. PITTMAN. No; I do not think so. I think the Japanese Ambassador here and the Chinese Ambassador, no matter whether or not we protect them against insults and annoyance and possibly riot and physical injury, will do what they can to protect our citizens in their countries; but there is danger of physical injury when great and angry crowds meet in the way that has been referred to. Insults to the representatives of a foreign government anger the nationals of such government, engender hatred, and induce acts of reprisal and violence.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Is the Senator contending that anything has happened in the city of Washington which has threatened or endangered the life of any of the representatives of other governments who are accredited to this Government?

Mr. PITTMAN. Yes; I do.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I am unaware of it. I wish the Senator would give us some of the facts.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, I should like to have read the report of the District police department, which I send to the desk. It is very brief.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the report will be read.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I did not state my objection to the way in which the rule of the Senate is being disregarded. We all know that when objection is made to the consideration of a bill, it goes over. We know that 5 minutes is the entire time allotted to any one Senator to address himself to a bill. If objection has been made to this joint resolution, the Senator from Nevada has occupied considerable time on a joint resolution which cannot be considered at this time; and for that reason I think no more time should be taken until we reach the joint resolution for consideration.

Mr. PITTMAN. I ask unanimous consent to have the report, and a letter from the Secretary of State, printed in the RECORD in connection with my remarks. I had intended to speak of the duty—yes, necessity—of governments protecting foreign diplomats against insults, the threat of mob violence, and intimidation. I shall do so later.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Nevada? The Chair hears none.

The report and letter are as follows:

STATEMENT CONCERNING PICKETING MADE TO MR. HOLMES BY INSPECTOR KELLY, OF THE POLICE DEPARTMENT

About 3 weeks ago at the Italian Embassy for 3 different days there were three or four people from an organization known as the American Friends of Spanish Democracy. They picketed in front of the Italian Embassy on the Sixteenth Street side, carrying banners. They picketed between 8 and 9 in the morning, 12 and 1 and 4 and 5:30 in the afternoon. When they first started out they carried banners saying "Mussolini murders babies." We took this up with the corporation counsel, who said it was an offensive sign. We made them do away with it. The other signs were just political slogans. They did not obstruct the sidewalk, but walked up and down slowly, saying nothing to anyone.

Several days after there were 85 persons, consisting of men, women, and children. They picketed in front of the Italian Embassy from about 4:30 in the afternoon for about 35 or 40 minutes. Several banners were carried. The organization was also known as the American Friends of Spanish Democracy. After they had walked back and forth, making a circle, they started to chant, "Down with Mussolini", "Keep Mussolini out of Spain", "Keep Hitler out of Spain", etc. That large group sounded very loud and was annoying. We would have had to convict every individual if it went to court, so we couldn't take them in as a whole. Nothing could be done about it at the time, even though it was annoying and should have been broken up.

Several months before at the Polish Embassy, Sixteenth and Fuller Streets, there were 150 persons picketing that. The organization consisted of Communists, members of the Workers' Alliance, and friends of the people in Poland who were being persecuted. They continued that picketing about 20 minutes and then dispersed and went on the opposite side of the street on a vacant lot. Once before in the past year there was a demonstration at the Italian Embassy. They wanted to go on the steps of the embassy and make a speech, but we refused to allow it.

I was not at the German Embassy, but about the same thing happened. About 150 arrests were made at the German Embassy. At the German Embassy there were 48 persons arrested for picketing a few months ago—on May 8, 1937, at 12:45 p. m.

Captain Sheetz, of the tenth precinct, says that this same group went to the Spanish Embassy. There were some gentlemen inside the embassy, and one came out and spoke to the crowd that had formed and they dispersed.

It is a regular nuisance and should be broken up.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, August 3, 1937.

The Honorable KEY PITTMAN,
Chairman, Committee on Foreign Relations,
United States Senate.

MY DEAR SENATOR PITTMAN: I refer to Joint Resolution No. 191 to regulate the use of public streets and sidewalks within the District of Columbia adjacent to property owned or occupied by foreign governments for diplomatic purposes and to express my approval of the resolution.

As you know, diplomatic officers are clothed with certain immunities under international law to enable them to transact in countries to which they are accredited or assigned the business of their respective governments. The immunity, therefore is for a practical purpose, i. e., to allow governments to transact official business free from interruption which might flow from molestation of or interference with their representatives. Governments also send to foreign countries representatives who are not clothed with diplomatic immunity in the strict sense of the word but who are, because of their representative status, entitled to certain special protection under the local law, as, for example, consuls, trade commissions, etc.

The United States with its 338 diplomatic missions and consulates is, perhaps more than any other country, interested in obtaining for its representatives the protection which they must have if they are to function effectively.

If we are to obtain for our representatives in foreign countries that degree of protection to which they are entitled, we should be in a position to show a like consideration for representatives of other governments in this country. Unless we extend such reasonable protection to representatives of other governments, we cannot hope to receive protection for our representatives abroad.

It is extremely embarrassing to the Department to be reminded by representatives of foreign governments in the United States that their missions are being interfered with by individuals or groups, particularly when existing domestic law does not seem to cover the situations of which complaint is made. By the comity of nations, representatives of foreign governments in countries where law and order are supposed to prevail are entitled to freedom from any attempted intimidation or coercion.

I therefore trust that you may find no difficulty in procuring passage of the resolution.

Sincerely yours,

CORDELL HULL.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. At the request of the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE], the joint resolution will be passed over.

PRESLY HOLLIDAY

The bill (S. 1451) for the relief of Presly Holliday, quartermaster sergeant, Quartermaster Corps, on the retired list, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Let the bill go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

Mr. MINTON subsequently said: Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to revert to and take up for consideration Calendar No. 1120, Senate bill 1451. At the time this bill was reached on the calendar the Senator from Utah [Mr. KING] entered an objection to it. Since that time I have spoken to the Senator from Utah and have furnished him with some facts concerning the case which did not appear in the report. With those facts I hope the Senator from Utah may see fit to withdraw his objection.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, the facts to which the Senator refers were not included in the report; and they are of sufficient merit to justify the passage of the bill.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Indiana?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 1451) for the relief of Presly Holliday, quartermaster sergeant, Quartermaster Corps, on the retired list, and for other purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on Military Affairs with an amendment at the end of the bill to insert a proviso, so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the provisions of the act of Congress approved June 4, 1920, giving to soldiers placed on the retired list prior to or during the World War, who had had active service therein as commissioned officers, the pay and allowances of retired warrant officers of the Army, and the amendments thereto, be, and the same are hereby, extended to and to include Presly Holliday, who was commissioned a captain, Quartermaster Corps, in August 1917, and held such commission while on the retired list as an enlisted man in 1920: Provided, That no back pay, compensation, allowance, or other benefit shall be held to have accrued prior to the passage of this act.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PAN AMERICAN EXPOSITION, TAMPA, FLA.

The Senate proceeded to consider the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 166) providing for participation by the United States in the Pan American Exposition to be held in Tampa, Fla., in the year 1939 in commemoration of the four hundredth anniversary of the landing of Hernando De Soto in Tampa Bay, and for other purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on Foreign Relations with an amendment, in section 6, page 4, line 18, after the words "sum of", to strike out "$350,000" and insert "$100,000", so as to read:

The sum of $100,000 is hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to remain available until expended, etc.

The amendment was agreed to.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That the President of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized and respectfully requested by proclamation, or in such manner as he may deem proper, to invite all foreign countries and nations to an exposition to be held in Tampa, Fla., to be known as the Pan American Exposition, in commemoration of the four hundredth anniversary of the landing of Hernando De Soto in Tampa Bay, under the auspices and on the grounds of the Florida Fair and Gasparilla Association, Inc., in the year 1939, with a request that they participate therein.

SEC. 2. That there is hereby created a Federal commissioner for such Pan American Exposition, said commissioner to be appointed by the President upon the nomination of the Secretary of Commerce, who shall select for this purpose an official of his Department who has had experience in and is familiar with the preparation and management of exhibitions, and who will serve in this capacity without additional salary. That the expenses of the Federal commissioner and such staff as he may require will be met out of the funds provided for the purposes of the Government participation in the exposition.

SEC. 3. The Secretary of Commerce shall prescribe the duties of the Federal commissioner and shall delegate such powers and functions to him as he shall deem advisable, in order that there may be exhibited at the said Pan American Exposition by the Government of the United States, its executive department, independent offices, and establishments such articles and materials as illustrate the function and administrative faculty of the Government in the advancement of industry, the arts, and peace, demonstrating the nature of our institutions particularly as regards their adaptation to the wants of the people.

SEC. 4. The commissioner may employ such clerks, stenographers, and other assistants as may be necessary, and fix their reasonable compensation within the grades and rates of compensation fixed by the Classification Act of 1923, as amended; purchase such material, contract for such labor and other services, and exercise such powers as are delegated to him by the Secretary of Commerce as hereinbefore provided, and in order to facilitate the functioning of his office may subdelegate such powers (authorized or delegated) to officers and employees as may be deemed advisable by the Secretary of Commerce.

SEC. 5. The heads of the various executive departments, independent offices, and establishments of the Government are authorized to cooperate with the commissioner in the procurement, installation, and display of exhibits; to lend to the Pan American Exposition, with the knowledge and consent of the commissioner, such articles, specimens, and exhibits which the commissioner shall deem to be in the interest of the United States to place with the science or other exhibits to be shown under the auspices of the Florida Fair and Gasparilla Association, Inc.; to contract for such labor or other services as shall be deemed necessary, and to designate officials or employees of their departments or branches to assist the commissioner. At the close of the exposition, or when the connection of the Government of the United States therewith ceases, the commissioner shall cause all such property to be returned to the respective departments and branches from which taken and any expenses incident to the restoration, modification, and revision of such property to a condition which will permit its use at subsequent expositions and fairs, and for the continued employment of personnel necessary to close out the fiscal and other records and prepare the required reports of the participating organizations, may be paid from the appropriation provided; and if the return of such property is not practicable, he may, with the consent of the department or branch from which it was taken, make such disposition thereof as he may deem advisable and account therefor.

SEC. 6. The sum of $100,000 is hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to remain available until expended, parts of which sum may be expended for the erection of a building or buildings and/or for the rental of such space, as the Secretary of Commerce may deem adequate to carry out effectively the provisions of this resolution; for the decoration of such structure or structures; for the proper maintenance of such buildings, site, and grounds during the period of the exposition. The Secretary of Commerce may contract with the Florida Fair and Gasparilla Association, Inc., for the designing and erection of such building or buildings and/or for the rental of such space as shall be deemed proper. The remaining portion of the appropriation authorized under this resolution shall be available for the selection, purchase, preparation, assembling, transportation, installation, arrangement, safekeeping, exhibition, demonstration, and return of such articles and materials as the Secretary of Commerce may decide shall be included in such Government exhibit and in the exhibits of the Pan American Exposition; for the compensation of the employees of the Secretary of Commerce in the District of Columbia and elsewhere, for the payment of salaries of officers and employees of the Government, employed by or detailed for duty with the Secretary of Commerce, and for their actual traveling expenses and subsistence at not to exceed $6 per day: Provided, That no such official or employee so designated shall receive a salary in excess of the amount which he has been receiving in the department or branch where employed plus such reasonable allowance for subsistence expenses as may be deemed proper by the commissioner; for telephone service, purchase of furniture and equipment, stationery and supplies, typewriting, adding, duplicating, and computing machines, their accessories and repairs, books of reference and periodicals, uniforms, maps, reports, documents, plans, specifications, manuscripts, newspapers and all other publications, ice and drinking water for office purposes: Provided further, That payment for telephone service, rents, subscriptions to newspapers and periodicals, and other similar purposes may be made in advance; for the hire of a passenger-carrying automobile, its maintenance, repair, and operation, for the official use of the commissioner; for printing and binding; for entertainment of distinguished visitors, and all other expenses as may be deemed necessary by the Secretary of Commerce, to fulfill properly the purposes of this resolution. All purchases, expenditures, and disbursements, under any appropriations which may be provided by authority of this resolution, shall be made under the direction of the Secretary of Commerce: Provided further, That the Secretary of Commerce, as hereinbefore stipulated, may delegate these powers and functions to the commissioner, and the commissioner, with the consent of the Secretary of Commerce, may subdelegate them: Provided further, That the Secretary of Commerce or his delegated representative may authorize the allotment of funds to any executive department, independent office, or establishment of the Government with the consent of the heads thereof for direct expenditure by said executive department, independent office, or establishment for the purpose of defraying any expenditure which may be incurred by said executive department, independent office, or establishment in executing the duties and functions delegated to said office by the Secretary of Commerce; and all accounts and vouchers covering the expenditures under these appropriations shall be approved by the commissioner or such assistants as he may delegate, except for such allotments as may be made to the various executive departments and establishments for direct expenditure; but these provisions shall not be construed to waive the submission of accounts and vouchers to the General Accounting Office for audit or permit any obligations to be incurred in excess of the amount authorized to be appropriated: And provided further, That in the construction of buildings or exhibits requiring skilled and unskilled labor, the prevailing rate of wages, then existing, shall be paid.

SEC. 7. The commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary of Commerce, may receive contributions in funds or materials or borrow materials or exhibits to aid in carrying out the general purposes of this resolution, and shall have the right to return borrowed property, and dispose of such other property under the direction of the Secretary of Commerce and to account therefor, the proceeds of such sales shall be covered into the Treasury of the United States.

SEC. 8. It shall be the duty of the Secretary of Commerce to transmit to Congress, within 6 months after the close of the Pan American Exposition, a detailed statement of all expenditures, and such other reports as may be deemed proper which reports shall be prepared and arranged with a view to concise statement and convenient reference.

AMENDMENT OF TRADING WITH THE ENEMY ACT

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2901) to amend subsection (e) of section 9 of the Trading With the Enemy Act, as amended, which was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That subsection (e) of section 9 of the Trading With the Enemy Act, as amended, is amended by inserting after the words "unless such nation in like case extends reciprocal rights to citizens of the United States", a colon and the following: "Provided, That any arrangement made by a foreign nation for the release of money and other property of American citizens and certified by the Secretary of State to the Attorney General as fair and the most advantageous arrangement obtainable shall be regarded as meeting this requirement."

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, may we have an explanation of this bill?

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, we passed a law with regard to the Alien Property Custodian providing for turning over to foreign nationals their property upon proof of ownership, with the proviso that the governments associated with us in the war should deal on reciprocal terms with property of our citizens which they had possessed.

We settled with France, for instance, three-hundred-and some-odd claims out of 500, and, in addition to the principal, paid the interest that had accrued. France, on the other hand, did not place the funds of our citizens at interest, and the claims that she did pay were paid to our citizens without interest. The Attorney General held that that was not reciprocal, and therefore that there would have to be a statute to deal with the matter; and the proposed statute is that notwithstanding the prior act, which requires reciprocal treatment, if the State Department finds that what has been offered is substantially reciprocal or fair it shall be accepted.

Mr. McKELLAR. As I understand, the bill has the approval of both the State Department and the Attorney General.

Mr. PITTMAN. That is correct.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

FISH-CULTURAL STATIONS—OREGON, WASHINGTON, AND IDAHO

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2307) to provide for the establishment, operation, and maintenance of one or more fish-cultural stations in each of the States of Oregon, Washington, and Idaho, which had been reported from the Committee on Commerce, with amendments.

Mr. WHITE. Mr. President, I am not going to voice an objection to the consideration and passage of this bill. I recognize that the Columbia River has been one of the great salmon rivers of the world. I think I also appreciate that the construction now going on upon the river, and other conditions, may well jeopardize fish life in the river. There is a peculiar situation which perhaps calls for peculiar and unusual action on our part. It may be altogether necessary that we should build there these additional hatcheries and that we should make the studies that are contemplated.

But, Mr. President, in 1930, I think, Congress passed a 5-year construction program looking to the enlargement of the activities of the Bureau of Fisheries of the United States. In that bill provision was made for a construction program. That construction program recognized priorities; it recognized and made effective the sound and considered judgment of the fishery authorities of the United States as to the needs of construction and where construction should first be undertaken. I think the bringing in of individual bills like that now before us is a practice which ought not to be tolerated; and unless there are unusual circumstances, I shall object to further bills of this type. I do recognize that this bill touches a peculiar situation.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I should like to inquire why such a large appropriation is required. It seems to me that the numerous fish hatcheries we are establishing are imposing a great burden upon the Government. Of course, the $500,000 carried in the pending bill is merely a beginning. There will be an annual appropriation of no one knows how much for the maintenance and expansion of the organizations which will be established under the bill.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, the bill was introduced by my colleague the junior Senator from Oregon [Mr. STEIWER] and the Senator from Washington [Mr. SCHWELLENBACH]. I reported it from the Committee on Commerce. I presume, from the attitude of the Senator from Maine, that he has objection to the bill, and therefore I do not desire to press it.

Mr. WHITE. I do not object to the bill, Mr. President. I think the situation in the Columbia River is of such consequence—I think it is so vital that the run of salmon be preserved in that river—that an expenditure of even $500,000 is altogether justifiable, because that is the one great river left in the United States on which salmon run.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. KING. I should like to have an explanation.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, I think the Senator from Maine has very definitely and properly stated a policy which, under all ordinary circumstances, should be followed—that of having the development of fish hatcheries in accordance with the plans and under the supervision of the Bureau of Fisheries without special legislation. However, there are two facts which, in the opinion of the Senator from Oregon and myself, made it necessary to secure special legislation in this particular case.

As the Senator from Maine has said, the Columbia River is and for some time has been the last great source of salmon supply so far as the rivers of the United States are concerned. A dam is being constructed on that river at Bonneville, which will be completed in December of this year. There is a very serious question as to whether or not the salmon will be able to go up the river beyond the Bonneville Dam. The Army engineers, in their plans for the dam, working in cooperation with the Bureau of Fisheries, are providing ladders. It is hoped and desired that with those fish ladders it will be possible to obviate the danger which we fear. However, certainly since there is a danger created by the activity upon the part of the Federal Government, and since it is necessary that the salmon life in that stream be preserved, in our opinion this is an exception to the rule, because of the fact that the Federal Government itself has gone in and constructed a dam which we fear may result in the destruction of the salmon life in the river.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I yield.

Mr. McKELLAR. I am not very familiar with the methods by which the salmon go up the river, although I have seen moving pictures of them. They have to go up to spawn, I understand, but they come from the ocean, do they not?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Yes.

Mr. McKELLAR. In other words, it is not necessary to have a fish hatchery in order to produce the fish, but they come from the sea, and at a certain time in the life of the fish they go up the stream and spawn, and there they die, I understand.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. They come back to the stream in which they were hatched.

Mr. McKELLAR. They are hatched in the lower part of the river?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. The salmon are hatched in the river. They then go out to sea for a period of 4 years, then come back to spawn and die. It is an interesting thing that, no matter how far into the ocean they go, they always come back to where they were hatched.

Mr. McKELLAR. But they are hatched in the river?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Yes.

Mr. McKELLAR. So the purpose of the bill is to increase the production of the young fish, which go first to sea, and then come back?

Mr. WHITE. I think it is more important in other respects than from the standpoint of the mere hatching of fish. If the Senator will observe the bill, he will find that this is not a bill to erect fish hatcheries but to erect fish-cultural stations.

Mr. McKELLAR. I note that.

Mr. WHITE. That contemplates a station where there may be carried on all the biological and scientific investigations which are not involved in the mere hatching of the fish at all. It is a more comprehensive undertaking than the mere hatching of the fish. I think I am correct in that statement.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. The Senator is correct.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the first amendment of the Committee on Commerce.

The first amendment of the committee was, on page 1, line 4, after the word "more", to strike out "fish-cultural stations" and to insert "salmon-cultural stations in the Columbia River Basin"; on page 2, to strike out section 2, as follows:

SEC. 2. There is hereby authorized to be appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $500,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, to establish the stations provided for by this act.

And to insert in lieu thereof the following:

SEC. 2. The Secretary of Commerce is further authorized and directed (1) to conduct such investigations, and such engineering and biological surveys and experiments, as may be necessary to direct and facilitate conservation of the fishery resources of the Columbia River and its tributaries; (2) to construct, install, and maintain devices in the Columbia River Basin for the improvement of feeding and spawning conditions for fish, for the protection of migratory fish from irrigation projects, and for facilitating free migration of fish over obstructions; and (3) to perform all other activities necessary for the conservation of fish in the Columbia River Basin in accordance with law.

On page 2, after line 20, to insert a new section, as follows:

SEC. 3. There is hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $500,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, to carry out the purposes of this act.

So as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of Commerce is authorized and directed to establish one or more salmon-cultural stations in the Columbia River Basin in each of the States of Oregon, Washington, and Idaho. Any sums appropriated for the purpose of establishing such stations may be expended, and such stations shall be established, operated, and maintained, in accordance with the provisions of the act entitled "An act to provide for a 5-year construction and maintenance program for the United States Bureau of Fisheries", approved May 21, 1930, insofar as the provisions of such act are not inconsistent with the provisions of this act.

SEC. 2. The Secretary of Commerce is further authorized and directed (1) to conduct such investigations, and such engineering and biological surveys and experiments, as may be necessary to direct and facilitate conservation of the fishery resources of the Columbia River and its tributaries; (2) to construct, install, and maintain devices in the Columbia River Basin for the improvement of feeding and spawning conditions for fish, for the protection of migratory fish from irrigation projects, and for facilitating free migration of fish over obstructions; and (3) to perform all other activities necessary for the conservation of fish in the Columbia River Basin in accordance with law.

SEC. 3. There is hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $500,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, to carry out the purposes of this act.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill to provide for the conservation of the fishery resources of the Columbia River, establishment, operation, and maintenance of one or more stations in Oregon, Washington, and Idaho, and for the conduct of necessary investigations, surveys, stream improvements, and stocking operations for these purposes."

LABOR STANDARDS FOR APPRENTICES

The bill (H. R. 7274) to enable the Department of Labor to formulate and promote the furtherance of labor standards necessary to safeguard the welfare of apprentices and to cooperate with the States in the promotion of such standards was announced as next in order.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I should like to have an explanation of this.

Mr. KING. Let the bill go over.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Will not the Senator withhold his objection?

Mr. KING. I withhold it temporarily. I have received a letter in connection with this bill, and there will be another call of the calendar, when we can take it up. I should like to look into it.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. If the Senator is positive that I cannot persuade him that this is a very meritorious bill, I shall not take the time of the Senate now to debate it, but I hope I can convince the Senator that he should give the bill his most ardent support.

Mr. KING. I do not think the Senator can persuade me today, although he is very persuasive. I received a letter in connection with the bill, and I shall be glad to have the bill taken up at the next call of the calendar.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, I hope it may be passed over without prejudice.

Mr. KING. I assent to that.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Wisconsin asks unanimous consent that the bill be passed over without prejudice.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, there is no point in that. Any bill that goes over under objection is called automatically on the next call of the calendar.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair agrees with the Senator from Oregon, but the Senator from Wisconsin made a request, and the Chair was submitting the request to the Senate.

Mr. McNARY. I am raising the point that there is no point in it.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, I hope the Senator from Oregon will not object to my occasionally making a facetious remark, because I am not very often guilty of it.

ESCHEAT TO THE UNITED STATES

The bill (H. R. 7741) to amend the Adjusted Compensation Payment Act, 1936, to provide for the escheat to the United States of certain amounts was announced as next in order.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, may we have an explanation of this bill?

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, under the Adjusted Compensation Payment Act, it will be recalled, payment of the certificates is made in bonds of the denomination of $50, and any difference less than $50 is paid in cash.

It is believed that under the act, where the veteran dies intestate and without next of kin or heirs at law, any uncalled-for and any unused payment made by virtue of the issuance of bonds will escheat to the State of the residence of the veteran. The bill before us is simply for the purpose of making it clear that in such cases as those to which I have referred the amount would escheat to the Federal Treasury.

Mr. McKELLAR. The bill is recommended by the Administration?

Mr. GEORGE. It is recommended by the Treasury very strongly, and it is estimated that some $150,000 is involved.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ADMINISTRATION OF OATHS IN THE PHILIPPINE ISLANDS

The bill (H. R. 7727) to authorize the administration of oaths by the Chief Clerk and the Assistant Chief Clerk of the Office of the United States High Commission to the Philippine Islands, and for other purposes, was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

EXEMPTION FROM DUTY OF ARTICLES FOR EXHIBITION AT THE NEW YORK WORLD'S FAIR

The joint resolution (H. J. Res. 288) to permit articles imported from foreign countries for the purpose of exhibition at the New York World's Fair, 1939, New York City, N. Y., to be admitted, without payment of tariff, and for other purposes, was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

EXEMPTION OF VESSELS FROM FORMAL ENTRY REQUIREMENT

The bill (H. R. 4543) to amend the Tariff Act of 1930 to exempt vessels arriving for the purpose of taking on ship's stores and certain sea stores from the requirement of formal entry was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

EXEMPTION OF STATE LIQUOR DISPENSING SYSTEMS

The bill (H. R. 7949) to exempt State liquor-dispensing systems from the requirement of keeping certain records and rendering transcripts and summaries of entries with respect to distilled spirits, was announced as next in order.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, this touches a very important subject concerning the disposition and sale of liquor, and therefore I desire to look into the matter; so I object at this time.

Mr. GUFFEY. Mr. President, I should like to make a statement with reference to the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Will the Senator from Oregon withhold his objection?

Mr. McNARY. I will not withhold my objection. I am positive in my objection. However, I have no objection to the Senator making a statement.

Mr. GUFFEY. Mr. President, House bill 7949 makes provision to exempt State liquor-dispensing systems from the requirement of keeping certain records and rendering transcripts and summaries of entries with respect to distilled spirits.

The purpose of this bill is to exempt State agencies from the requirement of section 3318 of the Revised Statutes, as amended, that wholesale liquor dealers and rectifiers shall keep certain records of distilled spirits received and disposed of by them, and render monthly transcripts and summaries of such records to the collector of internal revenue of the district in which they are located.

The bill provides that the provisions of section 3318 shall not apply to States and commonwealths, and liquor stores operated by States and Commonwealths which maintain and make available to inspection by internal-revenue officers such records as will enable those officers readily to trace all distilled spirits received and disposed of by them. The bill also contains a proviso requiring the States and Commonwealths, and liquor stores operated by them, to furnish the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, upon his request, such transcripts, summaries, and copies of records as he shall require.

The bill is drafted in accordance with suggestions made by the Treasury Department. The Treasury advises that the bill will not only give the States the relief desired by them, but will also fully protect the revenue. The Treasury Department has no objection to the enactment of this bill.

Mr. President, this bill affects the State liquor-dispensing systems of 16 States. If it is passed, it will mean a saving of $516,000 per year to the State of Pennsylvania.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (H. R. 3426) for the relief of Rose McGirr was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. I ask that the bill be passed over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

MARGARET VOORHEES, A MINOR

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 615) for the relief of Margaret Voorhees, a minor, which had been reported from the Committee on Claims with an amendment, on page 1, line 5, after the words "sum of", to strike out "$5,000" and insert "$3,000", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $3,000 to the legal guardian of Margaret Voorhees, a minor, of Fonda, N. Y., in full settlement of all claims against the Government of the United States for injuries sustained on July 2, 1935, at Fonda, N. Y., by Margaret Voorhees, as the result of the explosion of a torpedo firecracker thrown by a member of Company H, Sixty-sixth Regiment United States Infantry: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or attorney on account of services rendered in connection with this claim, and the same shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

ROBERT COATES

The bill (H. R. 854) for the relief of Robert Coates was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. KING subsequently said: Mr. President, I ask that the Senate recur to Calendar No. 1133, House bill 854. I notice that the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. SCHWARTZ] reported the bill. I should like an explanation of that bill. So far as the bill itself is concerned, it affords no information as to the character of the claim or the amount of damages desired.

Mr. SCHWARTZ. Mr. President, this bill merely provides for waiving the statute of limitations to enable Robert Coates to present his claim for consideration. The record shows that while in the Government employ he developed tuberculosis. At that time he was not advised and did not know, as a matter of fact, that he was entitled to consideration. In fact, he did not know of the existence of such a statute. The only purpose of the bill is to permit him to present his claim and have it considered by the Employees' Compensation Commission. It does not award him anything. It simply gives him the right to present his claim and have it considered, the statute of limitations notwithstanding.

Mr. KING. I ask that the vote by which the bill was considered be reconsidered, and that the bill be passed over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the vote by which the bill was passed is reconsidered and the bill will be passed over.

JOHN N. BROOKS

The bill (H. R. 2740) for the relief of John N. Brooks was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (H. R. 3058) for the relief of former employees of the Federal Subsistence Homesteads Corporation was announced as next in order.

Mr. McKELLAR. May we have an explanation of that bill? If we cannot have an explanation at this time, let the bill be passed over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

LAKE SPENCE

The bill (H. R. 4526) for the relief of Lake Spence was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

SHERM SLETHOLM AND OTHERS

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2644) for the relief of Sherm Sletholm, Loneata Sletholm, Lulu Yates, Madeline Yates, and the estate of Ella A. Morris, which had been reported from the Committee on Claims with an amendment, on page 2, line 3, after the words "sum of", to strike out "$5,360.25" and insert "$2,844.55", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, (1) to the following-named persons, all of Portland, Oreg., the sums hereinafter specified, in full satisfaction of all their claims against the United States for damages resulting from a collision on October 11, 1936, at the intersection of Union and Denver Avenues, Portland, Oreg., between the car in which they were riding and a War Department ambulance: Sherm Sletholm, $3,299.65; Loneata Sletholm, $315.70; Lulu Yates, $1,206.55; Madeline Yates, $536.40; and (2) to the estate of Ella A. Morris, late of Portland, Oreg., the sum of $2,844.55, in full satisfaction of all its claims against the United States for damages resulting from the death of said Ella A. Morris in such collision: Provided, That no part of the amounts appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, on account of services rendered in connection with such claims. It shall be unlawful for any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, to exact, collect, withhold, or receive any sum of the amounts appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof on account of services rendered in connection with such claims, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (H. R. 1375) for the relief of Wayne M. Cotner was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. I ask that the bill be passed over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

GEORGE R. BROWN

The bill (H. R. 4156) for the relief of George R. Brown was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

J. ROY WORKMAN AND OTHERS

The bill (H. R. 1869) for the relief of J. Roy Workman, Adelaide W. Workman, and J. Roy Workman, Jr., a minor, was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Mr. President——

Mr. DAVIS. Mr. President, I ask for an explanation of that bill.

Mr. ELLENDER. I ask that the bill be passed over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

Mr. ELLENDER subsequently said: Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to recur to Calendar No. 1140, being House bill 1869, for the relief of J. Roy Workman and others. I understand the Senator from Pennsylvania and the Senator from Utah desired an explanation of the bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Louisiana to return to House bill 1869?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 1869) for the relief of J. Roy Workman, Adelaide W. Workman, and J. Roy Workman, Jr., a minor.

Mr. ELLENDER. Mr. President, this bill is for the relief of Mr. Workman, his wife, and child. They were driving along the road and were struck by a W. P. A. truck. There is no question of the liability on the part of the Government. The W. P. A. Administration has admitted liability.

I will state the nature of the injuries caused to the persons named. Mr. Workman suffered a fractured jaw and contusion of the back. He was confined to the hospital for some days. Mrs. Workman suffered a good deal from concussion of the brain and bruises, and the son, who was 11 years old, suffered a fracture at the base of the skull.

It was felt by the committee that the amount fixed by the bill was very reasonable. The hospital bill alone was in excess of $400. We felt that the amount provided was in line with other cases of similar character.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to J. Roy Workman, of Clinton, S. C., the sum of $1,000; to Adelaide W. Workman, of the same city, the sum of $1,000; and to the legal guardian of J. Roy Workman, Jr., of the same city, the sum of $1,500. Said sums to be in full settlement of all claims against the United States for expenses incurred and injuries received when the car in which they were riding was struck by a truck in the use of the Works Progress Administration on December 4, 1935, near Clinton, S. C.: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or attorney on account of services rendered in connection with this claim, and the same shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

ESTATE OF COL. C. J. BARTLETT, UNITED STATES ARMY

The bill (H. R. 3987) for the relief of the estate of Col. C. J. Bartlett, United States Army, was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ESTATES OF MARSHALL CAMPBELL AND RAYMOND O'NEAL

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 1207) conferring jurisdiction upon the United States District Court for the Middle District of Georgia to hear, determine, and render judgment upon the claims of the estates of Marshall Campbell and Raymond O'Neal, which was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That jurisdiction is hereby conferred upon the United States District Court for the Middle District of Georgia to hear, determine, and render judgment, as if the United States were suable in tort, upon the claims of the estate of Marshall Campbell, and the estate of Raymond O'Neal, of Greene County, Ga., for damages resulting from the deaths of said Marshall Campbell and Raymond O'Neal by reason of an automobile collision involving a Civilian Conservation Corps truck on August 30, 1935, on the highway between Greensboro and Union Point, Ga.: Provided, That the judgment, if any, shall not exceed, in the case of the estate of Marshall Campbell, $5,000; and in the case of the estate of Raymond O'Neal, $5,000.

SEC. 2. Suit upon such claims may be instituted at any time within 1 year after the enactment of this act, notwithstanding the lapse of time or any statute of limitations. Proceedings for the determination of such claims, appeals therefrom, and payment of any judgment thereon, shall be in the same manner as in the cases over which such court has jurisdiction under the provisions of paragraph 20 of section 24 of the Judicial Code, as amended.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I do not see why the matter should be referred to the court, when the amount of the damage is provided in the bill itself.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, the amount of recovery is limited in the bill to $5,000 to each estate involved. The facts are somewhat peculiar in this case, and the House committee, after a very careful examination of the bill and all of the evidence, seems to have accepted the suggestion of the present Secretary of War that the matter should be referred to the court for final determination, although no express recommendation is made that the cause be referred to a court. However, it is stated by the Secretary that if the Congress sees fit to refer it to a court for determination of the question of liability, the War Department would interpose no objection.

Mr. President, this was a case in which a C. C. C. truck struck and killed two young men riding in a car in the evening, and the evidence touching the question of negligence is highly conflicting. However, the preponderance of the evidence seems to disprove the reports made to the War Department, which undertook to fix liability upon the citizens who lost their lives because they were driving on the wrong side of the road, whereas highly creditable evidence from very worthy citizens indicates that the truck was itself on the wrong side of the road at the time of the accident.

All the bill provides is simply to permit the United States to be sued in court, but limits the liability to a recovery of not exceeding $5,000 in each case.

The House committee points out in its report, which is very full, that the committee had been loath to confer jurisdiction upon the court in cases of this kind, but in this particular case the committee believed that jurisdiction should be conferred.

I think an examination of all the facts in the case justifies the conclusion reached by the House committee and the House in passing the bill.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I notice that the late Secretary of War, former Governor Dern, states:

Since it appears from all the above that the accident was caused solely by the negligence and fault of Marshall Campbell, deceased, and that no moral or legal liability on the part of the Government exists, the War Department is constrained to recommend that favorable consideration be not given to the proposed legislation.

Mr. GEORGE. That was a bill to make direct compensation, I will state to the Senator, and the House committee went into that bill. While the War Department did make an adverse report, the committee heard the report made by those who were sent down to make inspection. The evidence submitted on the other side of the question very clearly tended to disprove the War Department's contention, and in the opinion of the House committee did disprove it. The report made by Secretary Dern, however, was made upon a bill to grant compensation in a stated sum. Secretary Woodring, it will be noted, in the latest report upon the bill, suggested, without specifically recommending, that the proper course was to refer the controversy to the court having jurisdiction, if the United States was suable, and that if the committee saw fit so to amend the bill, that no objection would be interposed by the War Department.

Mr. KING. May I ask the Senator whether he regards it as wise and safe legislation now to open the door to suits for torts in local courts. As the bill would authorize suit for a tort in a local Federal court, there is no reason why demand should not be made for suits to be brought in State courts.

I ask the Senator again if it would not be opening the door of courts to many claims against the United States and litigation in the courts, growing out of torts, because now with the thousands and tens of thousands—indeed, hundreds of thousands—of automobiles, and nearly 1,500,000 Federal employees riding around in their automobiles, the Senator will see that there is danger of many suits being brought against the Government in the courts throughout the United States.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, I shall not attempt to controvert that statement, but the recommendation is that the suits be brought only in the Federal district court having jurisdiction.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, as I understand, in this case the question of negligence is disputed.

Mr. GEORGE. It is sharply disputed.

Mr. McKELLAR. And all that this bill does is to waive the statute of limitations and allow that question to be decided by a Federal court?

Mr. GEORGE. That is correct.

Mr. McKELLAR. Under those circumstances, it seems to me it ought to be done.

Mr. GEORGE. The distinguished Senator from Washington [Mr. SCHWELLENBACH] submitted the report upon this bill, and he probably is very familiar with it.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I should like to answer the question raised by the Senator from Utah [Mr. KING]. It is true that there is danger if we open up these cases in the courts. During the 3 years I have been here and have been a member of the Committee on Claims this is the first time it has been done. I say that in order to show that we are careful in protecting against that danger. In the other two cases, as in the present case, there was a serious dispute as to the facts, the governmental departments saying that they were not liable. We cannot sit here and pass upon that question. In this case there were 30 affidavits by reputable citizens indicating liability on the part of the Government truck. The claimants have a right to present that evidence to some tribunal. We cannot sit here and take a review by the Secretary of War, on the one hand, and 30 witnesses, on the other, without any right or opportunity being afforded both sides to cross-examine the witnesses and to have a court see the witnesses and decide a dispute such as this. In the very extreme cases in which we feel that it is not possible for us to arrive at a decision, we refer the questions to the district court. That has been done only three times during the 3 years that I have been a member of the Committee on Claims.

Mr. KING. I may make one suggestion as the basis for the apprehension which I have expressed. In many of these cases it is requested that the statute of limitations be waived. Perhaps the witnesses for the Government have passed away or they have gone to other parts of the United States. They were perhaps only temporary employees of the United States Government. So that the Government is at a very great disadvantage when suits are brought 4 years after the alleged tort.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I will say to the Senator that certainly the Senate committee will not refer any such cases where the statute of limitations has run.

Mr. KING. I thought it had run in this case.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. No; that is the reason it is referred for a finding of the facts.

Mr. KING. I have no objection.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

SAM ROMACK

The bill (H. R. 1734) for the relief of Sam Romack was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

EDITH JORDAN

The bill (H. R. 6059) for the relief of Edith Jordan was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

VINCENT FORD

The bill (S. 2866) for the relief of Vincent Ford was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to Vincent Ford, second lieutenant, Inactive Reserve, of Alhambra, Calif., the sum of $943.67 in full satisfaction of his claim against the United States for a continuation of his pay and allowances as such officer from October 16, 1933, to April 15, 1934, alleged by the War Department to be due him for personal injuries sustained in line of active duty, under the provisions of the act of April 26, 1928 (45 Stat. 461), claim therefor having been disallowed by the Comptroller General of the United States: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or attorney on account of services rendered in connection with this claim, and the same shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

MRS. J. H. M'CLARY

The bill (S. 283) for the relief of Mrs. J. H. McClary was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, and in full settlement of all claims against the Government of the United States, to Mrs. J. H. McClary the sum of $5,000; the death of J. H. McClary, husband of claimant, having been caused by an accident on the night of October 31, 1935, through the negligence of a Government automobile from the Fort Knox Military Reservation and while driven on business of the Government: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or attorney on account of services rendered in connection with this claim, and the same shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

MAX D. ORDMANN

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2699) for the relief of Max D. Ordmann, which had been reported from the Committee on Claims with amendments.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, may we have an explanation of the bill? It seems that the Attorney General has made an investigation of this matter and reports the bill favorably.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. That is correct. It is to pay an attorney for legal services rendered in connection with a claim against the Alien Property Custodian. The Attorney General reports favorably on the bill and has no objection to it. The money is in the Alien Property Custodian's office.

Mr. McKELLAR. Very well.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendments reported by the committee will be stated.

The amendments were, on page 1, line 12, after the numerals "1934", to insert "Max D. Ordmann", and on page 2, line 6, after the word "deceased", to insert a proviso, so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of the moneys held in the Treasury of the United States in alien property trust no. 39868, in the name of "Robert Zahn, deceased, Reichtsenwalt Rietzel, executor, and Vogtlandische Machinen Fabrik", otherwise known as Vogtlandische Maschinen-Fabrik and Alfred Rietzsch, as administrator of Robert Zahn, deceased, the sum of $6,587.60, together with interest thereon at the rate of 6 percent per annum from and after September 18, 1934, to Max D. Ordmann, in full settlement of all claims against the United States for legal services rendered to the said Robert Zahn, deceased, Reichtsenwalt Rietzel, executor, and Vogtlandische Machinen Fabrik, otherwise known as Vogtlandische Maschinen-Fabrik and Alfred Rietzsch, as administrator of Robert Zahn, deceased: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or attorney on account of services rendered in connection with this claim, and the same shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PROMOTION SYSTEM IN THE COAST GUARD

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to return to Calendar No. 942, being the bill (S. 2575) to increase the efficiency of the Coast Guard, which was passed over yesterday by reason of the absence of the Senator from New York [Mr. COPELAND], chairman of the Committee on Commerce, when an explanation was asked concerning it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2575) to increase the efficiency of the Coast Guard, which was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That any commissioned officer of the Coast Guard, who, in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury, heretofore has been or hereafter may be placed out of the line of promotion, may, at his own request (a) if his commissioned service is 10 years or more, be placed upon the retired list with retired pay as prescribed by section 3 hereof, or (b) if his commissioned service is less than 10 years, resign from the Coast Guard with 1 year's pay computed at the rate of pay he was receiving on the date of his resignation.

SEC. 2. The Secretary of the Treasury, at the direction of the President, shall assemble annually a Coast Guard Personnel Board, to be composed of not less than three commissioned officers on the active list of the Coast Guard, to select the officers, if any, whom the board determines should be retired or placed out of the line of promotion, and to make recommendations with respect thereto. The proceedings and decisions of the Personnel Board shall be transmitted to the Commandant of the Coast Guard for review. If the Commandant shall approve the recommendation of the Personnel Board, the officer concerned shall be notified in writing of the action taken in his case, and he shall be entitled to have his case reconsidered by such board, if, within 30 days after he receives notice as aforesaid, he files with the Commandant a written protest of the action taken, or appears, either in person or by counsel, before the Personnel Board: Provided, That no case shall be twice reconsidered by the Personnel Board. If the Commandant shall disapprove the recommendation of the Personnel Board, he shall transmit the same with his recommendation to the Secretary of the Treasury for final action. If the Secretary of the Treasury shall concur in the decision of the Commandant, the case shall be terminated, and the officer concerned shall retain his status in the Coast Guard to the same extent as if his case had not been considered. If the Secretary of the Treasury shall disapprove the recommendation of the Commandant and approve that of the board, the officer concerned shall be notified as aforesaid, and shall be entitled to have his case reconsidered by the Personnel Board, subject to the same conditions as hereinbefore provided. At the expiration of 30 days after receipt of any officer concerned of notice of the action taken in his case, in the event no protest is filed or appearance made as provided in this section, the recommendation of the Personnel Board, as approved by the Commandant or by the Secretary of the Treasury, as the case may be, shall be laid before the President by the latter with his recommendation. In the event of the reconsideration of the case of any officer, the Personnel Board shall, after carefully considering additional evidence, if any, submit its supplemental report and final recommendation in the case to the Commandant, who shall transmit the same with his recommendations to the Secretary of the Treasury. The Secretary of the Treasury shall lay the same before the President accompanied by his recommendation in the case. When considering the record of any officer of the Coast Guard, the Personnel Board shall give major importance to reports upon the officer made, in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury, by his seniors. The President may, in any calendar year, pursuant to any recommendation so laid before him:

(a) Place out of the line of promotion such number of lieutenant commanders on the active list as will not exceed the whole number nearest to 2 percent of the officers in that grade as of January 1 of such year; except that such limitation shall not be construed to limit the number of lieutenant commanders who may be placed out of the line of promotion, in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury, for failing to establish their mental, moral, and professional fitness for promotion, as required by existing law.

(b) Place upon the retired list such number of commissioned officers who have had 30 or more years of service as will not exceed the whole number nearest to 5 percent of the number of officers falling within that classification on January 1 of such year.

(c) Place upon the retired list any officer who has been placed out of the line of promotion and who has had 10 years or more of commissioned service.

SEC. 3. The annual pay of any officer who is retired under the provisions of this act shall be 2½ percent of his active-duty pay at the time of his retirement, multiplied by the number of years of his service: Provided, That the retired pay of any officer retired pursuant to this act shall not exceed 75 percent of his active-duty pay at the time of his retirement. Years of service, for the purpose of computing retirement pay under the provisions of this act, shall be computed in the same manner as is now or may hereafter be provided by law for the computation of years of service for voluntary retirement.

SEC. 4. The total number of officers retired involuntarily in any one calendar year pursuant to this act shall not exceed the whole number nearest to 1 percent of the total number of commissioned officers. The total number of officers who are permitted to resign from the Coast Guard with 1 year's pay or retire voluntarily pursuant to this act shall not exceed in any one calendar year the whole number nearest to 2 percent of the total number of commissioned officers.

SEC. 5. The provisions of this act shall be supplementary to, but shall not be construed to limit or supersede, existing laws relating to retirement, examination for promotion, and promotion of Coast Guard officers.

SEC. 6. The provisions of this act shall not apply to chief warrant officers.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, this measure provides for the installation in the Coast Guard of a somewhat similar system of selective promotion to that which has been in effect in the Army and Navy and the Marine Corps of the United States, although the provisions of the bill as to selection are by no means so drastic as those affecting either the Army, the Navy, or the Marine Corps.

At the present time, when a man becomes an officer in the Coast Guard, it is substantially like entering a mule chute. Unless he falls into ill health and so is retired for physical disability or unless he is guilty of an offense triable by court martial or unless he fails to pass the routine examination for promotion, he is ultimately sure of becoming a captain, which is the highest grade in the Coast Guard Service. Obviously from the standpoint of efficiency this situation offers no incentive for industry and efficiency but puts a premium on inefficiency. This bill simply provides for the selection of a certain number of officers for retirement on the basis set up in the bill.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. CLARK. I yield.

Mr. WALSH. I am very much interested in the Senator's observations, because the Naval Affairs Committees of both the House and the Senate are considering proposals for additional legislation with regard to the selection system for the Navy. The present selection system in the Navy is not in all respects satisfactory. One of the reasons why it is not satisfactory is that just pointed out by the Senator, namely that it sometimes operates to protect the inefficient officer as adequate as the efficient officer.

There seems to be no way after a man gets a commission in the Navy—and I assume it is also true of the Coast Guard—to separate him from the service unless he commits a major offense that results in a court-martial finding of guilt.

Mr. CLARK. Unless he commits an offense triable by court martial or suffers such disability that he can be found by a physical board eligible for retirement.

Mr. WALSH. Will the Senator inform me if there is a period of probation for officers when they first enter the Coast Guard. In the Navy the period of probation is 2 years. Some are proposing that it be made 7 years so that there will be ample opportunity in the early years of service to detect the lack of leadership qualities and inefficiency and bring about the separation of such officers from the service.

Mr. CLARK. My understanding is, although I cannot answer with certainty, that in the Coast Guard there is no period of probation. In other words, under the present system, when a man once becomes an officer in the Coast Guard, failing the commission of some offense for which he is punishable by court martial, he goes automatically up to the point where he becomes a captain. There is no chance on earth for rewarding the efficient and to some extent penalizing the inefficient.

Mr. WALSH. That is equivalent in civil life, is it not, to saying that every man or woman who graduates from a normal school or a law school or medical school or dental school or any other professional school will always be a success and should be given a permanent status in their profession?

Mr. CLARK. That is exactly true. It removes the incentive on the part of the officer to strive for efficiency and to improve himself in the service.

Mr. WALSH. I wish the bill the Senator is advocating fixed the period of probation in the Coast Guard. The Senator will be interested to know that the Navy believes in such a period and, in fact, increasing it.

Mr. CLARK. I am very much in sympathy with what the Senator is saying.

Mr. WALSH. When a young man graduates from the Naval Academy, although the members of the faculty may consider him inadept, yet if he has the physical requirements and has met the scholastic requirements, a commission is given him, and he is protected all the years of his life if he gets by the 2-year probation period. There is no opportunity of eliminating him after 2 years even when his inaptitude becomes more evident when he came under the observation of superior officers in his actual service, except through physical unfitness and court martial. It seems to me the period of probation ought to be 7 years. We ought to eliminate the men who are inefficient because the question of building up a large retirement fund is getting to be serious. Certainly officers of the Coast Guard, the Army, and the Navy who are inefficient ought not to be rewarded by a pension the rest of their lives after they have served a few years, if they are inefficient. Retirement pay should only be granted to those of long and efficient service and those incapacitated.

Mr. CLARK. It certainly has a tendency to destroy the efficiency of the organization. I must say, however, that I think, by and large, the Coast Guard has been a most efficient organization and that the overwhelming majority of its personnel, both officers and men, have been extremely efficient.

Mr. WALSH. I wish the Senator could tell us if there is a period of probation in the pending bill.

Mr. CLARK. I am uninformed as to that, but I do not believe there is a period of probation in the Coast Guard.

Mr. WALSH. Would the Senator be willing to let the measure remain on the calendar until he can look into that?

Mr. CLARK. I would be willing to have the bill passed over, but the Treasury Department is extremely anxious to have the measure considered, if possible, at the present session.

Mr. WALSH. To me it is unthinkable that a young man who graduates from the Coast Guard Academy or from the Naval Academy or from the Military Academy at West Point is assumed, unless he shall be court-martialed, to be entitled all the rest of his life to draw active-service pay or retired-service pay without a rigid period of probation to determine his fitness.

Mr. CLARK. In the Coast Guard promotion is absolutely on the basis of seniority without any reference to efficiency reports or anything of that kind.

Mr. WALSH. That is all wrong.

Mr. CLARK. I agree with the Senator. This bill provides that the President shall have authority in any year to place a certain number of officers, not exceeding 2 percent in any grade, as I recall, on a nonpromotion basis.

Mr. WALSH. I assume from what the Senator says that the proposal is a move in the right direction and that this bill is an improvement over the present system. It is my opinion that the bill is similar to the promotion system in the Navy prior to 1916, namely, selection-out system, which system has been greatly improved since that time and is now being studied again for the purpose of further improvement. I was wondering if the committee had considered what we are considering now—the importance of a probation period, so as to get and keep the best officers in the service.

Mr. CLARK. I agree about the desirability of a probation period, but I do not think that would in any way conflict with this measure. I ask the Senator to permit the bill to be considered and passed, and then the other matter can be taken up later.

Mr. WALSH. I shall do that. May I ask the Senator to cooperate in an effort at the next session of Congress to get the Committee on Military Affairs, the Committee on Commerce which has control of legislation affecting the Coast Guard, and the Committee on Naval Affairs to adopt if possible a uniform policy with reference to selections and retirements? It may not be possible for one system to fix all these units but some basic standards could be agreed upon.

Mr. CLARK. I am very much in sympathy with such a movement.

Mr. WALSH. I shall not press the objection now.

There being no objection the bill (S. 2575) to increase the efficiency of the Coast Guard was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

TRANSFER OF LIGHTHOUSE SITES, HAWAII

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, yesterday when Calendar No. 1080, House bill 7714, was called on the calendar, I objected. Since that time I have read the report of the committee. I find no objection to the bill and therefore desire to withdraw my objection and ask unanimous consent to recur to that number on the calendar and for the immediate consideration of the bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the bill (H. R. 7714) to authorize the Secretary of Commerce to transfer the two unused lighthouse sites in Kahului town site, island of Maui, Territory of Hawaii, in exchange for two plots of land located in the same town site and now occupied for lighthouse purposes under permission from the respective owners, the Kahului Railroad Co. and the Hawaiian Commercial & Sugar Co., Ltd., was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of Commerce is hereby authorized to convey to the Kahului Railroad Co. all that piece or parcel known as lot no. 16, block T, of Kahului town site, Island of Maui, Territory of Hawaii, containing an area of 7,064 square feet: Provided, That as a condition precedent to such transfer the said railroad company shall first convey to the United States of America, by warranty deed and free of all encumbrances, all that piece or portion of L. S. A. 7713, Apana 23, to Kamamalu, situate at Kahului, Island of Maui, Territory of Hawaii, being lot no. 10, block T, of Kahului town site, containing an area of 7,958 square feet. The respective parcels of land to be more particularly described in the deeds of conveyances.

The Secretary of Commerce is further authorized to convey to the Hawaiian Commercial & Sugar Co., Ltd. (a Hawaiian corporation), all that piece or parcel of land known as lot no. 1, block D, of Kahului town site, island of Maui, Territory of Hawaii, containing an area of 7,740 square feet: Provided, That as a condition precedent to such transfer the said Hawaiian Commercial & Sugar Co., Ltd., shall first convey to the United States of America, by warranty deed and free of all encumbrances, all that piece or portion of land in grant 3343 to Claus Spreckels, situate in Kahului, island of Maui, Territory of Hawaii, being lot no. 7, block D, of Kahului Townsite, containing an area of 7,727 square feet. The respective parcels of land to be more particularly described in the deeds of conveyances.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. On the calendar is a similar Senate bill, S. 2799. I ask that the Senate bill be indefinitely postponed.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, Senate bill 2799 is indefinitely postponed.

MARJORIE L. BAXTER

The bill (H. R. 420) for the relief of Marjorie L. Baxter was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (H. R. 1355) for the relief of Lawrence E. Thomas was announced as next in order.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, there is an adverse report on the bill. I ask that it go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

MARCELLINO M. GILMETTE

The bill (H. R. 1794) for the relief of the estate of Marcellino M. Gilmette was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

GEORGE O. CLAYPOOL

The bill (H. R. 3503) for the relief of George O. Claypool was announced as next in order.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I notice no recommendation is made by the Commerce Department with reference to the bill.

Mr. KING. Let it go over.

Mr. BULKLEY. Mr. President, the bill simply removes the bar of the statute of limitations to permit the payment to be made.

Mr. McKELLAR. It seems payment has already been made to the Compensation Commission, and the matter was referred to the Commission, but they made no recommendation about it at all.

Mr. BULKLEY. It was not made in time. The bill would simply make it possible to pay the claim, notwithstanding the lapse of time. The man did not know, in time to make the claim, that he had the disease.

Mr. KING. I have read the report. This occurred away back in 1920. It seems to me highly improper to make claims against the Government 10, 15, or 20 years after the alleged initiation of some disease or after an alleged tort.

Mr. BULKLEY. The Senator understands the bill does not pay any claim. It simply opens the matter for consideration.

Mr. KING. But waiving the statute of limitations is becoming so common we might as well abolish that statute and let anybody and everybody demand payment from the Government whenever they please.

Mr. BULKLEY. I hope the Senator will not object.

Mr. KING. Very well, let the bill be considered.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill (S. 3503) for the relief of George O. Claypool was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

W. H. LENNEVILLE

The bill (H. R. 3745) for the relief of W. H. Lenneville was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JACK C. ALLEN

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 3750) for the relief of Jack C. Allen.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I am not going to make objection, but it seems this is a case where a man lost his clothes and some other things, and the Government is now asked to pay for them. However, I make no objection.

The bill was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ROWESVILLE OIL CO.

The bill (H. R. 1767) for the relief of the Rowesville Oil Co. was announced as next in order.

Mr. McKELLAR. Let the bill go over.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be passed over.

FARMERS STORAGE & FERTILIZER CO.

The bill (H. R. 1770) for the relief of the Farmers' Storage & Fertilizer Co., of Aiken, S. C., was announced as next in order.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, an adverse report accompanies the bill. Let it go over.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, will the Senator withhold his objection to enable me to make an explanation?

Mr. McKELLAR. Certainly; but I call to the Senator's attention the fact that there seems to be an adverse report by the Secretary of War.

Mr. BYRNES. A similar bill was passed about a year ago providing for payment of the claim. That bill was vetoed. At the time of the veto the statement was made to me that the claim should be sent to the Court of Claims, and that if it was sent to the Court of Claims the executive department would cooperate to secure an early adjudication of the right of the Farmers Storage & Fertilizer Co., which is a farmers' cooperative association. The bill does not now provide for the payment of the claim but solely for a determination of the claim.

Mr. McKELLAR. It simply provides for waiver of the statute of limitations, as I understand.

Mr. BYRNES. Yes; because in this case substantial reason was presented at the time to the committee to cause the committee to make an exception to its rule. There were many extenuating circumstances why this group of farmers should have special consideration.

Mr. McKELLAR. On what ground did the President veto the prior bill?

Mr. BYRNES. On the ground that he thought it should go to the Court of Claims for adjudication. That was the reason stated to me.

Mr. McKELLAR. What amount is involved?

Mr. BYRNES. My recollection is in this case the amount is about $2,500.

Mr. KING. There is another one of $3,725.

Mr. BYRNES. There is one of about $3,500 and one of about $2,500.

Mr. KING. I call to attention of the Senator that the report states there are approximately 300 suits now pending in regard to these matters.

Mr. BYRNES. That is one reason why the position was taken that the claim should be sent to the Court of Claims in order to give the cooperative associations the same right that was granted in the 300 cases which are now in the Court of Claims. Unless sent there, this cooperative association would be denied its right. These farmers' cooperative associations differ from the great private corporations. The Senator is familiar with farmers' cooperatives where everybody's business is nobody's business.

Mr. McKELLAR. I have no objection to the present consideration of the bill.

There being no objection, the bill (H. R. 1770) for the relief of the Farmers' Storage & Fertilizer Co., of Aiken, S. C., was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

CHARLES TABIT

The bill (H. R. 1915) for the relief of Charles Tabit was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

A. H. SPHAR

The bill (H. R. 2488) for the relief of A. H. Sphar was considered, ordered, to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

J. H. KNOTT

The bill (H. R. 3395) for the relief of J. H. Knott was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

GUIDEO BISCARO AND OTHERS

The bill (H. R. 886) for the relief of Guideo Biscaro, Giovanni Polin, Spironello Antonio, Arturo Bettio, Carlo Biscaro, and Antonio Vannin, was announced as next in order.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, may we have an explanation of the bill.

Mr. BROWN of Michigan. Mr. President, certain Liberty bonds were put up as bail bond before a commissioner of immigration. Through failure to notify the parties concerned, they did not appear at the time of the hearing, but subsequently, within 2 or 3 weeks, they were found and were deported. It seemed to us it was unfair to retain the bonds under such circumstances. We have taken similar action for insurance or bonding companies. No expense to the Government was involved. Notice was not given to the rather ignorant foreigners who were apprehended. That is all there is to the case.

Mr. McKELLAR. The parties have been deported?

Mr. BROWN of Michigan. Yes; and without any expense to the Government.

Mr. McKELLAR. I have no objection.

There being no objection the bill was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

RALPH REISLER

The bill (H. R. 1690) for the relief of Ralph Reisler was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

CARSON BRADFORD

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 5229) for the relief of Carson Bradford, which was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to Carson Bradford, of Miami, Dade County, Fla., the sum of $2,500, in full settlement of all claims against the United States for damage done to his house and property, located at Lake Weir, Marion County, Fla.,

on January 15, 1935, by agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice in apprehending certain fugitives from justice: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, on account of services rendered in connection with said claim. It shall be unlawful for any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, to exact, collect, withhold, or receive any sum of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof on account of services rendered in connection with said claim, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I ask for an explanation of this bill. I have hastily examined the report, and it seems to me the Government should not be called upon to pay the sum demanded.

Mr. BROWN of Michigan. Mr. President, I may say to the Senator that this bill relates to the rather notorious Barker case, in which two members of the Barker gang were surrounded and killed in Florida. The claim is for the damage which was done to the house where they were at the time. It was rented to these people without any knowledge on the part of the owner that they were the notorious Barker gangsters. The estimates submitted showed that the damage to the house was a little greater than the amount of $2,500 which has been allowed, and the Claims Committee felt that the claim was a just one. The damage, of course, was caused by the fusillade of shots that were fired into the house almost all day by the Government agents in their attempts to capture these persons; and both members of the gang, the so-called "Ma" Barker and her son, were killed in the affair.

I think the claim is a very just one.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the third reading and passage of the bill.

The bill was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MARIAN MALIK

The bill (H. R. 5622) for the relief of Marian Malik was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

STILLWELL BROS., INC.

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 1346) for the relief of Stillwell Bros., Inc., which had been reported from the Committee on Claims with an amendment, at the end of the bill to insert a proviso, so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to Stillwell Bros., Inc., the sum of $5,986.92 in full settlement of all claims against the Government for losses incurred by them as subcontractors in the performance of work done in the construction of a dock at the Navy Yard, Bremerton, Wash., in 1917: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or attorney on account of services rendered in connection with this claim, and the same shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, let us have an explanation of the bill.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, bills similar to this one have twice passed the Senate and on both occasions were approved by the House committee but failed of passage in the House in the two previous Congresses. The bill is the allowance of a claim for increased expenses during the war under the provisions of an act which was passed during wartime allowing claims to be presented by contractors.

Stillwell Bros. had a subcontract for the construction of a dock at the navy yard at Bremerton, Wash. The contractor had a similar claim. His bill was enacted a long time ago. The Department favors this bill. The amount has been reduced. There was a loss, I think, of $24,000, and the amount has been reduced to $5,986.92.

Mr. McKELLAR. The Senator says the Department recommends it?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. The Department recommends it.

Mr. McKELLAR. It is not clear from the report whether the Department recommends it or not; but the Senator assures me that the Department recommends it.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. A question was raised by the Department as to the amount. They concede that the loss of Stillwell Bros. was $24,000. Their objection was not to the bill itself but to the allowance of that amount, which has been reduced to $5,986.92.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment reported by the committee.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

SITKA COLD STORAGE CO.

The bill (H. R. 5859) authorizing the Territory of Alaska to transfer a certain tract of land to Sitka Cold Storage Co., a corporation, was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

THOMAS JEFFERSON'S BIRTHDAY

The joint resolution (H. J. Res. 284) authorizing the President of the United States of America to proclaim the 13th day of April of each year Thomas Jefferson's Birthday was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BRUNSWICK DIVISION, SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF GEORGIA

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 1816) to amend section 77 of the Judicial Code, as amended, to create a Brunswick division in the southern district of Georgia, with terms of court to be held at Brunswick, which was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That subsections (f) and (g) of section 77 of the Judicial Code, as amended, are amended to read as follows:

"(f) The southern district shall include five divisions, to be constituted as follows: The Augusta division, which shall include the territory embraced on January 1, 1925, in the counties of Burke, Columbia, Glascock, Jefferson, Lincoln, McDuffie, Richmond, Taliaferro, Warren, and Wilkes; the Dublin division, which shall include the territory embraced on such date in the counties of Dodge, Emanuel, Johnson, Laurens, Montgomery, Telfair, Toombs, Treutlen, and Wheeler; the Savannah division, which shall include the territory embraced on such date in the counties of Bryan, Bulloch, Candler, Chatham, Effingham, Evans, Jenkins, Liberty, Screven, and Tattnall; the Waycross division which shall include the territory embraced on such date in the counties of Atkinson, Bacon, Ben Hill, Brantley, Charlton, Clinch, Coffee, Pierce, and Ware; and the Brunswick division, which shall include the territory embraced on such date in the counties of Appling, Camden, Glynn, Jeff Davis, Long, McIntosh, and Wayne.

"(g) The terms of the district court for the Augusta division shall be held at Augusta on the first Monday in April and the third Monday in November; for the Dublin division at Dublin on the third Mondays in January and June: Provided, That suitable rooms and accommodations are furnished for holding court at Dublin, free of cost to the Government, until a public building shall have been erected or put into proper condition for such purpose in said city; for the Savannah division at Savannah on the second Tuesdays in February, May, August, and November; for the Waycross division at Waycross on the second Mondays in June and December; for the Brunswick division at Brunswick on the second Mondays in March and October: Provided, That no cost shall be incurred by the Government in furnishing quarters for holding court at Brunswick."

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, I desire to offer to the bill an amendment, which I send to the desk. I may state in a word what the amendment is.

The bill proposes to create a mere division in the southern district of Georgia, without any expense whatever to the Government, because the courthouse has been constructed, even down to the fireproof files and safes.

Heretofore, the Senate passed a bill transferring one county in the southern district of Georgia to the middle district of Georgia. That bill is on the House Calendar. If this bill is passed before the bill which is already in the House is taken up for action and passed, we shall have a conflict between the two bills with respect to one county. The amendment is merely to carry out the action heretofore taken by the Senate in transferring one county from the southern district of Georgia to the middle district.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. GEORGE. I yield to the Senator from Utah.

Mr. KING. Does the bill call for a further division of the district or districts, the creation of another subdivision?

Mr. GEORGE. It merely provides for another division within the district already existing.

Mr. KING. How many places are there in Georgia where court is now held?

Mr. GEORGE. Does the Senator mean in the southern district, to which this bill relates?

Mr. KING. No; in the whole State.

Mr. GEORGE. I should not be able to answer the Senator's question without some little calculation; but within this district there are four divisions. The bill creates a much-needed additional division; and I may say to the Senator that probably it would have been long since created as a division, but heretofore court facilities had not been provided. Now they have been provided. No expense to the Government is involved, and the passage of the bill is recommended by the Department.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Georgia offers an amendment, which will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 2, line 9, it is proposed to strike out "Clinch"; and on page 3, after line 3, it is proposed to insert the following new section:

SEC. 2. Subsection (d) of section 77 of the Judicial Code, as amended, is amended by inserting after the name "Berrien", a comma and the name "Clinch."

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Georgia.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

CONFISCATION OF FIREARMS FROM PERSONS CONVICTED OF FELONY

The bill (S. 483) to provide for the confiscation of firearms in possession of persons convicted of felony and disposition thereof was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That whenever any person is convicted of a felony in any court of the United States, firearms and ammunition found in his possession or under his control at the time of his arrest shall be confiscated and disposed of in accordance with the order of the court before which such person was tried. The court may direct the delivery of such firearms or ammunition to the law-enforcement agency, which apprehended such person, for its use or for any other disposition in its discretion.

TERM OF DISTRICT COURT AT MALONE, N. Y.

The bill (H. R. 5963) providing for the establishment of a term of the District Court of the United States for the Northern District of New York at Malone, N. Y., was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

INDIANS OF FORT HALL INDIAN RESERVATION, IDAHO

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2253) conferring jurisdiction upon the Court of Claims to hear, examine, adjudicate, and render final judgment on any and all claims of whatsoever nature which the Indians of the Fort Hall Indian Reservation in the State of Idaho, or any tribe, band, or group having members living thereon, may have against the United States, and for other purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on Indian Affairs with amendments.

The first amendment of the Committee on Indian Affairs was, in section 1, page 1, line 6, after the word "the", to strike out "Indians of" and insert "Shoshone or Bannock Indians living on"; on page 2, line 2, after the word "tribe", to strike out the comma and "band, or group having members living on said reservation" and insert "or band thereof"; in line 7, after the word "tribes", to strike out the comma and "bands, or groups" and insert "or bands"; in line 10, after the word "tribes", to strike out the comma and "bands, or groups", and insert "or bands"; in line 12, after the word "tribes", to strike out the comma and "bands, or groups" and insert "or bands"; in line 15, after the word "tribe", to strike out the comma and "band, or group" and insert "or bands"; in line 19, after the word "court", to insert "unless either party shall prove otherwise", and in line 22, after the word "of", to strike out "not less than", so as to make the section read:

Be it enacted, etc., That jurisdiction be, and the same is hereby, conferred on the Court of Claims to hear, determine, adjudicate, and render final judgment on any and all legal or equitable claims of whatsoever nature which the Shoshone or Bannock Indians living on the Fort Hall Reservation, or any tribe or band thereof may have against the United States of America, including, but without limiting the generality of the foregoing, any claims arising out of the United States appropriating either to its own use or to the use of its citizens of any land as to which any of said tribes or bands of Indians had the right of use and occupancy, and it is hereby declared that the taking and the loss without just compensation to any of said tribes or bands of Indians of any land with respect to which any of said tribes or bands of Indians had the right of use and occupancy shall be sufficient grounds for recovery, and the court shall render judgment in favor of said tribe or bands of Indians, and shall award thereto, as for a taking under the power of eminent domain, just and full compensation for all lands thus taken or appropriated: Provided, That in determining what constitutes just and full compensation the court unless either party shall prove otherwise shall deem such land to have had at the time of its taking or appropriation a principal value to said Indians of $1.25 per acre.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 2, page 2, line 23, after the word "The", to strike out "Indians of" and insert "Shoshone or Bannock Indians living on"; in line 25, before the word "any", to strike out "members of"; in the same line, after the word "tribe", to strike out the comma and "band, or group, living thereon", and insert "or band thereof"; on page 3, line 3, after the word "tribe", to strike out the comma and "band, or groups" and insert "or band"; in line 15, after the word "within", to strike out "ten" and insert "three"; and in line 17, after the word "tribe", to strike out the comma and "band, or group" and insert "or band", so as to make the section read:

SEC. 2. The Shoshone or Bannock Indians living on the Fort Hall Reservation, as a single entity, or any tribe or band thereof as separate entities, either alone or in conjunction with each other, and either for themselves or as representatives of the entire tribe or band of which they are members, may as party plaintiff bring a suit or suits against the United States as party defendant by filing its petition, either jointly or separately, in the Court of Claims and serving a copy thereof on the Attorney General of the United States. Such petition shall set forth the facts upon which the claim for recovery is based and shall be verified by the attorney or attorneys employed under contracts made in accordance with section 81 of title 25 of the United States Code, Annotated, to prosecute such claims, which may be made upon information and belief, and no other verification shall be necessary. Any suit or suits shall be instituted within 3 years from the date of this act by the filing of a petition or petitions in the Court of Claims. Any tribe or band of Indians which the court may deem necessary to a final determination of any suit instituted hereunder may be joined therein as the court may order. The court shall have authority to consolidate any suit brought hereunder with any other suit now or hereafter pending in said court if in its judgment justice requires.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 3, page 4, line 2, after the word "tribe", to strike out the comma and "band, or group" and insert "or band"; in line 5, after the word "tribunal", to strike out the comma and "including the Commission created by the act of March 3, 1851 (9 Stat. 631)"; in line 10, after the word "tribe", to strike out the comma and "band, or group" and insert "or band"; in line 13, after the word "tribe", to strike out the comma and "band, or group" and insert "or band"; in line 15, after the word "tribe", to strike out the comma and "band, or group" and insert "or band", and, in line 16, after the word "tribe", to strike out the comma and "band, or group" and insert "or band"; so as to make the section read:

SEC. 3. At the trial of said suit the court shall apply as respects the United States the same principles of law as would be applied to an ordinary fiduciary and shall settle and determine the rights therein, both legal and equitable, of said Indians, or any tribe or band thereof, against the United States, notwithstanding lapse of time or statutes of limitations or the nonpresentment of any claim to any tribunal. No payment or payments which have been made by the United States upon any claim or claims therein asserted or for the account of said Indians of the Fort Hall Reservation, or any tribe or band suing hereunder, shall apply as an estoppel against any suit brought hereunder, but there shall be set off against any recovery obtained by any tribe or band hereunder any payment made by the United States on any claim asserted by said tribe or band and such gratuity expenditures made by the United States for the benefit of said tribe or band as are directed to be set off by the Second Deficiency Appropriation Act, fiscal year 1935 (Public, No. 270, 74th Cong.).

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 4, page 5, line 1, after the word "band", to strike out "or group", so as to make the section read:

SEC. 4. At the trial of any action instituted hereunder any letter, paper, document, map, or record in the possession of any officer or department of the United States (or a certified copy thereof) may be used in evidence, and the departments of the Government of the United States shall give full and free access to the attorneys for said tribe of Indians, or any band thereof, to such letters, papers, documents, or records as may be useful to said attorney or attorneys in the preparation for trial or trials of such action and shall afford facilities for the examination of the same and for the making of copies thereof.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 6, page 5, line 14, after the word "tribe", to strike out the comma and "band, or group" and insert "or band", so as to make sections 5, 6, and 7 read:

SEC. 5. Any party suing hereunder shall have the absolute right of appeal from any judgment entered by the Court of Claims to the Supreme Court of the United States, and the Supreme Court of the United States is hereby invested with jurisdiction of such appeals.

SEC. 6. Upon the final determination of any suit or cause of action instituted hereunder, whether by judgment, compromise, or otherwise, the Court of Claims, in the event of a judgment being rendered in behalf of any tribe or band suing hereunder, or the Secretary of the Interior in the event any claim asserted hereunder shall be compromised or settled without the institution of any suit (which the Attorney General of the United States, if he deems it advisable, is hereby authorized to do), shall, out of any judgment received or settlement made, award to the attorneys of record, in accordance with their respective attorneys' contracts approved in accordance with existing law, as compensation for their services before the committees of Congress, the departments of the Government, and the courts, such fees as, based upon a quantum meruit, the Court of Claims or the Secretary of the Interior shall deem reasonable, which in no event shall exceed 10 percent of the amount recovered. In addition to the aforesaid fees, the Court of Claims, or the Secretary of the Interior shall also allow, out of any recovery for said Indians, to the attorney or attorneys of record such expenses as are necessary and proper in connection with the preparation and prosecution of such claims. All such fees and expenses shall be paid by the Secretary of the Treasury out of any sum or sums found to be due said Indians when an appropriation therefor is made by Congress whether or not said appropriation is to be distributed to said Indians or to be held by the United States and expended for their benefit. The amount of any judgment which may be recovered by said Indians, after deduction of fees and expenses as herein provided for, shall be placed to their credit in the Treasury of the United States and shall draw interest at the rate of 4 percent per annum from the date of the judgment provided therefor and both the principal and interest thereon shall be subject to appropriation by Congress for the benefit of said Indians.

SEC. 7. A copy of the petition in any suit instituted under this act shall be served upon the Attorney General of the United States and he or some attorney from the Department of Justice to be designated by him is hereby directed to defend the interests of the United States.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I desire to ask the chairman of the committee whether the bill now under consideration is amendatory of or conflicts in any way with the bill heretofore introduced and passed providing for referring to the Court of Claims the claims of the Fort Hall Indians?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, in connection with the bill referred to by the Senator, a Mr. Kappler, of Washington, is an attorney. Mr. Kappler had a letter on file requesting to be present when the bill was considered by the committee. On our last meeting date Mr. Kappler was found to be out of the city. It is understood that the amendments made are agreeable to him; but in the event they are not agreeable to Mr. Kappler, it is entirely agreeable that the bill, if passed, shall be open to reconsideration on the next day on which the Senate meets. I understand that Mr. Kappler will be back by that time.

Mr. KING. May I ask the Senator whether the passage of the bill would in any manner jeopardize the claims of the Fort Hall Indians, as to whom a bill heretofore was introduced?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, an answer to the Senator's question would be an interpretation of the existing law and likewise of this bill. With the information I now have, I should not want to give such an interpretation; but I understand that the bill is satisfactory to Mr. Kappler. If not, of course, I have no objection to its being postponed for the time being.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill conferring jurisdiction upon the Court of Claims to hear, examine, adjudicate, and render final judgment on any and all claims of whatsoever nature, which the Shoshone or Bannock Indians living on the Fort Hall Indian Reservation, in the State of Idaho, or any tribe or band thereof, may have against the United States, and for other purposes."

REVOLVING-FUND LOAN FOR KLAMATH INDIANS

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2053) authorizing the establishment of a revolving-loan fund for the Klamath Indians of Oregon, and for other purposes.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I hope the Senator from Oregon [Mr. STEIWER] will give us an explanation of that bill.

Mr. STEIWER. I should like to do so, Mr. President; but, with the indulgence of the Senate, I desire first to make a brief statement with respect to this bill, Calendar No. 1170, and the following bill, Calendar No. 1171, Senate bill 2054.

Companion bills identical in form with both of these bills were introduced in the House. Those bills have been passed by the House and transmitted to the Senate, and by the Senate have been referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs. Apparently the better procedure is to pass the House bills rather than to pass the Senate bills. I shall undertake to explain the bills in just a minute; but, as a procedural matter, I first ask unanimous consent to have the Committee on Indian Affairs discharged from the further consideration of these two House bills—House bill 5976 and House bill 5975—and ask, further, that the Senate proceed to the immediate consideration of the two House bills.

Mr. KING. I have no objection to the first part of the Senator's request, but I do not want to consent to the passage of the bill without some explanation, and I reserve the right to object.

Mr. STEIWER. Mr. President, I have not asked for consent for the passage of the bill. I merely want to bring the House bills before the Senate.

Mr. McKELLAR. I have no objection to that, but I want to ask the Senator a question as soon as that is done.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Oregon has requested that the Committee on Indian Affairs be discharged from the consideration of House bill 5976, and that the bill be laid before the Senate for present consideration.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, before the Senator begins his explanation I wish to tell him what is running through my mind about this matter. As I recall, the Klamath Indians have been before the Senate a number of times in a variety of ways. As I recall, there is very valuable timber on their reservation.

Mr. STEIWER. That is correct.

Mr. McKELLAR. I got the idea a year or two ago, or it may have been longer than that, that the timber rights were being exploited by the whites, who were buying the timber, and I think the Indians did not get their full compensation for the timber the whites bought. I am wondering whether the establishment of this trust fund for the Indians has anything to do with the timber or with those who have been buying timber. Will the Senator explain the facts in connection with the question I have asked?

Mr. KING. Mr. President, before the Senator begins his explanation, I may say that a number of years ago I went onto the Klamath Reservation, and what the Senator from Tennessee has stated is correct, but he did not go far enough.

Contracts had been let improvidently and unjustly by the Indian Office to a number of white settlers there who engaged in the timber business, and the Indians were being exploited and robbed. In addition to that, the Department sought to have the contract modified so that those who had the contracts would pay very much less than the sums they had agreed to pay. I reached the conclusion that the whole operation was unfair and unjust to the Indians, and I denounced it in the Senate, and opposed the policy the Government was pursuing with respect to the Klamath Reservation, and if this bill is to perpetuate that wrong, I shall object to the consideration of the bill.

Mr. STEIWER. The bill would have no such effect, as I will attempt to explain. First I wish to respond to the very proper question propounded by the Senator from Tennessee. The proposals contained in this bill have no relationship at all to the management of the timber. The timber is being cut and the Klamath Indians are realizing the proceeds from the sale of their stumpage. Under the law the Secretary of the Interior is authorized to make per-capita payments to the Indians, and under present conditions the greater part of the money received from the sale of the timber is being distributed to the Indians through the agency of these per-capita payments. In very necessity this valuable asset will ultimately be exhausted. The Indians will then have but little left out of their great estate.

The purpose of the loan bill is to set up, first, a capital reserve fund out of the proceeds of timber sales, and then a revolving loan fund to enable the superintendent to make certain types of loans to the Indians for the rehabilitation of their business affairs. The great merit of the bill is that it will prevent the dissipation of the Klamath tribal assets. The money will not all be paid out in per-capita payments, but under the bill will be conserved; the purpose of the bill, I may say, is to avoid the loss of the assets through the distribution of all of the money realized from timber sales.

The Indians themselves have considered the matter in their tribal meetings, and favor the legislation as a means of conserving their property. The Interior Department favors it. It is regarded in the Interior Department and in the Office of Indian Affairs as a sincere effort to conserve the assets of the Indians, so that when the stumpage is gone, and before it is replaced by new growth, there will be built up a large fund for the maintenance of this Indian tribe.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, if this will aid the Indians—and it apparently will—I am in hearty sympathy with it.

Mr. STEIWER. I am sure the Senator will be in sympathy with the bill.

Mr. McKELLAR. But I recall a very peculiar condition of facts, so far as our agents out there were concerned. If I was correctly informed, on this rather small reservation there were some 50 agents of the Government, all of whom were paid out of the proceeds of the funds arising from the sale of timber.

Mr. STEIWER. The Senator used the word "agents." I presume he means employees. There is but one "agent." The Senator means 50 employees, does he not?

Mr. McKELLAR. Fifty employees.

Mr. STEIWER. That is correct.

Mr. McKELLAR. As I recall, all of them except three were furnished automobiles, and those were paid for out of tribal funds, out of the funds of this particular tribe of Indians. There were many other charges, as I recall, which seemed to me to be perfectly outrageous, and I am wondering whether there will be very much money left to create this fund if those enormous charges are still being made and paid out of the tribal funds.

Mr. STEIWER. I remember very definitely the effort made by the Senator from Tennessee some time ago to correct the excessive expenditures on this reservation. That effort bore some good fruit, and some of the matters—not all of them, but some of them—against which the Senator from Tennessee complained, have been corrected. There is a definite credit balance to these Indians every year from the sale of a stumpage over and above all the expense of operating the agency.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BULKLEY in the chair). Does the Senator from Oregon yield to the Senator from New Mexico?

Mr. STEIWER. I yield.

Mr. CHAVEZ. I am a member of the Committee on Indian Affairs, and I wish to say that this is a very fine bill. It will protect the Indians along the lines suggested by the Senator from Utah and the Senator from Tennessee. But, for the information of the two Senators, who I know are very desirous of protecting the Indians everywhere, I may say that only recently, before the Committee on Indian Affairs of the Senate, in the discussion of matters pertaining to this particular reservation, an Indian himself, a former employee, and a former superintendent of the Indians testified—and it was not denied but was admitted by the Indian Office—that under the provisions of the act we passed last year, by which the contracts were to be modified, the lumber companies would go around and hire the very members of the tribal council to go amongst the Indians to get them to modify the contracts, a thing that was accepted with the full knowledge of the Indian Office and acquiesced in by the Indian Office. They accepted the contracts as modified after they knew that Indians who belonged to the tribal council had been hired, and received money from the lumber companies, in order to get the other Indians to modify the contracts. But the pending bill will protect the Indians.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I wish to make a suggestion to the Senator from Oregon, in whose State the Klamath Reservation is located, and I hope the Indian Office will read what I am now saying. The Senator from Oregon is a member of the Committee on Appropriations, of which I am also a member, and I hope that he will look into this matter and join with me in an effort to reduce the enormous costs which take away so much of the funds of the Indians in that reservation.

Mr. STEIWER. Mr. President, I shall be glad to do that. But I may say, for the information of the Senator from Tennessee, that the Committee on Indian Affairs at this time has an investigation in progress in connection with a wide range of matters relating to the administration of affairs at the Klamath Agency. That inquiry has not been completed, but I am very certain that the Committee on Indian Affairs will go to the bottom of the whole situation.

May I ask the parliamentary situation now, Mr. President?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oregon has requested that House bill 5976 be substituted for Senate bill 2053 and that it be now considered. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 5976) authorizing the establishment of a revolving loan fund for the Klamath Indians, Oregon, and for other purposes.

Mr. STEIWER. Mr. President, I wish to offer an amendment in order to make the House bill conform to the Senate bill. I send the amendment to the desk.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator whether the Indians themselves, without being made the victims of any of the reprehensible methods followed in the past by the white settlers in that vicinity and those who have employed them, approve of the bill.

Mr. STEIWER. They do. There has been no intimidation or coercion with respect to this measure. The white people who transact business with the Indians are not interested in the bill. It originated with the Indians and is approved by their representatives and delegates and by all concerned. The bill is a conservation bill.

Mr. KING. I should like to say that if we could get any measure enacted which would help the Indians I should be very happy, but the investigation which was made a number of years ago, under a resolution I introduced, revealed waste and extravagance in nearly all the Indian agencies.

There was one Federal employee for every six or seven Indians, more than 10,000 employees, and the cost was over $25,000,000. It was understood, when John Collier was appointed to the position of Commissioner of Indian Affairs, that there would be material reductions in the Indian items in appropriation bills, but I am told that the last appropriation bill carried a larger sum than any bill theretofore had carried. I hope the pending investigation will go to the bottom and show, as it will show, I am sure, if they get the facts, that there is a more stupendous bureaucratic organization handling the Indian Office than can be found in any other department of the Government.

Mr. STEIWER. It is true, generally, that the expense has run up; but on the Klamath Reservation expenses of administration have been reduced. During the time that Mr. Crawford, a Klamath Indian, was superintendent, the administrative expenses at Klamath were cut almost in half.

Mr. KING. And yet he was discharged because he cut down the expenses.

Mr. STEIWER. I do not know that he was discharged because he had reduced operating expenses.

Mr. KING. But he is out now.

Mr. STEIWER. Yes; but the fact is that the expenses have been reduced.

Mr. President, may the amendment be stated?

Mr. CHAVEZ. For the information of the Senator from Utah, I may say that the Office of Indian Affairs has now in the regular service more than 1,200 more employees than it had in 1933, outside of emergency employment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment offered by the Senator from Oregon [Mr. STEIWER] will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 3, line 13, after the word "Provided" and the comma, it is proposed to insert: "That in the event any property pledged as security is offered for sale to satisfy any obligation, the Klamath Indians shall have a preferential right, except there shall be no discrimination as to terms of sale, to purchase the same: Provided further", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior shall cause to be established on the books of the Treasury, out of any unobligated tribal funds of the Indians of the Klamath Reservation in Oregon (hereinafter referred to as the "Klamath Indians") on deposit in the Treasury of the United States, a capital reserve fund for said Klamath Indians. Such fund shall be created by setting aside the sum of $50,000 for the fiscal year 1937, and shall be augmented by additions of $50,000 for each fiscal year thereafter. Such fund shall be held in the Treasury of the United States and shall bear interest as provided by law. The interest upon such fund shall be used, insofar as it is sufficient, for the payment of the expenses of administration of the Klamath Indian Reservation in Oregon.

SEC. 2. The Secretary of the Interior shall cause to be established on the books of the Treasury, out of any unobligated tribal funds of the Klamath Indians on deposit in the Treasury, a reimbursable loan fund from which loans may be made to enrolled Klamath Indians for industrial and agricultural assistance and the construction and improvement of homes (including the purchase of land and interests in land, building material, farming equipment, industrial equipment, trucks, livestock, feed, food, seed, tools, machinery, implements, household goods, bedding, clothing, or any other equipment or supplies necessary to enable such Indians to fit themselves for or to engage in farming, the livestock industry, or such other industrial or agricultural pursuits or avocations as will enable them to become self-supporting); for the educational advancement of such Indians; for financial assistance in cases of illness, death, or other emergency; for the maintenance and support of the aged, infirm, and incapacitated Klamath Indians; and for the repayment of reimbursable loans previously made to such Indians from tribal funds. For the establishment of such loan fund, the Secretary of the Interior shall immediately set aside the unexpended balance of any funds heretofore appropriated or authorized to be used out of the tribal funds of the Klamath Indians for the establishment of reimbursable loan funds for industrial assistance or for any other purpose; and in addition thereto, out of any unobligated tribal funds, $100,000 shall be set aside for the fiscal year 1938 and $50,000 for each of the next 3 fiscal years.

SEC. 3. The reimbursable loan fund provided for in section 2 hereof shall be administered, under and subject to such rules and regulations as the Secretary of the Interior may prescribe, by a loan board composed of Klamath Indians of not to exceed five members: Provided, That in the event any property pledged as security is offered for sale to satisfy any obligation, the Klamath Indians shall have a preferential right, except there shall be no discrimination as to terms of sale, to purchase the same: Provided further, That the expenses of administering such fund, including such per diem for members of the loan board as may be authorized by the Secretary of the Interior, shall be paid from such loan fund. After the fiscal year 1939 the aforesaid expenses of administration shall not exceed the amount received from service fees, surcharges, and interest paid in on loans.

SEC. 4. For the purpose of providing adequate security for any loans made from the revolving reimbursable loan fund provided for in section 2 hereof, the Klamath Indians are hereby authorized to include in the securities offered therefor, in addition to any unrestricted real or personal property owned by them, any lands, interest in lands, rights, funds, future per-capita payments and other distributions of tribal assets, and other property, real, personal, or mixed, of any nature whatsoever, belonging to individual Klamath Indians, heretofore regarded or classed as trust or restricted Indian property.

SEC. 5. All repayments made upon any loans made from the reimbursable loan fund herein provided for, all repayments made upon any loans made from reimbursable loan funds for industrial assistance, or for other purposes heretofore established out of Klamath tribal funds, and all interest, surcharges, and service fees paid upon any such loans, shall be credited to the reimbursable loan fund herein provided for and shall become available for the purposes herein authorized.

SEC. 6. The amounts which the Secretary of the Interior shall cause to be added to the capital and loan funds established at his direction under the provisions of sections 1 and 2 of this act during each fiscal year shall not exceed the amount of unobligated Klamath tribal funds on deposit in the Treasury of the United States available for that purpose.

The amendment was agreed to.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, Senate bill 2053 will be indefinitely postponed.

PER-DIEM PAYMENTS TO KLAMATH INDIANS

The bill (S. 2054) establishing per-diem payments in lieu of compensation and expenses for members of Klamath business committee and official Klamath delegates to Washington was announced as next in order.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, that bill is a corollary to the previous bill, is it not?

Mr. STEIWER. No, Mr. President. I will explain the bill briefly.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair understands that unanimous consent has been asked to substitute House bill 5975 for Senate bill 2054.

Mr. STEIWER. No; I do not so understand, Mr. President. The House bill is not to be substituted for the Senate bill. I merely requested that we proceed to the consideration of the House bill, and if that consent is given the House bill will be before the Senate, and we shall postpone the Senate bill. It is not a question of substitution.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is an identical bill, is it not?

Mr. STEIWER. The bills are identical except for certain amendments.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of House bill 5975?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 5975) establishing per-diem payments in lieu of compensation and expenses for members of Klamath business committee and official Klamath delegates to Washington.

Mr. STEIWER. I send to the desk an amendment to make the House bill conform to the Senate bill, and ask that it be stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 2, line 8, it is proposed to change the semicolon to a period and strike out all of lines 9, 10, and 11, in the following words: "Provided further, That the length of stay of the official delegates at the seat of government shall be determined and fixed by the Commissioner of Indian Affairs."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. STEIWER. Mr. President, I will now answer the inquiry that has been made. This bill is merely one to establish a per-diem payment and a payment in lieu of compensation to be allowed the delegates of the Klamath Tribe who come here to the National Capital. The House bill provides that they shall be paid $5 per day expenses and $3 as salary in lieu of all other compensation. This idea also originated with the tribe. It was considered by them in a meeting called by the superintendent, and, after discussion, was agreed to by the tribe.

I ought to say that the motion agreed to by the tribe was that their delegates be paid a per diem of $8 a day. That idea encountered some opposition in the House, because of the general practice to keep per-diem payments on the basis of $5 per day. The House of Representatives have accordingly amended the measure to provide that $5 per day shall be paid as per diem for expenses and $3 per day shall be paid in lieu of compensation. It amounts, however, to the same total, which the Indians favor.

Mr. McKELLAR. Is it to be paid out of tribal funds?

Mr. STEIWER. Yes; it is to be paid out of the Indians' own money.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the engrossment of the amendment and the third reading of the bill.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior or such official as may be designated by him is hereby authorized beginning July 1, 1937, to pay, out of any unobligated tribal funds of the Klamath Indians in the Treasury of the United States, to members of the business committee, and to officers of the general council when engaged on business of the tribe, and to such official delegates who may carry on the business of the tribe at the seat of government, a per diem not to exceed $5 for expenses and $3 for salary in lieu of all other compensation and expenses: Provided, That the official delegates of the tribe on business at the seat of government shall also receive the usual railroad and sleeping-car transportation to and from the seat of government: Provided further, That the rate of per diem paid, not to exceed $5 for expenses and $3 for salary, shall be approved in advance by the tribal council of said tribe or its authorized business committee.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, Senate bill 2054 will be indefinitely postponed.

SAM ALEXANDER

The bill (S. 2594) authorizing the President of the United States to summon Sam Alexander before an Army retiring board, and for other purposes, was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the President of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized to summon Sam Alexander, formerly a field clerk, Quartermaster Corps, United States Army, and major, Signal Corps, United States Army, before a retiring board for the purpose of hearing his case and inquiring whether at the time of his separation from the service he was incapacitated for active service, and whether such incapacity was a result of an incident of service; and if, as a result of such hearing and inquiry, it is found that he was so incapacitated, the President is authorized to appoint the said Sam Alexander a warrant officer, Regular Army, and place him immediately thereafter upon the retired list of the Army, with the same privileges and retired pay as are now or may hereafter be provided by law or regulation for warrant officers of the Regular Army: Provided, That the said Sam Alexander shall not be entitled to any back pay or allowances by the passage of this act.

BAYOU SAVAGE, NEW ORLEANS, LA.

The bill (S. 2520) declaring Bayou Savage, also styled Bayou Chantilly, in the city of New Orleans, La., a nonnavigable stream, was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That Bayou Savage, also styled Bayou Chantilly, in the city of New Orleans, La., be, and the same is hereby, declared to be a nonnavigable waterway within the meaning of the Constitution and laws of the United States.

SEC. 2. The right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

LEAH P. RICE

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2487) for the relief of Leah P. Rice, which had been reported from the Committee on Claims with an amendment, on page 1, line 6, after the words "amount of", to strike out "$188.55" and insert "$172.55", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Comptroller General of the United States is hereby authorized and directed to allow credit in the accounts of Leah P. Rice, former postmaster at Harrison, Nebr., in the amount of $172.55, representing funds lost in the failure of the First National Bank of Harrison, Nebr., February 5, 1924.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

F. A. RUMERY & SONS

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 82) for the relief of F. A. Rumery & Sons, of Portland, Maine, which had been reported from the Committee on Claims with amendments, on page 1, line 6, after the words "sum of" to strike out "$2,140" and insert "$1,215", and at the end of the bill to add a proviso, so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to F. A. Rumery & Sons, of Portland, Maine, the sum of $1,215 in full satisfaction of all claims against the Government for extra expenses incurred in the construction of the United States inspection station at Houlton, Maine, under contract no. Tisa-3536, dated September 22, 1932: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or attorney on account of services rendered in connection with this claim, and the same shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JAMES W. GILSON

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2504) for the relief of James W. Gilson, which had been reported from the Committee on Claims with an amendment, on page 1, line 5, after the words "sum of", to strike out "$688.96" and insert "$682.64", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Comptroller General is authorized and directed to credit the account of James W. Gilson, former postmaster at Hartford, Conn., in the sum of $682.64. Such sum represents the balance of a shortage in such account caused by the embezzlement of post-office funds by one of the postal clerks at such post office. Any recovery hereafter made by the Government in respect of such shortage may, in the discretion of the Comptroller General, be credited to the account of such former postmaster in the event that any additional shortage in his account is disclosed, if such additional shortage has occurred without fault or negligence on the part of such former postmaster.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

CHICAGO, MILWAUKEE, ST. PAUL & PACIFIC RAILROAD CO.

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2606) for the relief of the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pacific Railroad Co., which had been reported from the Committee on Claims with an amendment, at the end of the bill to add a proviso, so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pacific Railroad Co. the sum of $798 in full satisfaction of its claims against the United States for damages to its transmission lines resulting from blasting operations of a Forest Service road-construction crew engaged in construction on St. Joe River Road project no. 456, in the St. Joe National Forest, State of Idaho: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or attorney on account of services rendered in connection with this claim, and the same shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Gunderson and her three minor daughters, which had been reported from the Committee on Claims with amendments, on page 1, line 5, after the word "Treasury", to strike out "not otherwise appropriated" and insert "allocated by the President for the maintenance and operation of the Civilian Conservation Corps"; in line 8, after the words "sum of", to strike out "$20,000" and insert "$5,000"; and in the same line, after the words "satisfaction of", to strike out "her claim and the claims of her three minor daughters," and insert "all claims", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury allocated by the President for the maintenance and operation of the Civilian Conservation Corps, to Ida A. Gunderson, of Bonners Ferry, Idaho, the sum of $5,000 in full satisfaction of all claims against the United States on account of the death of her husband, Gustave William Gunderson, who was killed near Wrencoe, Idaho, on May 19, 1934, when the automobile in which he was riding was struck by a Civilian Conservation Corps truck driven by Willis Mizier: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, on account of services rendered in connection with said claims. It shall be unlawful for any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, to exact, collect, withhold, or receive any sum of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof on account of services rendered in connection with said claims, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill for the relief of Ida A. Gunderson."

SOUTHERN OVERALL CO.

The bill (H. R. 3960) for the relief of the Southern Overall Co. was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

LULA G. SUTTON AND OTHERS

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 130) for the relief of Lula G. Sutton and others, which had been reported from the Committee on Claims with amendments on page 1, line 5, after the word "Treasury", to strike out "not otherwise appropriated" and insert "allocated by the President for the maintenance and operation of the Civilian Conservation Corps"; in line 7, after the words "sum of", strike out "$12,500" and insert "$1,500"; in line 8, after the words "sum of", to strike out "$7,500" and insert "$500"; in line 9, after the words "sum of", strike out "$7,500" and insert "$500"; in line 10, after the words "sum of", to strike out "$6,000" and insert "$1,000"; and at the end of the bill to add a proviso, so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury allocated by the President for the maintenance and operation of the Civilian Conservation Corps, to Lula G. Sutton the sum of $1,500, to R. E. Sutton the sum of $500, to Grace Sutton the sum of $500, and to Mary Lou Drinkard the sum of $1,000. Such sums shall be in full settlement of all claims of said parties against the Government for personal injuries sustained by them on the 22d day of December 1933, when the car in which they were traveling was struck by Civilian Conservation Corps pick-up truck no. 7 (tag number, U. S. 8–563 D. A.; motor number, 3792042): Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or attorney on account of services rendered in connection with this claim, and the same shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

CENSUS OF UNEMPLOYMENT

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2705) to provide for the taking of a census of employment, unemployment, and occupations, and for other purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on Education and Labor with amendments.

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, in the early part of the present session of Congress, my associate the junior Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE] introduced a bill providing for an unemployment census. It was a good bill and had for its purpose an excellent objective, namely, an accurate counting of the unemployed of this Nation, so that we might proceed in an intelligent manner on the basis of need in the matter of distributing work-relief funds. The pending bill, reported from the Committee on Education and Labor by the Senator from Alabama [Mr. BLACK], has a familiar sound. May I call the attention of this body to the fact that, apparently, the Lodge measure was smothered by the administration and that the new bill, involving somewhat the same principles, has emerged. At any rate, I am glad to see a step, at least, taken in the direction of an intelligent approach to the work-relief problem.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from New Hampshire for his courteous reference to me. I am naturally very much pleased that the committee should have acted toward taking a census of unemployment. I do not think the pending measure is as comprehensive as the amendment which I introduced to the relief bill, and I do not think it will obtain as much information as we ought to have, but I believe it is a very good bill, indeed; and it is a matter of complete indifference to me whether the bill be called the Black bill, the Lodge bill, or the Roosevelt bill, so long as the object is accomplished.

Mr. MALONEY. Mr. President, let me say, in this connection, that I have serious doubts that the bill provides the wisest way to proceed with a census of the unemployed. I believe that by this method we shall be delaying the matter longer than is necessary, but, in the absence of the probability of any other form of legislation, I am inclined to favor the proposal.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I may say, with reference to the statements that have been made, that there was a difference of opinion as to the feasibility of having a census of unemployment in the manner provided for in the proposals submitted to the Congress during the last 6 months. After the creation of the committee to investigate this question, I took the trouble to make an investigation. I thereupon found that there were many very good reasons causing officials of the Census Bureau to doubt that a census of unemployment taken hurriedly would be of any value. They took the position that if the census was not an accurate one the question would still remain in great doubt. The Secretary of Commerce concurred in that opinion.

The officials of the Department of Labor who have been in immediate charge of the unemployment problem likewise believed that it would be difficult to have a census of unemployment made within a short period that would be of any great value. After discussing the matter, however, with the officials of the Post Office Department who aided the Social Security Board in their work last January, and after discussing it with officials of the Social Security Board, among others, my conclusion was that, though it might disturb the routine of the Census Bureau, and even though the census, if taken hurriedly, might not be entirely accurate, yet, in view of the experience we have had in connection with the draft, the experience we have had in registering the unemployed under the Social Security Act, a census of the unemployed can be taken which will be of great value in the determination of unemployment problems. I know that if this bill introduced by the Senator from Alabama is passed, the census will be made within the next few months, and I think that everyone who has given any thought to the problem will believe that it is a step forward, and a helpful step, in enabling us intelligently to settle these problems.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, may I ask my colleague, while he is on his feet, what is the limitation as to time in which the census is to be taken? I am not familiar with the bill.

Mr. BYRNES. There is a limitation. Officials are appointed who are to determine the method; the plans are already being discussed as to the method, and I am satisfied that by April 1 a census will be taken that will be of great value.

Mr. SMITH. The Senator refers to April 1 of next year?

Mr. BYRNES. Yes.

Mr. SMITH. A report is to be made to whom?

Mr. BYRNES. Under the terms of the bill the committee taking the census will have to make public whatever the figures show. Provision is made for publication.

Mr. SMITH. I notice in the caption that a census is to be taken of employment and unemployment. I was wondering why the element of employment should be included.

Mr. BYRNES. My understanding of the provision of the bill of the Senator from Alabama is that it is to provide for a census of unemployment. I did not notice that statement in the caption.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, I think the principle of an unemployment census is so very important that it ill behooves any of us to cavil as to the details or raise objection as to the procedure. I say very frankly that I think this bill is far inferior to the bill introduced by the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. MALONEY] and referred to the Commerce Committee, and essentially embodied in the amendment he offered the other day to the wage and hour bill. I think that bill would involve less expense, would result in a more expeditious handling of the matter, and would be more certain than the measure now under consideration by the Senate. I also much prefer the amendment offered to the relief bill by the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE]. But it seems to me that to establish the principle of having an unemployment census, of obtaining certain facts by which we may be able to steer our course in the future, is so important that none of us who favor other methods of taking an unemployment census should raise objection to this particular plan. Therefore I have no objection whatever to the bill.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendments to the pending bill reported by the committee will be stated.

The amendments were, in section 1, page 1, line 5, after the word "of", to strike out "employed"; in line 7, after the words "occupations of", to insert "partially"; on page 2, line 1, after the words "census of", to strike out "employment" and insert "partial and total", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That to provide information concerning the numbers, classes, and geographical distribution of persons in the United States and of partially employed and unemployed persons and their dependents and income, and concerning industries and occupations of partially employed and unemployed persons to aid in the formulation of a program for reemployment, social security, and unemployment relief for the people of the United States, the President shall cause to be taken on or before April 1, 1938, a census of partial and total unemployment, and occupations, and including such other related information as shall be deemed in the public interest in the 48 States and the District of Columbia and the Territories of Hawaii and Alaska.

(a) The questions to be included in this census and the detailed information to be enumerated shall be determined upon by a committee consisting of the Secretary of Commerce, the Secretary of Labor, the Works Progress Administrator, the Chairman of the Social Security Board, the Chairman of the Central Statistical Board, and the Director of the Census, or their authorized representatives.

SEC. 2. The provisions, including penalties, of the act approved June 18, 1929 (56 Stat. 21; U. S. C., Supp. VII, title 13, ch. 4), shall, so far as not inapplicable, apply to the taking of the census provided for in section 1 of this act: Provided, however, That temporary personnel required to carry out the purposes of this act shall be appointed without regard to the Classification Act of 1923.

SEC. 3. To meet the expenses of this act the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to make available from the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1937 such an amount as the President may determine to be necessary.

SEC. 4. The President is authorized to make such rules and regulations as are necessary to carry out the provisions of this act and such provisions of the Census Act of 1902, as amended, as are applicable.

The amendments were agreed to.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator from Alabama if there is any provision in the bill which will compel speedy action in taking the census within a reasonable time; and is there any limitation upon the item of expense? The only objection, it seems to me, is that the authority is scattered too much, and I should like to see it concentrated.

Mr. BLACK. Mr. President, I may say to the Senator that there is no limitation provided by the bill as to the expenditure. I should have no objection to such a limitation if I knew exactly what the limitation should be. Perhaps if we were to provide a limitation it would be an invitation to spend up to the amount of the limitation, even if it were not needed.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BLACK. I yield.

Mr. BYRNES. I will say to the Senator from Utah that I made a number of inquiries to see if we could reach an estimate. My own feeling is that it should not cost as much as some of the officials of the Department believe it will cost. One estimate was that $4,000,000 would cover it. I do not believe it will cost that much, in view of the experience of the Post Office Department and the cost involved when it aided the Social Security Board last January. It should not cost more than $4,000,000.

Mr. BLACK. I may say to the Senator that it is my judgment, that from the best information I have been able to obtain, that from four to five million dollars would be the maximum that would be necessary to take a census of the unemployed and partially unemployed. It would require $20,000,000 to take a census of the entire country.

With reference to the question asked by the Senator as to the limitation of time, the bill specifically provides that the President shall cause the census to be taken on or before April 1, 1938. It is hoped that the census will be begun a long time before that. It is the hope that it will be taken as expeditiously as possible.

In discussing this matter with numerous departments in an effort to work out a bill which would function in the proper way, we reached the conclusion that it was better to place a limitation within which we knew the work could be done. The conclusion was also reached that in determining the information to be required it was better to have the benefit of the experience of the officers named in the bill.

This may not be the best bill that could be drawn, but it has had a great deal of consideration by various agencies that are connected with the census.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill to provide for the taking of a census of partial employment, unemployment, and occupations, and for other purposes."

BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (H. R. 5417) to provide for the measurement of vessels using the Panama Canal, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I have been requested by a Senator who is necessarily detained from the Senate to ask that that bill go over.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be passed over.

MARKERS FOR GRAVES OF VETERANS

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 1898) to authorize the Secretary of War to furnish certain markers for certain graves, which had been reported from the Committee on Military Affairs with an amendment, on page 2, line 2, after the words "Secretary of War", to insert "And provided further, That the price of each bronze grave marker furnished by the Secretary of War under the provisions of this act shall not exceed $9", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That, notwithstanding any provision of existing law, the Secretary of War is authorized and directed to furnish, at the option of the relative or representative of the deceased war veteran, either a flat stone grave marker, a standard flat bronze grave marker, or an upright stone grave marker or headstone, for the grave of any deceased person for which the Secretary of War is authorized to furnish a marker or headstone: Provided, That the Secretary of War shall furnish the upright stone marker, authorized by section 4877 of the Revised Statutes, for cemeteries under the jurisdiction of the Secretary of War; And provided further, That the price of each bronze grave marker furnished by the Secretary of War under the provisions of this act shall not exceed $9.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PERMANENT MEMORIAL TO WILL ROGERS

The bill (H. R. 6482) providing for cooperation with the State of Oklahoma in constructing a permanent memorial to Will Rogers was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That there is hereby established a commission to be known as the Federal Will Rogers Memorial Commission (hereinafter referred to as the Commission) and to be composed of three persons to be appointed by the President of the United States, one of whom shall be Mrs. Will Rogers. The members of the Commission shall serve without compensation, but traveling, subsistence, and other necessary expenses incurred by them in connection with the work of the Commission may be paid from any funds available for expenditure by the Commission. Any vacancy occurring in the membership of the Commission shall be filled by the President.

SEC. 2. There is hereby authorized to be appropriated the sum of $500,000, to be expended by the Commission, in cooperation with the Will Rogers Memorial Commission established by an act of the Legislature of the State of Oklahoma, and such other agencies, public and private, as the Commission may determine, for the purpose of designing and constructing on a site to be donated by Mrs. Will Rogers, in or near Claremore, Okla., a suitable permanent memorial to the memory of Will Rogers; but no part of the sum herein authorized to be appropriated shall be made available for expenditure until adequate provision has been made for the perpetual care and maintenance, without expense to the United States, of such site and the memorial constructed thereon.

(a) The Commission named hereunder shall have full power to accept gifts, grants, and donations from whatever source and such gifts, grants, and donations shall be applied on and reduce the amount of the $500,000 authorized herein to the extent of such gifts, grants, and donations.

SEC. 3. No amount shall be expended from the sums appropriated for the purposes of this act until an equal amount has been made available from other sources, public or private, for expenditure for the same purpose.

SEC. 4. All expenditures of the Commission shall be allowed and paid upon the presentation of itemized vouchers therefor approved by the chairman of the Commission, but no expenditure shall be made or authorized by the Commission except with the approval of a majority of its members.

SEC. 5. No fee or charge of any character shall be imposed or made for admission to such memorial or the grounds on which it is constructed.

SEC. 6. Plans and designs for the memorial shall be chosen only after open competition by architects and before any of the funds herein authorized to be appropriated shall be expended, the plans and designs of the memorial shall be approved by the Commission.

SEC. 7. The Commission shall cease and terminate upon the completion and acceptance by the said Joint Commission of the Will Rogers Memorial as herein provided, and the submission to the President of a final report including an audit of the expenditures of the funds expended as provided herein.

JOINT RESOLUTION PASSED OVER

The joint resolution (S. J. Res. 176) favoring employment by the Works Progress Administration of persons unable to find employment in private industry was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I have been requested, because of its importance, to ask that the joint resolution go over.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The joint resolution will be passed over.

LABOR STANDARDS FOR APPRENTICES

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to recur to Calendar No. 1124, being House bill 7274. The Senator from Utah [Mr. KING] objected and asked for further time to consider it. I have conferred with him and he has graciously consented to withdraw his objection, after a further examination of the bill. I think the measure is very meritorious, and I hope that consent will be given for its consideration and passage.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I have no objection.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill (H. R. 7274) to enable the Department of Labor to formulate and promote the furtherance of labor standards necessary to safeguard the welfare of apprentices, and to cooperate with the States in the promotion of such standards, was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of Labor is hereby authorized and directed to formulate and promote the furtherance of labor standards necessary to safeguard the welfare of apprentices, to extend the application of such standards by encouraging the inclusion thereof in contracts of apprenticeship, to bring together employers and labor for the formulation of programs of apprenticeship, to cooperate with State agencies engaged in the formulation and promotion of standards of apprenticeship, and to cooperate with the National Youth Administration and with the Office of Education of the Department of the Interior in accordance with section 6 of the act of February 23, 1917 (39 Stat. 932), as amended by Executive Order No. 6166, June 10, 1933, issued pursuant to an act of June 30, 1932 (47 Stat. 414), as amended.

SEC. 2. The Secretary of Labor may publish information relating to existing and proposed labor standards of apprenticeship, and may appoint national advisory committees to serve without compensation. Such committees shall include representatives of employers, representatives of labor, educators, and officers of other executive departments, with the consent of the head of any such department.

SEC. 3. On and after the effective date of this act the National Youth Administration shall be relieved of direct responsibility for the promotion of labor standards of apprenticeship as heretofore conducted through the division of apprentice training and shall transfer all records and papers relating to such activities to the custody of the Department of Labor. The Secretary of Labor is authorized to appoint such employees as he may from time to time find necessary for the administration of this act, with regard to existing laws applicable to the appointment and compensation of employees of the United States: Provided, however, That he may appoint persons now employed in division of apprentice training of the National Youth Administration upon certification by the Civil Service Commission of their qualifications after nonassembled examinations.

SEC. 4. This act shall take effect on July 1, 1937, or as soon thereafter as it shall be approved.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill just passed is the last bill appearing on the calendar.

FEDERAL AID IN WILDLIFE RESTORATION PROJECTS

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, while the Senator from Nevada was occupying the chair yesterday, Calendar No. 889, being Senate bill 2670, was called. At that time, at the request of the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY], it was passed temporarily to the foot of the calendar. Under that agreement I ask that the bill be taken up for consideration at this time.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Nevada asks unanimous consent to return to Calendar 889, Senate bill 2670, and also that it may be considered at this time. Is there objection?

Mr. CHAVEZ. Mr. President, we have in New Mexico a fish and game commission about as good as any in the country. They have asked to be given a little more time to study the bill. I ask the Senator from Nevada if he has any objection to having it go over for that purpose?

Mr. PITTMAN. Would the Senator object to granting me unanimous consent to make a statement with reference to the bill?

Mr. CHAVEZ. Certainly not.

Mr. PITTMAN. I make the statement so the Senate may know the purpose of the bill which is being passed over at the request of the Senator from New Mexico.

This is a bill to provide for cooperation and participation by the Federal Government, through the Department of Agriculture and the fish and game commissions of the various States, in the preservation of wildlife. It comes about mainly for the reason, I will state, a number of years ago Congress enacted the migratory bird law for the purpose of attempting to save the migratory birds of the country and then imposed a tax on guns, shells, and ammunition for the purpose of raising funds to administer that law.

During the emergency period large sums of money have been set aside for the purchase of migratory-bird sanctuaries throughout the country. They are numerous and are to be found in nearly all the States. However, no funds are available for the maintenance of the sanctuaries. Unless some provision is made for creation of such funds in the future, the sanctuaries will be worthless and useless without proper protection and guard.

Under the Federal tax law a certain amount of money is raised by a tax on sporting rifles, shotguns, shells, and things of that kind. That fund is not sufficient to take care of the game sanctuaries of the country at the present time, and it is the desire of the Federal Government to obtain aid in this particular from the various States. All of the States issue licenses for hunting and fishing. Therefore, each State has a fund of that character.

The plan is to utilize the fund raised from the tax upon guns, shells, ammunition, in connection with a fund raised in the States from the issuance of licenses for hunting and fishing. The bill provides, in other words, that the Federal Government shall put up 75 percent and the States 25 percent. No State has to participate in the program unless it wishes to do so. The projects will be outlined by the various States. If projects as outlined by the State include the Federal projects within the State, it may participate in this proposed plan. It may include other State projects, and, if that be so, then the Federal Government, through the Treasury Department, will turn over to the State a certain amount of money, 75 percent, to match the 25 percent to be put up by the State. The amount to be allocated to each State is determined somewhat along the lines of the allocation of money to the States under the Federal highway-aid provision. Area and hunting and fishing licenses are the bases for apportionment. The reason for taking area into consideration is because most of the sanctuaries are situated in the large spaces of the West.

The matter has been approved by all the States except New Mexico. Operation and application of the funds would be entirely within the administration of the State game and fish commission. If a State does not see fit to participate—and New Mexico does not have to participate if she does not desire to do so—it is not injured in the slightest degree. Forty-seven States desire to participate in the plan.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Mr. President, I was not objecting to the bill in and of itself, because there may be merit in it. All I ask is that it go over until I have an opportunity to examine it further.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be passed over.

UNIFORM SYSTEM OF MUNICIPAL BANKRUPTCY

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to recur to Calendar No. 936, being the bill (H. R. 5969) to amend an act entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States", approved July 1, 1898, and acts amendatory thereof and supplementary thereto.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Florida?

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, I do not rise to object, but, on the contrary, to state that I believe the bill proposes wholesome legislation for our country.

Though the Senator from Florida could probably make a better statement than could I, yet, since the measure came from the committee over which I have the honor to preside, I ask him to yield to me to make a brief statement concerning the bill.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is, Shall the Senate consent to return to the bill and consider it at this time? The Chair understands that to be the request of the Senator from Florida. The Chair first understood the Senator from Arizona to object, but the Senator from Arizona was not objecting. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Florida to return to Calendar 936?

Mr. BURKE. Mr. President, there are some features of the bill about which I have serious doubt, and for that reason I object to returning to it at this time.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Nebraska objects.

NATIONAL SAFETY AND ACCIDENT PREVENTION

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to return to Calendar 1098, being the bill (H. R. 7433) to advance a program of national safety and accident prevention. It is a House bill.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Utah?

There being no objection, the bill (H. R. 7433) to advance a program of national safety and accident prevention, was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That there is hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $35,000 to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of Commerce for the furtherance of the work of the Accident Prevention Conference. Money appropriated pursuant to this act shall be available upon vouchers approved by the Secretary of Commerce for fostering accident-prevention work on the part of organizations engaged in the promotion of safety and accident prevention; preparation and printing of material designed to enlighten the general public in matters of safety and accident prevention, such material to be disseminated through schools, newspapers, magazines, the radio, or any other means of intercourse or communication; the preparation and attempts to obtain enactment of uniform vehicle regulations in the several States; clerical assistants for the members of the general committee of the Accident Prevention Conference: Provided, That travel expenses incurred by members of the general committee of the Accident Prevention Conference in the furtherance of the work of the said conference shall be paid out of the amount appropriated.

NAVAL HOSPITAL, WASHINGTON, D. C.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to revert to Calendar No. 975, House bill 6547, which is a bill to permit the location of the Naval Hospital and Naval Medical School in Washington at a different location than the present one. The two Senators who objected yesterday to the consideration of the bill have withdrawn their objection.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Massachusetts?

There being no objection, the bill (H. R. 6547) to authorize the Secretary of the Navy to proceed with the construction of certain public works in or in the vicinity of the District of Columbia, and for other purposes, was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

WITHDRAWAL OF AMERICAN TROOPS FROM CHINA

Mr. McCARRAN obtained the floor.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. McCARRAN. I yield to the Senator from Illinois.

Mr. LEWIS. Thanking the Senator, Mr. President, I merely wish to call attention to the fact that I have lying on the table a resolution (S. Res. 170), submitted yesterday, which merely asks for information from the Secretary of War. I ask that the resolution may be laid before the Senate at this time and adopted without debate, without occupying time which the Senator from Nevada desires to occupy. I shall be glad if that may be done; and I now request the privilege of having the resolution read and submitted to the Senate for immediate passage.

The VICE PRESIDENT. There is pending business before the Senate; but the Senator from Illinois asks unanimous consent that the resolution referred to may be now considered. Is there objection?

Mr. WHEELER. I object.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Objection is made by the Senator from Montana.

COURT REFORM AND JUDICIAL PROCEDURE

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 2260) to provide for appearance on behalf of and appeal by the United States in certain cases in which the constitutionality of acts of Congress is involved.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, addressing myself to the unfinished business, House bill 2260, and the committee amendments thereto, by way of explanation I desire to say that I shall not detain the Senate for any considerable length of time, save and except to make clear to the Senate that the aim and object of the committee amendments and of the bill as it now stands before the Senate is to facilitate and speed up and add celerity to actions instituted in the respective Federal courts.

The first part of the bill provides for intervention by the Attorney General in any case instituted in a Federal Court where the constitutionality of an act of Congress is challenged. The bill provides that when such an occasion arises, the parties having instituted the action, and a constitutional question appearing to be involved, the Attorney General at once shall be notified. I intend to offer an amendment which will clarify that section when it is reached in due course. In other words, at this time the bill provides that if, in the judgment of the trial court, there is a serious question involved in the challenge of the constitutionality of an act of Congress, the trial court may issue an order notifying the Attorney General. I propose to offer an amendment making it mandatory, and not leaving any discretion whatever to the trial court, so that on the institution of an action presenting a question of constitutionality, immediately the Department of Justice shall be notified, and immediately the Department of Justice shall be permitted to intervene for and on behalf of the United States Government; and on its intervention the Government, then represented by the Attorney General, shall become a party, not to the individual controversy, but for the purpose of defending and protecting the acts of Congress, or defending and protecting the policy involved in the acts of Congress.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McCARRAN. Yes; I yield to the Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. HATCH. I take it from what the Senator has just said that the amendment which the Senator proposes to offer really strengthens the right of the Government to intervene.

Mr. McCARRAN. It takes away all question regarding the matter, and strengthens the right of the Government to intervene. In other words, it is no longer left as a matter of discretion to the trial court. The amendment wipes away all idea of discretion, and provides that when the question is raised, the notification to the Attorney General shall go forward, and immediately he may intervene.

Under the bill as it came from the committee, we thought it might be well to permit a trial judge to determine whether or not a serious question of constitutionality was involved. We now believe, however, that that part of the bill should be changed and the Attorney General should be immediately notified.

Mr. McGILL. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McCARRAN. I yield to the Senator from Kansas.

Mr. McGILL. Am I to understand that the amendment to be proposed provides, in effect, that where a party to a suit in his pleadings alleges that an act is unconstitutional, the duty of notifying the Attorney General will devolve upon the court?

Mr. McCARRAN. Yes; or if by the answer, or by a demurrer, or by any pleading, the question of the constitutionality of an act of Congress is raised, immediately upon its being raised the court shall notify the Attorney General.

Mr. McGILL. That will be the rule regardless of whether or not the trial court is in any doubt, as I understand. Suppose the court has no doubt and feels that beyond question the act is constitutional; why should the Government be required to intervene?

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, if the Senator from Nevada will yield, let me say that the bill does not require intervention. It simply requires the judge to notify the Attorney General, and then it is up to the Attorney General to decide whether or not he will intervene.

Mr. McGILL. But, if I may be pardoned, the Attorney General would have no knowledge as to the attitude of the court before whom the case was pending. The court might have no doubt on the subject, and might feel, beyond a reasonable doubt, that the act of Congress was constitutional. Nevertheless, the Attorney General would be notified, and in all probability would be required, at least in order to protect his official career, to intervene.

Mr. CONNALLY. On the other hand, under the present language, without the amendment, suppose the court felt that the constitutional question was not substantial. The court would not notify the Attorney General at all, and he would have no opportunity to intervene, while the Attorney General might think the question was substantial.

Mr. McGILL. My view would be that so long as the court did not believe there were substantial grounds for challenging the constitutionality of an act of Congress there would be no reason why the Attorney General should intervene.

Mr. BURKE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield at that point?

Mr. McCARRAN. Yes; I yield.

Mr. BURKE. If I may say so to the Senator from Kansas, I think the consideration which induced the members of the committee to suggest this change was that when the pleadings were filed the trial court then, just on the pleadings, might think no substantial question was raised and, under the bill as it stands, would not notify the Attorney General; but after the pleadings had been completed and the evidence introduced the court might see that a substantial question was raised, but the Attorney General would not have been advised.

So it seemed best to provide that in all cases, if the question of the constitutionality of an act is raised, the Attorney General shall be notified, and he may resolve the doubt. If he thinks the objection is not a substantial one, he need not intervene at all; but if he thinks it is, he has the right to intervene.

The Attorney General's office is agreeable to this change, and believes it is advisable to leave the matter to the Attorney General rather than to the trial court.

Mr. McGILL. Mr. President, I can understand the position which those in charge of this measure have taken. We do not know, however, how long the present Attorney General or the present officials of the Department of Justice will represent the Government, and it occurs to me that there is little reason why the Government should intervene except in cases where the court before whom the case is pending has an actual doubt as to the constitutionality of an act. If the court believes the act to be constitutional, why should the Attorney General be called in?

Mr. BURKE. If the Senator from Nevada will yield further on that point, of course, as a practical matter, the Attorney General would not intervene unless there was substantial justification for doing so. When the trial judge, in a case pending before him raising a question of constitutionality, gives notice to the Attorney General, there is nothing to prevent the trial judge from saying, "I think there is nothing substantial about this question, but under the law you may decide the matter." It will work out all right as a practical matter.

Mr. MINTON. Mr. President, will the Senator from Nevada yield?

Mr. McCARRAN. I yield.

Mr. MINTON. May it not happen that while the trial judge in the district court may be perfectly clear as to the constitutionality of the act, yet the party who challenges its constitutionality may take the case on up, and the higher court may have an entirely different view about the matter than the district court?

Mr. McCARRAN. I was about to make that point.

Mr. MINTON. For that reason the Attorney General ought to be in the picture.

Mr. McCARRAN. The view of the committee is that no impediment should be injected which would at all obstruct the action of the Attorney General in coming into court and being heard in defense of an act of Congress. Section 3 of the bill deals with the question of injunctions.

Mr. McGILL. Mr. President, before the Senator leaves the first section, am I to understand there is to be an amendment proposed relative to the extent of the liability of the Government?

Mr. McCARRAN. As the bill now stands, it provides for liability by way of damages. There is a difference of opinion among the members of the committee as to that, but the majority of the committee believed that the Government should be liable for costs as a party, where the Government intervenes in an injunction matter, but not liable for damages.

At this time I wish to say that in working the bill out the Committee on the Judiciary has labored diligently, and there has been absolutely no party line. No one has contributed more or given more study to the bill, which is a bill for celerity, a bill for speed, a bill for the conclusion of litigation, than has the able Senator from Vermont [Mr. AUSTIN], who was a member of the subcommittee which drafted the amendment. For that reason I am going to yield the floor so that the Senator from Vermont may discuss one phase of the amendment as it now stands.

Again, if I may, I wish to pay a high compliment and a high tribute to the ability and diligence and study which have been indulged in by the Senator from Vermont, and the fact that not a single whisper of party lines has come into the deliberations of the Committee on the Judiciary in this matter.

I wish to yield now so that the Senator from Vermont may explain a phase of the bill as it is before the Senate, and at a later moment I shall ask permission to yield to the Senator from Texas to speak on another phase of the bill.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, before making this explanation, let me thank the Senators on the other side of the aisle for their consideration throughout the study of this matter, and I wish to corroborate the statement already put into the RECORD that this issue was tried with entire freedom from bias or interest or prejudice caused by party label. An attempt was made to solve such problems as confronted the committee with entire impartiality, and having the welfare of all the people of our country for our objective.

Mr. President, what is a case? The answer to that simple question affords the principal reason for striking out all after the enacting clause of the bill which passed the House and inserting what appears before the Senate at this time. The bill as it was presented to the Senate by the House regulated judicial procedure by extending to the Government the supposed right to intervene in civil causes between citizens, and no provision was found in the bill which came to the Senate that the Government ought to have or that the Government must have a legal interest in the issue. Indeed, there was no provision in the bill as it was presented to us that the Government ought to become or must become a party to a case.

House bill 2260 was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary of the Senate and hearings were started before a subcommittee and testimony was taken before we ever got into the whole subject of the courts, which has engaged the attention of the Senate for some time. The subcommittee proceeded without any eye to the issues which subsequently developed, and solely with the object in view of making these reforms in judicial procedure according to the interest of the country, so as to enable the Federal Government to become a party in cases in which, under the Constitution, it had a right to become a party, and at the same time to prevent the possibility of saying in an amendment to the House bill that the Federal Government could exercise claimed rights which were beyond the power of the court to grant.

On this matter of intervention we ought to remember as a fundamental that the judicial power of the Federal courts is not unbounded, it is not unlimited, but it has been extended by the people only to all cases in law and equity which arise under the Constitution and the laws passed in pursuance thereof, and to controversies between the Government and its citizens.

Again I ask, What is a case? The answer to that question is necessary in order to show the reason why a substitute is offered in the place of the language contained in the bill as it passed the House of Representatives.

To hear and determine causes in controversy between the citizens of this country, to hear and determine controversies between the Government and its citizens—that, and that only, is judicial power. Therefore we get right back to the question, What is a case?

If there are no parties, there is no case, and that was one of the faults with the bill as it came to the Senate, because the bill as it passed the House permitted quasi intervention, not real intervention, after the parties had finished with their case and a judgment as to them had become final. As the bill was presented to the committee of the Senate the Federal Government was permitted to come in by way of intervention, though not real intervention, because it did not provide that the Government should become a party. The bill as it came to the Senate permitted the Government to step in and take an appeal in a case where the parties themselves were thoroughly content with the judgment of the court below, and the judgment had become final as to the parties.

There, of course, is not a case. There are no parties; there is no issue; the whole matter is moot; and what the Government would obtain by a bill so drawn as the one which came to us would be the claimed right to go to the Supreme Court and ask its judgment regarding an act of Congress, ask its opinion upon an abstract question, and obtain a decision in a moot case, so as to govern itself in possible cases which might arise in the future, but which were, so far as this particular issue was concerned, nonexistent.

Mr. MINTON. Mr. President, how could it be a moot case if the lower court had passed one way or the other upon the constitutionality of an act of Congress?

Mr. AUSTIN. Because the parties were satisfied with the judgment, and did not take an appeal. That was the difficulty with the bill as it came to the Senate. The parties would be content; their rights, which turned upon the decision of the court below, would be adjusted in a manner eminently satisfactory to both parties in the assumed case, and neither of them would wish to take the case up higher. Indeed, both sides to the presumed controversy would want to be left alone. But the Government would step in and undertake to bring up the question of constitutionality, which in that instance would be nothing but a sheer request for an opinion of the court, which of course is not within the judicial power.

Mr. MINTON. If the decision of the Supreme Court were invited on a constitutional question, would not that affect the decision of the court below if the constitutional question had been raised by one of the parties?

Mr. AUSTIN. Oh, yes.

Mr. MINTON. Then how could it be moot, or how could it be the exercise of the judicial power in an unauthorized manner?

Mr. AUSTIN. It would be moot as soon as the judgment was final between the parties—made so by themselves.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. AUSTIN. I yield.

Mr. CONNALLY. Is it not true that the objection which the Senator from Vermont has been stating to the bill as it passed the House has been corrected in the Senate committee amendment?

Mr. AUSTIN. Oh, yes.

Mr. CONNALLY. And the suggestion of the Senator from Indiana is also obviated, in that the Attorney General would have an opportunity to appear in all kinds of cases in which the Government wished to raise the constitutional question?

Mr. AUSTIN. The statement of the Senator from Texas is correct.

Of course, examples have been had of moot cases, and there should be no confusion about that. There was the case of United States v. Alaska Steamship Co. (253 U. S. 113). This was an action brought by certain interstate carriers to set aside an order of the Interstate Commerce Commission requiring them to use certain forms of bills of lading as being outside of the authority of the Commission. The carriers prevailed in the district court, and an appeal was taken to the Supreme Court. While the appeal was pending the Transportation Act of 1920 was passed, rendering obsolete the forms of bills of lading involved. Held, that the case had become moot and that no decision would be rendered thereon.

At page 116 the court said:

> Where by an act of the parties, or a subsequent law—

Notice, Mr. President, that it is not merely by an act of law that the question becomes moot but it also becomes moot by act of the parties. In the case we have been assuming it would be done by the act of the parties; namely, by accepting the judgment of the court below as satisfactory. But in either case—

> The existing controversy has come to an end, the case becomes moot, and should be treated accordingly. However convenient it might be to have decided the question of the power of the Commission to require the carriers to comply with an order prescribing bills of lading, this court "is not empowered to decide moot questions or abstract propositions, or to declare, for the government of future cases, principles or rules of law which cannot affect the result as to the thing in issue in the case before it."

Another case that might be cited is California against San Pablo & Tulare Railroad Co. There the court said (p. 314):

> The duty of this court, as of every judicial tribunal, is limited to determining rights of persons or of property which are actually controverted in the particular case before it. When, in determining such rights, it becomes necessary to give an opinion upon a question of law, that opinion may have weight as a precedent for future decisions. But the court is not empowered to decide moot questions or abstract propositions, or to declare, for the government of future cases, principles or rules of law which cannot affect the result as to the thing in issue in the case before it.

As to intervention, it is well to understand that under the present law in the United States the Government, as well as a citizen, may be permitted to intervene in certain cases in proceedings in equity. The citizen may intervene if he has a property interest, and as an individual; and the Government may intervene if it has a property interest, or has a duty to perform on behalf of all the citizens of the United States who would be affected by the proceedings. That is recognized in the equity rules of the court. Federal Equity Rule 37 provides that—

> Anyone claiming an interest in a litigation may at any time be permitted to assert his right by intervention, but the intervention shall be in subordination to, and in recognition of, the priority of the main proceeding.

This right of intervention has been spoken of in a judicial decision which ought to be made a part of the RECORD. That was the case of the Employers' Liability Cases (207 U. S. 463). In that case, at page 490, the Court held:

> In both cases the Department of Justice, on behalf of the United States, asked to be allowed to intervene for the purpose of supporting the constitutionality of the act. In the first (the Howard) case, this request was granted. In the second (the Brooks) case, the court, while denying the request upon the ground that it knew of no law authorizing such an intervention simply because the validity of an act of Congress was drawn in question, nevertheless permitted the United States to be heard as a friend of the court. In both cases the act was held to be unconstitutional, the demurrer was sustained, and the declaration dismissed. These direct writs of error were then prosecuted, and at bar the cases have been argued, by printed brief and orally, not only by the parties in interest but on behalf of the United States through the Attorney General as a friend of the court.

That procedure is recognized today, and has been employed recently in other cases; that is, the right to apply to the court for its grace to permit the Government to step in as a friend of the court and argue the case.

It is because we thought the bill, as it came over to the Senate, transgressed the judicial power in respect of letting the Government come in without itself being a party, without any controversy existing in which the decision as to the constitutionality or unconstitutionality of the statute would affect any interest, any right, any duty, or any obligation that we wanted to save the Congress from getting into the position of undertaking to give to the Department of Justice something which the people of this country said they could not have; that is, a right to push the judicial power beyond cases and controversies and to the point of the decision of moot questions, the decision of abstract questions, the making and expressing of opinions, the upsetting of final judgments and making uncertain the rights of parties without the parties having any status, without their having any protection against the Government in this regard. It was because of those things that we changed the section relating to intervention so that the United States could intervene in every case in which it saw fit to intervene, where it had a legal interest or might have a probable interest.

Mr. MINTON. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BARKLEY in the chair). Does the Senator from Vermont yield to the Senator from Indiana?

Mr. AUSTIN. I yield.

Mr. MINTON. If Congress should declare by an act that the Attorney General should be permitted to intervene whenever the constitutionality of an act of Congress is in question, does not the Senator feel that, if the Congress had placed upon the Attorney General, as a representative of the Government, a duty to perform on behalf of the Government to try and sustain the constitutionality of its own act, Congress thereby would justify intervention by the Government?

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, assuming that there is a moral justification for the Government of the United States to sustain a statute of the United States which is for the benefit of all the people, and which it is the duty of the Government to enforce for the common good, and assuming that that really comes within the definition of a legal interest, what we claim is that, even with that interest, the Government cannot stand outside of the case and exercise an executive control over a case between citizens. It must enter the case, and it must take unto itself the character of a litigant. It must become a party, with all the rights of a party, and—what I wanted to have provided in the bill—all the liabilities of a party. But I understand an agreement has been made to limit that liability to costs; and, as I stated heretofore, I am not going to impede the passage of the bill by getting in the way of that amendment, although at some time before this session closes I should like to put in the RECORD my views regarding that matter.

I am not opposing that proposal. What I am saying is that holding the views that we held as a committee—and I believe the committee were unanimous—it became necessary to substitute for that provision in the House bill, permitting intervention, the provision as we have made it here, the difference being that the House bill permitted a sort of mongrel intervention. Under that provision, there was not any necessity for the United States to become a party at all. The United States could tie up for a long period of time the effect of a final judgment between citizens of this country without having any responsibility at all to those parties. So we have said here, in effect, "You may come in. We will make it the duty of the court to notify you whenever the issue of constitutionality is raised, and the Attorney General may come into a case between two citizens of this country by showing that the United States has a legal interest, or may have a probable interest, in the case between these parties."

Mr. BULKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. AUSTIN. I yield.

Mr. BULKLEY. Why should there be any restriction of the right of the Attorney General to intervene when the constitutionality of a Federal statute is questioned?

Mr. AUSTIN. Because the judicial power of this country, as created and granted by the people, does not extend to any such situation.

Mr. BULKLEY. If it extends to holding a statute of the Congress unconstitutional, it certainly must extend to hearing the case and deciding whether or not it is constitutional.

Mr. AUSTIN. It does not extend to holding a statute unconstitutional. The judicial power does not extend to reviewing an act of Congress. In the Constitutional Convention an effort was made to give the court that power, and it was flatly and absolutely denied.

There is given to the court a judicial power only in controversies between the Government and a citizen or in cases between citizens of the country, cases that involve the precise question of the constitutionality of a statute on its face or its operation as applied to the interests of the parties. There is not given the general power of examining a statute of the United States and saying the statute is unconstitutional. All the court can do is to hear the issue between the parties or between the Government and a citizen and to decide and render judgment. It cannot hear an issue between parties and someone outside the case. Every person, in order to become a party to a case or a party to an issue to be tried and decided by any court of this land, must be so connected with the question of constitutionality that is raised in that particular issue that the judgment when rendered thereon will affect his legal interest. Whether it is the Government or an individual, there must be "a legal interest" or "a probable interest", as is provided in the bill. I have not any doubt at all what that means.

I am going to discuss fully the subject of what is "an interest." I have looked it up and find it has been decided many times and that it differs. It is quite a different thing as between Government and citizen and as between citizen and citizen. As between citizen and citizen it is a pecuniary interest only. It must have wrapped up in it damages of some kind. But as between Government and citizen it extends to the responsibilities of the sovereign. It extends to the duty which the Government must perform for the benefit of all its citizens. It may extend to a common right which the Government is responsible for enforcing.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. AUSTIN. I yield.

Mr. HATCH. I will be compelled in a short time to leave the Chamber for a few minutes, and I was hopeful that the Senator from Vermont would discuss the question of "interest" and would develop it fully along the lines that he and I discussed in the committee. Does he intend to do that?

Mr. AUSTIN. I will do it immediately, in view of the suggestion of the Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. HATCH. I will be very glad if the Senator will.

Mr. AUSTIN. The Debs decision is probably the broadest expression of it that I have been able to find, and it is very interesting. In the Debs case, it will be remembered, there was an interference with the transportation of the mails. The Federal Government had a duty to see to it that the mail was carried, and it undertook to perform that duty. The Court, in passing upon the subject of an injunction in that case, respecting the interest which justified the United States Government entering a case either by the front door or by the side door, either by being the original petitioner in the case or by coming in through intervention, said, as reported in One Hundred and Fifty-eighth United States Reports, page 564:

> Every government, entrusted by the very terms of its being with powers and duties to be exercised and discharged for the general welfare, has a right to apply to its own courts for any proper assistance in the exercise of one and the discharge of the other * * *. Whenever the wrongs complained of are such as affect the public at large, and are in respect of matters which by the Constitution are entrusted to the care of the Nation, and concerning which the Nation owes a duty to all the citizens of securing to them their common rights, then the mere fact that the Government has no pecuniary interest in the controversy is not sufficient to exclude it from the courts or to prevent it from taking measures therein to fully discharge those constitutional duties.

That seems to be not an unlimited power but a power which extends to every right and duty declared or necessarily implied by and under the Constitution. What we have undertaken to do by the amendment we have reported is to extend to the Department of Justice all the right that is within the judicial power; that is to say, to permit the Attorney General to intervene in all cases in connection with which the court has a right to receive the United States as a party.

Mr. HATCH. The expression "legal interest" shall not receive any narrow construction but shall be given the construction to which the Senator from Vermont has just referred.

Mr. AUSTIN. That is my understanding of it.

Mr. HATCH. That is very important.

Mr. AUSTIN. I believe that the report submitted on this bill clears up any ambiguity about the words, "has a legal interest" or "may have a probable interest", and there is a precedent for the Supreme Court using such a report in aid of the interpretation of those words.

Mr. President, I have a number of cases which I should like to put in the RECORD, by leave of the Senate and I ask unanimous consent to insert them without taking the time of the Senate to hear them read. I feel confident that Senators are very familiar with the principle of intervention, but as a matter of keeping together the product of a good deal of research, I should like to insert them in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, permission is granted.

(The matter referred to will be found as exhibit A at the end of Mr. AUSTIN's remarks.)

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Vermont yield to the Senator from Illinois.

Mr. LEWIS. I thought the Senator from Vermont had taken his seat. I apologize.

Mr. AUSTIN. I am going to sit down in just a few moments.

Only one other matter is committed to my duty here, and that is section 2 relating to appeal. This section has merit over the similar section in the bill as it came to us from the House, permitting a party to take an appeal. The section as it came to us from the House permitted a stranger to take an appeal. That is outside the judicial power. In my opinion, these sections of the bill as it came to us from the House would have been void because they exceeded judicial power.

The section permits not only the intervening government to take an appeal direct to the Supreme Court from the lower Federal court, thus cutting out the circuit court of appeals, but it also permits the other parties to the cause to go direct to the Supreme Court.

Mr. STEIWER. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Vermont yield to the Senator from Oregon?

Mr. AUSTIN. Certainly.

Mr. STEIWER. Does the Senator interpret section 2 to mean that the United States may take an appeal whether or not the other parties to the litigation desire the appeal, or may it only appeal when the other parties appeal?

Mr. AUSTIN. It may take an appeal in any event if it has become a party. Its right to appeal flows from the first section permitting intervention, or under the general law which permits the Government to be a petitioner and become a party to a controversy.

Mr. STEIWER. If the United States appeals without participation in the appeal by the other litigants, does the Senator think that does not raise a constitutional question as to the power of the appellate court?

Mr. AUSTIN. I think not. The Government is a party at the time when it exercises the right created by section 2. This section is not necessary to give the right of appeal to the Government. The Government, being a party, may take an appeal to the circuit court of appeals without this section, and it could take it alone. The other parties may simply say, "We are not going up. Go ahead. You have a right to take an appeal under the general law." The Government would then proceed.

When the Government becomes a party by intervention, it comes under all the benefits of all the laws as they are now, and the law as it is now gives the parties the right to an appeal. Any one of them can take an appeal without the others taking it. What is here accomplished is to cut out the intervening circuit court of appeals and go direct from the district court to the Supreme Court of the United States, and that right is granted not only to the Government of the United States but also to the other parties to a civil suit.

Mr. STEIWER. I am not controverting the Senator's position as he has just stated it, but I raise the question about it because I understand the American Bar Association committee, I believe, or some other committee of attorneys, has regarded the sole right of the Government to appeal without participation of the parties as creating a situation which raises a constitutional question which the Senator discussed earlier.

Mr. AUSTIN. That was true under the terms of the bill as it passed the House. The objection to which the Senator refers was to the House bill and to the principle of the House bill. Under that bill the Government could come in without becoming a party and take an appeal in the case where the parties were entirely satisfied and the case had become moot. Of course, that would raise a constitutional question. I am very firmly of the belief that the bill as it came to us from the House was unconstitutional. As it is now framed, the Government would be a party and would have all the rights of a party, its liability being limited to a liability for costs.

Mr. President, I need not further discuss the matter. I ask leave to insert in the RECORD such further citations as I may desire.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(The further citations appear as exhibit B.)

EXHIBIT A

THE DEBS CASE

Excerpt from The Supreme Court in United States History, by Charles Warren (vol. 3, 1856–1918 (158 U. S. 564), pp. 422–424)

The Debs case grew out of the great Pullman strike and riots of 1894, and its decision, on May 25, 1895, is to be regarded as one of the datum posts in American legal history. The Court, in a notable opinion by Judge Brewer, upheld an injunction issued by the lower court restraining the defendant from obstructing trains engaged in interstate commerce or in carrying the mails. "The strong arm of the National Government may be put forth to brush away all obstructions to the freedom of interstate commerce or the transportation of the mails", said Brewer. "If the emergency arises, the Army of the Nation, and all its militia, are at the service of the Nation to compel obedience to its laws." While holding that the Government had a property right in the mails sufficient to warrant its suing in equity, he stated that the Court did not care to place its decision upon this ground alone. "Every government, entrusted by the very terms of its being with powers and duties to be exercised and discharged for the general welfare, has a right to apply to its own courts for any proper assistance in the exercise of the one and the discharge of the other. * * * Whenever the wrongs complained of are such as affect the public at large, and are in respect of matters which by the Constitution are entrusted to the care of the Nation, and concerning which the Nation owes a duty to all the citizens of securing to them their common rights, then the mere fact that the Government has no pecuniary interest in the controversy is not sufficient to exclude it from the courts or to prevent it from taking measures therein to fully discharge those constitutional duties."

This decision, sustaining President Cleveland's energetic action in employing both the military and civil forces of the Government to end the strike, caused a great sensation, and was widely endorsed by conservative and patriotic men as a strong support to the stability of the Nation. Such an application of national power to a labor situation, however, was a long step toward centralization of authority; and, as a legal writer said, "While all must applaud the promptness and vigor with which the Federal power acted, saving the country perhaps from a reign of anarchy and bloodshed * * * slowly but inevitably one after another of the State police powers is being brought within the limits of Federal jurisdiction."

LEGAL INTEREST

Liverpool, Etc., Steamship Co. v. Commissioners (113 U. S. 33)

This was an action to recover money alleged to have been illegally exacted. The answer set up an act of Congress legalizing the collection of head moneys already paid. The circuit court refused to hear evidence offered by the plaintiff and gave judgment on the pleadings for the defendant. Held, error, because the record did not show that the money sued for was within the terms of the act. On page 39 appears the following dictum:

"If, on the other hand, we should assume the plaintiff's case to be within the terms of the statute, we should have to deal with it purely as an hypothesis, and pass upon the constitutionality of an act of Congress as an abstract question. That is not the mode in which this court is accustomed or willing to consider such questions. It has no jurisdiction to pronounce any statute, either of a State or of the United States, void, because irreconcilable with the Constitution, except as it is called upon to adjudge the legal rights of litigants in actual controversies."

Warehouse Co. v. Grannis (273 U. S. 70 (1927))

A proceeding was brought in a Federal district court to obtain a declaratory judgment as to the validity of a State law under a State declaratory judgment statute. A demurrer was sustained on the ground that the court lacked jurisdiction to give such a judgment. There was no actual controversy of any sort. Held, that the Federal district court was without jurisdiction to give a declaratory judgment. At page 74 the court said:

"* * * it is not open to question that the judicial power vested by article III of the Constitution in this court and the inferior courts of the United States established by Congress thereunder extends only to 'cases' and 'controversies' in which the claims of litigants are brought before them for determination by such regular proceedings as are established for the protection and enforcement of rights or the prevention, redress, or punishment of wrongs; and that their jurisdiction is limited to cases and controversies presented in such form, with adverse litigants, that the judicial power is capable of acting upon them and pronouncing and carrying into effect a judgment between the parties, and does not extend to the determination of abstract questions or issues framed for the purpose of invoking the advice of the court without real parties or a real case."

"It follows necessarily * * * that the district court, as a court of the United States established under article III of the Constitution, had no jurisdiction to entertain the petition for a declaratory judgment."

Texas v. Interstate Commerce Commission (258 U. S. 158 (1922))

The bill prayed that an act enlarging the powers of the Interstate Commerce Commission and creating the Railroad Labor Board be declared unconstitutional and action thereunder enjoined. In dismissing the bill for lack of jurisdiction, the court said, in part (p. 162):

"The bill is of unusual length, 65 printed pages. Much of it is devoted to the presentation of an abstract question of legislative power, whether the matters dealt with in several of the provisions of titles III and IV fall within the field wherein Congress may speak with constitutional authority, or within the field reserved to the several States. The claim of the State * * * is that they fall within the latter field, and therefore that the congressional enactment is void. Obviously, this part of the bill (bill of complaint) does not present a case or controversy within the range of the judicial power as defined by the Constitution. It is only where rights in themselves appropriate subjects of judicial cognizance, are being, or about to be, affected prejudicially by the application or enforcement of a statute that its validity may be called in question by a suitor and determined by an exertion of the judicial power."

New Jersey v. Sargent (269 U. S. 328 (1926))

In this case it was held that the Supreme Court could not entertain a bill for an injunction against Federal officers charged with administering a Federal statute which did not show that any justiciable right of the State was being or was about to be affected prejudicially by the statute but really sought merely to obtain an abstract judicial declaration that certain features of the statute exceeded the power of Congress and encroached upon that of the State.

Article III, section 2, of the Constitution provides, in part, as follows:

"The judicial power shall extend to all cases, in law and equity, * * * to controversies to which the United States shall be a party * * *."

It is now conclusively determined that no Federal court can determine the constitutionality of an act of Congress unless there is a case or controversy within the meaning of the above provision. Muskrat v. United States (219 U. S. 346 (1911)). Some of the language of the Court in that case is so pertinent that it is well worth quoting:

"That judicial power * * * is the right to determine actual controversies arising between adverse litigants, duly instituted in courts of proper jurisdiction. The right to declare a law unconstitutional arises because an act of Congress relied upon by one or the other of such parties in determining their rights is in conflict with the fundamental law. The exercise of this, the most important and delicate duty of this Court, is not given to it as a body with revisory power over the action of Congress, but because the rights of the litigants in justiciable controversies require the Court to choose between the fundamental law and a law purporting to be enacted within constitutional authority, but in fact beyond the power delegated to the legislative branch of the Government. This attempt to obtain a judicial declaration of the validity of the act of Congress is not presented in a case or controversy to which, under the Constitution of the United States, the judicial power alone extends. It is true the United States is made a defendant to this action, but it has no interest adverse to the claimants. The object is not to assert a property right as against the Government, or to demand compensation for alleged wrong because of action upon its part. The whole purpose of the law is to determine the constitutional validity of this class of legislation, in a suit not arising between parties concerning a property right necessarily involved in the decision in question, but in a proceeding against the Government in its sovereign capacity, and concerning which the only judgment required is to settle the doubtful character of the legislation in question."

NO REVIEW OF ACTS

In Massachusetts v. Mellon the Court refused to pass on the constitutionality of the Federal Maternity Act of 1921 on the ground that the Court had no jurisdiction to determine the naked question of the unconstitutionality of an act of Congress, but can only do so where the plaintiffs can show that they have sustained legal damage by reason of the act, which the Court said was not so in the case before it. In such a case, of course, the statute remains in force even though in another case properly before the Court it might be shown to be unconstitutional. Mr. Justice Sutherland, delivering the unanimous opinion of the Court, said, at page 488:

"The functions of government under our system are apportioned. To the legislative department has been committed the duty of making laws; to the executive the duty of executing them; and to the judiciary the duty of interpreting and applying them in cases properly brought before the courts. The general rule is that neither department may invade the province of the other and neither may control, direct, or restrain the action of the other. We are not now speaking of the merely ministerial duties of officials. Gaines v. Thompson (7 Wall. 347). We have no power per se to review and annul acts of Congress on the ground that they are unconstitutional. That question may be considered only when the justification for some direct injury suffered or threatened, presenting a justiciable issue, is made to rest upon such an act. Then the power exercised is that of ascertaining and declaring the law applicable to the controversy. It amounts to little more than the negative power to disregard an unconstitutional enactment, which otherwise would stand in the way of the enforcement of a legal right. The party who invokes the power must be able to show not only that the statute is invalid but that he has sustained or is immediately in danger of sustaining some direct injury as the result of its enforcement, and not merely that he suffers in some indefinite way in common with people generally."

The opinion shows that the rule thus relied on by Mr. Justice Sutherland in the case last cited is founded on very early cases, as illustrated by the following citation from Mr. Justice Story delivered in the course of an opinion by himself in Cherokee Nation v. Georgia (5 Pet. 1) in which he said, at page 75:

"'It is only where the rights of persons or property are involved, and when such rights can be presented under some judicial form of proceedings, that courts of justice can interpose relief. This Court can have no right to pronounce an abstract opinion upon the constitutionality of a State law. Such law must be brought into actual or threatened operation, upon rights properly falling under judicial cognizance, or a remedy is not to be had here.' (See also Luther v. Borden (7 How. 1); Mississippi v. Johnson (4 Wall. 475, 500); Pacific Telephone Co. v. Oregon (223 U. S. 118); Louisiana v. Texas (176 U. S. 1, 23); Fairchild v. Hughes (258 U. S. 126)."

EXHIBIT B

CASES AND CONTROVERSIES

[Constitution of the United States, revised and annotated, p. 439]

In order that the judicial power may extend to a case arising under the Constitution or laws of the United States or a treaty, it must be "a case in law or in equity" in which a right under such Constitution, law, or treaty is asserted in a court of justice. A suit in which a party seeks protection under a law is one arising under that law; and where the right of either party to a suit depends upon the validity of an act of Congress, the case is one arising under the Constitution. The construction of a treaty is deemed to be drawn into question for the purposes of Federal jurisdiction where the issue is as to whether an act done or omitted was in conformity to the treaty. But the case must really and substantially involve a question contemplated by this clause; the mere controverting a right or disputing an act is not necessarily sufficient. Cohens v. Virginia (6 Wheat. 379); Minnesota Co. v. St. Paul Co. (2 Wall. 634); Railroad Co. v. Mississippi (102 U. S. 140); Patton v. Brady (184 U. S. 611); Smith v. Maryland (6 Cranch 304); Bier v. McGehee (148 U. S. 141); Western Union v. Ann Arbor R. Co. (178 U. S. 239); Gableman v. Peoria, etc. R. Co. (179 U. S. 339); Ferry v. King County (141 U. S. 673).

The jurisdiction of the Federal courts is commensurate with every right and duty created, declared, or necessarily implied by and under the Federal Constitution and laws. A "case" is a question contested before a court of justice, and a case "in law" or "equity" consists in the right of one party as well as of the other, and it "arises" when its correct decision depends on the construction of the Constitution or laws of the United States. It is a suit instituted according to the regular course of judicial procedure. The interests of the parties must be adverse; the clause does not contemplate suits merely to determine abstract principles. It is limited to such suits as are between parties and are of a judicial nature, and does not include purely political questions. When the subject of a controversy is political, that is, where it involves a question purely governmental, the courts cannot take cognizance of it. Irvine v. Marshall (20 How. 564); Martin v. Hunter (1 Wheat. 352); Cohens v. Virginia (6 Wheat. 407); Ex parte Milligan (4 Wall. 113); Ex parte Carll (106 U. S. 522); Marbury v. Madison (1 Cranch 138); Owings v. Norwood (5 Cranch 348); Wood-Paper Co. v. Heft (8 Wall. 336); Foster v. Mansfield, etc., R. Co. (146 U. S. 101); Luther v. Borden (7 How. 1); U. S. v. Ferreira (13 How. 40); Craig v. Missouri (4 Pet. 438); Cherokee Nation v. Georgia (5 Pet. 20); Boynton v. Blaine (139 U. S. 326); In re Cooper (143 U. S. 503); Georgia v. Stanton (6 Wall. 71); Muskrat v. U. S. (219 U. S. 346).

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, I am compelled to conclude, from a reading of the bill reported to the Senate, that it violates the Constitution in specific terms.

It is a direct violation of the statutes of the United States and does not presume or attempt to repeal the statutes which it violates. I felicitate all members of the committee and join in the praise of the superior legal capacity of the Senator from Vermont—the potent member of the subcommittee—yet I condemn the act as unconstitutional and illegal.

As the first basis, quoting able Senators on the floor, lately arguing on the Housing Act, we have several acts of Congress now existing which authorize the imprisonment of an individual who may violate some of the orders of the executive powers issued under those acts. A man's property is on the eve of being taken. He himself is being arrested. He is on the eve of being imprisoned. Here is a proposed law from eminent sources which now prescribes that the United States district judge, sitting as such at the place of the offense, who is sworn on his solemn oath to enforce the Constitution and to obey the Constitution, and to grant all right guaranteed, shall be prevented from doing so. He is prohibited from doing anything in the case where unconstitutionality is charged. The legal court—this authorized judge—is ordered in this bill to grant no relief.

Let us behold the case—a man attacks the law because he believes it is unconstitutional and as such seizes him for imprisonment under the penal features of the law.

In other respects it seeks to appropriate his property as privilege to the taking of property under the law. He asks for an injunction to stay the heavy hand of the law about to be laid upon his property. He has available by the law as long existing the United States district court framed to sustain the Constitution, the judge of which court is on his oath to obey the Constitution, on his oath to enforce it. But this district judge under the now provisions of this bill would have no authority. Under the terms of this bill he is forbidden to come to the relief of that individual who has no other court for relief nor any higher authority though his property and his liberty are being imperiled. The district judge must sit idly. He can only call in other judges, and then not until those other judges come of their own will. They are summoned on their own consent. Then, if they come, does the man get a hearing? He swelters in jail, his property is destroyed, yet with it all, 5 days must elapse for notice to the Attorney General, 5 days must expire before the individual can have an opportunity for the hearing to which he is entitled. Even though he gets the newly called in judges, he would not even have a hearing until the other judges are called in and they consent to serve. The district court sits silent, giving no relief to the humble who is being imprisoned under the bill or to the powerful whose property is being confiscated—and this under the Constitution.

I beg to invite attention to a case which may have application to the point involved. A bill is presented by eminent lawyers, members of the Senate Judiciary Committee—and I can certify from my personal knowledge that they are eminent—which prescribes that other judges than the presiding or sitting judge are to be brought into the case before the complainant can be heard for any reason. First comes a request from the judge to the circuit judge. If the circuit judge grants the request, he summons some judge who, "if practicable," is to come into the case. He and another judge similarly called finally arrive. Five days must elapse until the Attorney General is notified to find out whether he desires to intervene.

In the meantime the rights of the individual are suspended or completely denied, and the doctrine of the law that "justice delayed is justice denied" seems for the moment by these meticulous constitutional lawyers to be forgotten.

Where is that distinction claimed for the Constitution by the monarch of Montana, the baron of Butte [Mr. WHEELER] who gave us the blazing blisters of his embolded arraignment of the President and the Supreme Court reform bill—where now that resplendent reasoning on the "spirit of the Constitution"? Where is our masterful denunciator—the wizard of Wyoming [Mr. O'MAHONEY], who as count of Cheyenne expounded at some length on the philosophy of the language of the Constitution? How we recall his dwelling with forensic fury as he discussed the philology of the then pending bill and labored on the purpose of using the word "may" instead of "shall", that the word "may" instead of "shall" should not be used in the provision providing for the call of the other judges. "You may, but you do not have to", said the eminent Senator from Wyoming. "If you find one you think will support an unconstitutional act by calling it constitutional, choose him. If you think there is another who might call it constitutional when it really is not, choose him."

My eminent friend—and I am speaking of the count of Cheyenne—gave us the benefit of his wondrous capacity to deal with the philosophy he propounded upon the consideration of the matter of the language of the provision relating to the calling in of outside judges. Yet, now the bill he and his colleagues foster uses both but mostly "shall"—and as such demands that the circuit court judge or the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States to send a man from a common-law State, who knows nothing in the world of code pleading or procedure, into the State of California, which is a code State, or into the States of Georgia or New York, which are code States, or of a code State to my common-law State of Illinois, and sit there with power to prescribe which of the local regulations of the State shall apply. He, with complete barbaric ignorance of them, is sent to take charge of a case or sit in the case to dispose of laws and people of which he is stupidly barren of information.

Under what circumstances, designated by a circuit judge, is he appointed to the position to which he was never named, or where is law to authorize the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States to designate a judge to serve at a place to which he never was appointed and never was authorized to serve?

I invite the attention of my able friends that they have anticipated this in their report by these expressions:

> The judicial power of the United States extends to every right and duty created, declared, or necessarily implied by and under the Federal Constitution and laws made in pursuance thereof. But Congress cannot create other rights and duties which extend further the judicial power. Only the people can do this.

Mr. President, in that I heartily concur; and I desire to invite attention at this particular moment to the Supreme Court of the United States denouncing such pretense as contained in this bill. In the case of Springer v. Philippine Islands (277 U. S. 202) we find a denunciation by that Court. We are now referring to judges who, being at a distance, are brought into a State in which they have never been appointed by the President, where they have no authority by law to sit, where there is no inherent capacity or privilege to sit, but they are drawn in by the Chief Justice and sent to an area to which they have never been designated by the Executive. Is there such power? Is there such right? Have we a right by act of Congress to do this? I invite the attention of Senators to the pronouncement of the Supreme Court in the case to which I have referred, as follows:

> Legislative power, as distinguished from executive power, is the authority to make laws but not to enforce them or appoint the agents charged with the duty of such enforcement. The latter are executive functions. It is unnecessary to enlarge further upon the general subject, since it has so recently received the full consideration of this Court (Myers v. United States, 272 U. S. 52).

It will be plainly observed that there seems to be in the bill a power lodged in the chief justice or circuit justice to call in a judge to sit in a district to which he has never been designated in violation of Logan v. United States (144 U. S.). Here such justice appoints another judge to do that which only the Executive himself could delegate. For that reason, as I behold the bill, first it violates the Constitution in that it declines to give a judge sworn on his oath the right to fulfill his duty and discharge it. He can only do so providing two other judges from somewhere agree with him that it is his duty to do it.

Then the Attorney General is called in, and now called in peremptorily, though not called in for 5 days, during which time the unfortunate individual must swelter in jail and his property be subject to confiscation before he can get even a hearing. When he presents his opportunity and it is denied him, he has no appeal whatever under this bill. He has nowhere to go but back to jail. A writ of habeas corpus or attacks on the unconstitutionality of the law cannot be entertained.

With the reasons I designate now I shall content myself for the moment. I shall enlarge further upon the matter, which I understand will come up later, but I was anxious to allow my friends of the committee to dispose of the matter, particularly to expedite my able friend the Senator from Nevada, whose forensic advocacy on this floor entitles him to be known as the Honorable DANIEL O'CONNELL MCCARRAN. I shall not further embarrass the immediate consideration but content myself with having pointed out the views I have on the bill, biding time for further exposition.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment reported by the committee will be stated.

The amendment was to strike out all after the enacting clause and to insert the following:

That whenever the constitutionality of any act of Congress is drawn in question in any court of the United States in any suit or proceeding to which the United States, or any agency thereof, or any officer or employee thereof, as such officer or employee, is not a party, the court having jurisdiction of the suit or proceeding shall certify such fact to the Attorney General if the court is of opinion that a substantial ground exists for questioning the constitutionality of such act. The court shall, upon a showing by the Attorney General that the United States has a legal interest or may have a probable interest, permit the United States to intervene and become a party for presentation of evidence (if evidence is otherwise receivable in such suit or proceeding) and argument upon the sole question of the constitutionality of such act. In any such suit or proceeding the United States shall, subject to the applicable provisions of law, have the rights and liabilities of a party to the extent necessary for a proper presentation of the facts and law relating to the constitutionality of such act.

SEC. 2. In any suit or proceeding in any court of the United States to which the United States, or any agency thereof, or any officer or employee thereof, as such officer or employee, is a party, or in which the United States has intervened and become a party, and in which the decision is against the constitutionality of any act of Congress, an appeal may be taken directly to the Supreme Court of the United States by the United States or any other party to such suit or proceeding upon application therefor or notice thereof within 30 days after the entry of a final or interlocutory judgment, decree, or order; and in the event that any such appeal is taken, any appeal or cross-appeal by any party to the suit or proceeding taken previously, or taken within 60 days after notice of an appeal under this section, shall also be or be treated as taken directly to the Supreme Court of the United States. In the event that an appeal is taken under this section, the record shall be made up and the case docketed in the Supreme Court of the United States within 60 days from the time such appeal is allowed, under such rules as may be prescribed by the proper courts. Appeals under this section shall be heard by the Supreme Court of the United States at the earliest possible time and shall take precedence over all other matters not of a like character. This section shall not be construed to be in derogation of any right of direct appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States under existing provisions of law.

SEC. 3. No interlocutory or permanent injunction suspending or restraining the enforcement, operation, or execution of, or setting aside, in whole or in part, any act of Congress upon the ground that such act or any part thereof is repugnant to the Constitution of the United States shall be issued or granted by any district court of the United States, or by any judge thereof, or by any circuit judge acting as district judge, unless the application for the same shall be presented to a circuit or district judge, and shall be heard and determined by three judges, of whom at least one shall be a circuit judge. When any such application is presented to a judge, he shall immediately request the senior circuit judge (or in his absence, the presiding circuit judge) of the circuit in which such district court is located to designate two other judges to participate in hearing and determining such application. It shall be the duty of the senior circuit judge or the presiding circuit judge, as the case may be, to designate two other judges from such circuit for such purpose, and it shall be the duty of the judges so designated to participate in such hearing and determination. Such application shall not be heard or determined before at least 5 days' notice of the hearing has been given to the Attorney General and to such other persons as may be defendants in the suit: Provided, That in cases where irreparable damage would otherwise ensue to the petitioner by reason of delay in giving notice, the court so composed of three judges may, on hearing, allow a temporary stay or suspension, in whole or in part, of the operation of such act for not more than 60 days from the date of the order of said court pending the application for the injunction, in which case such order shall contain a specific finding, based upon evidence submitted to the court making the order and identified by reference thereto, that such irreparable damage would result to the petitioner and specifying the nature of the damage. The said court may, at the time of hearing such application, upon a like finding, continue the temporary stay or suspension, in whole or in part, until decision upon the application. The hearing upon any such application for an interlocutory or permanent injunction shall be given precedence and shall be in every way expedited and be assigned for a hearing at the earliest practicable day after the expiration of the notice hereinbefore provided for. An appeal may be taken directly to the Supreme Court of the United States upon application therefor or notice thereof within 30 days after the entry of the order, decree, or judgment granting or denying, after notice and hearing, an interlocutory or permanent injunction in such case. In the event that an appeal is taken under this section, the record shall be made up and the case docketed in the Supreme Court of the United States within 60 days from the time such appeal is allowed, under such rules as may be prescribed by the proper courts. Appeals under this section shall be heard by the Supreme Court of the United States at the earliest possible time and shall take precedence over all other matters not of a like character.

SEC. 4. Section 13 of the Judicial Code, as amended (U. S. C., 1934 ed., title 28, sec. 17), is hereby amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 13. Whenever any district judge by reason of any disability or absence from his district or the accumulation or urgency of business is unable to perform speedily the work of his district, the senior circuit judge of that circuit, or, in his absence, the circuit justice thereof, shall, if in his judgment the public interest requires, designate and assign any district judge of any district court within the same judicial circuit to act as district judge in such district and to discharge all the judicial duties of a judge thereof for such time as the business of the said district court may require. Whenever it is found impracticable to designate and assign another district judge within the same judicial circuit as above provided and a certificate of the needs of any such district is presented by said senior circuit judge or said circuit justice to the Chief Justice of the United States, he, or, in his absence, the senior Associate Justice, shall, if in his judgment the public interest so requires, designate and assign a district judge of an adjoining judicial circuit if practicable, or, if not practicable, then of any judicial circuit, to perform the duties of district judge and hold a district court in any such district as above provided: Provided, however, That before any such designation or assignment is made the senior circuit judge of the circuit from which the designated or assigned judge is to be taken shall consent thereto. All designations and assignments made hereunder shall be filed in the office of the clerk and entered on the minutes of both the court from and to which a judge is designated and assigned, as well as on the minutes of the Supreme Court of the United States, to the clerk of which both of such other clerks shall immediately report the fact and period of assignment."

SEC. 5. Whenever any judge is designated and assigned to duty outside of his district or circuit his subsistence allowance shall be $10 per diem.

SEC. 6. As used in this act, the term "court of the United States" means the courts of record of Alaska, Hawaii, and Puerto Rico, the United States Customs Court, the United States Court of Customs and Patent Appeals, the Court of Claims, any district court of the United States, any circuit court of appeals, and the Supreme Court of the United States; the term "district court of the United States" includes the District Court of the United States for he District of Columbia; the term "circuit court of appeals" includes the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia; the term "circuit" includes the District of Columbia; the term "senior circuit judge" includes the Chief Justice of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia; and the term "judge" includes justice.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment reported by the committee.

Mr. MCCARRAN. Mr. President, on behalf of the committee, I send to the desk sundry amendments to the committee amendment, which I ask to have stated.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendments to the amendment will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 4 line 10, after the name "Attorney General" in the committee amendment, it is proposed to strike out "if the court is of the opinion that a substantial ground exists for questioning the constitutionality of such act."

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 4, line 17, after the words "upon the" in the committee amendment, it is proposed to strike out the word "sole."

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 4, line 20, after the word "have" in the committee amendment, it is proposed to strike out "the rights and liabilities of a party" and insert "all the rights of a party and the liabilities of a party as to court costs."

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 8, line 11, after the word "shall" in the committee amendment, it is proposed to strike out the comma and "if in his judgment the public interest required."

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 8, line 22, after the word "shall" in the committee amendment, it is proposed to strike out the comma and "if in his judgment the public interest so requires,".

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment reported by the committee as amended.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill (H. R. 2260) was read the third time and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "An act to provide for intervention by the United States, direct appeals to the Supreme Court of the United States, and regulation of the issuance of injunctions, in certain cases involving the constitutionality of acts of Congress, and for other purposes."

Mr. GUFFEY. Mr. President, I desire to be recorded as voting against the bill.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, I make the same statement for myself. I wish to be recorded as voting against the bill.

Mr. GUFFEY. Mr. President, I repeat that I desire to be recorded as voting against the bill.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The statement of the Senator from Pennsylvania will go in the RECORD, which will be sufficient proof that he voted against the bill.

Mr. GUFFEY. Very well. That is what I want.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, prompted somewhat by the remarks of the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. GUFFEY], I desire to detain the Senate for just 1 minute to make an observation concerning the bill which has just been passed.

The measure which has been passed is one for which I should have voted if I had had the opportunity. As far as it goes, it is a good measure. It does not cover in any degree the reorganization of the Federal judiciary, and it does not touch upon any of the defects which have been pointed out in weeks past.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, all Senators will have an opportunity to extend their remarks in the RECORD as to how they had expected to vote on this bill.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, before giving consent to that request I desire to have it clearly understood that such extensions of remarks shall appear in type which will indicate that they were not delivered on the floor of the Senate.

The VICE PRESIDENT. That will be done.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I desire to say, furthermore, that I think it is a very bad practice, but because of the importance of this particular question I shall not object. I wish now to announce, however, that if I shall be present when any future request of this character is made, I shall object to it.

Mr. MINTON. Mr. President, I do not care how small type is used in printing the remarks. It could not be any smaller than I feel. If I had had an opportunity to vote, I think I should have voted against the bill.

WORK ON THE BONNEVILLE PROJECT

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Calendar No. 982, House bill 7642.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Oregon.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 7642) to authorize the completion, maintenance, and operation of Bonneville project for navigation, and for other purposes.

The VICE PRESIDENT. There is pending an amendment which has heretofore been offered to this bill by the Senator from Oregon. The question is on agreeing to the amendment. Is it the desire of the Senator from Oregon to have the amendment acted upon at this time?

Mr. McNARY. No, Mr. President; I have asked to have this action taken for the purpose of taking up the bill for consideration on Monday.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, as the Senator from Oregon knows, the Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN] is interested in this matter.

Mr. McNARY. Yes.

Mr. BARKLEY. I do not know whether or not he will be here on Monday.

Mr. McNARY. I shall be willing to have the bill laid aside if it is desired to take up something else on Monday.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator desire to have the bill acted upon at this time, or merely to make it the unfinished business?

Mr. McNARY. It has been made the unfinished business. In view of the absence of the Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN], I ask that the bill be laid aside until Monday.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the bill will be temporarily laid aside.

EXECUTIVE SESSION

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, it is contemplated that an adjournment will be taken until Monday in order that we may have a morning hour. Therefore, with the understanding that the bill referred to by the Senator from Oregon remains the unfinished business, I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEE ON POST OFFICES AND POST ROADS

Mr. McKELLAR, from the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, reported favorably the nominations of several postmasters, which were ordered to be placed on the Executive Calendar.

THE CALENDAR

The VICE PRESIDENT. If there be no further reports of committees, the clerk will read the nominations on the Executive Calendar.

SOCIAL SECURITY BOARD

The legislative clerk read the nomination of Agnes Van Driel, of Illinois, to be Chief, Division of Technical Training.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, at a previous session I objected to the confirmation of this nomination, and gave the reason. Since then, sir, it has developed that the woman herself is not responsible for the thing which transpired which I made the basis of my objection, and I would not have her embarrassed by the objection. I now ask that the nomination be confirmed.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

POSTMASTERS

The legislative clerk proceeded to read sundry nominations of postmasters.

Mr. McKELLAR. I ask unanimous consent that the nominations of postmasters on the calendar be confirmed en bloc.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the nominations of postmasters are confirmed en bloc.

IN THE MARINE CORPS

The legislative clerk proceeded to read sundry nominations in the Marine Corps.

Mr. BARKLEY. I ask unanimous consent that the nominations in the Marine Corps be confirmed en bloc.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the nominations in the Marine Corps are confirmed en bloc.

That completes the Executive Calendar.

ADJOURNMENT

The Senate resumed legislative session.

Mr. BARKLEY. I move that the Senate adjourn until noon on Monday next.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 2 o'clock and 30 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until Monday, August 9, 1937, at 12 o'clock meridian.

CONFIRMATIONS

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate August 7 (legislative day of July 22), 1937

Arthur B. Roemer, Tigerton.

SENATE

MONDAY, AUGUST 9, 1937

The Reverend Richard A. Cartmell, D. D., assistant rector, Church of the Epiphany, Washington, D. C., offered the following prayer:

O God, Holy Spirit, sanctifier of the faithful, without whom nothing is strong, nothing is holy, grant us grace to go from strength to strength in a life of service for Thee and for our fellow men. Impart to us such faith in Thy Kingdom and in the abundant life as revealed in Thy Son, Jesus Christ, that we may shrink from no cross that stands before us. Filled with that unconquerable gladness which comes from waiting on Thee, may we daily renew our strength and mount up on wings as eagles, run and not be weary, walk and not faint. And finally, O Lord, hold before us a vision of Thy perfect beauty and love that we may ever press toward the mark for the prize of Thy high calling in Jesus Christ, our Lord. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

On request of Mr. BARKLEY, and by unanimous consent, the reading of the Journal of the proceedings of the calendar day Saturday, August 7, 1937, was dispensed with, and the Journal was approved.

ORDER FOR CONSIDERATION OF UNFINISHED BUSINESS

Mr. BARKLEY. I ask unanimous consent that at the conclusion of the routine morning business the Senate resume the consideration of the unfinished business.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

CALL OF THE ROLL

Mr. LEWIS. I must ask that we have a quorum, and I request a roll call in order to secure one.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Connally	Johnson, Colo.	Pittman
Andrews	Copeland	King	Pope
Ashurst	Davis	La Follette	Radcliffe
Austin	Dieterich	Lee	Reynolds
Barkley	Donahey	Lewis	Schwartz
Bilbo	Ellender	Lodge	Schwellenbach
Black	Frazier	Logan	Sheppard
Bone	George	Lonergan	Shipstead
Borah	Gerry	Lundeen	Smith
Bridges	Gillette	McAdoo	Steiwer
Brown, Mich.	Glass	McCarran	Thomas, Okla.
Brown, N. H.	Green	McGill	Thomas, Utah
Bulkley	Guffey	McKellar	Townsend
Bulow	Hale	McNary	Truman
Burke	Harrison	Minton	Tydings
Byrd	Hatch	Murray	Vandenberg
Byrnes	Herring	Neely	Van Nuys
Capper	Hitchcock	Nye	Wagner
Caraway	Holt	O'Mahoney	Walsh
Chavez	Hughes	Overton	Wheeler
Clark	Johnson, Calif.	Pepper	White

Mr. LEWIS. I announce that the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. DUFFY] and the Senator from Georgia [Mr. RUSSELL] are absent on official business as members of the committee appointed to attend the dedication of the battle monuments in France.

I further announce that the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BAILEY], the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. BERRY], the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. MALONEY], and the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. MOORE] are unavoidably detained from the Senate.

Mr. AUSTIN. I announce that my colleague the junior Senator from Vermont [Mr. GIBSON], having been appointed a member of the committee to attend the dedication of the battle monuments in France, is absent on that official duty.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I announce that the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. NORRIS] is detained from the Senate because of illness.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Eighty-four Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

IMPROVEMENT OF RIVERS AND HARBORS

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the action of the House of Representatives disagreeing to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 7051) authorizing the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes, and requesting a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon.

Mr. COPELAND. I move that the Senate insist upon its amendments, agree to the request of the House for a conference, and that the Chair appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The motion was agreed to; and the Vice President appointed Mr. COPELAND, Mr. SHEPPARD, Mr. BAILEY, Mr. MCNARY, and Mr. JOHNSON of California conferees on the part of the Senate.

SMALL-CLAIMS COURT FOR THE DISTRICT—MOTION TO RECONSIDER

Mr. LONERGAN. Mr. President, I move that the vote by which the Senate passed the bill (S. 1835) establishing a small claims and conciliation branch in the municipal court of the District of Columbia for improving the administration of justice in small cases, and providing assistance to needy litigants, and for other purposes, be reconsidered.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The motion will be entered.

Mr. REYNOLDS subsequently said: Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for the reconsideration of the vote by which the Senate passed Senate bill 1835.

Mr. MCKELLAR. What is the bill, Mr. President?

Mr. REYNOLDS. It is the bill pertaining to the small-claims court. The bill passed the other day when the calendar was under consideration.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair is informed that the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. LONERGAN] has already entered a motion for the reconsideration of the vote by which that bill was passed.

Mr. REYNOLDS. I thank the Chair.

RICHMOND NATIONAL BATTLEFIELD PARK, VA.

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a letter from the Acting Secretary of the Interior, transmitting a draft of proposed legislation to amend the act providing for the establishment of the Richmond National Battlefield Park, in the State of Virginia, approved March 2, 1936 (49 Stat. 1155), and for other purposes, which, with the accompanying paper, was referred to the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a resolution adopted by the Greer County (Okla.) Cotton Growers, favoring the prompt enactment of legislation to protect the price of cotton and enable farmers to hold their cotton until such time as the agricultural program can be shaped so as to actually insure a parity price, which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

He also laid before the Senate a resolution adopted by the Illinois Women's Auxiliary of the Progressive Miners of America, Marissa, Ill., favoring the raising of W. P. A. wages and relief in proportion to the rise in the cost of living, which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

He also laid before the Senate a resolution adopted by the Council of the City of Cleveland, Ohio, favoring the prompt enactment of the so-called Schwellenbach resolution, being the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 176) favoring employment by the Works Progress Administration of persons unable to find employment in private industry, which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. DAVIS presented a letter from the Frankford Grocers' Association, by George P. Rogers, its secretary, Philadelphia, Pa., relative to prices of food products, which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. COPELAND presented a resolution adopted by the Board of Estimate and Apportionment of the city of New York, N. Y., endorsing the so-called Schwellenbach resolution, being the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 176) favoring employment by the Works Progress Administration of persons unable to find employment in private industry, which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

LOANS TO COTTON PRODUCERS

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. President, I present resolutions adopted at a meeting of cotton producers, bankers, and others held in Dallas, Tex., on August 2, 1937, in reference to the cotton situation. I ask that the resolutions be appropriately referred and that the body thereof be inserted in the RECORD as a part of my remarks.

There being no objection, the resolutions were referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Whereas there is now growing, with harvest well under way, a large cotton crop, reports indicating 15,000,000 bales; and

Whereas parity and above-parity prices prevail on practically every farm commodity except cotton. The parity price on cotton, as announced by the United States Department of Agriculture, is 17 cents a pound, still the price level is now far below 17 cents and is reaching a lower price daily; and

Whereas confidence in values of the cotton crop now growing and being harvested must be maintained for the general welfare of our country; and

Whereas in view of the unwarranted decline in price of cotton, we demand of Congress that it immediately take care of this emergency.

We, the cotton producers, bankers, and others who have a vital interest in the price of cotton and other commodities, and in the general prosperity of the country, do, in mass meeting assembled at Dallas, Tex., August 2, 1937, hereby appeal to the Congress of the United States to offer loans to cotton producers at 15 cents per pound on tenderable cotton basis; not less than 12 cents of this to be paid when cotton is delivered and placed in bonded warehouse; the other 3 cents per pound to be paid when borrowing producer complies with the permanent Government agricultural program to be enacted, or, in the absence of permanent legislation, to comply with the acreage-reduction plan suggested by the Secretary of Agriculture; and we petition Congress to make sufficient appropriations to enable those loans to be made: Be it

Resolved, That we go on record as being of the positive opinion that whatever farm legislation is enacted, to be economically sound, must embody crop-production control; be it

Resolved, That it is our conviction that prosperity will be effected by such action as will insure fair returns on the present crop, thus fulfilling the promise made by the administration—that is, parity prices for farm products.

We further assert that prosperity brought about by such actions will lessen the relief rolls now so burdensome to our Government; be it further

Resolved, That copy of this resolution be forwarded immediately to President Roosevelt, Vice President Garner, Speaker Bankhead; Senator Barkley, Democratic leader of the United States Senate; Congressman Sam Rayburn, Democratic leader of the House of Representatives; Hons. E. D. Smith, chairman of the Senate Agricultural Committee; Marvin Jones, chairman of the House Agricultural Committee; each Member of the Texas delegation in Congress; and to commissioners of agriculture of the cotton-growing States of America.

FEDERAL SOCIAL SECURITY ACT

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, on July 26, 1937, I had inserted in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD a letter from Laurence P. Harrington, executive secretary of the Massachusetts Unemployment Compensation Commission, at Boston, in reference to taxation of certain instrumentalities of the Government under titles VIII and IX of the Federal Social Security Act.

I have a reply thereto from Thomas H. Eliot, Esq., General Counsel of the Social Security Board, which I ask to have inserted in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD and referred to the Committee on Finance.

There being no objection, the letter was referred to the Committee on Finance and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

SOCIAL SECURITY BOARD,
Washington, D. C., July 30, 1937.

Hon. DAVID I. WALSH,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SENATOR WALSH: I have read with great interest the letter from Mr. Laurence P. Harrington, executive secretary of the Massachusetts Unemployment Compensation Commission, enclosed in your letter of July 26.

As you know, the Social Security Act at present exempts from its provisions, both with respect to old-age benefits and unemployment compensation, service performed in the employ of an instrumentality of the United States (secs. 210 (b) (5), 811 (b) (6), and 907 (c) (5)). As Mr. Harrington states, the Bureau of Internal Revenue has interpreted the words "instrumentality of the United States" to include national banks and State banks which are members of the Federal Reserve System. The result is that these banks and their employees are excluded from the act. At the same time the Bureau of Internal Revenue has ruled that State banks which are not members of the Federal Reserve System, and their employees, are subject to the tax provisions of the act.

The Board feels that there is no sound reason for not extending the benefits of the Social Security Act to employees of national banks and State banks which are members of the Federal Reserve System. Moreover, the present exemption of such banks, on the one hand, and the inclusion within the act of State banks which are not members of the Federal Reserve System, on the other, tends to create an inequitable situation. The letter of Mr. Harrington points out a third reason for eliminating the present exemption for Federal instrumentalities, such as national banks, which are not wholly owned by the United States Government. The Board has had under consideration for sometime, and has discussed with representatives of the American Bankers' Association, proposals to bring all national and State banks and similar institutions which are classed as Federal instrumentalities within the terms of the act. Although the Board is not in a position to make a definite statement at present, it is hoped that recommendations on this matter will be placed before Congress in the near future.

Very truly yours,

THOMAS H. ELIOT,
General Counsel.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

Mr. BLACK, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill (S. 2008) for the relief of the Cleveland Railway Co., reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 1148) thereon.

Mr. WHITE, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill (S. 371) for the relief of William R. Kellogg, reported it with amendments and submitted a report (No. 1149) thereon.

Mr. BARKLEY, from the Committee on the Library, to which was referred the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 406) to establish the General Anthony Wayne Memorial Commission to formulate plans for the construction of a permanent memorial to the memory of Gen. Anthony Wayne, reported it without amendment.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE, from the Committee on Education and Labor, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 4582) to amend the act, approved August 4, 1919, as amended, providing additional aid for the American Printing House for the Blind, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 1150) thereon.

Mr. McCARRAN, from the Committee on the Judiciary, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 3493) to amend section 76 of the Judicial Code, as amended, with respect to the terms of the Federal district court held at Tallahassee, Fla., reported it with amendments.

ENROLLED BILLS PRESENTED

Mrs. CARAWAY, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that on August 7, 1937, that committee presented to the President of the United States the following enrolled bills:

S. 826. An act for the relief of the estate of H. Lee Shelton, the estate of Mrs. H. Lee Shelton, Mrs. J. R. Scruggs, and Mrs. Irvin Johnson; and

S. 1219. An act for the relief of Pauline M. Warden, nee Pauline McKinney.

WITHDRAWAL OF AMERICAN TROOPS FROM CHINA

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, on August 6 I tendered a resolution in which I sought information for the Senate. The able Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN], chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations, upon another subject has addressed himself to the subject of the resolution. I had previously done so; so I now ask that the resolution be taken from the table and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection?

Mr. PITTMAN. I should like to know what resolution is being referred to.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Will the Senator from Illinois designate the resolution?

Mr. LEWIS. It is a resolution requesting the War Department to furnish information to the Senate. It is not the resolution seeking action such as the Senator knows was first under consideration.

Mr. PITTMAN. I think it is practically the same thing.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Illinois?

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I do not know what is the purport of the resolution.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will read the title of the resolution referred to by the Senator from Illinois.

The CHIEF CLERK. Senate Resolution 170, by Mr. LEWIS, relative to the withdrawal of American troops from China.

Mr. PITTMAN. I object to the resolution being referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Objection is heard.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, I think it is not a matter of objection. I am asking to have a military resolution, on a matter addressed to the War Department for information, referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. PITTMAN. I move that the resolution be referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mr. LEWIS. I ask that the resolution be read; it is only four lines in length.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will read the resolution.

The Chief Clerk read the resolution (S. Res. 170) submitted by Mr. LEWIS on the 6th instant, as follows:

Resolved, That the Secretary of War report to the United States Senate, if not incompatible to the public interest, if there be existing reasons sufficient for the holding of the present troops now stationed in China in the war zone between Tientsin and Peiping, and if it be advisable that the troops continue in their present situation serving as military of the United States.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, I think it may be assumed that the subject matter is not within the jurisdiction of any committee except the Committee on Foreign Relations. The President of the United States and not the Army determines where our troops shall be. The Army merely carries out orders. The situation to which the resolution refers is a very difficult and serious one, and, in the first place, the question should not be raised at the present time.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, it is not a matter merely of the Senator's motion. This is a resolution seeking information from the War Department, asking that the Department inform this body, without giving any reasons or details, the viewpoint of the War Department as to whether it is necessary, in its judgment, to retain troops in China. Therefore I feel the resolution properly should be referred to the Committee on Military Affairs under our rules. For that reason I ask that the Chair merely execute the rule of the Senate.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, I have moved that the resolution be referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Nevada that the resolution be referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations. [Putting the question.] The ayes appear to have it. The ayes have it, and the resolution is referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator will state it.

Mr. LEWIS. I beg to call the attention of the Chair that he has not yet submitted my motion to the Senate. The Chair submitted the motion of the able Senator from Nevada to refer the resolution to the Committee on Foreign Relations, but the Chair made no statement with reference to my motion that the resolution be referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair understood the Senator from Illinois to ask that the resolution be referred to the Committee on Military Affairs. While that request was pending the Senator from Nevada moved that the resolution be referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations. A motion takes precedence over a request.

Mr. PITTMAN. The Senator from Nevada objected to the request of the Senator from Illinois, and then moved that the resolution be referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

The VICE PRESIDENT. That is correct. The motion of the Senator from Nevada was agreed to, and the resolution has been referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

PROTECTION OF PROPERTY OWNED BY FOREIGN GOVERNMENTS—AMENDMENTS

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, I send to the desk an amendment intended to be proposed by me to a joint resolution (S. J. Res. 191) which is on the calendar and I ask unanimous consent that the proposed amendment be read, that it may be printed, and lie on the table.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Nevada? The Chair hears none. The clerk will read, as requested.

The CHIEF CLERK. Beginning on page 2, line 22, it is proposed to strike out all of the language of the committee amendment and insert the following:

That it shall be unlawful to display any flag, banner, placard, or device designed or adapted to intimidate, coerce, or bring into public odium any foreign government, party, or organization, or any officer or officers thereof; or to bring into public disrepute political, social, or economic acts, views, or purposes of any foreign government, party, or organization; or to intimidate, coerce, harass, or bring into public disrepute any officer or officers or diplomatic or consular representatives of any foreign government; or to interfere with the free and safe pursuit of the duties of any diplomatic or consular representatives of any foreign government, within 500 feet of any building or premises within the District of Columbia used or occupied by any foreign government or its representative or representatives as an embassy, legation, consulate, or for other official purposes, except by and in accordance with a permit issued by the superintendent of police of the said District; or to congregate within 500 feet of any such building or premises and refuse to disperse after having been ordered so to do by the police authorities of the said District.

SEC. 2. The police court of the District of Columbia shall have jurisdiction of offenses committed in violation of this resolution, and any person convicted of violating any of the provisions of this resolution shall be punished by a fine not exceeding $100 or by imprisonment not exceeding 60 days, or both.

Amend the title so as to read: "Joint resolution to protect foreign diplomatic and consular officers and the buildings and premises occupied by them in the District of Columbia."

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, in that connection I should like to have published in the RECORD an amendment which I intend to offer to the same joint resolution (S. J. Res. 191). I also ask leave to have printed in the RECORD section 117 of the District Code, to be found on page 47. It relates to unlawful assemblage in public places, and so forth. I make the additional request that the changes which my amendment, if adopted, would make in section 117 of the District Code be indicated by italics in printing the section, so that the RECORD may disclose the effect of my amendment concerning the particular section.

There being no objection, the amendment and the section of the District Code, with the proposed changes in italics, were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the committee amendment, it is proposed to insert the following:

"That sections 5 and 6, as amended, of the act entitled 'An act for the preservation of the public peace and the protection of property within the District of Columbia', approved July 29, 1892, are amended (1) by inserting after the words 'any public building or enclosure' the phrase '(including any building or premises used or occupied by any foreign government or its representatives as an embassy or for diplomatic or other official purposes)'; and (2) by inserting after the words 'or to insult' the phrase '(by the use of banners, placards, or otherwise)'."

Section 117 of the District of Columbia Code, as proposed to be amended by Mr. LA FOLLETTE, would read as follows, changes being indicated by italics:

117. Unlawful assembly; profanity, etc., in public places, etc.—It shall not be lawful for any person or persons within the District of Columbia to congregate and assemble in any street, avenue, alley, road, or highway, or in or around any public building or enclosure (including any building or premises used or occupied by any foreign government or its representatives as an embassy or for diplomatic or other official purposes), or any park or reservation, or at the entrance of any private building or enclosure, and engage in loud and boisterous talking or other disorderly conduct, or to insult (by the use of banners, placards, or otherwise) or to make rude or obscene gestures or comments or observations on persons passing by, or in their hearing, or to crowd, obstruct, or incommode the free use of any such street, avenue, alley, road, highway, or any of the foot pavements thereof, or the free entrance into any public or private building or enclosure; it shall not be lawful for any person or persons to curse, swear, or make use of any profane language or indecent or obscene words, or engage in any disorderly conduct in any street, avenue, alley, road, highway, public park or enclosure, public building, church, or assembly room, or in any other public place, or in any place wherefrom the same may be heard in any street, avenue, alley, road, highway, public park or enclosure, or other building, or in any premises other than those where the offense was committed, under a penalty of not more than $25 for each and every such offense.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, the reading of the amendment intended to be proposed by the Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN] clearly indicates that it raises a very serious legal question, one that is both national and international. It is a proposal which raises a very serious legal question nationally and it raises a more serious international legal question. Not only that, but it raises a constitutional question as to dealing with our own citizens as well as foreign citizens.

I move that the amendment be referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator will state it.

Mr. PITTMAN. The Senator from Illinois apparently does not know that the resolution has been reported already from the Committee on Foreign Relations and is on the calendar, and the amendment which was just read at the desk is to lie on the table only to be proposed whenever the resolution shall be called up.

Mr. LEWIS. I may know it has been to the committee, but the fact the resolution comes forth in such language as that proposed indicates all the more the necessity for some committee of the Senate to consider it and examine its legal aspects and give us some legal conclusion upon it.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, I call for the regular order.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The regular order is the introduction of bills and joint resolutions.

BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS INTRODUCED

Bills and joint resolutions were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mrs. CARAWAY:

A bill (S. 2931) to authorize the refund of certain amounts collected from physicians for the privilege of prescribing the waters from the Hot Springs National Park; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. COPELAND:

A bill (S. 2932) granting an increase of pension to Nellie Trapp; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. WHEELER:

A bill (S. 2933) to admit Mrs. Henry Francis Parks permanently to the United States; to the Committee on Immigration.

By Mr. GUFFEY:

A bill (S. 2934) to amend Public Law No. 692, Seventy-fourth Congress, second session; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. SMITH:

A joint resolution (S. J. Res. 201) for the relief of certain persons conducting farming operations whose crops were destroyed by hailstorms; to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

By Mr. FRAZIER:

A joint resolution (S. J. Res. 202) making provisions for the refund of the processing tax on hogs marketed for slaughter by the raisers and producers who in fact bore all or part of the burden of such tax; to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

By Mr. COPELAND:

A joint resolution (S. J. Res. 203) proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States, limiting the tenure of office of President of the United States; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

PROTECTION OF PROPERTY OWNED BY FOREIGN GOVERNMENTS—AMENDMENTS

Mr. LA FOLLETTE submitted an additional amendment intended to be proposed by him to the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 191) to regulate the use of public streets and sidewalks within the District of Columbia adjacent to property owned or occupied by foreign governments for diplomatic purposes, which was ordered to lie on the table and to be printed.

SUGAR QUOTAS AND TAXES—AMENDMENT

Mr. O'MAHONEY (for himself and Mr. ADAMS) submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by them, jointly, to the bill (H. R. 7667) to regulate commerce among the several States, with the Territories and possessions of the United States, and with foreign countries; to protect the welfare of consumers of sugars and of those engaged in the domestic sugar-producing industry; to promote the export trade of the United States; to raise revenue; and for other purposes, which was referred to the Committee on Finance and ordered to be printed.

AMENDMENT TO THIRD DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATION BILL

Mr. HATCH (for Mr. HAYDEN) submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by Mr. HAYDEN to the third deficiency appropriation bill, which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed, as follows:

At the proper place in the bill to insert the following:

"DEPARTMENT OF INTERIOR

"For expenses and all necessary disbursements including salaries, to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, of the Commission proposed to be created to investigate the financial, economic, and other conditions of the various United States reclamation projects and Indian irrigation projects, as contemplated by the terms of S. 413 (to create a Commission and to extend further relief to water users on United States reclamation projects and on Indian irrigation projects), $50,000: Provided, That such sum shall not become available unless and until the aforesaid legislation is enacted into law."

LILLIAN V. JOHNSON

Mr. BYRD submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 171), which was referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Senate hereby is authorized and directed to pay from the contingent fund of the Senate to Lillian V. Johnson, widow of Newton Johnson, late an employee of the Senate under the supervision of the Committee on Rules, a sum equal to 6 months' compensation at the rate he was receiving by law at the time of his death, said sum to be considered inclusive of funeral expenses and all other allowances.

THE CIVILIAN CONSERVATION CORPS PROGRAM

[Mr. THOMAS of Utah asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an article with reference to the Civilian Conservation Corps program, which appears in the Appendix.]

REORGANIZATION OF FEDERAL JUDICIARY

[Mr. AUSTIN asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an address prepared by Senator STEIWER for delivery to the Senate relative to Senate bill 1392, to reorganize the judicial branch of the Government, which appears in the Appendix.]

BUSINESS CONDITIONS IN FLORIDA

[Mr. PEPPER asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an article from the Tampa Times of July 29, 1937, relative to business conditions in Florida, together with a table of official statistics on the same subject, which appear in the Appendix.]

RECORD OF NAMES AND ADDRESSES OF PASSENGERS ON VESSELS

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, in my absence the other day, Senate bill 2874, Calendar No. 1051, was passed. I ask unanimous consent that the votes by which the bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading and passed may be reconsidered, because we had promised to have two or three amendments made to the bill, and apparently nobody else knew it at the time the bill came up.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, what is the present status of the bill?

Mr. COPELAND. The bill passed the Senate.

Mr. McNARY. Have the papers been messaged to the House?

Mr. COPELAND. The papers are still with us.

Mr. McNARY. Very well. Otherwise, an order would be required to return the papers.

Mr. COPELAND. Yes.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from New York asks unanimous consent for the reconsideration of the votes by which Senate bill 2874, requiring the deposit in a safe place ashore of the names and addresses of passengers sailing on vessels plying the inland or coastal waters of the United States, was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading and passed. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, in order that the bill may be disposed of, I ask unanimous consent that the amendments which I send to the desk may be read, and the bill placed on its passage.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendments offered by the Senator from New York will be stated.

The amendments were, on page 1, line 3, after the word "after", to strike out "ten" and insert "sixty"; in line 7, after the word "duration", to insert "or less"; in line 10, after the word "passengers", to strike out "sailing on" and insert "who have purchased tickets and staterooms for"; and in line 11, after the word "voyage" and the period, to insert "Said list of passengers shall be preserved for not less than thirty days", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That from and after 60 days following the approval of this act it shall be the duty of the owner or operator of every vessel carrying passengers for hire upon the inland or coastal waters of the United States upon a voyage of 1 or more nights' duration or less, or upon a voyage for which the use of staterooms is sold, to deposit in a secure place ashore, prior to the sailing of said vessel, a complete list of the names and addresses of passengers who have purchased tickets and staterooms for said voyage. Said list of passengers shall be preserved for not less than 30 days.

SEC. 2. It shall be the duty of the Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation of the Department of Commerce to enforce the provisions of this act by appropriate inspection from time to time; and in case of failure to comply with said provisions, the Secretary of Commerce may levy a fine of not less than $100 nor more than $500 against the owner or operator of a vessel so failing to comply, which fine may be collected by suit in admiralty in any court of competent jurisdiction.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representative, by Mr. Megill, one of its clerks, announced that the House had disagreed to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 2260) to provide for appearance on behalf of and appeal by the United States in certain cases in which the constitutionality of acts of Congress is involved, asked a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and that Mr. SUMNERS of Texas, Mr. WEAVER, Mr. WALTER, Mr. MCLAUGHLIN, Mr. GUYER, and Mr. HANCOCK of New York were appointed managers on the part of the House at the conference.

WORK ON THE BONNEVILLE PROJECT

The VICE PRESIDENT. Morning business is closed. The Chair lays before the Senate the unfinished business.

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 7642) to authorize the completion, maintenance, and operation of Bonneville project for navigation, and for other purposes.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The pending amendment offered by the Senator from Oregon [Mr. MCNARY] will be stated.

The amendment was to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert the text of the Senate bill (S. 2092) as reported from the Committee on Commerce, as follows:

That for the purpose of improving navigation on the Columbia River, and for other purposes incidental thereto, the dam, locks, power plant, and appurtenant works now under construction at Bonneville, Oreg. (hereinafter called Bonneville project), shall be completed, maintained, and operated under the direction of the Secretary of War and the supervision of the Chief of Engineers, subject to the provisions of this act relating to the powers and duties of the Bonneville power administrator provided for in section 2 (a) (hereinafter called the administrator) respecting the transmission and sale of electric energy generated at said project. The Secretary of War shall provide, construct, operate, maintain, and improve at Bonneville project such machinery, equipment, and facilities for the generation of electric energy as the administrator may deem necessary to develop such electric energy as rapidly as markets may be found therefor. The electric energy thus generated and not required for the operation of the dam and locks at such project and the navigation facilities employed in connection therewith shall be delivered to the administrator for disposition as provided in this act.

SEC. 2. (a) The electric energy generated in the operation of the said Bonneville project shall be disposed of by the said administrator as hereinafter provided. The administrator shall be appointed by the Secretary of the Interior, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate; shall be responsible to said Secretary of the Interior; shall receive a salary at the rate of $10,000 per year; and shall maintain his principal office at a place selected by him in the vicinity of the Bonneville project. The administrator shall, as hereinafter provided, make all arrangements for the sale and disposition of electric energy generated at Bonneville project not required for the operation of the dam and locks at such project and the navigation facilities employed in connection therewith. He shall act in consultation with an advisory board composed of a representative designated by the Secretary of War, a representative designated by the Secretary of the Interior, a representative designated by the Federal Power Commission, and a representative designated by the Secretary of Agriculture. The form of administration herein established for the Bonneville project is intended to be provisional pending the establishment of a permanent administration for Bonneville and other projects in the Columbia River Basin. The administrator is authorized and empowered to direct and require the Secretary of War to install and maintain additional machinery, equipment, and facilities for the generation of electric energy at the Bonneville project when in the judgment of the administrator such additional generating facilities are desirable to meet actual or potential market requirements for such electric energy. The Secretary of War shall schedule the operations of the several electrical generating units and appurtenant equipment of the Bonneville project in accordance with the requirements of the administrator. The Secretary of War shall provide and maintain for the use of the administrator at said Bonneville project adequate station space and equipment, including such switches, switchboards, instruments, and dispatching facilities as may be required by the administrator for proper reception, handling, and dispatching of the electric energy produced at the said project, together with transformers and other equipment required by the administrator for the transmission of such energy from that place at suitable voltage to the markets which the administrator desires to serve.

(b) In order to encourage the widest possible use of all electric energy that can be generated and marketed and to provide reasonable outlets therefor, and to prevent the monopolization thereof by limited groups, the administrator is authorized and directed to provide, construct, operate, maintain, and improve such electric transmission lines and substations, and facilities and structures appurtenant thereto, as he finds necessary, desirable, or appropriate for the purpose of transmitting electric energy, available for sale, from the Bonneville project to existing and potential markets, and, for the purpose of interchange of electric energy, to interconnect the Bonneville project with other Federal projects and publicly owned power systems now or hereafter constructed.

(c) The administrator is authorized, in the name of the United States, to acquire, by purchase, lease, condemnation, or donation, such real and personal property, or any interest therein, including lands, easements, rights-of-way, franchises, electric transmission lines, substations, and facilities and structures appurtenant thereto, as the administrator finds necessary or appropriate to carry out the purposes of this act. Title of all property and property rights acquired by the administrator shall be taken in the name of the United States.

(d) The administrator shall have power to acquire any property or property rights, including patent rights, which in his opinion are necessary to carry out the purposes of this act, by the exercise of the right of eminent domain and to institute condemnation proceedings therefor in the same manner as is provided by law for the condemnation of real estate.

(e) The administrator is authorized, in the name of the United States, to sell, lease, or otherwise dispose of such personal property as in his judgment is not required for the purposes of this act and such real property and interests in land acquired in connection with construction or operation of electric transmission lines or substations as in his judgment are not required for the purposes of this act: Provided, however, That before the sale, lease, or disposition of real property or transmission lines, as herein provided, the administrator shall secure the approval of the President of the United States.

(f) Subject to the provisions of this act, the administrator is authorized, in the name of the United States, to negotiate and enter into such contracts, agreements, and arrangements as he shall find necessary or appropriate to carry out the purposes of this act.

SEC. 3. As employed in this act, the term "public body", or "public bodies", means States, public-power districts, counties, and municipalities, including agencies or subdivisions of any thereof.

As employed in this act, the term "cooperative", or "cooperatives", means any form of non-profit-making organization or organizations of citizens supplying, or which may be created to supply, members with any kind of goods, commodities, or services, as nearly as possible at cost.

SEC. 4. (a) In order to insure that the facilities for the generation of electric energy at the Bonneville project shall be operated for the benefit of the general public, and particularly of domestic and rural consumers, the administrator shall at all times, in disposing of electric energy generated at said project, give preference and priority to public bodies and cooperatives.

(b) To preserve and protect the preferential rights and priorities of public bodies and cooperatives as provided in section (a) and to effectuate the intent and purpose of this act that at all times up to January 1, 1941, there shall be available for sale to public bodies and cooperatives not less than 50 percent of the electric energy produced at the Bonneville project; it shall be the duty of the administrator in making contracts for the sale of such energy to so arrange such contracts as to make such 50 percent of such energy available to said public bodies and cooperatives until January 1, 1941: Provided, That the electric energy so reserved for but not actually purchased by and delivered to such public bodies and cooperatives prior to January 1, 1940, may be disposed of temporarily so long as such temporary disposition will not interfere with the purchase by and delivery to such public bodies and cooperatives at any time prior to January 1, 1940: Provided further, That nothing herein contained shall be construed to limit or impair the preferential and priority rights of such public bodies or cooperatives after January 1, 1940; and in the event that after such date there shall be conflicting or competing applications for an allocation of electric energy between any public body or cooperative on the one hand and a private agency of any character on the other, the application of such public body or cooperative shall be granted.

(c) An application by any public body or cooperative for an allocation of electric energy shall not be denied, or another application competing or in conflict therewith be granted, to any private corporation, company, agency, or person, on the ground that any proposed bond or other security issue of any such public body or cooperative, the sale of which is necessary to enable such prospective purchaser to enter into the public business of selling and distributing the electric energy proposed to be purchased, has not been authorized or marketed, until after a reasonable time, to be determined by the administrator, has been afforded such public body or cooperative to have such bond or other security issue authorized or marketed.

(d) It is declared to be the policy of the Congress, as expressed in this act, to preserve the said preferential status of the public bodies and cooperatives herein referred to, and to give to the people of the States within economic transmission distance of the Bonneville project reasonable opportunity and time to hold any election or elections or take any action necessary to create such public bodies and cooperatives as the laws of such States authorize and permit, and to afford such public bodies or cooperatives reasonable time and opportunity to take any action necessary to authorize the issuance of bonds or to arrange other financing necessary to construct or acquire necessary and desirable electric distribution facilities, and in all other respects legally to become qualified purchasers and distributors of electric energy available under this act.

SEC. 5. (a) Subject to the provisions of this act and to such rate schedules as the Federal Power Commission may approve, as hereinafter provided, the administrator shall negotiate and enter into contracts for the sale at wholesale of electric energy, either for resale or direct consumption, to public bodies and cooperatives and to private agencies and persons. Contracts for the sale of electric energy to any private person or agency other than a privately owned public utility engaged in selling electric energy to the general public, shall contain a provision forbidding such private purchaser to resell any of such electric energy so purchased to any private utility or agency engaged in the sale of electric energy to the general public, and requiring the immediate canceling of such contract of sale in the event of violation of such provision. Contracts entered into under this subsection shall be binding in accordance with the terms thereof and shall be effective for such period or periods, including renewals or extensions, as may be provided therein, not exceeding in the aggregate 20 years from the respective dates of the making of such contracts. Contracts entered into under this subsection shall contain (1) such provisions as the administrator and purchaser agree upon for the equitable adjustment of rates at appropriate intervals, not less frequently than once in every 5 years, and (2) in the case of a contract with any purchaser engaged in the business of selling electric energy to the general public, the contract shall provide that the administrator may cancel such contract upon 5 years' notice in writing if in the judgment of the administrator any part of the electric energy purchased under such contract is likely to be needed to satisfy the requirements of the said public bodies or cooperatives referred to in this act, and that such cancelation may be with respect to all or any part of the electric energy so purchased under said contract to the end that the preferential rights and priorities accorded public bodies and cooperatives under this act shall at all times be preserved. Contracts entered into with any utility engaged in the sale of electric energy to the general public shall contain such terms and conditions, including among other things stipulations concerning resale and resale rates by any such utility, as the administrator may deem necessary, desirable, or appropriate to effectuate the purposes of this act and to insure that resale by such utility to the ultimate consumer shall be at rates which are reasonable and nondiscriminatory. Such contract shall also require such utility to keep on file in the office of the administrator a schedule of all its rates and charges to the public for electric energy and such alterations and changes therein as may be put into effect by such utility.

(b) The administrator is authorized to enter into contracts with public or private power systems for the mutual exchange of unused excess power upon suitable exchange terms for the purpose of economical operation or of providing emergency or breakdown relief.

SEC. 6. Schedules of rates and charges for electric energy produced at the Bonneville project and sold to purchasers as in this act provided shall be prepared by the administrator and become effective upon confirmation and approval thereof by the Federal Power Commission. Subject to confirmation and approval by the Federal Power Commission, such rate schedules may be modified from time to time by the administrator, and shall be fixed and established with a view to encouraging the widest possible diversified use of electric energy. The said rate schedules may provide for uniform rates or rates uniform throughout prescribed transmission areas in order to extend the benefits of an integrated transmission system and encourage the equitable distribution of the electric energy developed at the Bonneville project.

SEC. 7. It is the intent of Congress that rate schedules for the sale of electric energy which is or may be generated at the Bonneville project in excess of the amount required for operating the dam, locks, and appurtenant works at said project shall be determined with due regard to and predicated upon the fact that such electric energy is developed from water power created as an incident to the construction of the dam in the Columbia River at the Bonneville project for the purposes set forth in section 1 of this act. Rate schedules shall be drawn having regard to the recovery (upon the basis of the application of such rate schedules to the capacity of the electric facilities of Bonneville project) of the cost of producing and transmitting such electric energy, including the amortization of the capital investment over a reasonable period of years. Rate schedules shall be based upon an allocation of costs made by the Federal Power Commission. In computing the cost of electric energy developed from water power created as an incident to and a byproduct of the construction of the Bonneville project, the Federal Power Commission may allocate to the costs of electric facilities such a share of the cost of facilities having joint value for the production of electric energy and other purposes as the power development may fairly bear as compared with such other purposes.

SEC. 8. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, all purchases and contracts made by the administrator or the Secretary of War for supplies or for services except for personal services, shall be made after advertising, in such manner and at such times, sufficiently in advance of opening bids, as the administrator or Secretary of War, as the case may be, shall determine to be adequate to insure notice and opportunity for competition. Such advertisement shall not be required, however, when (1) an emergency requires immediate delivery of the supplies or performance of the services; or (2) repair parts, accessories, supplemental equipment, or services are required for supplies or services previously furnished or contracted for; or (3) the aggregate amount involved in any purchase or supplies or procurement of services does not exceed $500; in which cases such purchases of supplies or procurement of services may be made in the open market in the manner common among businessmen. In comparing bids and in making awards the administrator or the Secretary of War, as the case may be, may consider such factors as relative quality and adaptability of supplies or services, the bidder's financial responsibility, skill, experience, record of integrity in dealing, and ability to furnish repairs and maintenance services, the time of delivery or performance offered, and whether the bidder has complied with the specifications.

SEC. 9. (a) The administrator, subject to the requirements of the Federal Water Power Act, shall keep complete and accurate accounts of operations, including all funds expended and received in connection with transmission and sale of electric energy generated at the Bonneville project.

(b) The administrator may make such expenditures for offices, vehicles, furnishings, equipment, supplies, and books; for attendance at meetings; and for such other facilities and services as he may find necessary for the proper administration of this act.

(c) In December of each year the administrator shall file with the Congress, through the Secretary of the Interior, a financial statement and a complete report as to the transmission and sale of electric energy generated at the Bonneville project during the preceding governmental fiscal year.

SEC. 10. The administrator, the Secretary of War, and the Federal Power Commission, respectively, shall appoint such attorneys, engineers, and other experts as may be necessary for carrying out the functions entrusted to them under this act, without regard to the provisions of the civil-service laws and shall fix the compensation of each of such attorneys, engineers, and other experts at not to exceed $10,000 per annum; and they may, subject to the civil-service laws, appoint such other officers and employees as may be necessary to carry out such functions and fix their salaries in accordance with the Classification Act of 1923, as amended.

SEC. 11. All receipts from transmission and sale of electric energy generated at the Bonneville project shall be covered into the Treasury of the United States to the credit of miscellaneous receipts, save and except that the Treasury shall set up and maintain from such receipts a continuing fund of $500,000, to the credit of the administrator and subject to check by him, to defray emergency expenses and to insure continuous operation. There is hereby authorized to be appropriated from time to time, out of moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, such sums as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this act.

SEC. 12. The administrator may, in the name of the United States, bring such suits, at law or in equity, as he may find necessary in carrying out the purposes of the act; and he shall be represented in all litigation affecting the status or operation of Bonneville project by such counsel as he may select.

SEC. 13. If any provision of this act or the application of such provision to any person or circumstance shall be held invalid, the remainder of the act and the application of such provision to persons or circumstances other than those as to which it is held invalid shall not be affected thereby.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the amendment is agreed to. The question is, Shall the amendment be engrossed and the bill be read a third time?

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, is this the Bonneville Dam bill? If so, I should like to know as a matter of curiosity if any Member of the Senate can explain it. I should like to know what the Bonneville Dam bill is intended to accomplish.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I was called from the Chamber momentarily on public matters. May I inquire of the unfinished business before the Senate?

The VICE PRESIDENT. It is, and the bill was about to be passed when the Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH] asked for an explanation of it.

Mr. McNARY. As I said, I was called from the Chamber on public business. I appreciate expedition, but I always want to be reasonable. I think I am capable of explaining the bill.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the formal reading of the bill be dispensed with, that the bill be read for amendment, and that committee amendments be first considered. However, may I inquire first if during my absence an amendment was considered?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The parliamentary situation now before the Senate is that the Senator's amendment in the form of a substitute was agreed to.

Mr. McNARY. Let me straighten out the parliamentary situation.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McNARY. I yield.

Mr. KING. This is a very important bill and some of us have never read it. I hope the able Senator will explain it.

Mr. McNARY. I shall do so. I am trying to have untangled the parliamentary situation partly due to the fact that I was absent from the Chamber for perhaps 30 seconds on public matters.

Mr. President, this bill was reported to the calendar 2 or 3 weeks ago by me from the Committee on Commerce. Subsequently, a bill similar to this one was passed by the House, and went to the calendar. A few days ago I asked unanimous consent that all after the enacting clause of the House bill be stricken out and the text of the Senate bill inserted. During my momentary absence from the Chamber, if any amendments were adopted, I ask that that action at this time be disregarded.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the votes agreeing to any amendments or substitute amendment are reconsidered, and the measure is now open to amendment as it came into the Senate.

Mr. McNARY. I thank the Chair.

Mr. President, the object of the bill is to provide a legal structure for the operation and administration of the Bonneville project, now nearing completion in the Columbia River between the States of Oregon and Washington, and not far distant from the city of Portland, Oreg. The project was authorized by the President under the provisions of the Public Works Act passed in September 1933. Two of the ten units are now completed, and power will be ready for distribution within the next month or two. Consequently, in the community and public interest, if we are to avoid waste, it is necessary that we have some legislation which will provide for fixing rates and distributing power.

Up to the present time Congress has appropriated or made available for this project about $45,000,000. When the project was first authorized by the President funds were available from the Public Works Administration to the extent of $20,000,000. Later, $10,000,000 more was made available. Since that time appropriations have been made, which amount to about $45,000,000; and it is estimated that probably $5,000,000 more will be required to complete the dam with two units at a total cost of $50,000,000 for the two units that are now in process of installation and which will be installed within a short time. When finally completed, the 10 power units will supply about 573,000 horsepower.

This is a navigation project, with incidental power development. Everyone knows that the Columbia River is famous for its run of salmon. Ample fishways and ladders and lifts have been provided at an approximate cost of $6,000,000. Navigation locks have been constructed costing in the neighborhood of $4,500,000. As a result the water will be deepened for sea-going vessels as far to the east as The Dalles, which is about 200 miles from the estuary of the Columbia River.

The dam was constructed by the Board of Army Engineers. The bill is a simple one. It has the approval of the President, the Secretary of War, the Federal Power Commission, and all Government agencies associated with navigation and power development.

The first bill was introduced by my colleague [Mr. STEIWER] and myself. Later, another bill was introduced at a former session by the two Senators from Washington [Mr. BONE and Mr. SCHWELLENBACH], my colleague [Mr. STEIWER], and myself. This bill was introduced by the same four Senators, plus the Senator from Idaho [Mr. POPE]. Its provisions are simple, and I think I can outline its structure in a very short time.

The bill provides that the project shall be completed, maintained, and operated under the direction and under the control of the Board of Army Engineers; that they shall not only operate the dam but shall look after matters of navigation and those appertaining to the operation of the fishways. In House and Senate bills an administrator is provided for, to be appointed by the Secretary of the Interior. The duties of the administrator are to sell the power, fix the rates subject to the approval of the Federal Power Commission, and construct the necessary transmission lines. He is given the power to appoint experts and attorneys, who are not to be subject to the provisions of the Reclassification Act; and he may also appoint clerical assistants, who are to be under the civil-service rules and the statutes provided for that purpose.

There is also provision for an advisory board, who are to consult and confer with the administrator, the board consisting of the Secretary of Agriculture, the Secretary of War, the Secretary of the Interior, and the Federal Power Commission. The administrator can fix no rates without the approval and consent of the Federal Power Commission. The Federal Power Commission has the veto power over the administrator in those matters. The advisory board has no power other than that of conferring with and advising the administrator.

Under the Senate bill the Board of Army Engineers must install additional facilities upon request of the administrator, whereas in the House bill they are given power to handle all matters connected with the generation of electricity down to the bus bar. That is one difference between the two bills which must be reconciled in conference if the measure is passed in the form provided in the Senate bill.

No money is appropriated in the bill. With the exception of a few million dollars, the necessary money has been made available by former acts of the President and of the Congress.

There is no provision in the bill which attempts to create an economic or social condition similar to the one which now exists at Muscle Shoals. In other words, there is no provision for a Columbia Valley authority. There is no provision for a board which will have the right to take any part in the administration of the dam. I may say that the only outstanding agencies connected with the project are the Board of Army Engineers and the Federal Power Commission and the administrator. In that respect it is my opinion that this project will be administered with less cost to the consumers of electric power than any other project undertaken by the Government.

I think some criticism has been leveled at the Tennessee Valley Authority because of the great number of governmental employees, experts, and engineers who are taking part in the administration of affairs in the Tennessee Valley. It is true that in this case the administrator may employ the necessary engineers, experts, and attorneys.

The Federal Power Commission is to allocate the costs which, in its judgment, must go to navigation and to flood control. In a large way, the allocation of costs will determine the capital cost, which is the major basis for rate fixing in this bill. What the rates will be is problematical.

Various estimates have been made. Much depends upon how quickly the whole project is fully utilized and the power sold. It must be remembered that at this time only 2 of the 10 units are ready for operation. If there should be a demand for a larger amount of power, and a market for the utilization of the 10 units, necessarily the interest charge per unit would not be so large, and that would have a very substantial effect upon the base of the rates and the rates to be charged to consumers.

There is a provision in the bill which I think is a wise one, and which was placed in it agreeably with the wishes of various farm organizations, that 50 percent of the power shall be reserved for home and farm consumption until 1941. That will give all the local agencies which are interested in farm and home use and utilization the right to organize, if they are not now organized, so that power will be available for use by them, and cannot be sold to utilities and industries which might monopolize the market. It is believed by these farm organizations that by 1941 they will have organized all the units they desire for the purpose of making available for their use power to be developed at the project.

The bill also provides, probably something unique, that the power shall be distributed as widely as possible. The judgment in that matter, of course, must necessarily be left with the Federal Power Commission and depend on the attitude of the administration.

Mr. President, I shall read from section 6 language which is not found in any of the other power acts, and which I think is of very great importance:

> Subject to confirmation and approval by the Federal Power Commission, such rate schedules may be modified from time to time by the administrator, and shall be fixed and established with a view to encouraging the widest possible diversified use of electric energy. The said rate schedules may provide for uniform rates or rates uniform throughout prescribed transmission areas in order to extend the benefits of an integrated transmission system and encourage the equitable distribution of the electric energy developed at the Bonneville project.

That is not in the Boulder Canyon Act, it is not in the Muscle Shoals Act. It is sought by this provision to make certain that any benefits which may accrue shall not be provincial in their application, but shall be distributed as far as is practicable, a matter which can only be worked out through experience and study. But we have placed no limitations on the area of distribution. The language encourages a wide and equitable distribution of the benefits of the rates which may be enjoyed by the people who live in the great Northwest section of the country.

I may give a skeleton outline of this very simple proposal, which has met with the approval of the administration and all its agencies, and those Members of the Senate who have given it their attention. This great dam now nearing completion will be controlled by the Army Engineers, the administrator, and the Federal Power Commission, whose duties are to strive to make this project a success. The rate fixing as a finality is left to the Federal Power Commission. The rates cannot be fixed until matters are determined with respect to the capital cost and investment, which must be determined later, and the allocation of the costs of the operation of the dam, which must follow, after taking into consideration the benefits to navigation, and flood control; and the cost of operation, of course, is to be paid out of the returns from operation of the dam and the sale of power.

Before the amendments of the committee are considered, I wish to state that I have observed that on page 7 a provision was inserted concerning the reservation of power, and by an oversight "1940" was used instead of "1941" in three places. But in order to make the amendment, which is a committee amendment, conform to the one I shall offer in an individual capacity, I shall defer action until after consideration and approval or disapproval of the committee amendments.

With this statement, Mr. President, I submit the matter, first for the consideration of committee amendments, and for such other discussion as may be proposed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. McGILL in the chair). It is the understanding of the present occupant of the chair that the Senator has offered the language of the Senate bill, as amended, as a substitute for the bill passed by the House.

Mr. McNARY. Yes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If that is correct, it includes all the amendments.

Mr. McNARY. It does not include all the amendments.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator desires to have the committee amendments acted upon before a vote upon the substitute?

Mr. McNARY. Yes, Mr. President. It does include all the committee amendments excepting two correcting amendments which I have in mind, and to which I just made reference.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McNARY. I yield.

Mr. KING. There may be some provision in the bill, but I have failed to discover any—and I may say that I have had the bill which passed the House, instead of the Senate committee bill—which will provide for reimbursement to the Government of the United States of the enormous sums which are to be appropriated under the provisions of the bill. I ask the Senator whether or not it is contemplated that the Government is to be reimbursed, and what provisions are found in the bill to effectuate that purpose?

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, that is a very natural question. On page 12 the bill provides:

> Rate schedules shall be drawn having regard to the recovery (upon the basis of the application of such rate schedules to the capacity of the electric facilities at Bonneville project) of the cost of producing and transmitting such electric energy, including the amortization of the capital investment over a reasonable period of years.

Amortization covers principal and interest, and the period is not specified, but is fixed as "a reasonable period."

Mr. KING. I do not find that in the copy of the bill I have.

Mr. McNARY. It is on page 12 of the bill I reported on July 22.

Mr. ELLENDER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McNARY. I yield.

Mr. ELLENDER. While the Senator is considering section 7 of the bill will he explain the meaning of the language which appears in parenthesis on lines 18 and 19, page 12?

Beginning at line 18, I find this language in parenthesis:

> Upon the basis of the application of such rate schedules to the capacity of the electric facilities of Bonneville project.

Mr. STEIWER. Mr. President, there is some language included in the parenthesis on page 12, line 18, to which the Senator from Louisiana directs attention, and with the permission of my colleague I will undertake to answer the question by saying that in figuring the amortization of the capital investment it is necessary, of course, to have a formula of revenue. That formula consists of the rate multiplied by the amount of energy which presumably will be offered for sale.

Mr. ELLENDER. Will that take into consideration the cost of the entire project?

Mr. STEIWER. Ultimately it will. The parenthesis is merely to state the formula. It uses the words "upon the basis of the application of such rate schedules to the capacity of the electric facilities of Bonneville project."

Mr. ELLENDER. Suppose the capacity of the plant is not used; how will the rate then be fixed so as to amortize the entire cost of the project in a given period?

Mr. STEIWER. The rate will be figured on the capacity. It necessarily must be so, or we never could initiate the use of that power. The rate will be figured on the capacity; but, of course, the amortization will proceed more slowly, for the project is only partly completed, and only part of the energy is being sold.

Mr. ELLENDER. Suppose the time for amortization is fixed. How would that language then be applicable? Am I to understand that the rate is fixed on a basis of the full capacity of the entire plant?

Mr. STEIWER. That is correct.

Mr. ELLENDER. Suppose the entire production is not sold and the time for amortization had been fixed. Would not the number of years in which the cost of the plant is to be repaid be changed, or would it not be necessary to increase the rates?

Mr. STEIWER. It would have the practical effect of doing what the Senator first suggested, because the rate, being a fixed amount, if less capacity than anticipated should develop, of course, it would tend to postpone the time of complete repayment to the Treasury.

Mr. ELLENDER. Does the Senator from Oregon understand from the language in section 7 that the Government will eventually get back operating expenses and also the entire amount of money spent for erecting the plant?

Mr. STEIWER. Yes; the Government would get the entire amount, less the charge-off for navigation. Our Government never recovers money expended for the building of rivers and harbors. The amount charged off for navigation, therefore, will not be recovered; but the amount that is charged for the development of hydroelectric power will be recovered eventually. The rate of recovery, of course, will be dependent upon the market and the amount of energy sold.

Mr. ELLENDER. What charge will be made against the cost of the project for navigation?

Mr. STEIWER. That, Mr. President, has not been determined.

Mr. ELLENDER. Who is going to determine that?

Mr. STEIWER. There is a provision in the bill for the determination of the amount to be charged to navigation.

The Senator will understand that the President was authorized by the first P. W. A. Act to designate and to build this project. Unfortunately the President was not given any authority under any of those acts either to dispose of the power or to make the necessary charges as between hydroelectric development and river development and navigation. Therefore nothing has been done in those directions at all from the time that the project started until now, and nothing can be done until this necessary legislation is agreed to so that the proper allocations may be made.

Mr. McNARY. I think I made a statement in that connection a moment ago, and read the language that is found on page 12—

> Rate schedules shall be based upon an allocation of costs made by the Federal Power Commission.

Mr. ELLENDER. I understand that.

Mr. McNARY. They shall make that allocation after study and investigation.

Mr. ELLENDER. However, there is nothing in the pending bill or in any prior legislation that fixes the proportion which will be borne by navigation and the proportion that is chargeable to electric development.

Mr. McNARY. No.

Mr. BONE. That has never been done in any of these acts affecting navigation.

Mr. ELLENDER. Has the Senator any idea as to how much that allocation will be?

Mr. McNARY. Does the Senator mean the amount of money that will be allocated to navigation?

Mr. ELLENDER. What I am trying to find out is how much will the Government eventually get back of the money expended by it.

Mr. McNARY. That which it has spent for navigation it never recovers. That is allocated to navigation, of course.

Mr. ELLENDER. Does the Senator know how much that is?

Mr. McNARY. No; but studies are now being made by the Army engineers, the Secretary of War, and the Federal Power Commission. No one knows how much that allocation will be for navigation, of course.

Mr. ELLENDER. Does the language of the bill authorize such an investigation by the departments named by the Senator?

Mr. McNARY. Yes; it is the view of all the Senators sponsoring the legislation, and of the drafters of the bill, that sufficient power is contained in the bill, and it covers that very point.

Mr. KING. Does it provide for a continuing appropriation for navigation?

Mr. McNARY. No; that will always come, of course, under the act relating to the Board of Army Engineers that we pass from year to year—the river and harbor bill. That question will come before the Congress each year in the question of appropriation.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, it seems to me there ought to be some limitation as to how much shall immediately be allocated to navigation. Shall we take into account the amount which has been expended upon this river during the past 25 or 30 years and subtract that from any receipts upon the ground that the project involves navigation, and, therefore, the cost of navigation developments and improvements ought to be paid from the receipts arising from the development of power? Are the costs of improvements upon navigation in future or those made in the past to be paid for from receipts?

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I think we all must understand that the question of navigation is a very important one, and that it is one of the purposes of this development. It is readily ascertainable, and will be by the engineers and the Engineering Bureau, as to how much of this money should be allocated to that purpose. They are not going to take into consideration appropriations that have been heretofore made on the development of the river, of course, nor developments that are to be made in the future. The immediate situation is the development of this project.

Mr. KING. I may ask the Senator from Oregon how the rates are to be determined from year to year, or how they are to be determined now, when they begin developing power and leasing it, unless the amount that is to be devoted to navigation is known.

Mr. McNARY. That is a condition precedent, and after that authority is given the Federal Power Commission and the Board of Engineers they will make this study, and make, as I stated, an estimate of capital cost. That is a basis largely for the fixing of rates for power. But that cannot be done in advance; it must be done after the authority is granted. One of the reasons for the bill is to make appropriate legislation available.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, from a very hasty examination of this bill—and it has been very hasty; since the Senator has been speaking I have been trying to read it—I am led to the conclusion—and it may be wrong—that this is an attempt to destroy private power companies that may be operating in the Northwest, or anywhere contiguous to the Northwest, and to prevent the development of power companies in the Northwest or in any part of the United States where this power may be transmitted, not in an economical way, but with the funds of the Treasury available, the funds for navigation available, the funds that are derived from the sale of power available. I confess that it seems to me, Mr. President, that this is one of the broadest schemes to establish a Federal power agency to be operated by the Federal Government, not only in the immediate vicinity of the Bonneville Dam but wherever the power may be transmitted; because I find in the bill, from a hasty examination, that the operator who is placed in charge may condemn lands far remote from the dam, may construct power lines for the transmission of power, and connect with other activities of the Government, perhaps down in lower California, or perhaps in some Eastern State, or Fort Peck in Montana. It seems to be the beginning of national control over a large part of the United States of the power activities and power developments, to the exclusion of private corporations, and with no proper limitations upon the Federal Government to insure reasonable rates and to insure that the Federal Government shall receive some return for the enormous sums which shall be expended under the broad authorization contained in this bill.

I hope I am wrong from the very hasty examination which I have made.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, the Senator's fears are unwarranted. He says he has given it a hasty consideration, and, therefore, his judgment is hasty. Those two conditions usually coincide. I think he need not extend any sympathy to the power companies. They have never opposed this legislation. I think they are quite well satisfied with it. They realize that it is a competitive force, of course, but so far as I know, they have no criticism of the provisions of this bill.

Mr. ELLENDER. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Oregon yield to the Senator from Louisiana?

Mr. McNARY. I yield.

Mr. ELLENDER. Can the Senator from Oregon tell us how much of the original allocation made for the Bonneville project was spent or will be spent for navigation purposes?

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, the river is already navigable. The dam will, of course, submerge some of the rapids above and make it navigable for some distance above.

Mr. ELLENDER. How far above the present dam was the river navigable before the dam was put in?

Mr. McNARY. For barges and light craft it is navigable for several hundred miles up to Lewiston, Idaho, and even past Old Washington, but the present development will make the river navigable about 40 miles above the dam for seagoing vessels that will draw 35 feet of water.

Mr. ELLENDER. How much of the original allocation was spent to make that possible?

Mr. McNARY. The dam makes it possible, and that dam when completed will cost about $50,000,000.

Mr. ELLENDER. Will it not be necessary to build locks so as to permit seagoing vessels to make use of the river?

Mr. McNARY. Locks are provided for. Four million five hundred thousand dollars is provided for the locks.

Mr. ELLENDER. Since it is possible to fix the amount that will be spent for locks, is it not also possible to fix the amount for the dam in order to make the river navigable, and if that can be done why is it necessary to charge out of the electric-current returns any amount to help amortize or to help pay the cost for navigation?

Mr. McNARY. Under the Senator's theory it would be a free project?

Mr. ELLENDER. I do not deem it so, because I assume that the original allocation provided so much for locks, and so much for damming the river. Would it not be possible to have so much of the original appropriation allocated exclusively for the purpose of navigation, and the other part for electric power?

Mr. McNARY. The construction of the dam and the impounding of the water have some relation to the navigation above. Just what amount should be allocated for that purpose can only be found after study by the experts. We know what the locks cost, namely, four and a half million dollars, and all that is not really beneficial to navigation must be repaid to the Government. In the Boulder Canyon project some portion of that was allocated for flood control, as a Government contribution, we will say, and the rest of it is now being returned. The money that is not actually expended for purposes beneficial to navigation should all be returned to the Government. The Senator's proposal is too generous.

Mr. ELLENDER. The point I am trying to make is that the money intended for navigation purposes has already been disbursed, and the amount is already known.

Mr. McNARY. Oh, no.

Mr. BONE. Mr. President, may I inject myself into this discussion for a moment?

Mr. McNARY. I am glad to yield to the Senator from Washington.

Mr. BONE. I fear the Senator from Louisiana does not understand what we seek to do. A dam has been built across the Columbia River. As a part of that dam, and integral with it, is a powerhouse. The dam is fundamentally and primarily for the purpose of aiding navigation on the Columbia River for a long distance above the dam, so as to make it passable for large steamers. The purpose of this bill is very clear. Under the bill, that part of the whole project now properly chargeable to navigation will be so charged. The dam has been completed for the purpose for which it was built, and is practically all paid for. It is now just a matter of who is to determine how much of the total of the entire cost should be charged to power development, and when that is determined by proper authority—and I believe it will be determined justly—from the power revenues the Government will reimburse itself for the cost of that part of the project devoted to power production. If two-thirds of the plan or one-half of it—and when I say "plan" I mean the dam and the whole general ensemble there—are chargeable to power, when it is determined how much of that is chargeable to power development and not to navigation, that part chargeable to power will be reflected in rates, and the profit will be paid into the Treasury so as to write off and pay what the Government has spent for building the power facilities at the plant.

Mr. ELLENDER. Is there no way for us to find out as to that?

Mr. BONE. The only thing we can do is to leave it to the Government experts who are qualified to make the studies. They have begun the investigation; they have already made preliminary studies. The Power Commission will do that, and it seems to me they are qualified to do it. Would the Senator from Louisiana feel qualified to say how much it should be?

Mr. ELLENDER. I would not, but if I had the facts I might be able to do so.

Mr. BONE. We have done the only logical, horse-sense thing, and that is to leave it to the Federal Power Commission to take up that study and say how much is properly, decently, and legitimately chargeable to power development. Having done that, the money collected from the users of power will be paid into the Treasury in order to pay off every dollar the Government has put into that plant which is properly chargeable to power development.

Mr. ELLENDER. As I understand the pending bill, whatever amount is fixed by the Power Commission will determine the question, and the Senate will have nothing to say about it.

Mr. BONE. Does the Senator think the Senate should now say how much should be charged for power?

Mr. ELLENDER. I do not know. I am asking the Senator. I do believe, since the Senate authorized the appropriation, it should have something to say as to how the Government should be reimbursed.

Mr. BONE. I have been intensely interested in this subject, but I doubt if it would be the logical or safe thing for us to arrogate to ourselves power and authority to now say, arbitrarily, how much should be charged to power. I have one viewpoint; other Senators, quite as honest in their viewpoints as myself, have a different viewpoint. We have submitted it to the one agency, which we all recognize to be a decent, honorable governmental agency, to say what that allocation should be. There is nothing novel in this idea. The same course has been and will be followed many times, as in the case of the T. V. A. and the Grand Coulee. To say that the Government will not get any money out of the power development is perfectly ridiculous, for the bill requires that the Government shall be repaid for that investment. No one desires anything to the contrary.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. May I say to the Senator from Louisiana we have certain elements fixed. Very clearly the locks must be allocated exclusively to navigation.

Mr. ELLENDER. That amount has been determined and fixed.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. The amount allocated to navigation has been determined to be four and a half million dollars. So also the fish ladders must be allocated against the cost. No production of power is involved in the fish ladders.

Mr. ELLENDER. How much will be allocated to the fish ladders?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. That cost will be borne by the Government, just as it bears the cost of any other fish ladders constructed by the Bureau of Fisheries.

Mr. ELLENDER. Why is it necessary to build fish ladders?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. The building of the dam makes necessary the building of fish ladders. The dam is primarily for the purpose of navigation, and it seemed to us to be clear that that cost is something which is separate and apart from the actual development of power. However, under the bill, if the Federal Power Commission should feel that the cost of the fish ladders should partially be borne by power, they have the right so to require.

Then there are the power plant and the generating machinery. Clearly they must be allocated against power. There can be no dispute as to that. There is also the dam there which is of joint value. It is of value for navigation and also for the development of power. Clearly, since the Government has assumed the responsibility not only on the Columbia River but throughout the country of the development of the rivers for the purpose of navigation the total cost of that dam should not be against power because of the fact that the power gets the benefit of the dam, and the total cost should not be against navigation. So there is that portion of the cost of the construction of the dam, which must be allocated between the two.

If the Senator will notice on the bottom of page 12, section 7, the bill provides:

> In computing the cost of electric energy developed from water power created as an incident to and a byproduct of the construction of the Bonneville project, the Federal Power Commission may allocate to the costs of electric facilities such a share of the cost of facilities having joint value for the production of electric energy and other purposes as the power development may fairly bear as compared with such other purposes.

We feel that under that provision of the bill the Federal Power Commission will make a fair allocation as between the two.

The Senator from Utah discussed the question of its being unfair to private power companies. Clearly when the Federal Government comes in and builds a dam for the purpose of navigation or flood control and as a natural and necessary incident to that dam hydroelectric power is created, it cannot be justified upon any basis of economy or economics that the Federal Government should say, "We just will not use that power." On the other hand, it would not be fair merely to charge in the rates secured for the power only the cost of the construction and maintenance of the powerhouse and the machinery therein contained, because it is the dam which made possible the use of that powerhouse and the securing of the hydroelectric power.

Every dam presents a different problem as to just how much should be allocated. As my colleague [Mr. BONE] has indicated, we did not feel, and we do not feel, that it is possible for us here to say that a certain percentage of cost of the dam should be allocated to power and a certain percentage to navigation. That is a subject which can only be decided after study of all the problems affecting the benefits to navigation which will be secured.

Mr. ELLENDER. The Senator means additional benefits. As I understand, the river was navigable prior to the building of the dam?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. The river is navigable only for small and light boats.

Mr. ELLENDER. Does the Senator think that the Government should be charged with any more for navigation purposes than to make it possible for large vessels to go up the river?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. No; and I do not think there will be any intention on the part of anybody to charge any more. The studies the Army engineers are making and what they are doing is directed to finding out how much value there is.

Mr. ELLENDER. Additional value to what previously existed?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Yes; the opening of the stream for large vessels, and the fact that it will be possible to ship products of the farm from eastern Washington and eastern Oregon down through that stream at a lower rate than the producers are able to get shipping them by rail.

Mr. ELLENDER. I do not want to be misunderstood; I am in accord with the power-development proposal; but I was under the impression that the Government would get back every dollar that it paid out for the construction of the dam and the power plant. That is the reason I asked the Senator the questions I have submitted.

I recall having read several statements to the effect that all power developments would be self-sustaining and that the Government would eventually be reimbursed every dollar it put out. My fear now is that too much may be charged to navigation and the Government will thereby be made to pay most of the cost of the project. I am confident that the primary reason advanced for the building of the dam was that it would provide cheap electricity.

Navigation at the time was only incidental. Now it seems that navigation may play an important part in determining the allocation of costs and will form an avenue through which the Federal Treasury will probably be called upon to bear the major portion of the cost of this project. At any rate, the river was navigable above the dam, before it was built, and locks were therefore necessary in order to at least afford the same class of navigation. The important question to be determined is, How much more was navigation improved and how much was the Government justified in spending for that improvement?

Be that as it may, it is my hope that the Army engineers will be given full authority to determine the question of allocation of costs and that in the performance of this duty they will allocate for navigation only such sums as the Government would be justified in spending after considering the added tonnage and advantages to navigation.

COURT REFORM AND JUDICIAL PROCEDURE

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the action of the House of Representatives disagreeing to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 2260) to provide for appearance on behalf of and appeal by the United States in certain cases in which the constitutionality of acts of Congress is involved, and requesting a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon.

Mr. McCARRAN. I move that the Senate insist upon its amendments, agree to the request of the House for a conference, and that the Chair appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The motion was agreed to; and the Presiding Officer appointed Mr. McCARRAN, Mr. O'MAHONEY, Mr. VAN NUYS, Mr. BORAH, and Mr. AUSTIN conferees on the part of the Senate.

WORK ON THE BONNEVILLE PROJECT

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 7642) to authorize the completion, maintenance, and operation of Bonneville project for navigation, and for other purposes.

Mr. POPE. I should like to ask the Senator from Oregon a question with reference to section 6 of the bill appearing on page 11.

That section provides that schedules of rates and charges for electric energy shall be prepared by the administrator and approved by the Federal Power Commission. Then a policy seems to be stated with reference to fixing rates and charges. The last sentence on the page refers to rate schedules and provides:

> Subject to confirmation and approval by the Federal Power Commission, such rate schedules may be modified from time to time by the administrator, and shall be fixed and established with a view to encouraging the widest possible diversified use of electric energy.

That policy seems to me to be a very important one and is one in which I am deeply interested.

Mr. McNARY. I appreciate that.

Mr. POPE. Then the bill proceeds:

> The said rate schedules may provide for uniform rates or rates uniform throughout prescribed transmission areas in order to extend the benefits of any integrated transmission system and encourage the equitable distribution of the electric energy developed at the Bonneville project.

The policy contained in the sentence beginning at the bottom of page 11 and concluding at the top of page 12 is a general statement that rates shall be fixed so as to encourage the widest possible diversified use of electric energy. Does the Senator attach any particular importance to the use of the word "may", in line 2, page 12, instead of "shall"?

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, the able Senator from Idaho will recall the number of conferences in which that matter was considered. The Federal Power Commission thought it should be left discretionary with the Commission, because the bill provides and directs that the widest possible use shall be sought with a view to bringing about the lowest possible rates at Bonneville. I think if it were mandatory, it would probably in some instances make impossible the administration of the act, whereas if it is left to the generous judgment of the Federal Power Commission under these terms, they will carry out the very beneficial policy we have provided in the bill. This is the first time such a policy has been incorporated in any act of Congress.

I think the Senator from Idaho need have no fear. As one who lives in the Northwest and has in mind and at heart the potentialities for advancement and benefits along these lines, I know he wants to see the power delivered as far as practicable. It is a matter which in my opinion must be left to the judgment of the Federal Power Commission.

Mr. POPE. The Senator from Oregon and I are entirely agreed that this is one of the purposes of starting a power project at Bonneville. Many parts of the great Northwest section are not now being reached and supplied with electric energy. Therefore it is important that they should be reached, if possible, by the fixing of rates as low as possible and by such other means as may be used to the best advantage to attain that much desired objective. Therefore the term "uniform rates" appeals to me very much. In that manner I believe we will be enabled to extend the use of electric energy to a great many people who might not otherwise be able to have it. My purpose was merely to understand clearly the use of the word "may" in connection with the statement of policy.

Mr. McNARY. I appreciate the observations of the able Senator from Idaho.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McNARY. I yield.

Mr. KING. On page 3, beginning with line 21, I find the following language in the form of a proposed amendment:

> The administrator is authorized and empowered to direct and require the Secretary of War to install and maintain additional machinery, equipment, and facilities for the generation of electric energy at the Bonneville project when, in the judgment of the administrator, such additional generating facilities are desirable to meet actual or potential market requirements for such electric energy.

It seems to me a most remarkable proposal that some agent, appointed under the terms of the bill by the Secretary of the Interior, should be authorized and directed to command the Secretary of War to install and maintain additional machinery. I assumed that $45,000,000, to which the Senator from Oregon referred a few moments ago as the ultimate cost of the project, would in fact be the ultimate cost. But here is a "shotgun" authority, with no limitation whatever, that whenever this supernumerary appointed by the Secretary of the Interior decides to increase the machinery or believes that additional power should be created, notwithstanding we are to appropriate $45,000,000, which is to be the ultimate cost of the project, he may direct and compel the Secretary of War to buy more machinery and install it, and undoubtedly increase the facilities of the project.

I am very much opposed to such a proposal and hope the Senate will reject the entire amendment, beginning on page 3, line 21, and ending on page 4, line 16.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, there is history back of that proposal which may be interesting and even enlightening to the able Senator from Utah [Mr. KING].

When first prepared the bill gave carte blanche authority to the engineers to operate the dam and install electric facilities. The President and some of his advisers wanted this power turned over to the administrator. We worked on it a long time and finally arrived at this compromise, which provides that the engineers shall operate the dam and that the administrator may not obtrude his judgment in the matter of the operation or do anything connected with the installation of facilities, but if market conditions shall warrant he may request the Secretary of War to install new facilities which would meet the new market conditions.

That is very different from the proposal as first conceived. It is fair to the administrator. It does not in any way impinge upon the wide authority given the Army engineers and the Secretary of War. But whenever a market need becomes apparent, requiring the installation of new facilities, and when he has made the contracts for the sale of power, all he has to do is to ask the board of engineers to install the necessary new facilities. The Senator from Utah must keep in mind that there are now eight idle units. There are 10 units in all, but 8 of them are idle.

I submitted the matter to General Markham and General Pillsbury, of the Army engineers, and inserted in the record of the hearings their letter stating that it conformed to their views entirely and that they were satisfied with the proposal. They have no way of knowing whether there should be a new installation. It is the man who sells the power, the man who enters into the contracts, the man who is the salesman of the power generated there, who knows whether or not a new unit should be installed. All he does is to request the Board of Engineers to install a new unit, which they will do if the sale of power justifies the installation.

Mr. President, the proposal is satisfactory to the Army engineers, and they think it practicable. I do not understand how they would know otherwise than to hunt up the administrator and learn from him whether they should install some new facilities. They would not keep an account of market conditions. The proposal is a compromise which meets the pleasure of the President, meets the pleasure of the engineers, and is in every way practicable.

Mr. KING. Where will the funds come from with which to purchase and install the additional machinery, and, perhaps, build important additions to the power plants, which might cost millions of dollars? It seems to me it is giving too much authority to the administrator, because under it he might embark upon these expenditures without having the funds available with which to meet them.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, the funds from the sale of all power generated are covered into the Treasury of the United States. The Senator from Utah knows full well that the money which has gone into the construction of the dam has come out of the Treasury of the United States. If new units are to be installed in order to meet the market requirements, the funds for that purpose must come out of the Treasury of the United States and the Senator from Utah will have an opportunity to assert his great interest in the welfare of the Treasury when that matter shall come before the Senate .

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Oregon yield to the Senator from Washington.

Mr. McNARY. I yield.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I should like to present, if the Senator from Oregon will permit, an argument on this particular point which I think will satisfy the Senator from Utah that the method which we are pursuing is an economical method.

The dam was built with a capacity for 10 units. At all times it has been contemplated that upon the full completion of the dam and the power facilities of the dam, there shall be 10 units. Clearly it would be bad economy to install all 10 units at one time and have 8 of them not producing any power. Certainly it would not be good business to do that kind of thing. Therefore, it was decided to install only 2 of the 10 units at first.

When the power produced by those two units is sold, and a market is available, and there is a possibility of contracts being signed for the sale of further electric energy derived from the dam, it is contemplated that another two units will be constructed, and so on up to the total facilities of the dam of 10 units.

The Senator may object to having one administrator; but, so far as this particular point is concerned, clearly there is only one man who will know when there is a necessity for the installation of other units, and that is the man who is to have charge of the power operations and the marketing of the power. Any private power company that has an engineer build its dam, and leaves the engineering staff in control of the dam and in control of the power-house, does not let those persons decide when they are going to increase their facilities. The operating part of the organization makes that decision, based upon the possibility of needs for future installation. All that this bill does is to say that when the time comes that the administrator, who is responsible for the financial success of the operation, feels that there is a necessity for the installation of two or more of the remaining eight units, he shall have the power to direct the Secretary of War to do so.

The Senator from Utah raises objection to the word "direct." Clearly that power must rest somewhere. We could not have the administrator execute a number of contracts with private companies or with public districts and sell the power and then go to the Army engineers and have the Army engineers say, "No; we do not want you to do that." Somebody will have to make a decision upon that point, and the one man to make it is the administrator.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, the first objection I have to this plan is the apparent subjection of the Secretary of War to the Administrator; but the principal objection I have is that there is no limitation whatever upon the expenditures which may be made. If additional machinery should be required, if additional expenses are to be incurred, let those in charge of the project come to Congress. Under this bill we are stripping Congress of all power, and the Administrator is clothed with authority to incur any expense he sees fit for the development and enlargement of the plant. Other agencies of the Government have to come to Congress in order to get authority to do such things.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I submit to the Senator from Utah that Congress has passed upon that question. In the appropriations we have made, Congress has approved the plan which provided for 10 units in the project. All that remains to be done is the installation of the generating machinery to fill up these 10 units.

Mr. KING. Suppose, as an illustration, an enlargement of the plant would require the expenditure of $5,000,000. May the administrator draw upon the Treasury for $5,000,000 to pay for the enlargement?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. There will always have to be an appropriation.

Mr. KING. Then why give him authority to make the expenditures without coming to Congress for the purpose?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. There is nothing in the bill which gives him authority to make the expenditures. He directs the Army engineers to install the additional units. He makes the decision upon that point. Then the Army engineers come to Congress at the next session and, through the Budget Bureau, submit a request for an appropriation by the Congress. There is nothing in the bill which gives the Administrator power to make that expenditure, or to compel the Army engineers to make the expenditure, without coming to Congress and getting the money. That is the only place the money can come from.

Mr. POPE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McNARY. I yield to the Senator from Idaho.

Mr. POPE. Is it not true that the activities and experience of the War Department in the past lie in the way of construction, and therefore in this bill the Army engineers have been given power to construct and operate these projects, and therefore this direction is nothing more than requiring them to do the technical end of the work?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Merely to make a decision upon the question as to whether or not the present number of units should be extended.

Mr. POPE. Yes; so that the discretion with which the War Department is clothed does not extend to the matter of determining what units are to be put in. Therefore, the discretion is simply administrative in character.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, the Senator from Idaho referred to other projects. What other power projects has the Senator in mind in the case of which this unlimited authority is given?

Mr. POPE. Such reference as I made to that matter was to the construction by the War Department of river and harbor projects which have not involved the development of power and its distribution.

Mr. KING. If I may be pardoned, I will say to the Senator that no appropriation may be made for any river and harbor project until a survey has been authorized by Congress. The engineers make a meticulous survey and make their report. After they have made their report, Congress then makes an appropriation of so much for that particular project. It does not give unlimited authority to the engineers, or to the War Department, or to anybody else, to proceed and expend whatever they may see fit for enlargement or deviation from the original plan; but they have to come to Congress every year for additional appropriations if the project has not been completed.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I will say that under this bill it will be necessary in precisely the same way to come to Congress every year.

Mr. SCHWARTZ. Mr. President, will the Senator from Oregon yield for a question?

Mr. McNARY. I yield.

Mr. SCHWARTZ. Referring to section 6 on page 12 of the bill, the last sentence, does the Senator understand that the words "transmission areas" and the words "an integrated transmission system" refer to areas and a system in which Bonneville energy is to be distributed, and not to other areas?

Mr. McNARY. Yes, Mr. President. No provision of this bill refers to any other project. One of the bills did contain the language "all Federal projects now in existence or which may hereafter be created." The policy of distributing the benefits of the Bonneville project as widely as possible is adopted in this bill for the first time, and rests exclusively, I can assure the Senator, in this project, and does not affect any other project.

Mr. SCHWARTZ. As the Senator understands, the bill does not confer power to integrate any transmission-system areas that are not served and will not be served by that project?

Mr. McNARY. The Senator is exactly correct.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McNARY. Yes.

Mr. BARKLEY. I find in this bill a provision which seems to me to be in violation of the Constitution with reference to the appointment of the administrator.

On page 2, beginning in line 22, I find this language:

> The administrator shall be appointed by the Secretary of the Interior, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate.

Under the Constitution the President is authorized to make certain appointments by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. Congress may also authorize the heads of departments to make appointments of inferior officers. I know of no provision in the Constitution, however, which authorizes the Secretary of the Interior or the head of any other department to send nominations up here for confirmation by the Senate.

It does not matter to me which plan the Senator prefers. If he wishes to have the Senate confirm these appointments, they will have to be sent in by the President. If he desires to have the Secretary of the Interior make the appointments, the language requiring confirmation by the Senate will have to be eliminated, because there cannot be both.

Mr. McNARY. I think the point made by the able Senator from Kentucky is exceedingly meritorious. When the bill was first drafted, the appointment was left to the Secretary of the Interior; but the words "by and with the advice and consent of the Senate" were later inserted in the bill. I think, as a matter of constitutional language, it will be necessary for the President to appoint if we are to seek confirmation by the Senate. It is the intention, at the pleasure of the President and his advisory committee, that the Secretary of the Interior shall make this appointment. If that policy is to be carried out, I think we might properly eliminate the language which is objected to by the Senator.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, it is entirely satisfactory to me that the Secretary make the appointment; but he will have to make it on his own responsibility, without the cooperation of the Senate For that reason, I suggest the elimination of the words to which I have called attention.

Mr. McNARY. I concur in the suggestion. Indeed, I did not remember that that language was in the bill until my attention was called to it by our Democratic leader.

I move to delete from section 2 (a) the words "by and with the advice and consent of the Senate."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. A motion made by the Senator from Utah [Mr. KING] is the pending question.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I should like to inquire what motion was made by the Senator from Utah. As I understand, he moved to strike out a committee amendment which has not been approved.

Mr. McNARY. It was not in this section.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question pending before the Senator from Utah made his motion was the language of the Senate bill as amended by the committee, submitted by the Senator from Oregon as a substitute for the House bill. The motion of the Senator from Utah was in order.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I submit that the proper procedure would be to vote on the question whether or not this amendment should be adopted. It has not been adopted by the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That motion, however, is subject to amendment; and the Senator from Utah moves, as an amendment, to strike out certain language.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I understood that he moved to strike out the whole amendment.

Mr. BONE. Mr. President, may I make an inquiry at this point, so that we may clear up the parliamentary situation?

As I recall, on Friday the Senator from Oregon [Mr. McNARY] asked unanimous consent, which was granted without objection, to substitute for the language in the House bill all of the language of the Senate bill. Without objection, that was done. There is nothing before the Senate now except the language of the Senate bill, although it appears under the number of the House bill. The House bill is numbered H. R. 7642. So we have before us only the language of the Senate bill. It was substituted for the language of the House bill by unanimous consent, that language being all after the enacting clause. So what we now have before us is the language of the Senate bill, which is designated as S. 2092, Calendar No. 1046. If I am in error in that, someone should correct me, because that is the language of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD. There is no question about it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The language in the RECORD is the language of the Senate bill as reported from the committee.

Mr. BONE. It is Calendar No. 1046. There should be no misunderstanding about that.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment has not been agreed to, but the pending question is on the substitute offered by the Senator from Oregon.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, the amendment I proposed to the House bill is still the pending question.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is correct.

Mr. McNARY. Very well. That is what we are discussing now. I think the Senator from Utah made a motion to strike out certain language; but I have explained it, and I think he is now satisfied.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Utah withdraw his amendment? If not, the question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from Utah to the amendment of the Senator from Oregon.

The amendment to the amendment was rejected.

Mr. BONE. Mr. President, I understood the Senator from Utah had an amendment to offer to limit the amortization period to 50 years?

Mr. KING. Yes.

Mr. BONE. I should rather he would discuss that with my colleague and the Senators from Oregon. It may be that it should be agreed to.

Mr. KING. I think there is no objection to it. On page 12, line 22, after the word "years", I move to strike out the period and to insert a comma and the words "not exceeding 50 years", so that it will read "including the amortization of the capital investment over a reasonable period of years not exceeding 50 years."

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, if we are to use a yardstick in every matter of discretion to be placed in the hands of the Federal Power Commission, we will have to write an unworkable bill. The investment may be repaid in less than 50 years; it may be paid in 30 years; it might possibly be, if the power should not be sold readily that in order not to work a hardship it would have to be extended over a longer period. The matter was considered by the committee and the advisory committee and the President of the United States and the language "reasonable period of time" was adopted. I hope the Senator from Utah will not insist on his amendment.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, with the very broad powers conferred upon the administrator to expand the plant, build lines outside of the immediate periphery of the plant, with no limitation whatever upon expenditures, it seems to me that it would be most unwise not to have some limitation. It is my recollection that in the Boulder Canyon Act the limitation was fixed at 50 years. The Senator says the investment might be paid within 30 years. The amendment would not prevent its being paid within 5 years or 20 years or 30 years, but it seems to me there ought to be a limitation as to the time within which payments are to be made. It seems to me that with that limitation there would be an inhibition against extravagant and improvident extensions of the plant or unwise and improvident contracts which might be made with respect to the sale of power. With an amortization within 50 years, in view of the fact that in most contracts that have been made for amortization the period has been 50 years or less, I think there should not be any discrimination in favor of this corporation.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I challenge the Senator's statement. In only one other act was there a limitation of 50 years, and I recall that act because I was chairman of the committee and handled the bill in the Senate. It was the Boulder Canyon Act, and there was a limitation of 50 years. But right now some of those interested in the further and continued successful operation of the Boulder Canyon project are asking for an alteration of the time limit, and that it may be extended. In order to avoid the mistakes made when there was a limitation prescribed, I hope the Senator's amendment will not prevail.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I think the Senator is in error in stating that the Boulder Canyon representatives are asking for an extension of time. They are asking for a modification of the contract, not an extension of time.

Mr. McNARY. I conceive that the two go together.

Mr. KING. No; they do not.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Utah to the amendment of the Senator from Oregon.

The amendment to the amendment was rejected.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I do not care to offer an amendment, but I think the matter I brought up a moment ago ought to be cleared up. As I said, it is immaterial to me whether the Secretary of the Interior makes the appointment or whether the President makes it, but if it is to be confirmed by the Senate, the President must make it.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, when I was interrupted a few moments ago I was about to suggest, and I now move, that section 2 be modified on line 24, page 2, by the deletion of the words "by and with the advice and consent of the Senate."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment to the amendment of the Senator from Oregon.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, in the amendment which appears in the bill, giving farmers and the urban users, and, in fact, all users of electric power not involved in the industrial and utility field until January 1, 1941, on line 24, page 7, the date appears "1940" by mistake, and I move that "1940" be stricken out and "1941" inserted. I move the same amendment on page 8, line 2, and on page 8, line 5.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the amendment.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 7, line 24, and on page 8, line 2, and page 8, line 5, it is proposed to strike out "1940" and to insert "1941."

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, I send to the desk an amendment, and ask that it be reported by the clerk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the amendment to the amendment.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 16, it is proposed to strike out section 12, lines 1 to 6, inclusive, and to insert in lieu thereof the following:

SEC. 12. The administrator may, in the name of the United States, under the supervision of the Attorney General, bring such suits at law or in equity as in his judgment may be necessary to carry out the purposes of this act; and he shall be represented in the prosecution and defense of all litigation affecting the status or operation of Bonneville Project by the United States Attorneys for the districts, respectively, in which such litigation may arise, or by such attorney or attorneys as the Attorney General may designate as authorized by law, in conjunction with the regularly employed attorneys of the administrator.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, the House text gives the entire authority to the Attorney General's office. The Senate committee bill gives the entire authority to the administrator. My amendment provides that they shall act in conjunction in the prosecution and defense of suits.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I think the amendment will improve the bill, and I hope it may be adopted.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Washington to the amendment of the Senator from Oregon.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, on page 15, line 8, I move to strike out "$10,000" and to insert in lieu thereof "$7,500." I have conferred with the Senator from Oregon concerning the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Utah to the amendment of the Senator from Oregon.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BONE. Mr. President, preliminary to a very brief statement, I wish to offer an amendment to the bill, and I should like to have the RECORD show that the amendment is being tendered to the language of the bill known as Calendar No. 1046.

On page 2, line 1, after the words "Bonneville, Oreg.", I move that there be added the words "and North Bonneville, Wash."

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I think that provision should be included, because this project belongs to both the States, to Oregon first, and to Washington second.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Washington to the amendment of the Senator from Oregon.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BONE. Some of our brethren in the House feel that it would improve the bill to have this language inserted, and I agree with them.

Mr. President, I think we have now cleaned up all of the amendments except the committee amendments in italics.

We have extended the preferential use to public bodies until January 1, 1941, in all sections of the bill. I wish to address myself for just a moment to some of the questions which have been raised by the Senator from Utah in his interrogatories.

If any Member of this body were called upon to operate a private utility and to operate it efficiently and intelligently, purposefully and profitably for its owners, he would have not only the powers given under the pending bill, but he would have much greater powers. I cannot conceive of the creation, the bringing into existence, of a power project of this character, in conjunction with the control that goes with a navigation dam like this, without giving the authority which is to operate the power plant at least enough leeway to be able to do a good job in a business way.

I certainly should not be guilty of creating an agency like that and then putting the operator of the plant in handcuffs and in a strait jacket and saying, "You cannot do those things which any well-managed private utility or public utility would have to do in order to make a decent financial showing." In the bill we say to the Administrator, "Sir, you are going to have certain power-producing facilities under your control."

Let us not be so profoundly concerned as though this were the supreme crisis of the universe. Mr. President, only 100,000 horsepower is involved in the Bonneville project. That amount of power is only a drop in the bucket out in our part of the country. My little city of Tacoma has a publicly owned power plant with twice that much power—and let me say parenthetically that I think it has the best power plant in the United States, the most successfully managed power plant, and a power plant that is enormously profitable. When I hear the Jeremiahs in this body suggesting that by going into this business the Government is likely not to make profit, I know and other Senators know that power projects are the most profitable projects that men can go into. That is why private power companies do not want the United States Government to go into the power business, because the Government might, forsooth, discover how much profit there is in that business. My city will amortize out its power-producing plant in a very short time. We should not think of curbing the city of Tacoma in its efforts to secure a market, to secure a widely diversified field in which to operate, thereby putting the plant in a legislative strait jacket and saying that it could not do what the operator of a private plant would have to do in order to make it profitable. A manager would not last 5 minutes in a private plant if he did not do all of the things that this bill directs the operator of the Bonneville plant to do to develop markets.

Let us go back to a consideration of the 100,000-horsepower plant provided for in the bill. The Bonneville project is an accomplished project. It is there. You cannot think it away. It stands in the Columbia River at Bonneville. It has generating equipment installed which can produce a little over 100,000 horsepower. That power could be licked up and absorbed very promptly in the Northwest, and if it were absorbed it would not greatly affect the power-market conditions out there; so the statement that this project is going to ruin power concerns and private profits out there is not a very impressive argument. Obviously we can find a market for 100,000 horsepower, because out in Oregon and Washington public power districts are being set up by acts of the people placed upon the statute books of both Oregon and Washington, laws under which provisions for distribution of the power are being made as rapidly as possible. Who, on God's earth, has more right to the power coming from their streams than have the people of the States of Oregon and Washington? It is their power. It does not belong to the Electric Bond & Share Corporation, and by no stretch of the imagination can we placidly accept the idea that the great Columbia River should be turned over to and harnessed for the benefit of eastern power combines.

Mr. President, I cannot follow that sort of argument, nor agree with it.

Some seem to have the idea that there exists a God-given right on the part of a private power concern to control gravity; that natural force which turns the wheels and in an unending stream pours money into the coffers of the fellow who can harness it. That, Mr. President, is a fantastic theory that will no longer be accepted by our people.

Mr. President, the amounts received from this project are covered into the Treasury of the United States. They are to be placed there and will be the property of the United States, and may be expended only by appropriations of Congress. We say in this bill that when the administrator finds markets that need the power and, and that he has not only an actual market for it but a potential market, to serve, and it is necessary to expand the plant and install additional machinery, the only way that that expansion and installation can be done is by the vote of the Members of this body, which vote will appropriate the money for that purpose. It would be very foolish from a business standpoint, obviously, and under ordinary common sense business standards, to put more power units into this project than are necessary for the needs as reflected by power contracts that can be made.

Mr. President, this is a good bill. It is a good bill because it is an honest effort to make the great agency which we set up there serve the people. When we get to the point that we do not conscientiously try to get legislation to do that we should quit legislating. I do not know why we should weep for the miseries of power companies.

Let me tell Senators about one private power plant which was established on what is called the White Salmon River, a few miles from the plant we are now considering. The Senators from Oregon and the honorable Congresswoman from Oregon [Mrs. HONEYMAN], who is present in the Chamber and who helped with the Bonneville legislation in the House, will remember that name. A small power plant was built on that stream by a power company. That plant cost $1,230,000. It was around a 15,000-horsepower plant. The only way the private company could build it was to file on the water right on that river, and that water right was acquired for the small price required to be paid for filing a water-right fee at the State capital, Olympia. Against that water right the company issued a block of common stock amounting to almost ten and one-half million dollars, and the people out in Senator MCNARY's State and in my State were compelled for years and years to pay a fat profit on that ten and one-half million dollars of wind and water.

Mr. President, the purpose of creating this great Bonneville plant is that it shall serve the people. The wheels of this plant can be made to pour cheap current into thousands of homes out there. Not only does it reflect that desire but, I think, the bill has been carefully drawn and reflects the best interests of those who are to be its chief beneficiaries. It is not extreme, because it does not go beyond what is well recognized as good business practice. If it did, it would be futile to contend for it. If the bill went beyond well-recognized business practice, it would be a stupid venture; and Bonneville is not going to be that kind of venture.

The bill gives advantages to public consumption of power and cooperative consumers until 1841. That reflects the wishes of the people of Washington and Oregon.

We have tried to make the bill a common-sense one, and I think it would be a tragedy to have it injured by harmful amendments. From long contact with the power problem, I sincerely feel that the language of the Senate bill is better calculated to do what I know we all desire shall be done; that is, to make this Bonneville plant a magnificent agency of social service.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, I am for this bill; but in view of the fact that a number of us have been working to have amendments attached to the bill in the House and in the Senate which we felt were advisable for the protection of the Boulder Dam project, a similar project, I feel that I should make a short statement as to why I do not intend to offer any amendments to this bill.

In the first place, I believe offering amendments would be futile. By reason of the attitude of certain Senators here with regard to the amendments that I have in mind, I think the amendments would not be agreed to, and offering them might result in the defeat of this very meritorious bill.

I have in mind also that the distinguished Senator from Oregon [Mr. McNARY], the minority leader, was very generous in assisting in passing the Boulder Canyon Project Act several years ago, and also in preparing the bill during the period of several years while it was under consideration in committee.

I regret that my colleagues from the upper States within the Colorado River Basin could not agree with me with regard to the benefits of amendments that were agreed to in the Rivers and Harbors Committee in the House and which originally came out in the Senate bill as a part of the measure. We tried for 2 months to agree on an amendment that would seem just to the representatives of what we call the four upper Colorado River Basin States. We were unable to convince them that the suggestions made were just. It is perfectly evident that if any such amendments were offered or placed in the bill there would be a fight on them, which in the remaining hours of the Congress, which I hope will be very short, probably would not only defeat the amendments but would defeat the bill.

However, I wish to take this opportunity to correct some misapprehensions with regard to the so-called Boulder Dam project amendment. In the first place, I think the Senator from Oregon and possibly the Senators from Washington and other Senators from that vicinity believe that it has no relation whatever to the Bonneville project. I do not agree with that at all. The Boulder Dam project is a Government project, but it is not treated with the liberality with which the Bonneville project is treated with relation to cheap power. It is not treated with the liberality with which the Alabama power project is treated in relation to cheap power.

The State of Nevada is in rather a dual position. It is entitled to use 18 percent of the power from the Boulder Canyon project in the State. On the other hand, it is to receive a part of the revenue in lieu of lost taxation. That seems to be rather contradictory.

Let me state that in a campaign in our State the question was raised as to whether or not the State should make a profit on the 18 percent of power by increasing the sale price, or whether it should secure its benefits by bringing into the State industries which would be taxable. Our State almost unanimously decided that it would receive more benefit on behalf of its people by cheap power which would induce industries, which would be taxable, to locate in the State than it would by attempting to be a profiteer on the power allotted to it by the Government.

In this particular let me say that I hold as a fundamental principle that the cheaper the cost of things produced from the earth is made to the consumer while maintaining our high standards, the more prosperous the people are. I realize that we are faced constantly with the question of taxation on existing industries and the necessity of their continuance. That is true. We were met with that proposition when the sailing ship was superseded by the steamship, when the wooden ship was superseded by the iron ship; we were met with it when the stagecoach was superseded by the railroad; and we are confronted, to some extent, with the same question now when the railroads are threatened by motor vehicles; but, in the long run, I hold it to be a fundamental principle that the cheaper the necessities and luxuries of life can be furnished to the people without lowering our standards, the more prosperous and happy they will be.

I do not believe in confiscating property. Those who have expended their savings for the accommodation of the public, no matter what their profits may be, are entitled to be protected against confiscation; but when inventions or improvements are conceived and put into use that are more economical and more for the benefit of the whole public than things they previously used, then the old must give way to the new.

One of the first Government power plants in the United States, I may say the first, was the Boulder Canyon project. It was true we constructed a plant in Alabama on the Tennessee River, but that was purely a war plant, for the purpose of manufacturing war materials. The Boulder Canyon project was the first Government project designed to create power as cheaply as it might be created for the benefit of industry and the people as a whole. Having in mind the desire to sell power as cheaply as possible to the public, we had to have in mind that the Bonneville project was preparing for the same purpose and under better conditions than those which affected the Boulder Canyon project. The project at Bonneville was to have the United States Treasury take part in paying a certain cost of the dam, while that was not true with regard to the Boulder Canyon project. The Bonneville project bill provides that whatever may be necessary as a separate expenditure for navigation shall not be a charge against the power but shall be a charge against the Federal Treasury, as is the case today in connection with every river and harbor improvement.

It was called to the attention of the committee of the House and at a meeting before the Secretary of the Interior that there is inevitable competition between these two Government projects. Some may not see, perhaps, how there can be competition when they are nearly 2,000 miles apart; but the competition lies in drawing to the vicinity of those great power plants electrochemical industries. They will go to the cheapest one, of course. Therefore, it is absolutely essential and material that the rates fixed at Bonneville shall not be discriminatory as against the rates fixed at the Boulder Canyon project or the Alabama project or any other Government project.

Mr. BONE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PITTMAN. I yield.

Mr. BONE. I am sure the Senator recognizes the fact that other factors aside from power cost also enter into the question of determining whether or not the owner of a business would move to a certain community. If mere power cost alone were the sole factor, the determining factor, the city of Tacoma would today have all the electrochemical business in the United States, because it has the cheapest power rates in America; but there are electrochemical plants and manufacturing plants in other cities. There is the element of local taxation, the element of accessibility to rail and water, whether salt water or navigable fresh water of some sort, whether there is ready access to markets, and the cost of getting materials to the plant. So there are other factors besides power cost.

Private power companies, I will say to the Senator, have made the assertion many times—I have reams of pamphlets and what not in my library which emanated from private power companies in my State in a controversy out there a few years ago—that power costs had absolutely nothing to do with the location of a business in the community. That assertion was made in a political campaign on the theory that the cost of the power to business is so slight a part of the operating and overhead costs of the plant that it is not in anywise a determining factor. I myself do not assert that as a fact; I simply point out that it is one of the very common assertions of private power companies that the cost of power to business is not the major factor, in fact, it is one of the lowest factors to be considered when a business is to be located. Whether that be true or not must be determined by all the factors that go to make up the preferred selection of a location for a business.

Mr. PITTMAN. I readily admit what the Senator from Washington says, that there are other factors than the fixed price per kilowatt-hour for power. There are climatic conditions; there is the cost of living in the community; there is the cost of transportation from the place where the product is manufactured; and there are a number of other considerations. There is, however, an uncertainty about that, I will say to the Senator from Washington, which requires expert determination, as does the question require expert determination as to how much shall be allocated to the cost of navigation at the Bonneville project.

Therefore, the amendment that was submitted to the House of Representatives provided:

SEC. 6. (a) The President shall direct the holding of public hearings by such agency or agencies as he may designate and the preparation prior to December 31, 1937, of a report to the President which shall include—

(1) The findings of such agency or agencies respecting any unreasonable discrimination against the Boulder Canyon project with respect to charges against power for construction costs, amortization, and interest on the basis of the standards prescribed in this act and in view of the physical, financial, and economic conditions surrounding each project; and

In preparation of that provision the suggestions just made by the Senator from Washington were taken into consideration. The provision deals with discrimination against one section of the country by another. I supported that provision; I helped to prepare it because my State has 18 percent of the power generated at Boulder Canyon Dam for use in the State, and we have adopted the policy that it shall be distributed as near cost as possible. Therefore we are interested in cheap power.

But we have another interest in the matter, and that interest has been attacked. The States of Arizona and Nevada are allocated 18¾ percent each, or 37½ percent between them, of the profit in lieu of taxation. Is that anything new? I am sorry to say that some of my friends and colleagues from the four upper basin States have constantly spoken of what Arizona and Nevada would so receive as though it were a grant, a bonus, a subsidy, a gift of some kind. Do Senators not realize that at the time the Forest Reserve Act was passed, a long time ago, that question was discussed in this body: On the floor of the Senate representatives of the great Western States said:

If you prevent the acquisition by individuals of land in the great forest reserves, you will destroy the opportunity of the States to obtain sufficient taxation to maintain themselves and their sovereignty.

Enormous forest reserves were created taking up one-fourth of some States for the benefit of the whole public, and then it was said to the States, "You lose this potential taxation, but you get no compensation." Congress then established the policy that when the potential taxable property of a State was taken away it should have compensation. The result was that 25 percent of all the receipts from the grazing and timberlands on forest reserves went to the States where situated.

Many years after that, when we were preparing the oil-leasing bill in this body, the question again arose as to whether such States as Colorado, Wyoming, New Mexico, and Utah, that had great potential oil resources, could afford to give up the taxation of those oil resources for the benefit of the whole Republic. The question was debated time and time again on the floor of the Senate, and it was unanimously agreed that if the potential taxable property of a State was taken over by the Federal Government and excluded from State taxation, it was the duty of the Federal Government to compensate the State.

How was it determined to compensate the States when we took over all the oil resources of the Western States, Texas included? It was done by providing that 37½ percent of all the royalties on the oil leases should be turned over to the State treasuries, that 52½ percent of all the royalties should be turned into the reclamation fund, and that only 10 percent should be retained by the Federal Government for administration purposes.

When we came to the Boulder Canyon project, which started April 12, 1921, when I introduced the bill in this body, to allow the seven States to enter into a treaty with regard to the division of the waters of the Colorado River, the same question of policy arose. After 5 years of discussion in the committee and after a bitter fight on the floor of the Senate, the same policy was extended to Arizona and Nevada, the dam being built across the river between the two States, and it was provided that the States of Arizona and Nevada were entitled to the same thing that Wyoming had, the same thing Colorado had, the same thing New Mexico had with regard to oil, which was that those two States jointly should have 37½ percent of the proceeds from the sale of power generated at that dam.

No one complained. Yet I am sorry to say I have heard representatives of the four upper States demanding that large receipts should go into a special fund for the upper States in a manner that reflected upon the grants of revenue to Arizona and Nevada in lieu of taxation. If it had not been for that compact dividing the waters of the river there never would have been any Boulder Dam Act. If there had been no Boulder Dam Act, then the California Edison Co. would have built the dam; and if they had built the dam, then, based on today's rate of taxation, Nevada would receive $600,000 annually forever, and Arizona a like amount.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PITTMAN. I yield.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Under the compact and the law relating to Boulder Dam, does not Arizona now get $600,000 a year, and does not Nevada get $600,000 a year?

Mr. PITTMAN. That is correct.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Then Nevada and Arizona are not losing anything by the passage of the bill.

Mr. PITTMAN. Not now; but the State of New Mexico is losing.

Mr. CHAVEZ. How much is New Mexico getting under the other act now, and how much can she expect to get in the future?

Mr. PITTMAN. New Mexico will get nothing under this bill; it is getting nothing under the Boulder Canyon Act, and will get nothing under the Boulder Canyon Act for 40 or 50 years, or until the project is amortized. What I proposed to the Senator frfom New Mexico and other Senators was that if we could get the bill amended so that $400,000 or $500,000 from the receipts from power could annually be put into a fund now to be used in the development of the other Colorado River States we would be 40 years ahead of where we would be under the present act.

Mr. CHAVEZ. It is for that very reason that the upper-basin States—Utah, Wyoming, Colorado, and New Mexico—are anxious now, when an effort is being made to amend the law, to protect themselves so that they will be in better shape than under the original act.

Mr. PITTMAN. How is it proposed to protect those States in that matter?

Mr. CHAVEZ. I do not think I am violating any confidence when I say the Senator from Nevada made a suggestion that an amendment could be adopted by which the four upper-basin States could get a certain amount of money, commencing now. We all agreed that was all right, and that we would like to get something right now. The only difference of opinion is that we think the amount suggested heretofore is not sufficient to pay the States for what they have already lost.

Mr. PITTMAN. Already lost?

Mr. CHAVEZ. What we did not get.

Mr. PITTMAN. What those States did not get and what they are not getting.

Mr. SCHWARTZ. Mr. President, will the Senator from Nevada yield?

Mr. PITTMAN. I yield.

Mr. SCHWARTZ. I think what the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. CHAVEZ] meant to say is that a certain amount would go into a fund which would be subsequently appropriated and used by the Reclamation Service for the development of the other States. He did not mean to say the proposal was that we were going to get a very direct offer contemplating any fixed sum of money.

Mr. CHAVEZ. The Senator from Wyoming is correct.

Mr. PITTMAN. The grant to Nevada and Arizona was not in perpetuity for the 37½ percent of the revenues from that dam was to be only during the period of the amortization. What will happen after the period of amortization expires? I am not complaining, because I helped to draft the bill during the 7 or 8 years it was under consideration. Here is the only provision in the bill touching on that matter:

After the repayments to the United States of all money advanced with interest, charges shall be on such basis and the revenues derived therefrom shall be kept in a separate fund to be expended within the Colorado River Basin as may hereafter be prescribed by the Congress.

That is the only language in the Boulder Dam Act with regard to any separate fund. That does not commence to operate until after the Government shall have been paid off in full.

I heard a great deal of argument about the 62½ percent. In the Boulder Canyon Act the 62½ percent only goes to amortize $25,000,000 allocated to flood control. When that is amortized the 62½ percent goes into the Treasury of the United States and not into any particular fund.

Here is the amendment I suggested to apply to that fund. I do not desire to wait 40 or 50 years for the completion of the accumulation of a fund which we are going to need every year. We made an appropriation this year of $300,000 for a survey of the river. That appropriation from the Treasury would not have been necessary if this amendment had been in the law. I have proposed that we add to the amendment, which was reported by a vote of 21 to 22 out of the House committee and unanimously out of the Senate committee, the following:

There shall be placed in said separate fund referred to and described in the foregoing paragraph (c) annually the sum of $420,000 until repayment to the United States of all moneys advanced with interest shall have been paid. Such deposits shall commence on the 1st day of July, 1939. Rates fixed under paragraphs (a) and (b) shall include increments to the extent necessary to provide revenue to meet payments required by this paragraph (d).

Mr. SCHWARTZ. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. REYNOLDS in the chair). Does the Senator from Nevada yield to the Senator from Wyoming?

Mr. PITTMAN. I yield.

Mr. SCHWARTZ. I think the record will show that the lower basin States, including California, objected to that specific proposal just as much as any other State. They wanted to agree in theory, and all that sort of thing, but did not want to get down to cold figures.

Mr. PITTMAN. I am not so advised. I think there must be some misunderstanding. I adopted the figure $420,000 because Mr. Scattergood, representing the power and light interests of California, agreed to it. Is the Senator from Wyoming willing to accept it now?

Mr. SCHWARTZ. I am, so far as I am concerned; but southern California, or those who represent power down there, were not willing to agree upon any specific sum to be stated in the amendment.

Mr. PITTMAN. I do not know what the conferences may have done, but I say I was authorized to insert that amount, and I did so. If today every one of the Senators from the upper States would rise in the Senate and say they would agree to it, I should be glad to offer the amendment now.

Mr. SCHWARTZ. Mr. President, I think it ought to be said that the Senator from Nevada wanted to be helpful, and has been helpful, and has endeavored to bring about a proper adjustment. Certainly none of the upper-basin State Representatives or Senators, so far as I know, is criticizing his action or his efforts in any respect.

Mr. PITTMAN. After I had supplied that amendment to, I believe, every one of the Senators from the seven Colorado River States, accompanying that amendment I wrote the following letter or memorandum to each one of the seven Senators. If any of them did not receive it, I should like to know it. It is dated July 29:

MEMORANDUM

To: The Senators from the seven Colorado River Basin States.
By: KEY PITTMAN.

I herewith attach copy of the Boulder Canyon Project Act and copy of the proposed amendment to the Bonneville Act as it was presented in the House, and as included in the Bonneville Act reported to the Senate.

There is only one reference in the Boulder Canyon Project Act with regard to the separate fund to be expended within the Colorado River Basin. That provision is found on page 4 of the act, and reads as follows:

"After the repayments to the United States of all money advanced with interest, charges shall be on such basis and the revenues derived therefrom shall be kept in a separate fund to be expended within the Colorado River Basin as may hereafter be prescribed by the Congress."

There has been a great deal of confusion with regard to the interpretation and application of the 62½ percent of excess revenues. That reference is found on pages 1 and 2, in paragraph (b) of section 2. If you read it carefully, you will see that it in no way refers or has any bearing upon the separate Colorado River Basin fund. The 62½ percent only applies to the payment of the $25,000,000 allocated to flood control. Whether the twenty-five millions is paid prior to the amortization of the balance of the one hundred and sixty-five millions or not, the 62½ percent after the amortization of the twenty-five millions becomes a part of the general fund for the amortization of the one hundred and sixty-five millions. If the twenty-five millions were paid off prior to the amortization of the project, still, under the act, no money would go into the separate fund until after the Government was repaid in full for all expenditures. The twenty-five millions might not be paid off, or any funds applied to it, until after the Government was repaid for other expenditures. This depends upon what excess revenues are provided. There will be sufficient revenues provided under existing contracts to pay off the twenty-five millions prior to the amortization of all moneys expended by the Government. The Secretary of the Interior, however, in 1945, is authorized to readjust the contracts and lower the rates. If the rates are lowered, then the amortization of the twenty-five millions will be postponed.

I am informed by the General Counsel of the Interior Department that the Department did not recognize that there was any obligation, legal or moral, to maintain any excess revenues. At the present time, under the existing contracts, Nevada and Arizona would each receive approximately $600,000 annually. If, under the readjustment of the contracts in 1945, no excess revenues are provided, then Arizona and Nevada would receive nothing in lieu of lost potential taxes on the property. I have therefore recommended to the Governor of the State of Nevada that the act be amended to provide a fixed annual sum amounting to $300,000 annually, which is approximately one-half of what Nevada would receive if the rates were not reduced in 1945. As Nevada is one of the States which is interested in the special fund, I have been negotiating for several weeks with both the California representatives and the General Counsel of the Interior Department, looking to the placing of a certain amount annually in the separate fund during the period of amortization. The States will need this fund long before the date of the amortization of the project.

The suggested amendment that I am sending you provides for such annual deposit, in addition to what is already provided in the bill. The fund sustains no loss by such amendment, but a distinct gain. I believe that we can obtain this amendment at the present time. We may not be able to accomplish this after the Bonneville bill passes. We would have great difficulty in passing it as a separate act, because so few Members of Congress are interested in our seven States.

In reply to that memorandum, I received this suggested amendment in lieu of what I have read:

The Secretary of the Interior, in making any adjustment of charges and rates under paragraph (d) hereof, is hereby directed to provide revenues adequate in his judgment, and in addition to other payments required to be made under the Boulder Canyon Project Act, to pay into the Colorado River Dam fund annually the sum of $1,000,000, which amount shall be placed in a separate fund to be expended by the Bureau of Reclamation exclusively within the States of Colorado, New Mexico, Utah, and Wyoming for the development of the water resources of the Colorado River.

That was not any such amendment as I had suggested. That amendment limited the fund solely to four States, and not to seven, as the original fund now provides. That amendment provided $1,000,000, instead of $420,000. It provided that the money should be expended by the Secretary of the Interior without authority or appropriation by Congress.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Mr. President——

Mr. PITTMAN. Just a second. That was the way in which the original reclamation fund was constituted; but away back in 1912 the Congress of the United States passed an act that never again should there be a revolving fund held in the possession of any officer; that the money should go into the Treasury of the United States and should be appropriated by Congress. Such a suggestion as that is an impossibility under the sentiment of Congress as it now exists.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Nevada yield to the Senator from New Mexico?

Mr. PITTMAN. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. CHAVEZ. I believe there is some merit in some of the criticisms the Senator from Nevada has made of that amendment. The bill originally provided that the money that would be accumulated in the future should be expended within the seven States of the Colorado River Basin. Would the Senator from Nevada be willing to accept that amendment if it included the States of Nevada, Arizona, and California?

Mr. PITTMAN. Providing for $1,000,000?

Mr. CHAVEZ. Yes.

Mr. PITTMAN. No; I should not, because I do not believe the cost of power could be reduced an iota if that were done. That is the reason why I did not do it, and I worked for 6 weeks to get the amount as high as I thought it could be made and still reduce the cost of power.

I want to say, however, that I am not going to offer this amendment. Nevada can take its chances in 1945, and it is willing to do so. All we lose directly by this thing is what every State of the Colorado River Basin loses. We lose any fund for 40 or 50 years. I am sorry to lose that fund. Nevada would not be getting much of it, anyway—do not worry about that—because, unfortunately, we are so situated with regard to the reservoir that we cannot use it.

Personally, I should be willing to wipe out any claim on this particular fund. I cannot speak for Arizona in the matter, though. I cannot speak for California in the matter. So far as Nevada is concerned, I would wipe it out, and let you four upper-basin States take it; but, of course, I can never agree that the policy we adopted heretofore—that the money should go into the Treasury and be appropriated by Congress—shall be changed so that it shall go into a reclamation fund, and there forever be.

There is just one other thing that I wish to say. When you gentlemen of the four upper States are asking that you shall have as much out of the revenues from that dam as Nevada and Arizona get, would you object to an amendment that if and when you build a dam that creates power in your States, we should have in a separate fund, for the three lower States, an equal amount from your dam?

Mr. CHAVEZ. I will answer that question.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Nevada yield to the Senator from New Mexico?

Mr. PITTMAN. I yield.

Mr. CHAVEZ. If it was not necessary to get at least the acquiescence of the upper-basin States originally, why were they included in the compact?

Mr. PITTMAN. I will tell the Senator why. He was not here at the time. I happened to be here.

Mr. CHAVEZ. I should like to know.

Mr. PITTMAN. This project was thought of years ago. The survey of the river for this project was started under Wilson's administration, in 1913. When it came to the point that the Reclamation Service, under Mr. Weymouth as chief engineer, had spent 6 years and made a magnificent report as to the possibility of this dam, then those who would be interested in it, the three lower States, anticipated building the dam.

What happened? We talked to the then representatives of the four upper States. They said to us, "We are never, never going to help you build a Government dam at the top of the three lower States by which you can appropriate all the water of that river"—and we could "unless there is a treaty by which half of the water of that river is reserved forever to the four upper States"; and it was then, sir, that I realized that you could defeat it. It was then, on April 12, 1921, that I introduced the first bill ever introduced providing for the seven-State compact.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Mr. President, will the Senator further yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Nevada further yield to the Senator from New Mexico?

Mr. PITTMAN. I yield.

Mr. CHAVEZ. The Senator admits that under the compact the upper-basin States are entitled to some water.

Mr. PITTMAN. Half of it.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Half of it; 7,500,000 acre-feet, I think, to be correct. If we do not get a fund from somewhere, how are we to utilize the water that Nevada and Arizona and California said we were entitled to?

Mr. PITTMAN. You might get it just as we got it. Did that ever occur to the Senator?

Mr. CHAVEZ. It had occurred to me, but you folks are already in there, and we are not.

Mr. PITTMAN. I do not see why you cannot get it in the same way. Nevada and Arizona are now suffering injustices.

Mr. CHAVEZ. I am sure we do not want to inflict any injustice.

Mr. PITTMAN. I know that, and I do not want to see any injustice done.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I have asked the Senator from Nevada to yield in order that we might take a final vote on the unfinished business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Oregon, as amended.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, I have not concluded.

I think the upper-river States were unfair to us. I do not mean intentionally, because in the very beginning we granted to the upper-river States everything they asked. They did not ask for anything I have ever heard of except the assurance that their half of the water could not be appropriated in the lower river. We tried to fix that. It was first fixed in the Colorado River compact, and the whole act is based on the six-power compact, and governed by it.

So far as I ever heard, no revenue was ever asked. As a matter of fact, the States of Nevada and Arizona for 5 or 6 years contended that when the Government was paid, all the profit should go to those two States in return for a part of their natural resources. That was discussed for 5 or 6 years, and finally, if I am not mistaken, it was on my recommendation in the committee that it was provided that after final amortization the profits should be distributed as the Congress saw fit, within the seven States. That was all there was to it.

This project is 1 of 12 projects which will eventually be built on the river. We were entitled to compensation for what we lost. There is a tract 100 miles by 10 miles of our territory which has been excluded from use or covered by water. All the mineral resources have been destroyed. They were there, there is no question. We could have gotten $600,000 a year if he had fought the act and let private industry build it. We do not get so much out of it. This is a project for the three lower States. It was never intended that it should be constructed for the purpose of furnishing funds for any of the four upper States. That was never thought of.

When the dam is built in New Mexico they will be asking for compensation in lieu of lost taxable property, I may say to the Senator from New Mexico, and they will be entitled to it, and they will get it. We of the lower States are not going to ask for an equal imposition upon the cost of power to be put into a fund from New Mexico's power receipts for the benefit of the lower States.

When Colorado builds her dam and generates power and sells it she will have compensation for the loss of property potentially taxable. But we are not going to ask Colorado to put on top of that power base charges for the lower States. As the 12 dams are built the lower States will not expect to demand revenue out of the power receipts from all the dams just because each of the States, under the fixed policy of Congress, will be getting receipts in lieu of lost taxes.

I say this for the reason that from the very start of this matter, at the time I introduced the first bill ever introduced on the subject, on April 12, 1921, providing for a treaty between the seven States, I have fought for everything the upper States ever demanded, and have never ceased to do so. I was in antagonism all through that fight, which lasted for 7 years, against the State of California. The interest of the State of California is identical with ours now to the extent that we desire the possibility of lowering power rates by lowering the base upon which the power rates are fixed equal to those of Bonneville. Bonneville is to have probably 33⅓ percent of the total cost of the dam allocated to navigation and charged to the United States Treasury. They allocated $25,000,000 of the cost of the Boulder Canyon project to flood control, but they make us pay it. That is what I am getting at.

I am wholly unwilling to offer my amendment to the bill, because it has been thrashed out. The House committee, after weeks of debate, by a vote, I have heard, of 21 to 2, or perhaps 3 or 4, I do not know which, reported out this amendment, without the addition I have proposed for the upper States. It was included in the Senate committee bill and brought onto the floor, but it was lost in the House. There was no test vote in the House. Do not tell me there was a test vote, when only a little over a hundred out of a total of 435 voted. I am wholly unwilling, after the effort for 2 months to settle this matter, to inject an amendment now, no matter how good I may think it is, an amendment which would create only talk, and probably destroy a bill which I favor, a bill which is favored by Senators who have long been friends of mine, and are friends of our own project.

Mr. McADOO. Mr. President, I desire to express my concurrence in substantially all the Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN] has said about the pending measure. Like the Senator from Nevada, I am unwilling to offer any amendment to the bill to equate the injustice which its enactment will inflict upon the Boulder Dam project, because I do not want to delay the operation of the great power plant which has been constructed at Bonneville. I not only would not stand for any further effort to amend the bill to protect or to give justice to California and Nevada and Arizona, but my regard and friendship for the Senators from Washington and Oregon would make me yield a great deal before I would place any impediment in the path of the people of those two great States.

I do wish to say, however, that the enactment of the Bonneville bill will give Bonneville an advantage in the cost of production of power far in excess of the rate at which power can be produced or sold from the Boulder Canyon project. That is due to the fact that the rate of interest and the amortization provisions of the bill give Bonneville a great advantage in the cost of production. I do not believe that any governmental project of this character should be discriminated against in favor of another. They should all be upon an equal basis so far as the fundamental policies governing their construction are concerned.

I myself have done everything I could during the past 2 months in which we have been in negotiation about this matter to secure an amendment to the Bonneville bill, like the amendment which was unfortunately rejected in the House. That amendment would have put these two great enterprises on an equality, and would have given the people of my State and the people of Arizona and of Nevada equality of opportunity so far as cost of production and sale of power is concerned, with the people of the great States of Washington and Oregon.

California is the one State in the Colorado Basin which makes the Boulder Dam project possible, because it is the people of California who must buy this power and this water to amortize this project in the final analysis.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Mr. President, is it not true that the upper basin States furnish the water to California to make the project possible?

Mr. McADOO. That is partly true; but they furnish only the headwaters of the Colorado and use only a small proportion of it.

We are quite willing to recognize the equities of the situation. I do not want to enter into any controversy with my good friend from New Mexico about that, because I am perfectly willing, and California is perfectly willing, to recognize New Mexico's equities. We have done so in the seven-State compact, which has been ratified by the Congress heretofore, and to which his State is a party.

The point I wish to emphasize is that it now transpires that the Boulder Canyon project is placed at a great disadvantage with the Bonneville project so far as power cost is concerned. In order to develop business for Boulder Dam and get the industries which we hope to induce to come into southern California we shall have to compete with cheaper power furnished by the Bonneville Dam. That is obviously unfair.

Mr. President, at the time the Boulder Dam project was before the Senate, and at the time that legislation was passed, and when the seven-State compact was entered into, the basis of amortization and the interest rates were established with the idea that that would be a fair basis for all projects of this character. Now, all we are asking is to be put on the same basis for establishing rates for power as is given by this legislation to the Bonneville Dam.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BURKE in the chair). Does the Senator from California yield to the Senator from New Mexico?

Mr. McADOO. I yield.

Mr. CHAVEZ. I fully agree with the Senator from California that the Boulder Dam area should be placed on the same basis as the area in the northwest. That is all the upper-basin States are asking for. They are asking that they be put on the same basis as California, Arizona, and Nevada; that if the lower-basin States are allowed to utilize some of this water, we be allowed to utilize some of it.

Mr. McADOO. All I can say to my distinguished friend from New Mexico is that the modification asked by Nevada and California, and I believe Arizona also, does not take away from the upper-basin States one shred of right or advantage that they now have. On the contrary, it improves their position immeasurably, and makes it possible for them to get something which they cannot get under the contract as it exists today.

I have no criticism to make of the Senators from the upper-basin States, but I am suggesting that they join us in putting in this legislation conditions from which they will get benefits they will not receive without it, and which at the same time will equalize the power price with that of the Bonneville Dam. That is all we want.

I wish to acknowledge, Mr. President, that the Senators from Oregon and the Senators from Washington have been most kind and considerate in their desire to cooperate with us in establishing a basis of cost equality; I thank them for their consideration.

Mr. BONE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McADOO. I yield.

Mr. BONE. Can the Senator from California tell us what the present generating capacity is of the Boulder Dam?

Mr. McADOO. I have not the figures before me, and I cannot answer.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, of course, at the present time the Boulder Dam is not operating at full capacity, as the Senator from Washington must know. The Boulder Dam is operating at the present time, I should guess, at about 200,000 horsepower. Inside of 2 years it will be operating at 550,000 firm horsepower, having a maximum of a million firm and secondary horsepower.

Mr. BONE. Mr. President, the question suggests itself to me because there seems to be a fear of what terrible things are going to happen at the hands of the Bonneville plant; but these other plants are Gargantuan compared with the Bonneville plant, which is only a little 100,000-horsepower plant. The argument is made that there is 100,000 horsepower there, which is likely to be a threat against the country. It ought to be borne in mind that my little city of Tacoma has 100,000 horsepower of surplus energy, which is as much as the entire Bonneville project can produce.

Mr. PITTMAN. Is its maximum generation 100,000 horsepower?

Mr. BONE. No; it is 500,000 horsepower. That will be many years in the future; so if Senators are frightened at this great ghost on the Columbia, let us help lay the ghost, because 100,000 horsepower of energy is not very much. It ought not to worry Los Angeles for fear that it might tend to destroy the power consumption that comes from the Boulder Dam and other projects, and certainly it cannot be a very tremendous factor in the competitive field.

Mr. McADOO. Mr. President, I am not in the least afraid of my amiable friend from Washington, nor of any of the amiable Senators from the upper-basin States. The point involved is the establishment of a fundamental policy such as should govern the United States in establishing uniformity of treatment of these various Government projects. If we are discriminated against at Boulder Dam so that we are forced to charge a higher rate for power furnished to industry in our section of the country—southern California—in competition with Bonneville at a lower rate, the natural attraction to industry will be Bonneville.

I want to see all these sections prosper and flourish, but I want them all to stand on the same basis so far as the cost of power is concerned.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, I do not think it is so much a question of the amount of power. However, when the Government is going to take charge of certain Government projects in various sections of the country, taking into consideration all the factors in the matter, it should be very careful to see that it is not subject to the criticism of discrimination.

Mr. McADOO. I agree with the Senator from Nevada about the amount of power. That is not so important as to get the fundamental basis right.

Answering the senior Senator from Washington, who says that as they will presently produce only about 100,000 horsepower, which will be consumed by his great city of Tacoma alone, we need not fear any threat from the Bonneville Dam. We do not fear any immediate threat from them, but it is the potential power of the Bonneville Dam that we must take into consideration, and we must consider what is the fair basis for each. That is all I am contending for.

I want to go on record to this extent, not only to explain my own attitude but also to say that I trust that when this question comes up in the next Congress in the form of a proper measure, we may have the aid and the cooperation of the Senators from Washington and Oregon in correcting what will be a serious injustice to and a discrimination against the Boulder Canyon project.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I have listened to the castigation which my friends from California and Nevada have attempted to administer to the Senators from the upper-basin States. I have listened with equanimity, notwithstanding the rather violent manner in which their castigation has been administered. In the first place, as has been stated by the Senator from Washington [Mr. BONE], the Senators who have spoken have been seeing ghosts. They do not know, neither does anyone know, what the cost for power will be at Bonneville. It may be greater than the charge for electrical energy at Boulder Dam. As a matter of fact, I have been told that the production of power there will cost more than the production of power at Boulder Canyon. This Bonneville scarecrow has been used—I do not say this offensively—for the purpose of securing an amendment of contracts entered into by California interests, to the disadvantage of the upper-basin States. I do not intend to discuss this question now, notwithstanding there are many valid arguments to meet the position of the Senators referred to. There will be opportunities for a full presentation of the facts at a subsequent time.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, I have listened with interest to the discussions today regarding the Bonneville project and the Boulder Dam project. I do not rise to rake the embers of a feud that raged furiously between Arizona and California over the Boulder Dam. I dwell but little in the graveyards of the past. I learn lessons from them, but the problems of the future are the problems which I consider.

I address myself to all Senators from the Colorado River Basin States, not those alone from the upper-basin States or those alone from the lower-basin States, but to the Senators from the lower- and the Senators from the upper-basin States, and I lay before them a situation which might be fraught with peril.

Our neighbor to the South, the Republic of Mexico, is now making, and for years has made, claim to waters of the Colorado River. Every acre-foot of water that may go to Mexico from the Colorado River means that so many acres of land in California, Arizona, Nevada, and the upper-basin States will forever remain arid. All the waters of the Colorado River belong to the United States. Such of the waters of the Colorado River as are now permitted to Mexico by the United States go to Mexico neither by treaty nor through international law, but by grace, amity, and good neighborliness, although the actual needs and American requirements ultimately would consume and utilize all the flow of the Colorado River. The United States is under no obligation by treaty or international law or otherwise to recognize in Mexico a right to demand the continuous flow into Mexico of any of the waters of the Colorado River if such waters may be diverted within the United States, for a beneficial use within the United States. This has been the position of our Government with reference to American water flowing into Mexico from the Colorado River.

Mr. President, the Department of State for many years—I should say for 20 years or more—has been eager to negotiate a treaty with Mexico distributing to Mexico certain waters of the Colorado River. I shall, as I have in the past, oppose any such treaty.

Mr. President, on December 8 last I wrote a letter to the Department of State pointing out that there was no treaty, no international law in existence, that required the United States to send any water from the Colorado River to Mexico. I ask unanimous consent to have printed at this point in my remarks a copy of my letter to the Department of State on that subject.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the letter will be printed in the RECORD.

The letter referred to is as follows:

WASHINGTON, D. C., December 8, 1936.

Hon. R. WALTON MOORE,
Acting Secretary of State, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR MR. SECRETARY: Your letter of December 1 received advising that the diplomatic negotiations between the United States and the Republic of Mexico regarding the equitable use of the waters of the Rio Grande have reached an impasse because of Mexico's contention that the consideration of questions pertaining to the lower Rio Grande must be coupled with questions relating to the Colorado River.

You further advise, in the said letter of December 1, that your Department has not hitherto seen its way clear to acquiesce in the Mexican contention.

Whilst your Department did not concede the propriety of the Mexican contention, you have, nevertheless, with unclouded vision clearly perceived that the distribution of the waters of the Rio Grande is not and cannot be related to the problem of the waters of the Colorado River.

Moreover, you have in your endeavors to protect American rights been quite unimpressed by suggestions of Mexican diplomats that the question of the disposition of waters of the Rio Grande would come to a standstill unless coupled with the question of the disposition of the waters of the Colorado River.

The waters of the Rio Grande and the waters of the Colorado River are not related by propinquity, topography, physical geography, or otherwise and a remote excursion of the imagination could not supply a shred of excuse for treating the waters of the Rio Grande and the waters of the Colorado River as a single problem or in entirety.

Such of the waters of the Colorado River as are now permitted to Mexico by the United States are furnished to Mexico neither by treaty nor by international law but by grace, amity, and neighborliness, although the actual American needs and requirements ultimately should and would consume and utilize all of the entire flow of the Colorado River.

The United States is under no obligation, by treaty, by international law, or otherwise, to recognize in Mexico a right to demand the continuous flow into Mexico of any of the waters of the Colorado River if such waters may be diverted within the United States for beneficial use within the United States. This has been the consistent position of our Government with reference to American rivers flowing into Mexico.

On December 12, 1895, Hon. Judson Harmon, Attorney General of the United States, at the request of the Department of State, interpreted Mexican treaties and international law as applied to Mexican claims for Rio Grande water. He held that there was no treaty or provision of international law which prohibited the United States from utilizing the waters of American streams so long as that water was on American soil. (See vol. 21, O. P. Atty. Gen. 274, et seq.)

On September 1, 1903, Hon. M. C. Burch, of the Department of Justice, wrote a report, at the request of the Department of State, regarding the protest of Mexico to the diversion of water from the Colorado River for use in the Yuma Valley, Ariz., and in the Imperial Valley, Calif., holding that there was no inhibition against American citizens using Colorado River water so long as the irrigation works were located entirely within the United States.

On August 20, 1919, the Secretary of State, Hon. Robert Lansing, reported to the chairman of the House Committee on Irrigation of Arid Lands upon the provisions of H. R. 6044, being a bill to assist in increasing the productive agricultural area of the Imperial Valley, and held that the use of the Colorado River water for this purpose was not a violation of treaty obligations of the United States to Mexico.

Under date of August 17, 1922, Hon. Charles E. Hughes, then Secretary of State, advised Hon. Herbert Hoover, then Chairman of the Colorado River Commission, along lines similar to those laid down in the report of Mr. Lansing. Mr. Hughes' letter is published in House Document 359, Seventy-first Congress, at page 261, et seq.

The latest declaration of our Government is the report of the American section of the International Water Commission, United States and Mexico, and is found on page 65, and is as follows:

"It has always been held that a nation has a full right within its own territories of those resources which might be necessary for its development or for the comfort of its people. Any granting of a portion of such resources to another nation must be regarded as a voluntary act of friendship and comity."

See also the copious memorandum on American rights in the Colorado River, prepared by Mr. Karl F. Keeler, found at pages 192–282, House Document 359, Seventy-first Congress.

Whatever privileges Mexico may assert by amity and grace to waters of the Colorado River, must be limited to the Colorado River in a state of nature. Mexico has no reservoir or dam sites within her boundary on the Colorado River where she could store any quantity of water and she cannot require the United States to supply such sites. Neither can she claim the benefit of storage works built within the United States through the expenditure of funds of the United States and for the avowed benefit of communities and citizens of the United States.

Before the approval of the so-called Boulder Dam Act, Mexico and the United States together had completely exhausted the available dependable annual flow of the Colorado River, in its state of nature, and Mexico's maximum beneficial use in any one year was 750,000 acre-feet.

It is a principle of law that a person who by his own efforts and expenditure of his own money increases the available water in a stream is entitled to control that increase. Accordingly, Mexico cannot claim the benefits of Boulder Dam or dictate the release of water therefrom.

Protracted and difficult contests in the courts and in Congress, furnish ample evidence of the earnestness and the urgency of the American demands for the waters of the Colorado River. The Debler Report, only recently compiled by the Reclamation Service, shows a complete utilization by the United States of the waters of the Colorado River. Mr. Debler has already drastically reduced the demands and ultimate requirements of some of the basin States in order to eke out the 750,000 acre-feet annually permitted to Mexico. Seven hundred and fifty thousand acre-feet of water annually is the maximum amount of the Colorado River Basin States could by grace or otherwise, surrender.

In returning my thanks for your polite attention in writing to me upon this subject, candor requires me to say that the proposal of the Department of State to create a committee of three, one member to be appointed by the Colorado River Basin States, one by the State of Texas, and one by the two thus chosen, subject to the approval of the Department of State, or by the Department of State, to formulate a basis of a treaty with Mexico (unless I have misconceived the question) would be opposed by the Colorado River Basin States for many reasons, among which are the following:

Senators from the Colorado River Basin States would be reluctant to restrict their future freedom of action by agreeing in advance that such committee shall decide how much water might remain in the Colorado River available for use in the seven Colorado River Basin States.

The proposal to create such committee is untenable.

(a) It proceeds upon the erroneous hypothesis that the Rio Grande Basin and the Colorado River Basin have identical problems and have interests of equal value at stake, whereas in fact the Colorado River Basin would be called upon only to give and supply water to Mexico whilst the Rio Grande Basin would be called upon only to receive water from Mexico.

(b) It accords to one State—Texas—equal representation with seven States of the Colorado River Basin.

(c) It assumes that the representative of the Department of State would be a neutral and disinterested third party, whilst the fact is the Department of State desires to negotiate a treaty for the equitable use of the waters of the Rio Grande and is harassed by intimations by Mexico that such treaty can be negotiated only by the United States surrendering to Mexico waters of the Colorado River in excess of the 750,000 acre-feet per annum.

(d) The proposal is impracticable because the Colorado River Basin is divided into two definite groups with divergent interests, to wit: The upper basin and the lower basin. The lower basin is also divided into two groups with sharp conflict of interests, to wit: California and Nevada on the one side and Arizona on the other. In the present posture of affairs it would be almost outside the domain of possibility for the Colorado River Basin States to agree as to who should be the Colorado River Basin States' member of such committee.

I respectfully decline to be a party to or to support a treaty that would deprive the Colorado River Basin States of a vital portion of a natural resource belonging to them.

Pray, accept assurances of my highest esteem and regard.

Yours respectfully,

HENRY F. ASHURST.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. ASHURST. I yield to the Senator from California.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. Has the Senator noticed during the last few days that the Secretary of State has appointed a gentleman to negotiate a treaty in respect to the waters of the Rio Grande River and of the Colorado River?

Mr. ASHURST. I was not aware of that.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. That has appeared simply in the press. This morning I wrote a letter to the Secretary of State, courteously asking for information in that regard. When I shall have received a reply from the Secretary of State, I will submit it to the Senator.

Mr. ASHURST. I thank the Senator.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. Mr. Sumner Welles, as I remember, was appointed commissioner to negotiate treaties in regard to both rivers. What they intend to do I do not know, but I fear the good-neighbor policy.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, the matter to which the Senator from Arizona [Mr. ASHURST] has just invited attention is one which I consider of grave importance. There seems to have been a disposition upon the part of certain officials of the State Department for a number of years last past to concede to Mexico some moral if not legal claim to the waters of the Colorado River.

I took the matter up during the administration of President Coolidge and ascertained that there were tentative negotiations in progress which were based upon a claim from Mexico that the United States pay $50,000,000 for her alleged interest in the Colorado River. I protested to the President of the United States against our Government admitting Mexico's claim, and stated that Mexico had no claim whatever to any of the waters of the Colorado River unless, perchance, such limited amount as was used for the irrigation of two or three hundred thousand acres of land. The matter was referred by the President of the United States to our Ambassador, with whom I conferred. I stated to the latter that if any attempt were made to barter away the rights of the United States in and to the waters of the Colorado River it would, in my opinion, meet with opposition in the United States Senate and upon the part of the American people.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. KING. I yield.

Mr. ASHURST. I am not feeling my best today and am in no mood to pay compliments, but I regard the Senator from Utah [Mr. KING] as an able constitutional lawyer, and I ask him if there exists now any treaty or international arrangement or aught else which requires the United States to send any water of the Colorado River into Mexico?

Mr. KING. I answer, without hesitation, no. I made some examination into this matter, and I happened across the opinion of former Attorney General Harmon. After examining some authorities on international law, I reached the conclusion that the United States has the right to divert and use for beneficial purposes the waters of the Colorado River.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? I wish to ask a question along the line of that of the Senator from Arizona.

Mr. KING. In a moment. In my opinion there is no justification for the claim of Mexico that we shall turn down to her any part of the waters of the Colorado River, although, as a matter of comity, I would feel disposed to say that there should be turned down to her a sufficient amount to irrigate the lands which for a number of years have been irrigated in Mexico. I now yield to the Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. HATCH. Is the Senator from Utah familiar with the condition on the Rio Grande? That river, as the Senator knows, furnishes large water supplies to irrigation projects in the State of New Mexico before the water reaches the Republic of Mexico. That water is not involved, but after leaving the United States the waters of the Rio Grande are supplemented from streams having their source in the Republic of Mexico.

Mr. KING. I am familiar with the peregrinations and the labyrinthine course of the Rio Grande.

Mr. HATCH. Is there any obligation upon the part of the Republic of Mexico to permit the waters flowing into the Rio Grande to enter the United States and irrigate the lands of the lower Rio Grande Valley, or could the Republic of Mexico build dams and reservoirs and store all that water and destroy the vast projects in the State of Texas?

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I would not want to answer that categorically, but I did state to the Secretary of State in a communication which I wrote to him, and also in a number of oral conversations a little over a year ago, that the situation was such, in my opinion, as to warrant negotiations between the two Governments with a view to adjusting any conflict. It might be a matter of justice and equity if the United States would make some contribution in money to a settlement of the Rio Grande controversy. But I am speaking now of the Colorado River, and I am not intending to intrude into another field, namely, that of the Rio Grande River.

Mr. HATCH. The reason why I asked the question was that the law relating to the Colorado also relates to the Rio Grande.

Mr. KING. There are some analogies, and there are some questions which give rise to a pronounced disparity.

Mr. HATCH. I may in explanation say that I have been looking into the situation somewhat and am impressed with the problem which confronts the State Department over the situation, not only on the Colorado but on the Rio Grande as well.

Mr. KING. They ought not to yoke the two together.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, let me say just a word following what has been said by the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. HATCH] and the Senator from Utah [Mr. KING] regarding the Rio Grande situation.

It so happens that the State of Colorado has had a practical experience. The Rio Grande River rises in Colorado in what is known as the San Luis Valley. Some years ago, when this controversy was fresh, the then Attorney General of the United States, Judson Harmon, handed down an opinion to the effect that there was no legal obligation on the part of the United States to allow water to flow from the United States into Mexico. However, the United States entered into treaty relationship with Mexico by which it was agreed that not less than 60,000 acre-feet should be delivered across the boundary into Mexico every year. In order that that might be done, the use of public lands in my State was forbidden for the building of reservoirs and ditches, thus stifling and withholding the development of irrigation in the State of Colorado. The States in the irrigated areas sometimes suffer by reason of the desire of the State Department to maintain friendly relations with Mexico.

As the Senator from Arizona [Mr. ASHURST] called attention sometime ago, those of us from the Western States received copies of a communication suggesting that there be a joint conference or committee or some form of tribunal jointly to adjudicate or arbitrate with the Republic of Mexico the relative rights, not upon the Rio Grande but upon the Rio Grande and Colorado Rivers. It so happens that both rivers are in my State. Sixty-five percent of the water of the Colorado River rises in the State of Colorado, and I think almost as large a percentage of the waters of the Rio Grande.

It was suggested that the committee be constituted in such way that it would be quite possible to arrange to satisfy the Republic of Mexico as to its claims of the Rio Grande by giving it water out of the Colorado, or vice versa. In either case my State of Colorado would probably be the loser. Consequently I made the same suggestion as that made by the Senator from Utah [Mr. KING] as to the formation of committees of conference—insisting, so far as I could, that the Colorado River should be treated separately from the Rio Grande; that if it was desired to enter into negotiations with the Republic of Mexico as to the Colorado River, commissioners should be appointed from the States affected by the Colorado River, and if they wished to enter into relations or negotiations relative to the Rio Grande, separate negotiations should be entered into and the United States should be represented by the States interested.

I trust we will not become involved in any form of negotiation which will result disastrously to those of us who are dependent upon the rainfall in our respective States in the semiarid region of the country.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Oregon [Mr. MCNARY] as amended.

Mr. MCNARY's amendment, as amended, was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the engrossment of the amendment and the third reading of the bill.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill (H. R. 7642) was read the third time and passed.

Mr. MCNARY. Mr. President, I move that the Senate insist on its amendment, ask for a conference with the House thereon, and that the Chair appoint conferees on the part of the Senate.

The motion was agreed to; and the Presiding Officer appointed Mr. COPELAND, Mr. SHEPPARD, and Mr. MCNARY conferees on the part of the Senate.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Megill, one of its clerks, communicated to the Senate the intelligence of the death of Hon. THEODORE A. PEYSER, late a Representative from the State of New York, and transmitted the resolutions of the House thereon.

The message also announced that the House had disagreed to the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 2512) to authorize an appropriation for the construction of small reservoirs under the Federal reclamation laws; agreed to the conference asked by the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and that Mr. WHITE of Idaho, Mr. GREEVER, Mr. DEMPSEY, and Mr. CASE of South Dakota were appointed managers on the part of the House at the conference.

ENROLLED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS SIGNED

The message further announced that the Speaker had affixed his signature to the following enrolled bills and joint resolutions, and they were signed by the Vice President:

S. 1160. An act for the relief of Troup Miller and Harvey D. Higley;

H. R. 169. An act to provide for a term of court at Benton, Ill.;

H. R. 851. An act conferring jurisdiction upon the United States District Court for the District of New Jersey to hear, determine, and render judgment upon the claim of A. F. Amory;

H. R. 991. An act for the relief of Adelaide Guerini;

H. R. 1095. An act for the relief of Dexter P. Cooper;

H. R. 1114. An act for the relief of Agnes Ewing Harter;

H. R. 1241. An act for the relief of Dorothy Krick, Ernest Krick, and the estate of James Albert Ferren, deceased;

H. R. 2021. An act to provide time credits for substitutes in the motor-vehicle service;

H. R. 2738. An act to extend the provisions of the 40-hour law for postal employees to watchmen and messengers in the Postal Service;

H. R. 3192. An act for the relief of Clifford L. Bonn;

H. R. 3217. An act for the relief of Vincent Chicco;

H. R. 3421. An act to quiet title and possession with respect to certain lands in Tuscumbia, Ala.;

H. R. 4343. An act to amend section 77B of the act entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States", approved July 1, 1898, as amended;

H. R. 4378. An act for the relief of William Sperry;

H. R. 4527. An act for the relief of Luther Jennings Workman, a minor;

H. R. 4536. An act to provide for the holding of an examination by the Board of Optometry of the District of Columbia for a license to practice optometry in the District of Columbia for Welton B. Hutton;

H. R. 4605. An act relating to the accommodations for holding court at Shawnee, Okla.;

H. R. 4642. An act to provide for the conveyance by the United States to the county of Beaufort, S. C., of the Hunting Island Lighthouse Reservation;

MUNICIPAL BANKRUPTCY

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Order of Business 936 on the calendar, House bill 5969, the municipal bankruptcy bill.

Mr. BURKE. Mr. President, it is a very important piece of legislation that is covered by the motion made by the Senator from Florida. To me it seems to be unwise and dangerous legislation. I have no doubt there are sufficient votes to pass the measure, but I should not like to see it acted upon by such a small number of Senators as are now present. Accordingly, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Copeland	La Follette	Radcliffe
Andrews	Davis	Lee	Reynolds
Ashurst	Dieterich	Lewis	Schwartz
Austin	Donahey	Lodge	Schwellenbach
Barkley	Ellender	Logan	Sheppard
Bilbo	Frazier	Lonergan	Shipstead
Black	George	Lundeen	Smith
Bone	Gerry	McAdoo	Steiwer
Borah	Gillette	McCarran	Thomas, Okla.
Bridges	Glass	McGill	Thomas, Utah
Brown, Mich.	Green	McKellar	Townsend
Brown, N. H.	Guffey	McNary	Truman
Bulkley	Hale	Maloney	Tydings
Bulow	Harrison	Minton	Vandenberg
Burke	Hatch	Murray	Van Nuys
Byrd	Herring	Neely	Wagner

Capper	Holt	O'Mahoney	Wheeler
Caraway	Hughes	Overton	White
Chavez	Johnson, Calif.	Pepper
Clark	Johnson, Colo.	Pittman
Connally	King	Pope

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Eighty-five Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Florida [Mr. PEPPER] that the Senate proceed to the consideration of House bill 5969, Calendar No. 936.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 5969) to amend an act entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States", approved July 1, 1898, and acts amendatory thereof and supplementary thereto, which had been reported from the Committee on the Judiciary without amendment.

The bill is as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the act of July 1, 1898, entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States", as approved July 1, 1898, and acts amendatory thereof and supplementary thereto be, and they are hereby, amended by adding thereto a new chapter, to be designated "chapter X", to be and read as follows:

"CHAPTER X

"ADDITIONAL JURISDICTION

"SECTION 81. This act and proceedings thereunder are found and declared to be within the subject of bankruptcies and, in addition to the jurisdiction otherwise exercised, courts of bankruptcy shall exercise original jurisdiction as provided in this chapter for the composition of indebtedness of, or authorized by, any of the taxing agencies or instrumentalities hereinafter named, payable (a) out of assessments or taxes, or both, levied against and constituting liens upon property in any of said taxing agencies or instrumentalities, or (b) out of property acquired by foreclosure of any such assessments or taxes or both, or (c) out of income derived by such taxing agencies or instrumentalities from the sale of water or power or both, or (d) from any combination thereof; (1) Drainage, drainage and levee, levee, levee and drainage, reclamation, water, irrigation, or other similar districts, commonly designated as agricultural improvement districts or local improvement districts, organized or created for the purpose of constructing, improving, maintaining, and operating certain improvements or projects devoted chiefly to the improvement of lands therein for agricultural purposes; or (2) local improvement districts such as sewer, paving, sanitary, or other similar districts, organized or created for the purposes designated by their respective names; or (3) local improvement districts such as road, highway, or other similar districts, organized or created for the purpose of grading, paving, or otherwise improving public streets, roads, or highways; or (4) public-school districts or public-school authorities organized or created for the purpose of constructing, maintaining, and operating public schools or public-school facilities; or (5) local improvement districts such as port, navigation, or other similar districts, organized or created for the purpose of constructing, improving, maintaining, and operating ports and port facilities; or (6) any city, town, village, borough, township, or other municipality: Provided, however, That if any provision of this chapter, or the application thereof to any such taxing agency or district or class thereof or to any circumstance, is held invalid, the remainder of the chapter, or the application of such provision to any other or different taxing agency or district or class thereof or to any other or different circumstances, shall not be affected by such holding.

"DEFINITION

"SEC. 82. The following terms as used in this chapter, unless a different meaning is plainly required by the context, shall be construed as follows:

"That the term 'petitioner' shall include any taxing agency or instrumentality referred to in section 81 of this chapter.

"The term 'security' shall include bonds, notes, judgments, claims, and demands, liquidated or unliquidated, and other evidences of indebtedness, either secured or unsecured, and certificates of beneficial interest in property.

"The term 'creditor' means the holder of a security or securities.

"Any agency of the United States holding securities acquired pursuant to contract with any petitioner under this chapter shall be deemed a creditor in the amount of the full face value thereof.

"The term 'security affected by the plan' means a security as to which the rights of its holder are proposed to be adjusted or modified materially by the consummation of a composition agreement.

"The singular number includes the plural and the masculine gender the feminine.

"COMPOSITIONS

"SEC. 83. (a) Any petitioner may file a petition hereunder stating that the petitioner is insolvent or unable to meets its debts as they mature and that it desires to effect a plan for the composition of its debts. The petition shall be filed with the court in whose territorial jurisdiction the petitioner or the major part thereof is located, and, in the case of any unincorporated tax or special-assessment district having no officials of its own, the petition may be filed by its governing authority or the board or body having authority to levy taxes or assessments to meet the obligations to be affected by the plan of composition. The petition shall be accompanied by payment to the clerk of a filing fee of $100, which shall be in lieu of the fees required to be collected by the clerk under other applicable chapters of the Uniform Bankruptcy Act of 1898, as amended. The petition shall state that a plan of composition has been prepared, is filed and submitted with the petition, and that creditors of the petitioner owning not less than 51 percent in amount of the securities affected by the plan (excluding, however, any such securities owned, held, or controlled by the petitioner), have accepted it in writing. There shall be filed with the petition a list of all known creditors of the petitioner, together with their addresses so far as known to petitioner, and description of their respective securities showing separately those who have accepted the plan of composition, together with their separate addresses, the contents of which list shall not constitute admissions by the petitioner in a proceeding under this chapter or otherwise. Upon the filing of such a petition the judge shall enter an order either approving it as properly filed under this chapter, if satisfied that such petition complies with this chapter and has been filed in good faith, or dismissing it, if not so satisfied.

"The 'plan of composition', within the meaning of this chapter, may include provisions modifying or altering the rights of creditors generally, or of any class of them, secured or unsecured, either through issuance of new securities of any character, or otherwise, and may contain such other provisions and agreements not inconsistent with this chapter as the parties may desire.

"No creditor shall be deemed to be affected by any plan of composition unless the same shall affect his interest materially, and in case any controversy shall arise as to whether any creditor or class of creditors shall or shall not be affected, the issue shall be determined by the judge, after hearing, upon notice to the parties interested.

"For all purposes of this chapter any creditor may act in person or by an attorney or a duly authorized agent or committee. Where any committee, organization, group, or individual shall assume to act for or on behalf of creditors, such committee, organization, group, or individual shall first file with the court in which the proceeding is pending a list of the creditors represented by such committee, organization, group, or individual, giving the name and address of each such creditor, together with a statement of the amount, class, and character of the security held by him, and attach thereto copies of the instrument or instruments in writing signed by the owners of the bonds showing their authority, and shall file with the list a copy of the contract or agreement entered into between such committee, organization, group, or individual and the creditors represented by it or them, which contract shall disclose all compensation to be received, directly or indirectly, by such committee, organization, group, or individual, which agreed compensation shall be subject to modification and approval by the court.

"(b) Upon approving the petition as properly filed, or at any time thereafter, the judge shall enter an order fixing a time and place for a hearing on the petition, which shall be held within 90 days from the date of said order, and shall provide in the order that notice shall be given to creditors of the filing of the petition and its approval as being properly filed, and of the time and place for the hearing. The judge shall prescribe the form of the notice, which shall specify the manner in which claims and interests of creditors shall be filed or evidenced, on or before the date fixed for the hearing. The notice shall be published at least once a week for 3 successive weeks in at least one newspaper of general circulation published within the jurisdiction of the court, and in such other paper or papers having a general circulation among bond dealers and bondholders as may be designated by the court, and the judge may require that it may be published in such other publication as he may deem proper. The judge shall require that a copy of the notice be mailed, postpage prepaid, to each creditor of the petitioner named in the petition at the address of such creditor given in the petition, or, if no address is given in the petition for any creditor and the address of such creditor cannot with reasonable diligence be ascertained, then a copy of the notice shall be mailed, postage prepaid, to such creditor addressed to him as the judge may prescribe. All expense of giving notice as herein provided shall be paid by the petitioner. The notice shall be first published, and the mailing of copies thereof shall be completed at least 60 days before the date fixed for the hearing.

"At any time not less than 10 days prior to the time fixed for the hearing, any creditor of the petitioner affected by the plan may file an answer to the petition controverting any of the material allegations therein and setting up any objection he may have to the plan of composition. The judge may continue the hearing from time to time if the percentage of creditors required herein for the confirmation of the plan shall not have accepted the plan in writing, or if for any reason satisfactory to the judge the hearing is not completed on the date fixed therefor. At the hearing, or a continuance thereof, the judge shall decide the issues presented and unless the material allegations of the petition are sustained, shall dismiss the proceedings. If, however, the material allegations of the petition are sustained, the judge shall classify the creditors according to the nature of their respective claims and interests: Provided, however, That the holders of all claims, regardless of the manner in which they are evidenced, which are payable without preference out of funds derived from the same source or sources shall be of one class. The holders of claims for the payment of which specific property or revenues are pledged, or which are otherwise given preference as provided by law, shall accordingly constitute a separate class or classes of creditors.

"At the hearing, or a continuance thereof, the judge may refer any matters to a special master for consideration, the taking of testimony, and a report upon special issues, and may allow reasonable compensation for the services performed by such special master, and the actual and necessary expenses incurred in connection with the proceeding, including compensation for services rendered and expenses incurred in obtaining the deposit of securities and the preparation of the plan, whether such work may have been done by the petitioner or by committees or other representatives of creditors, and may allow reasonable compensation for the attorneys or agents of any of the foregoing, and may apportion the amount so determined among the parties to the proceeding as may be just: Provided, however, That no fees, compensation, reimbursement, or other allowances for attorneys, agents, committees, or other representatives of creditors shall be assessed against the petitioner or paid from any revenues, property, or funds of the petitioner except in the manner and in such sums, if any, as may be provided for in the plan of composition. An appeal may be taken from any order making such determination or award to the United States circuit court of appeals for the circuit in which the proceeding under this chapter is pending, independently of other appeals which may be taken in the proceeding, and such appeal shall be heard summarily.

"On 30 days' notice by any creditor to petitioner, the judge, if he finds that the proceeding has not been prosecuted with reasonable diligence, or that it is unlikely that the plan will be accepted by said proportion of creditors, may dismiss the proceeding.

"(c) Upon entry of the order fixing the time for the hearing, or at any time thereafter, the judge may upon notice enjoin or stay, pending the determination of the matter, the commencement or continuation of suits against the petitioner, or any officer or inhabitant thereof, on account of the securities affected by the plan, or to enforce any lien or to enforce the levy of taxes or assessments for the payment of obligations under any such securities, or any suit or process to levy upon or enforce against any property acquired by the petitioner through foreclosure of any such tax lien or special assessment lien, except where rights have become vested, and may enter an interlocutory decree providing that the plan shall be temporarily operative with respect to all securities affected thereby and that the payment of the principal or interest, or both, of such securities shall be temporarily postponed or extended or otherwise readjusted in the same manner and upon the same terms as if such plan had been finally confirmed and put into effect, and upon the entry of such decree the principal or interest, or both, of such securities which have otherwise become due, or which would otherwise become due, shall not be or become due or payable, and the payment of all such securities shall be postponed during the period in which such decree shall remain in force, but shall not, by any order or decree, in the proceeding or otherwise, interfere with (a) any of the political or governmental powers of the petitioner; or (b) any of the property or revenues of the petitioner necessary for essential governmental purposes; or (c) any income-producing property, unless the plan of composition so provides.

"(d) The plan of composition shall not be confirmed until it has been accepted in writing, by or on behalf of creditors holding at least two-thirds of the aggregate amount of claims of all classes affected by such plan and which have been admitted by the petitioner or allowed by the judge, but excluding claims owned, held, or controlled by the petitioner: Provided, however, That it shall not be requisite to the confirmation of the plan that there be such acceptance by any creditor or class of creditors (a) whose claims are not affected by the plan; or (b) if the plan makes provision for the payment of their claims in cash in full; or (c) if provision is made in the plan for the protection of the interests, claims, or lien of such creditors or class of creditors.

"(e) At the conclusion of the hearing, the judge shall make written findings of fact and his conclusions of law thereon, and shall enter an interlocutory decree confirming the plan if satisfied that (1) it is fair, equitable, and for the best interests of the creditors and does not discriminate unfairly in favor of any creditor or class of creditors; (2) complies with the provisions of this chapter; (3) has been accepted and approved as required by the provisions of subdivision (d) of this section; (4) all amounts to be paid by the petitioner for services or expenses incident to the composition have been fully disclosed and are reasonable; (5) the offer of the plan and its acceptance are in good faith; and (6) the petitioner is authorized by law to take all action necessary to be taken by it to carry out the plan. If not so satisfied, the judge shall enter an order dismissing the proceeding.

"Before a plan is confirmed, changes and modifications may be made therein, with the approval of the judge after hearing upon such notice to creditors as the judge may direct, subject to the right of any creditor who shall previously have accepted the plan to withdraw his acceptance, within a period to be fixed by the judge and after such notice as the judge may direct, if, in the opinion of the judge, the change or modification will be materially adverse to the interest of such creditor, and if any creditor having such right of withdrawal shall not withdraw within such period, he shall be deemed to have accepted the plan as changed or modified: Provided, however, That the plan as changed or modified shall comply with all the provisions of this chapter and shall have been accepted in writing by the petitioner. Either party may appeal from the interlocutory decree as in equity cases. In case said interlocutory decree shall prescribe a time within which any action is to be taken, the running of such time shall be suspended in case of an appeal until final determination thereof. In case said decree is affirmed, the judge may grant such time as he may deem proper for the taking of such action.

"(f) If an interlocutory decree confirming the plan is entered as herein provided, the plan and said decree of confirmation shall become and be binding upon all creditors affected by the plan, if within the time prescribed in the interlocutory decree, or such additional time as the judge may allow, the money, securities, or other consideration to be delivered to the creditors under the terms of the plan shall have been deposited with the court or such disbursing agent as the court may appoint or shall otherwise be made available for the creditors. And thereupon the court shall enter a final decree determining that the petitioner has made available for the creditors affected by the plan the consideration provided for therein and is discharged from all debts and liabilities dealt with in the plan except as provided therein, and that the plan is binding upon all creditors affected by it, whether secured or unsecured, and whether or not their claims have been filed or evidenced, and, if filed or evidenced, whether or not allowed, including creditors who have not, as well as those who have, accepted it.

"(g) A certified copy of the final decree, or of any other decree or order entered by the court or the judge thereof, in a proceeding under this chapter, shall be evidence of the jurisdiction of the court, the regularity of the proceedings, and the fact that the decree or order was made. A certified copy of an order providing for the transfer of any property dealt with by the plan shall be evidence of the transfer of title accordingly and, if recorded as conveyances are recorded, shall impart the same notice that a deed, if recorded, would impart.

"(h) This chapter shall not be construed as to modify or repeal any prior, existing statute relating to the refinancing or readjustment of indebtedness of municipalities, political subdivisions, or districts: Provided, however, That the initiation of proceedings or the filing of a petition under section 80 shall not constitute a bar to the same taxing agency or instrumentality initiating a new proceeding under section 81 thereof.

"(i) Nothing contained in this chapter shall be construed to limit or impair the power of any State to control, by legislation or otherwise, any municipality or any political subdivision of or in such State in the exercise of its political or governmental powers, including expenditures therefor.

"TERMINATION OF JURISDICTION

"SEC. 84. Jurisdiction conferred on any court by section 81 shall not be exercised by such court after June 30, 1940, except in respect of any proceeding initiated by filing a petition under section 83 (a) on or prior to June 30, 1940."

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I am sure Senators recognize this as what is known as the municipal bankruptcy bill, Calendar No. 936. I am sure all of us are aware, also, that except for certain changes which have been made, this is the same subject with which the Seventy-third Congress dealt in the passage of the first municipal bankruptcy bill.

Various drainage districts, road districts, levee districts, school districts, municipalities, cities, and towns of certain sorts were engaged in reorganization under the provisions of that act of the Seventy-third Congress when the Supreme Court declared the act unconstitutional in the Ashton case. Since that time the House has had the matter reinaugurated, and has given quite extensive consideration to the subject, having long public hearings, and many able witnesses have testified at those hearings. I believe the defects in the original act have been cured in the House.

The House has passed the bill. It came to the Senate, and has been approved and favorably reported by the Senator from Illinois [Mr. DIETERICH] on behalf of the Committee on the Judiciary. I think, therefore, it is not necessary to go into a protracted discussion of the merits of the bill.

I wish to add only that this matter is of tremendous importance to States like my own, where a number of the special tax districts or political subdivisions of the State—which are not instruments of sovereignty, but are for the purpose of providing certain communities with certain necessary improvements—became so heavily involved, particularly during the boom times, that they incurred burdens of debt which it became practically impossible for them to pay. As a result, they have had no credit, and in many instances they have not been able to carry on even the functions of government which it was their duty to carry on; and the economic life of whole communities has been stagnated on account of the burden of debt which has been incurred, but which they were unable to discharge.

When there were no proceedings available by which these debts could be composed, it was possible for a few creditors who were almost what might be called of the "chiseling" type, or a few bondholders who wanted 100 cents on the dollar regardless of the ability of the people to pay or the percentage that other creditors were able to obtain, by taking advantage of technical court proceedings to prevent any kind of settlement or compromise. This bill makes possible in a bankruptcy court the composition of those debts in a fair and equitable manner, and an adjustment and reorganization of these obligations consistent with the ability of the subdivision to meet its obligations.

Mr. BURKE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PEPPER. Certainly.

Mr. BURKE. Will the Senator explain to us on what grounds the original municipal bankruptcy act was declared invalid by the Supreme Court, and follow that by showing how the evils pointed out by the Supreme Court in the opinion declaring the original act unconstitutional have been cured by the pending measure?

Mr. PEPPER. The chief point made by the majority opinion—and the Senate will recall that it was a 5-to-4 decision holding the former act unconstitutional—was that the sovereign immunity of the several States was invaded by the Congress in the exercise of its power to deal with bankruptcy, and therefore that the act was unconstitutional, the court in that instance construing the power exercised by the Congress to relate primarily to dealing with political subdivisions which were governmental in their nature and character, and not what we call levee districts or drainage districts which were not subdivisions of the State, like counties, but were creatures of the State, almost like private corporations. They were quasi-municipal corporations.

In the new bill two things have been done which I think have met the Court's objections. The first one is that any possible doubt that this bill include involuntary proceedings has been removed. It is clear from the language of the bill itself that only by consent of the governmental subdivision may the proceedings be inaugurated. It must be done by the voluntary petition of the drainage district itself, for instance; and in no case may one of these instrumentalities be brought into court against its will. So long as that immunity is preserved there is no transgression upon the State's sovereign immunity. In fact, as was pointed out by Mr. Justice Cardozo in the minority opinion in the Ashton case:

> Sufficient reasons do not appear for excluding political subdivisions from the bankruptcy jurisdiction if the jurisdiction is so exerted as to maintain the equilibrium between State and National power. Persuasive analogies tell us that consent will preserve a balance threatened with derangement.

So in this bill there is no provision for the exercise of this authority except in instances where the instrumentality itself has consented by bringing the petition into court.

Mr. KING. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. THOMAS of Utah in the chair). Does the Senator from Florida yield to the Senator from Utah?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield.

Mr. KING. A municipality, or quasicorporation, which desired to free itself from its debts might have no moral scruples which would prevent it from going into court to seek relief from its legal obligations. So I do not see what protection a creditor would have if the option rested with the defaulting corporation.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I am afraid the Senator from Utah did not get the purport of the question of the Senator from Nebraska. The Senator from Nebraska was asking upon what ground the Supreme Court of the United States held the original act unconstitutional. Of course, it could not have been on the ground that the creditors were being interfered with, because in every bankruptcy proceeding the creditors are affected in the same manner. The basis of the decision was that the immunity of sovereign States was being interfered with by the Congress putting them into a bankruptcy court when their prestige and sovereignty, perhaps, excluded them from the exercise of such power. I was pointing out to the Senator from Nebraska that in the pending bill we were restricting the act to a case where the political subdivision voluntarily comes in——

Mr. KING. The Senator means cities?

Mr. PEPPER. Yes. If they voluntarily come in, the Federal Government is not invading their immunity, because they are throwing that off themselves, and coming in of their own accord. Therefore there is no question about State sovereignty being invaded.

The first bill included counties, which are, in the opinion of a great many people, actual instrumentalities of sovereignty, agencies through which the State carries on the sovereign functions of government, which is not true with respect to drainage districts or levee districts or road or school districts.

There was no saving clause in the first act, but in the pending bill, the latter part of section 81, counties are put in the last category and given a separate category. Then there is a saving clause, reading as follows:

Provided, however, That if any provision of this chapter, or the application thereof to any such taxing agency or district or class thereof or to any circumstance, is held invalid, the remainder of the chapter, or the application of such provision to any other or different taxing agency or district or class thereof or to any other or different circumstances, shall not be affected by such holding.

It is the considered sentiment of the House Committee on the Judiciary and of the Senate Committee on the Judiciary, and it certainly is my opinion, that the objections of the Court have therefore been amply met. I might add that, considering the present personnel of the Supreme Court, the opinion of the Justices, if adhered to as formerly expressed, would be 4 to 4, because Justice Van Devanter joined in the majority opinion, which was the opinion in which the law was held unconstitutional.

I think all doubt has been removed, that the objections which existed to the original act have been met by the corrected bill.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield.

Mr. KING. Is the Senator predicating his position upon technical legal grounds, or is he including within the considerations which seem to me to be involved moral grounds, the prestige of the States and counties and municipalities? Does the Senator believe that it is advantageous to have municipalities, cities, counties, and school districts repudiate their debts, and go into the bankruptcy courts? Does not the Senator think that is a form of repudiation of a governmental character which tends to undermine public credit, and one which will have serious repercussions in all of the private activities and in the business relations which exist throughout the country?

Mr. DIETERICH. Mr. President, will the Senator from Florida yield?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield.

Mr. DIETERICH. I call the attention of the Senator to the fact that the general impression is that this bill permits municipalities and other taxing bodies covered by the bill to repudiate their obligations. That is not correct. They have nothing to do with the matter of repudiating their obligations, but the holders of those obligations representing 51 percent of the indebtedness must first file their plan of composition with the petition in the original case, and after the court has determined the question and ordered a hearing, then they must have the holders of two-thirds of the obligations consent before a final decree is given. So a municipality cannot take advantage and relieve itself of its debts, but the debtors who find that a taxing body, not necessarily a municipal taxing body, but any taxing body, is unable to meet the obligations, three-fourths of them may then consent to a composition, and 25 percent cannot prevent that composition from being perfected and effected. So assertion that the object is to permit the taxing body or the municipality to relieve itself and go into bankruptcy is hardly a fair statement of the purpose of the bill.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator from Florida yield?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield.

Mr. KING. It seems to me it is an encouragement to repudiation. I do not care to modify the statement which I made. If municipalities are in debt, knowing that some of their creditors are pressing them, knowing that if they can get three-fourths, or two-thirds, or any part of their creditors to join in forcing them into court, they may secure relief, it seems to me there will not be an invitation for such municipalities to exercise the taxing power which they have or to resort to other measures for defending the prestige and the honor and credit of the municipality, but that they would be rather encouraged, where there was large indebtedness, to take such step as the bill offers them in order to evade the responsibility which rested upon them.

I do not know whether in perhaps the technical sense it is repudiation, but the effect is that the municipalities, under this bill, could escape the payment of the full amount of their obligations. We know it is a fact that insurance companies, banks, widows and orphans' estates have invested millions and hundreds of millions of dollars in municipal securities, and to that extent they would suffer as the result of the application of the proposed law.

Mr. DIETERICH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield further?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield.

Mr. DIETERICH. The act would expire in 1940. It is sought to meet a condition which now exists in special assessment districts and in local improvement districts, where they are not able, and their property is not able, to satisfy the indebtedness, and it would give them an opportunity to do so. It would prevent a small minority of obligation owners holding up the best payment and the best composition that could possibly be made by holding out and insisting on full payment.

I am speaking of situations in reclamation projects along the Illinois and Mississippi Rivers. I am speaking of local improvement projects in cities which were put through at a time when money was more plentiful than it is now, and when property was of greater value than it is now. The shrinking of the value of the property and the disappointment in the matter of the operations of the reclamation projects have put them in a position where the holders of obligations must lose. This measure will give the holders of such obligations—not necessarily a municipality—some chance to salvage what they can, and let the municipality or the taxing body pay what it can.

Hearings may be had in the courts. If there is any collusion in the disposition of any asset, the court may have a hearing on that proposition and require them to pay as much as they can pay without destroying the taxing body or the municipality. So it is a matter for the relief of the obligation holders rather than for the relief of the municipality.

Mr. BURKE. Mr. President, will the Senator from Florida yield to me?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield.

Mr. BURKE. Does the Senator from Florida consider that it is a proper use of the English language to refer to the proposed act as a "bankruptcy" act?

Mr. PEPPER. I think it is, because it comes under the provision of the Constitution which authorizes the Congress to deal with bankruptcy.

Mr. BURKE. But bankruptcy, after all, I take it, means a situation where a debtor is unable to pay its debts. Certainly the Senator thinks of the bankruptcy law as one under which a debtor who wants to avail himself of the relief afforded by the bankruptcy law shall first surrender to the court all of his assets, to be distributed equitably among his creditors.

Mr. PEPPER. That is a provision of the general bankruptcy law, but in this instance these debtors do not have assets of the character which might be so divided.

Mr. BURKE. A municipality seeking to avail itself of the provisions of the law certainly would have assets, but they would not be touched in the first instance, would they?

Mr. PEPPER. They are assets used for governmental purposes, like a city hall, or something like that. But I wish to remind the Senator that the bill gives to the Federal district judge who sits as a court of bankruptcy in such matters the right to the full exercise of his discretion, to allow and to confirm only such settlements as are consistent with the ability of the debtor to pay, because in the language of section 83 the jurisdiction of the court pertains only to a debtor who is either insolvent or unable to meet his debts. If the debtors have valuable property which they are trying to withhold, that matter may be taken into consideration by the court, and I am sure that the court will act appropriately.

Mr. BURKE. Would the Senator have any objection to changing the title of the bill to read somewhat as follows: "A bill to permit all improvident municipalities and other governmental subdivisions mentioned to escape their just obligations by paying something less than the full amount they owe"?

Mr. PEPPER. I am sorry, but I do not have any authority to make such a change in the first instance, and certainly I would not consent to it because that is not an appropriate and apt description of the purpose of the bill.

Mr. BURKE. Let me ask the Senator another question. Assume there is a case where 30 percent of the total amount of the obligations of some of these governmental subdivisions which are mentioned, say, school districts, is represented by a secured claim, if such a thing is possible. It might not be possible, in the case of a school district; but suppose 30 percent of the creditors have a secured claim, and 70 percent are unsecured. Is there any way in which the 30 percent under this bill can realize on the security if 70 percent of the creditors put through a composition of this matter?

Mr. DIETERICH. Mr. President, I beg the Senator's pardon, but I happened to be the chairman of the subcommittee which had this bill under consideration. We took that question into consideration in our discussion of the bill. Those who are secured take precedence of those who are not secured. The court determines all those matters, and if claims exist that have priority they are put in a different class than the others; and it is finally to those claims which have no security or priority that the bankruptcy provision will apply.

Mr. BURKE. Mr. President, one other question.

On page 5 of the bill, beginning in line 24, I read as follows:

> The "plan of composition", within the meaning of this chapter, may include provisions modifying or altering the rights of creditors generally, or of any class of them, secured or unsecured, either through issuance of new securities of any character or otherwise. * * *

If what the Senator now says is true in reference to classifying the claims and making special provision for those that are secured, as set forth in some other part of the bill, should not this statement on page 5 be changed?

Mr. DIETERICH. My answer to that question is that I do not think it should, because the entire bill will be construed as one act, and this only means a matter of adjustment between creditors of the same class. If the Senator will recall that in the last session of Congress, when a similar bill was up for consideration——

Mr. BURKE. I voted against that bill, and I hope to vote against the pending measure also.

Mr. DIETERICH. At the last session of Congress a similar bill was proposed; but those matters were discussed at that time. I think the Senator will find that as the bill affects creditors of each class, no injustice is done one class as to being advanced over another. That matter is provided for by way of adjustments between creditors of the same class, and not between creditors of different classes.

Mr. BURKE. I know there is a provision in the bill attempting to cover that point, but it seems to me to deal with it inadequately. In reference to the statement that all claims, secured or unsecured, are subject to be modified or altered whenever 66⅔ percent of the claimants want it that way, I have very grave doubt whether 30 percent of claims that might happen to be fully secured would not find themselves in very great difficulty in realizing 100 cents on the dollar.

Mr. DIETERICH. Mr. President, I may state that my interest in this bill, outside of the interest in the local situation I have in my own State, is that some of these taxing bodies are absolutely not in a position to pay the full amount of the claim, because the property against which the tax is levied is not of sufficient value to permit them to do so. Therefore, they have no remedy whatever except to let the improvement project go back to the wild.

However, I was more interested in the measure by reason of the fact that the late majority leader, Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, was greatly interested in it, because the State of Arkansas had many improvement districts. This was really the bill in the present Congress in which he had more interest than any other bill; and I have no doubt, from my own conversations with him, that he would speak in favor of this proposition if he were now here. It is a bill that has merit, works no injustice on anyone, and leaves it to the creditors to determine whether or not they shall place its provisions in operation.

Mr. BURKE. Does not the Senator from Florida [Mr. PEPPER] feel that the passage of legislation of this kind will offer opportunities for wildcat and unsound and unwise financial programs by the classes of governmental units which are given by this legislation the opportunity of escaping from the full amount of their obligations?

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, in reply to the Senator's question I answer "No"; primarily because the purpose of the bill is to deal only with the emergency, and it is to be in force up to 1940, and then will expire by its own limitations.

Mr. BURKE. We have had some experience with emergency legislation, and have found it to be a matter of great difficulty to determine when the emergency ends. I think that argument loses a great deal of its force, because we all of us realize that once legislation of an emergency nature is passed, it becomes very difficult to terminate it so long as certain groups or individuals are benefiting therefrom.

May I ask one other question? Is it not very likely that municipalities and all governmental agencies that have occasion to borrow money and issue bonds will be obliged to pay a very heavy premium as the result of the passage of this bill by reason of the increased interest rates and other unfavorable conditions that lenders of money will feel it necessary to impose, because they will have before them at all times the possibility—in fact, the certainty, we may almost say—that when things do not go just right, the borrowing agency with a limited number of the creditors could go into court and wipe out a considerable part of its obligations? Will not that necessarily result in higher interest rates for financing?

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I wish to say that in my opinion it will not. I should like to remind the Senator from Nebraska that we have had a bankruptcy statute for a great many years available to private borrowers.

Mr. BURKE. I know; but, as I attempted to find out a moment ago, the essential part of that legislation was that no debtor could avail himself of it without going into court with clean hands and surrendering all of his property, except for certain exemptions of household goods, and so forth; whereas, in this bill, which is not a bankruptcy bill, the debtor surrenders nothing, but merely escapes from his obligation.

Mr. PEPPER. In the first place, Mr. President, a drainage district, for example, would have no property which it could surrender into court. It merely has the power to tax a certain number of acres of land in order to pay for a public improvement. What can such bodies bring into court and surrender insofar as they come in their quasi-corporate capacity? I should say that at least 70 percent of this bill is applicable to political corporate entities which have no property to surrender. They must surrender all they have.

In the case of municipalities, or in the case of any of these districts which do have any property, it is in the discretion of the Federal court, which tries the case as a court of bankruptcy, to make full investigation and to determine whether or not the petitioning debtor has made a full and fair disclosure of its ability to pay.

May I say just a word in answer to a previous question of the Senator from Nebraska. I wonder if the Senator regards the Private Bankruptcy Act as having raised the interest rates on money in all the years we have had a Bankruptcy Act on the statute books.

Mr. BURKE. I think, if the Bankruptcy Act did not require the debtor to surrender all of his assets into court, to be distributed among his creditors, it certainly would result in raising the interest rates. What the Senator has just said in reference to this bill applying to a group that have no assets is one of the reasons why I object seriously to calling it a Bankruptcy Act at all, because it does not seem to me to have the essential qualities of a Bankruptcy Act.

Mr. DIETERICH. Mr. President, I may call attention to the fact that these taxing bodies are the only ones that are given no relief. Even business under the Bankruptcy Act, as it now exists, has the right to reorganize, and the act is based upon the proposition that it is better to let a reorganization take place, charge them with what they can pay, let them contribute what they can, and let the business carry on, than absolutely to tie their hands and make them go back into the wild and disband. So far as raising interest rates is concerned, or as far as doing any public harm is concerned, there has been some good done under the Reorganization Act, section 77 (a)—more good than perhaps by any other act that has been passed—because it lets business that is unable to carry on with its present burden shrink itself to the place where it can continue the employment and continue the operation. This bill simply gives these taxing districts the same privilege.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill is before the Senate and open to further amendment.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I am in sympathy with the position taken by the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. BURKE] with respect to this bill. There might be some reason for passing it if it were divided and made applicable to drainage districts and organizations of like character, but I cannot bring my mind to accept the view that cities and counties which have sold their bonds to widows, orphans, estates, insurance companies, and others should be permitted to adopt a policy that would legalize their repudiation—for that is what it means—of their obligations. Drainage districts and some corporations that are not governmental and are outside the category of political subdivisions and governmental agencies of the State might stand in a different position; and I might be willing to vote for a bill that provided for organizations and agencies of that character that are private in contradistinction to public organizations and political divisions, such as counties and States.

Mr. President, we all know that the cities have sold to the public several billion dollars' worth of securities; the exact amount has escaped my mind for the moment; but the cities, counties, and States have outstanding bonds amounting to nineteen and one-quarter billion dollars. They sold bonds to make needed public improvements; and these bonds were purchased because the people had confidence in the States, cities, and counties and the other political subdivisions, and they sold them at a lower rate of interest than that paid by private corporations and individuals. It seems to me that it is important that the credit of the States, counties, and municipalities should be preserved.

There are some who believe that with $38,000,000,000 of Federal indebtedness the credit of the United States is jeopardized. We hear from time to time appeals for economy in the Government and for policies that will compel a reduction of the expenses of the Federal Government; but the appeals fall upon deaf ears and the Government increases its expenditures and multiplies its organizations and bureaus.

Mr. DIETERICH. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Utah yield to the Senator from Illinois?

Mr. KING. I yield.

Mr. DIETERICH. I want to call the Senator's attention to the fact that, so far as this bill involves cities and counties and municipal corporations other than those quasi-municipal corporations, such as agricultural improvement districts, drainage districts, and such as that, every State has a law whereby they are permitted to incur indebtedness only to a certain percent of the assessed value of their property, and that law has always been a protection for the obligations issued by purely municipal corporations such as cities and counties. The pending bill certainly would not affect them, but would affect only those taxing bodies where a tax is levied against the real estate.

Mr. KING. I am unable to follow the argument of the Senator. If the bill before us does not affect counties, cities, and political subdivisions of States, why are they included in the bill? Obviously the purpose of this measure is to enable counties and cities to liquidate their indebtedness at a sum far less than their outstanding indebtedness, whether represented by bonds or other forms of indebtedness. I was about to state, Mr. President, when interrupted by my friend, that it is important to preserve the credit not only of the Nation but the credit of individuals and State governments and their political subdivisions. I cannot find constitutional warrant under the Bankruptcy Act for the Federal Government to enter sovereign States and declare that counties and cities, which are children of the States, shall be under national control and within the bankruptcy provisions of the Constitution.

It is admitted that the delinquent and defaulting State political subdivisions do not turn over their assets to their creditors and are to avail themselves of the bankruptcy law in order to avoid paying their full obligations. It is evident that the prestige of cities will be impaired, and that solemn obligations will be avoided. This means that creditors, whether widows and orphans and insurance companies and people who have loaned money, will be deprived of payment; and in the future there will be a hesitancy in loaning to cities and States and their political subdivisions. They will say Congress has passed a law under which repudiation may be permitted. I think the financial credit of an individual is to him a fountain of wealth and is the basis of his advancement and prosperity in life. The credit of a municipality, a State, or a county is important to each of those political subdivisions. Rob them of their credit and they will be unable to borrow even when emergencies arise; they will be placed in the category of faithless debtors; and their position in the financial world will be that of faithless debtors.

As I stated, if this bill were limited purely——

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Utah yield to the Senator from Illinois?

Mr. KING. Allow me to complete the sentence, then I will yield. If this bill were limited purely to organizations created for the purpose of draining swamps, or improvement of irrigation districts, a simple question might be presented.

Mr. LEWIS. I should like to ask my able friend from Utah wherein lies the difference in principle? If large corporate interests are allowed to be rescued, as they should be where they are in peril without wrong, under section 7b of the National Bankruptcy Act, why not municipalities that are trying to rescue themselves and find themselves in the same position as large institutions that seek loans from the R. F. C. and ask them to come to their rescue?

Mr. KING. Why does not the Senator say "and the small institutions"?

Mr. LEWIS. The large institutions are allowed to come to the court and get relief; where does my able friend see any distinction between that and small municipalities that seek rescue by the same law?

Mr. KING. If the Senator cannot distinguish between a private corporation, a private individual, and a sovereign State or a branch of a sovereign State, then I have not the acumen with which to enlighten him.

Mr. LEWIS. I am seeking to have made the distinction of which the Senator spoke just a moment ago as to credit and honor. As between the two, where is the difference in the principle of relief?

Mr. KING. Every lawyer knows the difference between a State and a county and a city and a private corporation or a private party. The private corporation is a creature of the State and the individual is subject to the laws of the State.

Mr. LEWIS. But we have just lent to the State of Utah——

Mr. KING. I do not yield to the Senator.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Utah declines to yield.

Mr. LEWIS. I am anxious, if the Senator seeks information, to give it to him.

Mr. KING. The Senator cannot give me any information that I am seeking.

Mr. LEWIS. That is because of the inability of my friend to have it imparted to him; his incapacity to receive it.

Mr. KING. The Senator, with all his ability, does not have any information to impart upon this subject. Any man who cannot differentiate between a sovereign State, county, or city, and a private party, I am sure, would be unable to enlighten this body on the question now under consideration.

Mr. LEWIS. Will not the Senator allow me to state that the Federal Government has given money to the cities——

Mr. KING. I do not yield to the Senator. If the Senator wants to speak, let him speak in his own time.

Mr. LEWIS. The Senator said we could not do this. I want to call attention to the fact that we have done it by law.

Mr. KING. The Senator's loquacity is greater than his knowledge.

Mr. LEWIS. It may be that my loquacity is greater than my knowledge in this respect, but I cannot see how my friend, who discloses no knowledge, should form such an opinion.

Mr. KING. The Senator is like a running brook; he "runs on forever", but carries but little weight upon his ponderous body.

Mr. President, I was observing, before being interrupted by the intellectual light from Illinois, that it is important to maintain the credit of our States and municipalities.

When the Constitution was drawn it provided for bankruptcy proceedings, but that did not contemplate, I respectfully submit, that States might take advantage of that provision of the Constitution. I think it is highly improper to suggest that sovereign States may go into the Federal courts, voluntarily or involuntarily, for the purpose of escaping obligations which they have contracted. I think the bill, if it were divided along the line indicated, might merit the approval of this body, but in its present form I shall feel constrained to vote against it.

Mr. DIETERICH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. KING. I yield.

Mr. DIETERICH. The Senator misconstrues the purpose of the bill. It is not intended to give municipalities the right to go into a bankruptcy court under the terms of section 81, as amended, which sets out the class of indebtedness against which relief may be given.

Mr. KING. I am familiar with it.

Mr. DIETERICH. If the Senator is, I do not understand his reasons. I do not understand his argument, because it is not based upon the bill.

The kinds of indebtedness against which relief may be granted are payable out of assessments or taxes—

> Levied against and constituting liens upon the property, or payable out of property acquired by foreclosure of any such assessments or taxes, or both, in any of the following-named taxing agencies or instrumentalities.

Mr. KING. Is the Senator directing attention to subdivision 6 on page 3 of the bill?

Mr. DIETERICH. No; I am directing attention first to what the terms of the bill cover and then the Senator must consider section 6 together with it. They cannot be separated. They are in the same section. The section relates to assessments or taxes "levied against and constituting liens upon the property", and then "or payable out of property acquired by foreclosure of any such assessments or taxes or both", and so forth.

That is the particular indebtedness of the cities and municipalities, of the cities and counties, against which this bill would give relief—not against any future assessments they might make but against taxes which actually had been assessed on the property.

The court in determining this will determine the value of the property and will determine whether or not that property is of sufficient value to pay the entire amount or so much thereof as is legally levied against it. If the court finds it is, then they cannot take advantage of the act, but if the court finds that the property has been assessed more than it is worth, that it will simply cause the foreclosure of homes in the municipalities and cause misery and yield no income, then the provisions of the bill cannot be invoked.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, section 81 to which the Senator refers points out the various agencies and organizations that may have the benefit of the bill and proceeding down to page 3 we find:

> Public-school districts or public-school authorities organized or created for the purpose of constructing, maintaining, and operating public schools or public-school facilities.

They may take advantage of the provisions of the bill. Then we find:

> Local improvement districts such as port, navigation, or other similar districts, organized or created for the purpose of constructing, improving, maintaining, and operating ports and port facilities; or (6) any city, town, village, borough, township, or other municipality.

So that if there are within the city or political subdivision any taxing agencies or taxing subdivisions and they have issued bonds or contracted indebtedness, obviously they may take advantage of the provisions of the bill. Certainly it reaches beyond mere suburban districts where they have drainage districts, for instance. It reaches into the cities, and if bonds have been issued for schoolhouses or improvements of that kind, for sewers or for any proper municipal purpose, then those bonds, of course, are municipal bonds and are liens upon the property within the taxing district, whether it be the entire municipality or only a segment of the municipality. The municipality could repudiate its bonds—that is, the bonds of this particular section, if it did not embrace the entire school district of any municipality—in the event it was brought into court voluntarily, if not involuntarily.

So it seems to me the measure before us goes further than the first act of Congress which was passed providing for the bankruptcy of individuals or private corporations, and seeks to give the same benefits to municipalities.

We know that for a number of years representatives of cities of Florida, and I am sure a number of cities of Michigan, appeared before the Judiciary Committee of the Senate asking for a bankruptcy law under which the cities within the States to which I have referred, as well as a number of other States, might claim the benefit of the Bankruptcy Act and be absolved from the payment of their obligations.

May I say in passing, in reply to a statement made by my friend from Florida, notwithstanding the fact the city may not have a great deal of property—the Senator instanced the fire department and the city hall and what not—it does have the potential authority and power to tax. It can tax, as far as the laws of the States permit, the inhabitants of the municipality to meet its obligations. My recollection is there were a number of cases in Kansas and Nebraska where cities were sold, the entire city was sold, because bonds had been issued for the construction of railroads and the cities had defaulted in the payment of the bonds and would not levy taxes for the purpose of paying the interest. Orders were issued by the court for the sale of the entire municipality. As to the validity of those proceeding I make no comment.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. KING. I yield.

Mr. WALSH. I should like to ask the Senator from Utah or the Senator from Nebraska or the Senator from Florida, whoever is most familiar with the situation, what is the procedure required to get the benefits of relief under the terms of the bill? Can the taxing agency or the municipality itself petition the court for relief?

Mr. KING. As I understand, the creditors are the ones who initiate the proceeding.

Mr. WALSH. The municipal authorities cannot do so?

Mr. PEPPER. They can.

Mr. WALSH. So the municipality itself can separately petition the court?

Mr. PEPPER. Yes; it can.

Mr. WALSH. And when it petitions the court, it must file a composition signed by the creditors who have indebtedness against the municipality to the amount of 51 percent?

Mr. PEPPER. That is correct.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I surrender the floor.

Mr. WALSH. In the petition of which the court's approval is asked, do the creditors indicate the amount of money they are willing to accept in compromise of their debt?

Mr. PEPPER. The procedure, in a nutshell, is this:

The city or the subdivision will itself, together with such creditors as are in contact with it—at least 51 percent of them—agree on a plan of composition, the best they can offer. After 51 percent of the creditors have agreed to that plan of composition, the debtor petitions the court and submits the plan to the court. Then the court gives notice to all the creditors, and then all the creditors have a full and fair opportunity to be heard before the court. The court then determines the truthfulness of the matters alleged in the petition, the ability of the municipality or the subdivision to pay, and decides what is a fair amount for the debtor to pay under the circumstances, and eventually makes a decree. Then 66⅔ percent of the creditors, in case of a district other than a municipality, must consent to the final plan, and in case of a municipality 75 percent must consent before the plan can become effective.

Mr. WALSH. May the court increase the amount agreed upon in settlement by the creditors who represent 51 percent of the debt?

Mr. PEPPER. It may.

Mr. WALSH. Would not the objection of the Senator from Utah, and perhaps in part the objection of the Senator from Nebraska, be met if the right to petition were entirely confined to the creditors?

Mr. PEPPER. No; I think not. In substance, the procedure provided for amounts to a petition by the creditors, because unless there is a composition that is satisfactory to 51 percent of the creditors, the petition cannot be filed.

Mr. WALSH. As I interpret the objection of the Senator from Utah, it is in part based upon the possibility of cities, municipalities, and taxing agencies seeking opportunities to rid themselves of their debts by petitioning the courts for relief under this bill. Of course, that objection would be eliminated in large part if the initial step had to be taken by the creditors.

Mr. PEPPER. That is, in substance, the case here, because the municipality cannot present the petition unless it is accompanied by a plan of composition signed by 51 percent of the creditors. So, in substance, the present bill meets the Senator's suggestion.

Mr. WALSH. That is important. From something the Senator from Illinois said I received the impression that there was some restriction upon the freedom of the municipality to go into court and obtain this relief.

Mr. PEPPER. That is true.

Mr. WALSH. The fact is that when a municipality petitions the court for this relief the petition must be accompanied by a plan of composition agreed to by a number of creditors who represent 51 percent of the total indebtedness of the taxing agency.

Mr. PEPPER. That is correct.

Mr. BURKE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield at that point?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield.

Mr. BURKE. In further answer to what the Senator from Massachusetts has just said, I think it should be stated that the provision for the municipality to file the petition is a subterfuge to evade the decision of the Supreme Court invalidating the act as an imposition upon the sovereignty of the States, it being felt that if the municipality comes in it will be its voluntary act, and so that infringement upon the sovereignty of the States would be avoided. That is the reason why it was provided that the municipality should take this action.

Mr. WALSH. Would the decision of the court have been different, in the opinion of the Senator from Nebraska, had the municipality obtained the consent of the State before it sought the relief desired under the former act? Was there an objection on the ground that the municipality or the taxing agency which was a subdivision of a State proceeded to use the relief provided in the former act without the sovereign State of which the municipality was a subdivision having any knowledge of it or consenting to it?

Mr. PEPPER. If the Senator from Nebraska will permit me to answer the question, in the Ashton case the State, by general statute, gave its consent to the municipality to petition; and in this case the present bill contemplates no instance in which the unit may go into court without the authority of the sovereign State.

Mr. WALSH. So that the relief sought under this bill cannot be enjoyed by municipalities until they have the consent of the legislature of the State?

Mr. PEPPER. That is true.

I hope, Mr. President, the Senate will see fit to enact this very helpful and necessary measure.

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. President, much of what I intended to say has already been covered by my colleague [Mr. PEPPER] and by the distinguished Senator from Illinois [Mr. DIETERICH], who is chairman of the subcommittee to which this bill was referred in the Senate.

On this bill, House bill 5969, hearings of considerable length were held in the House committee before the House passed the bill, and hearings have been had before the Senate committee. Every provision of the bill, I understand, has been carefully gone over in the committees. The bill now meets, as I understand, the objections which were raised and discussed when the former act on the same subject was before the Supreme Court of the United States.

The pending bill provides for a composition of debts by creditors by petition of municipal and other taxing units. It provides how the petition shall be made and that the petition shall state that a plan of composition has been prepared, filed, and submitted with the petition and that the creditors of the petitioner owning not less than 51 percent in amount of the securities affected by the plan—excluding, however, any such securities owned, held, or controlled by the petitioner—have accepted its terms in writing.

It occurs to me that no more just submission could be had for municipalities and taxing units that have suffered practical bankruptcy. It is true that this measure will affect many taxing units in Florida. Due to the infamous Florida boom there are many municipalities in Florida that have not been able to meet their bond and other obligations. In one instance I happen to know about, a town was required by mandamus proceedings to levy a tax of 300 mills to meet current indebtedness. That, of course, was impossible. In a period of a few years it would wipe out the property.

This bill is presented in behalf of creditors and also of the integrity of municipalities and other taxing units in order to put them on their feet so that the property of their citizens will not be confiscated. It will also allow them in due course to meet their obligations and thus start life over with at least some hope that they may proceed in a way that will not compel them to vacate their property upon its being sold by the tax collector.

I happened to be general counsel of the Florida Real Estate Board during and after the Florida boom, when we registered all real-estate agents and brokers. There were over 46,000 of them. They came from everywhere. Some came from Kansas City, from Chicago, from all portions of the country where they were used to real-estate booms. They laid out subdivisions in many towns and cities, where in a short while streets were paved, sidewalks were built, water and lights were put in; and when the boom subsided these developers went away and left the citizens who still live in those municipalities with the bag to hold; and they are in many instances still holding it. The persons who exploited those properties, however, received their cash payments and went away. Within the short space of a year after we passed a law requiring an examination and that persons must be qualified to handle real estate many of the real-estate agents and land exploiters left Florida.

That is a situation which our people cannot help; and we are very anxious indeed that this bill pass. We think it is just, and we think anyone who will study the situation and who knows the background will also think it is just not only to the holders of the bonds but those who are trying to build up some broken-down city and other tax units in Florida and other States.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, will the Senator from Florida yield for a question?

Mr. ANDREWS. Yes.

Mr. COPELAND. What effect will this bill have upon some communities in Florida where there were large bond issues for paving, and other improvements of the sort? Will the bill permit the municipality to take advantage of its provisions, and relieve itself to some extent of the terrible pressure of that debt?

Mr. ANDREWS. Under section 83, as amended, a municipality would be allowed to petition by obtaining the consent of at least 51 percent of the bondholders to come along with a petition before the bankruptcy court.

Mr. COPELAND. A debtor might be one man, or one big company, owning most of the bonds. In such a case I suppose it would be impossible to get 51 percent.

Mr. ANDREWS. There must be 51 percent in amount of the securities. If one person owned them all, he could very easily come in.

Mr. COPELAND. I thank the Senator.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, I do not wish to disguise the fact that the great city of Chicago, which my eminent colleague and I represent, and a number of smaller cities in the State of Illinois, are greatly interested in what would be the result under the bill should it be passed. There are two features of opposition which have been intimated here which I cannot but feel ignore the situation historically as to the present-day cities.

Eminent gentlemen who are lawyers of excellence and merit have referred to the State and the effect of the State on the cities and the necessity of having the State approve the actions of the cities. In the older days—and there is prevailing, perchance, in New England and in the South the same situation yet—a city, in order to organize itself, was compelled to be incorporated by the legislature of the State, on the theory that the city was a municipality with the consent of the State. In that instance the city became more or less subject to the direction of the State, and nothing could it do after it came into existence save that which was allowed by the legislature of the State.

Today, however, the cities which are most interested in this bill have come into their life by virtue of the fact that the States have passed laws which authorize the cities to incorporate themselves. They come into existence under a municipal charter. That charter describes their liabilities. It also specifically expresses their responsibility. Their existence as cities, officially and otherwise, is altogether guided and limited by this contract of their people called their charter.

Therefore, whatever obstacle may have prevailed in the past, so far as the State is concerned, in its control or supervision of the city, it has no application to these communities which, by the law of the State, are their own creators.

Therefore the objection urged by one of the distinguished Senators, the Senator from Utah, it will clearly be seen, has application in very few instances in all America.

Again, it is contended that if these reliefs to the cities shall be provided and the cities shall be released of their obligations, it will injure their credit. What credit has a concern which has reached a point where it is bankrupt? Where is the credit? It has not any; it has no assets; it has not even reputation on which it could foster a hope of credit. Under what circumstances, then, may it hope for credit? It is likened to the individual who, having gone through bankruptcy, and having been absolved of his obligations, is enabled to start again and pay off a lien which may be held in the proceedings of the court over him, and when he is freed of the indebtedness he begins life anew in business. So it is the municipality begins anew; and, as the able Senator from Massachusetts pointed out, whenever the court is left some degree of responsibility, and as the Senator from Florida [Mr. PEPPER] particularly noted a moment ago, when the debtor becomes prosperous he pays off the debt; and so when the city becomes again revived, it is still under the obligation, it being rescued in the meantime from destruction. It is that to which the measure addresses itself.

Mr. McADOO. Mr. President, I should like to call attention at the outset to the fact that this is a temporary relief measure. By its very terms the act will expire in 1940. If any damage to anybody's credit, whether it is a school district, or a city, or a village, or an irrigation district, is possible under the terms of the bill, it certainly will not continue for long. That I regard as of less consequence than I do the affirmative phases of the proposed legislation.

There are in my State, and I think throughout the West, irrigation districts which have been organized under the laws of the States. Drainage canals have been built, people have erected their homes there, they have established little farms, and have found afterward, during the depression in particular, that they are utterly unable to earn enough from the land to pay the interest on the bonds issued to create the irrigation districts and to enable them to build houses and establish the farms.

Is it better to allow the bondholders to foreclose on these properties and force the evacuation of all the lands and homes owned by these people, or, by allowing these proceedings to occur, to permit the debtors to go through a form of reorganization in the method prescribed in the bill, make composition of their debts, and start again upon a basis which will enable them to live, and which will give the creditor all he could possibly get if he took the land by foreclosure in the first instance, and perhaps a great deal more?

I might go further and call attention to what we term improvement districts, which are rather common, in many of the Western States. A certain section of the city is marked off as entitled to a sewer improvement, let us say, and all of the property within the given area, which is established by the municipality, is made subject to the bonds which are issued for the creation of that improvement.

In some fashion great distress arises if there is an attempt to foreclose those bonds, which are first liens against the property, because they are tax-improvement bonds. Perhaps the result would be, as a practical matter, infinitely worse so far as the creditor is concerned, than if he allowed a composition such as the pending bill provides. I might enumerate other instances.

I think this is a highly beneficial measure. I do not see that it reflects upon the credit or honor of anybody. If one has not the means with which to pay his debts, either as a collective debtor or as an individual debtor, the object of the bankruptcy law is to give him an opportunity to divide the property he has among his creditors and then to start afresh.

I sincerely hope the Senate will see its way to approve the measure.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. WALSH in the chair). The question is on the third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BENEFITS TO WORLD WAR VETERANS

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of House bill 6384.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 6384) to liberalize the provisions of existing laws governing service-connected benefits for World War veterans and their dependents, and for other purposes.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, the hour is growing late, and I wish to inquire of the majority leader, the distinguished Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY], whether he wishes to proceed further tonight.

Mr. BARKLEY. I should like to, if consideration of the bill will not take too long.

Mr. GEORGE. I do not think it will take very long to consider the bill.

Mr. President, this is a bill to liberalize the provisions of existing laws governing service-connected benefits for World War veterans and their dependents, and embracing, of course, other subject matter.

The first material change in existing law is in the requirement that the widow, or the widow and children, or the children, before being entitled to compensation upon the death of the veteran, must show that the veteran was 30 percent disabled when he died from other cause than his service-connected disability. The bill changes the 30 percent to 20 percent, so that if the veteran dies from a non-service-connected disability, but at the time of his death was disabled 20 percent from a service-connected disability, the widow is entitled to death compensation, or the widow and children, or the children, as the case may be, provided the widow had a child or children by the veteran; and in that connection I call the Senate's attention to another material change made by this bill in existing law.

Under the existing law, the widow of a World War veteran is determined to be the widow who was the wife of the veteran before or at the time of his service, or who became the wife of the veteran prior to July 3, 1931. This bill extends that definition, and includes any widow of the veteran who had a child by the veteran, and she is entitled to stand in the place of the widow of a World War veteran provided there was continuous cohabitation between the veteran and the widow from the date of marriage to the date of the death of the veteran unless separation was due to the misconduct or fault of the veteran himself.

Mr. President, this bill increases the compensation payable to the widow over those provided by the existing law in the following manner: If the widow is 50 years old or under, the compensation is $30 as under existing law. If the widow is 50 years old and is not beyond 65 years of age, she is entitled to $37.50 a month, an increase of only $2.50 over existing law.

If the widow is over 65 years of age, she is entitled to receive $45 per month, as against $40 per month under existing law. I am, of course, speaking of the widow of the World War veteran who dies of service-connected disability or whose non-service-connected disability was aggravated by his active service.

If there is no widow, then under this bill if the veteran had one child, that child is to receive $20 per month. If there is no widow, but there are two children, $33 per month is to be equally divided. If there is no widow, but there are three children, $46 is to be equally divided, with $8 for each additional child. If the widow has one child, she is entitled to $10 additional until the child becomes 10 years of age, and thereafter to $15 additional. If there are more than two children, the widow is entitled to $8 for each additional child until the child reaches 10 years of age, and $13 after the child reaches 10 years of age.

I should also say, Mr. President, that $8 for each additional child is given to the children when there is no widow, but when the veteran is survived by more than three children.

Perhaps the most important feature of the bill, and the feature of the bill which carries with it the largest increase in expenditure by the Government, is the provision which relates to gold star mothers and fathers of deceased veterans who died of actual disability incurred in line of service, or who died of disease, of course contracted in actual service. Under the present law, the one parent surviving the veteran receives $20 per month. Under the terms of this bill, if the veteran be survived by only one parent who was dependent upon the veteran it is, of course, always to be understood that parent will receive $45 a month. If both parents are living, and if they were dependent upon the veteran within the meaning of the World War Veterans' Act, they will receive $25 each, or a total of $50. Under existing law the two dependent parents, father and mother, could not receive exceeding $30 per month.

I call the Senate's attention also to the fact that if the parents are receiving other benefits, including insurance benefits, they are, nevertheless, entitled to receive the full amount of $45 in the case of one dependent parent, and of $50, or $25 each, in the case of two dependent parents. So if, for instance, the mother of a deceased veteran is now receiving $30 per month, if the bill becomes law she will receive not less than $45 per month, that being the amount of death compensation provided in the bill for a dependent single parent.

Mr. President, this proposed legislation and this particular provision, which is the main provision of the measure, are brought about for reasons which I will state. It is now already 20 years since the American soldiers entered the World War, and on November 11 of next year all soldiers who actually died in the war in active service, and many of those who died during the war from disease or injury contracted in service, will have been dead 20 years; so that, in many instances, the insurance which was payable to the dependent father or mother at the rate of $57.50 per month is expiring, or will very soon expire. It is, therefore, deemed proper by the Congress and by those who have advocated this bill to increase the death benefits or the compensation to the dependent fathers and mothers of soldiers who went away to the war and did not return. The insurance in many instances represents all the provision made by the Government for the deceased soldiers of the World War.

Mr. President, there are one or two other provisions in the bill to which attention should be called—one particularly. The soldiers who are now drawing compensation as peacetime soldiers but who enlisted after November 12, 1918, and before the actual termination of the war, will be restored to a wartime status provided they were in actual service between our entry into the war and November 12, 1918. In other words, the veteran who enlisted after November 12, 1918, but before the final termination of the war by treaty, is considered a wartime veteran if he had actual service between April 7, 1917, and November 12, 1918. That, of course, will affect a considerable number, though not a very large number, of veterans, and will merely serve to increase the compensation from a peacetime veteran's compensation to a wartime veteran's compensation.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. GEORGE. Certainly.

Mr. WALSH. As I understand, the bill would apply to those who actually served during the war period in the Army or the Navy prior to November 11, 1918, and were honorably discharged, and after November 11, 1918, reenlisted?

Mr. GEORGE. The Senator is correct.

Mr. WALSH. And if any disease was contracted during that time and before the treaty was signed, they would be treated as wartime veterans?

Mr. GEORGE. Yes.

Mr. WALSH. Under the present law, those who enlisted after November 11, 1918, and who had no prior service, and who contracted disease or were injured, do not get the benefits of the compensation laws?

Mr. GEORGE. The Senator is quite correct. Even more than that, the veteran who served from April 1917 to November 11, 1918, and who was then in good health and without disability and who immediately reenlisted and was in the service when the war actually ended, is now classed as a peacetime veteran and his compensation, of course, is very much less than that of a wartime veteran. The bill would give to that class of veterans the status of war service, and if they enlisted after November 12, 1918, and had this prior service they would be entitled to be compensated as wartime veterans.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. GEORGE. Certainly.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Without any intention of being hypertechnical I should like to submit this thought to the Senator: At the top of page 5, in the definition of the term "widow of a World War veteran", it is provided that it shall mean a woman—

(2) Who was married to the person who served prior to July 3, 1931.

I submit this thought to the Senator from Missouri [Mr. CLARK], and he also felt the question should be raised. It should read "who prior to July 1931 was married to the person who served."

Then the following paragraph, which reads as follows:

(3) Who was married to the person who served, provided a child was born of such marriage.

Mr. GEORGE. There may be something in the suggestion made by the Senator from Washington, but in order to understand it I think we have to read all of section 4. With a reading of that entire section, I think there can be no misunderstanding, though the punctuation is not very happy.

While the Senator is calling attention to that, I invite the attention of the Senate to the language of section 3, page 3, of the bill, which reads as follows:

That effective on the first day of the month next following the date of enactment of this act, the rates of death compensation payable under the provisions of existing laws or veterans' regulations to a surviving widow, child, or children, and/or dependent mother or father now on the rolls or hereafter to be placed on the rolls as a surviving widow, child, or children, and/or dependent mother or father of any World War veteran who died as the result of injury or disease incurred in or aggravated by active military or naval service in the World War, shall be as follows.

That language must be read in connection with the language beginning in line 10, page 4, which is as follows:

As to the surviving widow, child, or children, and/or dependent mother or father on the rolls on the date of enactment of this act, any increased award herein authorized shall be effective from the date of the enactment of this act—

And so forth. In other words, the language beginning in line 10, page 4, must be read as a proviso to the first paragraph of section 3. I am advised, however, by the Veterans' Administration that the language will be read as a proviso, and therefore there will be no confusion about it.

Mr. President, I believe I have covered the material features of the bill and the changes proposed in existing law. If any Senator has a question to ask about the bill, I shall be glad to endeavor to answer it.

Mr. POPE. Mr. President, I notice in the report that the total cost under the bill is estimated to be $7,916,000. Will approximately that same cost continue year after year?

Mr. GEORGE. Approximately, but subject to be increased by death and also subject to be decreased, I believe, because there are classes who are added for the first time to the bill and larger numbers, perhaps, will therefore come in during the first year than in any subsequent year.

Mr. POPE. What is the Senator's judgment as to the time when the peak of payments will be made? Would that be the first year?

Mr. GEORGE. Under the amendments I should think the peak would be in the first year and therefore there would be some decrease in actual payments but I am not advised.

I should like to say further that the chairman of the World War Veterans' Legislative Committee of the House, in presenting the bill to the House, specifically asked for two or more amendments at the request of the Veterans' Administration, and gave assurance to the House that the bill as it stood—and the Senate committee has not amended it in any particular—would meet with the approval of the administration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill is before the Senate and open to amendment. If there are no amendments to be offered, the question is on the third reading of the bill.

The bill (H. R. 6384) was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

WILDLIFE RESTORATION PROJECTS

Mr. PITTMAN. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Senate bill 2670, Calendar No. 889.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Nevada.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I do not wish to interrupt the procedure, but I have received a telegram relative to this bill which I desire to read.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, it is not contemplated to proceed with the bill until tomorrow, but merely to make it the unfinished business. It will not be taken up tonight.

Mr. KING. Let me read the telegram. It is from Newell B. Cook, fish and game commissioner of my State:

Please use your influence to withhold any action on Senate bill 2670 until after western and international game conferences to be held this month.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN].

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2670) to provide that the United States shall aid the States in wildlife-restoration projects, and for other purposes, which had been reported from the Special Committee on Conservation of Wildlife Resources with amendments.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Mr. President, it is my understanding that the bill will go over until tomorrow.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill has been made the unfinished business, and will be laid aside temporarily until tomorrow.

RULES FOR CONSTRUCTION OF SHIPS

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, on behalf of the Committee on Commerce, I ask unanimous consent to have printed an index to the rules which have been laid down for the construction of ships.

When these rules were printed as Senate Report No. 184, the index, which required an immense amount of care, had not yet been prepared. I therefore ask that the index be printed as Senate Report No. 184, part 3, and that future prints of the rules shall include the index, and a few trifling changes which have been made in the text.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

EXECUTIVE SESSION

Mr. BARKLEY. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business.

EXECUTIVE REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. MCGILL), as a member of the Committee on the Judiciary, reported favorably the following nominations:

Gerard D. Reilly, of Massachusetts, to be Solicitor for the Department of Labor;

Whitfield Y. Mauzy, of Tulsa, Okla., to be United States attorney for the northern district of Oklahoma, vice Clarence E. Bailey, whose term has expired; and Eugene Rice, of Oklahoma, to be United States district judge for the eastern district of Oklahoma, to fill an existing vacancy.

Mr. LOGAN, from the Committee on the Judiciary, reported favorably the following nominations:

John P. Logan, of Oklahoma, to be United States marshal for the northern district of Oklahoma;

Charles W. Miles to be United States marshal for the western district of Tennessee, vice Bert Money Bates, whose term has expired; and William McClanahan, of Tennessee, to be United States attorney for the western district of Tennessee.

Mr. DIETERICH, from the Committee on the Judiciary, reported favorably the nomination of Paul E. Ruppel, of Illinois, to be United States marshal for the southern district of Illinois.

Mr. HATCH, from the Committee on the Judiciary, reported favorably the nomination of John M. Comeford, of Wisconsin, to be United States marshal for the western district of Wisconsin.

Mr. AUSTIN, from the Committee on the Judiciary, reported favorably the nomination of Everett M. Grantham, of New Mexico, to be United States attorney for the district of New Mexico, vice William J. Barker, resigned.

Mr. McKELLAR, from the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, reported favorably the nominations of sundry postmasters.

Mr. WALSH, from the Committee on Naval Affairs, reported favorably the nominations of sundry officers for promotion in the Navy.

He also, from the same committee, reported favorably the nominations of sundry citizens for appointment as assistant surgeons in the Navy with the rank of lieutenant (junior grade) from the 1st day of August 1937.

He also, from the same committee, reported favorably the nomination of Francis F. Griffiths, a citizen of New York, to be a second lieutenant in the Marine Corps, revocable for 2 years, from the 1st day of July 1937.

Mr. COPELAND, from the Committee on Commerce, reported favorably the following nominations:

Maj. Frank M. S. Johnson, Corps of Engineers, United States Army, for appointment as a member of the California Debris Commission, provided for by law, vice Maj. Elroy S. J. Irvine, Corps of Engineers, relieved;

Charles J. Brasefield to be a professor (temporary), with the rank of lieutenant commander, in the Coast Guard, to take effect from date of oath; and Ensigns Evor S. Kerr, Jr.; Walter S. Bakutis; Thomas J. E. Crotty; Clarence M. Speight; and Edgar V. Carlson to be lieutenants (junior grade) in the Coast Guard, to rank as such from May 28, 1937.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The reports will be placed on the Executive Calendar.

If there be no further reports of committees, the clerk will state the nominations on the Executive Calendar.

POSTMASTERS

The legislative clerk proceeded to read sundry nominations of postmasters.

Mr. McKELLAR. I ask unanimous consent that the nomination of postmasters on the calendar be confirmed en bloc.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nominations are confirmed en bloc.

That concludes the Executive Calendar.

LEGISLATIVE SESSION

Mr. BARKLEY. I move that the Senate resume the consideration of legislative business.

The motion was agreed to.

DEATH OF REPRESENTATIVE PEYSER, OF NEW YORK

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. McGILL in the chair) laid before the Senate the resolutions of the House of Representatives (H. Res. 302), which were read, as follows:

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, U. S.,
August 9, 1937.

Resolved, That the House has heard with profound sorrow of the death of Hon. THEODORE A. PEYSER, a Representative from the State of New York.

Resolved, That a committee of four Members of the House, with such Members of the Senate as may be joined, be appointed to attend the funeral.

Resolved, That the Sergeant at Arms of the House be authorized and directed to take such steps as may be necessary for carrying out the provision of these resolutions and that the necessary expenses in connection therewith be paid out of the contingent fund of the House.

Resolved, That the Clerk communicate these resolutions to the Senate and transmit a copy thereof to the family of the deceased.

Resolved, That as a further mark of respect the House do now adjourn.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, at a later time I shall, perhaps, have an opportunity to make more extended remarks about the sudden death of my very dear friend and a very distinguished Member of the House of Representatives. New York State has lost one of its most faithful servants—a man who not only rendered great public service but who was interested in all matters concerning the welfare particularly of the underprivileged. He was really one of God's noblemen, and I wish to express my profound sorrow at his unexpected departure.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, I heartily endorse everything said by my colleague [Mr. WAGNER] about our late departed friend, Representative PEYSER. It so happens that he was my own Representative. I have the pleasure of living in the district he represented. I have known him for years. He possessed all the qualities that go to make a good citizen. He was kindly, philanthropic, thoughtful, intelligent, a wise and useful member of society. I mourn his death.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the resolutions which I send to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The resolutions will be read.

The resolutions (S. Res. 172) were read, considered by unanimous consent, and unanimously agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That the Senate has heard with profound sorrow the announcement of the death of Hon. THEODORE A. PEYSER, late a Representative from the State of New York.

Resolved, That a committee of two Senators be appointed by the Vice President to join the committee appointed on the part of the House of Representatives to attend the funeral of the deceased Representative.

Resolved, That the Secretary communicate these resolutions to the House of Representatives and transmit a copy thereof to the family of the deceased.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. As the committee on the part of the Senate, the Chair appoints the two Senators from New York, Mr. COPELAND and Mr. WAGNER.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, as a further mark of respect to the memory of the deceased Representative, I move that the Senate do now take a recess until 12 o'clock meridian tomorrow.

The motion was unanimously agreed to; and (at 5 o'clock and 6 minutes p. m.) the Senate took a recess until tomorrow, Tuesday, August 10, 1937, at 12 o'clock meridian.

CONFIRMATIONS

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate on August 9, 1937

POSTMASTERS

James Albert Roney, North East.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

MONDAY, AUGUST 9, 1937

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D. D., offered the following prayer:

In our prayer, merciful Father, we desire to be consciously grateful for Thy daily blessings. We pray for that inward peace that can sustain us in our labors and conflicts with our difficult tasks. Keep our tongues free from severity, and may we be generous in deed and considerate in manner. If clouds cluster about our star of hope, we entreat Thee to arm us with self-restraint and rare wisdom. We pray that we may be alive to every national movement, to every murmur of sympathy, and to every cause of dissent. Again, gracious Lord, our hearts vibrate to the promptings of human sorrow. An honorable Member responds not to his name; his seat is vacant; he will meet with us no more. Heavenly Father, be with the family circle and comfort them with Thy ministry of peace and reconciliation. At the close of this day may we suffer no chills of neglected duty. In our Savior's name. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of Friday, August 6, 1937, was read and approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate by Mr. Frazier, its legislative clerk, announced that the Senate had passed, without amendment, bills, joint resolutions, and a concurrent resolution of the House of the following titles:

INTERVENTION OF ATTORNEY GENERAL IN CERTAIN CASES

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H. R. 2260) to provide for appearance on behalf of and appeal by the United States in certain cases in which the constitutionality of acts of Congress is involved with Senate amendments, disagree to the Senate amendments, and ask for a conference.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none and appoints the following conferees: Messrs. SUMNERS, WEAVER, WALTER, MCLAUGHLIN, GUYER, and HANCOCK of New York.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. JONES. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that on next Wednesday, after the completion of the legislative program for the day, I may be privileged to address the House for 1 hour.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

(Mr. NELSON, Mr. DIRKSEN, and Mr. MAVERICK asked and were given permission to revise and extend their own remarks in the RECORD.)

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD on the life and character of the late Speaker of the House, JOE BYRNS.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Tennessee?

There was no objection.

SUBVERSIVE ACTIVITIES

Mr. DICKSTEIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. DICKSTEIN. Mr. Speaker, I just want to call to the attention of the House that I have discovered short-wave radio hookups between Germany and the United States through which subversive propaganda is coming into this country. I have also discovered an additional camp in the State of Pennsylvania. I shall be glad to give the names to any of my colleagues. I have also discovered another one in my friend's district in New York State, way up in the woods, where goose-stepping is going on. I have discovered a few more things.

Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks in the RECORD and to insert a list of short-wave radio stations and camps.

The following is a list of short-wave programs from Germany containing German propaganda, accompanied by a few musical numbers which work as an alibi for their propaganda:

This radio log is prepared by Mr. Von Boeckmann, director of the Reichsrundfunk Gesellschaft, at present in the United States, previously mentioned in CONGRESSIONAL RECORD. The Reichsrundfunk Gesellschaft is owned and operated by the German Propaganda Ministry.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, will the gentleman, in his extension of remarks, name the places in Pennsylvania where these camps are, so we can goose-step up there after them?

Mr. DICKSTEIN. I wish the gentleman would.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I understood the gentleman to say that one of our friends is involved in this. I do not think he ought to put in the RECORD any statement with reference to any Member of the House.

Mr. DICKSTEIN. I think the gentleman misunderstood me. I meant to say that right in our own State, up in the Catskills, we have discovered a camp, and the matter is now being checked by Maj. John A. Warner, of the State troopers. I am sure that the House will be interested to know how these camps are spreading from day to day, yet we are doing nothing; we are on a sit-down strike right in this Congress.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. DICKSTEIN. The camp which I referred to is known as Camp Deutschhorst, Philadelphia, Pa., and is located about 4 miles from Camden, N. J., on the Lincoln Highway. They have a large estate consisting of about 20 acres. On Labor Day of this year there will be a national convention of all the leaders of the bund to decide the program of the next year and elect new local leaders.

There is also a camp now being checked by Maj. John A. Warner, head of the State troopers in New York, which is somewhere within Windham, Greene County, N. Y.

Mr. Speaker, ladies, and gentlemen, on August 3 I had the privilege and honor to address this House at considerable length regarding un-American activities, particularly calling your attention to Camp Hindenburg. My colleague, Mr. O'MALLEY, of Wisconsin, saw fit to interrogate me at length. The exposure that I have made on the floor of Congress, particularly about Camp Hindenburg, not only was true then, as is today, but we can take credit for stopping this mass movement of subversive activity in the city of Kenosha, Wis.

On August 5 there appeared in the Washington Times the following:

PERMIT LOST BY UNITED STATES NAZIS

KENOSHA, WIS., August 5 (I. N. S.)—A permit granted the Kenosha branch of the Volksbund, American Nazi organization, stood revoked today by order of the city council following a session enlivened by protests and heated debate.

Council members, in canceling the permit last night, said they thought the celebration was planned as part of "a national movement by the Volksbund to force un-American, antilabor, and pro-Fascist policies of German nazi-ism on the American people." A permit had been granted last Monday.

Robert R. Whyte, member of the council, declared at the conclusion of the meeting:

"Now we have disposed of the Nazis—and our next objective should be the Communists. I am opposed to permitting any Communist group to use our parks or streets."

Since that date I have received quite a number of letters and petitions from citizens in the State of Wisconsin. They seem to feel as I do in believing that this country does not have any room for subversive and un-American activities, foreign goose-stepping, foreign salutes, and foreign preaching.

The very fine people of Wisconsin, particularly in the city of Kenosha, should be congratulated on the stand they have taken in revoking the permit for Camp Hindenburg. When I exposed this camp a few days ago some Member of Congress in his smooth way of talking said that he did not need any help from New York on this question.

I need not argue my point any further, but I would like to insert the following resolutions, which bear out to the fullest extent my accuracy in the Camp Hindenburg exposure and also express the sympathy and cooperation of citizens in the State of Wisconsin.

AMALGAMATED ASSOCIATION OF STREET, ELECTRIC RAILWAY, AND MOTOR COACH EMPLOYEES OF AMERICA, Milwaukee, Wis., August 4, 1937.

RESOLUTION

Whereas the Nazi sympathizers of the Hitler regime of Germany have set up 17 camps in the United States; and

Whereas one of these camps is located at Grafton, Wis.; and

Whereas this same organization is holding a picnic at the Washington Bowl, at Kenosha, Wis., on August 8, 1937: Therefore be it

Resolved, That Division 998 of the Amalgamated Association of Street, Electric Railway, and Motor Coach Employees of America send a copy of this resolution to Gov. Philip La Follette protesting against the Nazi camp at Grafton, Wis., and other Nazi activities in the State of Wisconsin; and be it further

Resolved, That Division 998 send a telegram to the city manager of Kenosha, Wis., asking them to recall their permit to hold said picnic at Kenosha; and be it further

Resolved, That all men off duty appear in the mass demonstration against the Nazi picnic at Kenosha, with other labor and civic organizations at Kenosha on August 8, 1937.

C. D. BURDICK.

This resolution was passed by the membership of Division 998 in regular meeting August 3, 1937.

OTHMER MISCHO, President.

TRADES AND LABOR COUNCIL,
Port Washington, Wis., August 4, 1937.

Congressman SAMUEL DICKSTEIN,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

DEAR CONGRESSMAN DICKSTEIN: Enclosed please find a copy of a resolution which was unanimously adopted at the regular meeting of the Port Washington Trades and Labor Council on August 3. We have given this resolution widest possible publicity, both in the metropolitan dailies of Milwaukee and Sheboygan, and in four of the State's labor papers.

Those of us who realize and appreciate the Nazi menace in the United States wish you all the success necessary for the conducting of a thorough investigation.

Very truly yours,

FREDERICK KLEVER, Secretary, 112 Franklin Street.

Whereas the Port Washington Trades and Labor Council is dedicated to the welfare of all labor; and

Whereas upon the accession of the Hitler government to power in Germany, the strong German trade-union movement was brutally and ruthlessly destroyed and the rights of individual workers abolished; and

Whereas there has been established at Grafton, Wis., in Ozaukee County, of which Port Washington is the county seat, a camp known as Camp Hindenburg, by an organization called the German-American Volksburd, which is openly sympathetic to the ideals of the Hitler government, and where the swastika and the Nazi salute are displayed; and

Whereas the chief activity of the camp appears to be a course in military training for possible future "storm troops" under the private auspices of the Volksbund; and

Whereas groups thus trained, inoculated with an antilabor, Fascist philosophy, may one conceivably be used to crush labor in the United States: Therefore be it

Resolved, That while we recognize and uphold the right of political minorities in a democracy to propagate their doctrines, however hateful, in a legal manner, we vigorously condemn the unlawful and un-American practice of private military training under a foreign flag and foreign insignia, by an organization which admits friendliness to a government which is antidemocratic and antilabor; and be it further

Resolved, That copies of this resolution be sent to the sheriff, the district attorney, the county board of Ozaukee County, and to Representative SAMUEL DICKSTEIN, who is demanding a congressional investigation of Nazi activity in the United States.

In addition to the above resolutions, I have received many others which are too numerous to mention. I am grateful to the fine citizens of Wisconsin for their prompt help and cooperation.

I also wish to thank The 40 And Over Club Magazine of America, Inc., for their protest against this Nazi movement in the State of Wisconsin.

In conclusion, I want to say that the sentiment and school of thought of the people of this country is almost unanimous in their desire that Congress should not adjourn unless it creates some sort of power to thoroughly investigate the activities that I have been calling to the attention of this House for the past number of months.

There is much more to be said. I have not even scratched the surface; time will not permit.

CALENDAR WEDNESDAY

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that business in order on Calendar Wednesday of this week may be dispensed with.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

REAL ESTATE BONDHOLDERS' SELECT COMMITTEE

Mr. KRAMER. Mr. Speaker, I call up a privileged report from the Committee on Accounts, House Resolution 259, for immediate consideration.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That (a) the expenses of conducting the investigation authorized by House Resolution 412 of the Seventy-third Congress, and by House Resolution 39, House Resolution 79, and House Resolution 354 of the Seventy-fourth Congress, incurred prior to January 5, 1937, by the Select Committee to Investigate Real Estate Bondholders' Reorganizations, and (b) the expenses (including expenditures for the employment of experts, attorneys, accountants, and clerical, stenographic, and other assistants, and for stationery and other expenses) incidental to the winding up of the affairs of such committee and to the preparation and filing of its final report, incurred at any time during the calendar year 1937, not to exceed in the aggregate $9,600, shall be paid out of the contingent fund of the House on vouchers signed by the Member who was the chairman of such committee and approved by the Committee on Accounts.

With the following committee amendment:

Line 12, after the figures "1937", strike out the balance of the resolution and in lieu thereof add the following: "not to exceed in the aggregate $7,134.94, to be paid to such persons, firms, and corporations as shown on the list in the Committee on Accounts, dated August 2, 1937. Said sum shall be paid out of the contingent fund of the House on vouchers signed by the Member who was the chairman of said committee and approved by the Committee on Accounts, and shall be in full settlement of all expenditures made or incurred by said select committee to investigate real estate bondholders' organizations."

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, I understand this is a privileged resolution from the Committee on Accounts. I would like to have the gentleman from the committee explain what this is and what is the occasion for it.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from California [Mr. KRAMER] is entitled to be recognized for 1 hour.

Mr. KRAMER. Mr. Speaker, I will make a very brief statement. This resolution was introduced by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SABATH] and requests an additional appropriation for certain items, such as telephone, telegraph, stenographic, stationery, and other expenses, that were incidental to the carrying on of the investigation.

The Committee on Accounts held a hearing in reference to this matter, and the chairman of the Committee on Accounts [Mr. WARREN] appointed a committee of three, of which I was named chairman, to investigate this further expenditure of funds. In the investigation just concluded on behalf of the committee—and the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. MCLEAN] was a member of the committee—we have arrived at the figure of $7,134.94. We took out the telephone items which have been charged to those expenses because they have already been paid by the different Government agencies. The gentlemen on the other side who served on the committee, including the gentleman from New York [Mr. CULKIN], and other members of the committee investigated the matter, and we felt those items were justifiable and should be paid. We therefore made the recommendation to the Committee on Accounts, and that committee in its entirety voted for the approval of this additional sum, with the exception of the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. COCHRAN], who was not present, due to his attendance on the floor, and, if present, stated he would vote "no."

Mr. SNELL. I understand this committee wound up its activities, as far as expenses are concerned, at the beginning of this session. Am I right or wrong?

Mr. KRAMER. I did not hear the gentleman's statement.

Mr. SNELL. I thought this committee had wound up its activities as far as expenses were concerned last January.

Mr. KRAMER. I may say to the gentleman, it did attempt to wind up its investigation; but in spreading its activities over the entire country, the committee had employed various investigators, had various offices, and incurred telephone expenses, which bills had not come into the committee by the first of the year, when the accounting was to be made finally.

Mr. SNELL. None of this expense has been incurred since that time?

Mr. KRAMER. Yes. Part of the expenses which were incurred included one item, for instance, of $1,500 for stenographic expenses, which covered a hearing taken in Chicago, but the bill was not rendered prior to January 1, 1937. There are many other items, including items for services, for employment of investigators, and also for stenographic help to compile the data which had been procured by the committee in order to enable it to make a final report.

Mr. SNELL. I am not questioning the authenticity of any one of these expenditures. I am simply questioning the policy of allowing a committee to go on and incur expenses after the life of the committee has expired and after its appropriation has run out.

Mr. KRAMER. I am thoroughly in accord with the gentleman's statement. As a member of the Committee on Accounts, I believe we ought to hew closer to the line. But here is a case which was rather extraordinary in its nature. There was a great deal of work to be done by the committee over a large area. I have independently asked each member of the committee why they could not have concluded their work and have paid these items by the end of the year, and the members of the committee felt that the committee was not to blame because this covered servants which were working in the field.

Mr. SNELL. The committee is to blame if its servants are working in the field. They are responsible.

Mr. KRAMER. I presume they are.

Mr. McCORMACK. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KRAMER. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. McCORMACK. If I may give the gentleman from New York [Mr. SNELL] the information which I know he is seeking, at the Boston office I know there is help up there that had not been paid for a number of months prior to January of this year, but they kept on working through loyalty to the special committee and naturally expected to be paid.

Mr. SNELL. Then put it on a pay basis. Do not talk about loyalty. It was not entirely through loyalty to the committee that they continued to work. They were working for pay.

Mr. McCORMACK. Well, put it on the pay basis first and loyalty second.

Mr. SNELL. Well, do not talk about loyalty.

Mr. McCORMACK. There is just as much loyalty there as there is in the gentleman and I being Members of Congress.

Mr. SNELL. Well, I wanted the job, I suppose.

Mr. McCORMACK. Well, to some extent we like to be here, or we would not run for the office.

Mr. SNELL. It is not entirely due to loyalty that either the gentleman or I came here.

Mr. McCORMACK. We will not quibble over which it is. We are here and they are there. They were rendering a service, and at other offices throughout the country a similar condition existed.

Mr. SNELL. I am not quarreling with that. The point I have in mind is, Should we continue allowing investigating committees to run indefinitely after their time has expired and their appropriation run out?

Mr. McCORMACK. I think that is absolutely sound, but I think this is probably a justifiable proposition.

Mr. SNELL. The other stuff is out, and you can delete it if you want to.

Mr. KRAMER. May I say to the gentleman from New York that during this session there has been no money of any kind appropriated for investigating committees. I understand this is the first time in 27 years, so I am told by the chairman of the committee, that we have been successful in holding down investigations. May I say further to the gentleman, I am opposed to this kind of investigation going on and I want to say to the Members of the House if they should become members of other committees, that I shall oppose any further appropriations of this kind being made.

Mr. SNELL. Then the gentleman takes the same position with reference to policy that I do.

Mr. KRAMER. I think we ought to pay our debts.

Mr. SNELL. We ought to pay our debts, yes, but I am talking about continuing these committees and letting this thing go on indefinitely.

Mr. KRAMER. Yes; but I think we should pay the expenses.

Mr. BOILEAU. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KRAMER. I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. BOILEAU. I did not get the exact figure when it was read.

Mr. KRAMER. Seven thousand one hundred and thirty-four dollars and ninety-four cents.

Mr. BOILEAU. The bill as introduced by the gentleman from Illinois covered $9,600, a difference of some $2,500?

Mr. KRAMER. Yes; and he has since found out there is about $1,400 additional, which I told him I would not consider.

Mr. BOILEAU. This is the point I want to make. The chairman of this committee, after the close of the year, after there was no longer authority to continue functioning, claimed there was $3,000 or $4,000 of additional debts which the committee had contracted. As I understand, debts of this type are obligations of the Government—or, at least, they are moral obligations. As long as we in the House set up this committee, the debts the committee has contracted are obligations which should be redeemed.

Who will lose if this resolution is not passed? The resolution carries an appropriation of $7,100, but there is over $9,600 involved in the resolution, and, in addition, as the gentleman has stated, approximately $1,400. Who will suffer this loss? If the debts which have been contracted are not to be paid, will someone who has rendered services fail to be paid by the Government?

Mr. KRAMER. May I say to the gentleman that a part of these obligations cover such expenses as railroad fares and long-distance telephone calls, and the other members of the subcommittee and I did not feel justified in recommending that these expenses should be paid.

Mr. BOILEAU. Railroad fares of whom?

Mr. KRAMER. Of employees of the committee.

Mr. BOILEAU. I think the House should have full information with respect to the nature of the claims which are not being allowed. Will the gentleman permit me to get that information from the chairman of the committee?

Mr. KRAMER. It is perfectly agreeable to me to let the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SABATH] make whatever statement in respect of this he wishes to make.

Mr. BOILEAU. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. SABATH. All of these expenses were incurred before January 4 for stenographic work, for telephone and telegraph service, for help, and other things.

Mr. BOILEAU. The gentleman from California yielded to the gentleman from Illinois that he might answer my question.

Mr. SABATH. The amount deducted is the amount of bills rendered by Government offices in various cities. To simplify and bring about as much economy in our work as possible we decided to have offices in 11 different cities. In each of the cities no rent was paid because the offices were in Government buildings. However, Government telephones were used, and a few months ago the various Government departments concerned sent in bills for the use of their phones.

Mr. KRAMER. On a pro-rata basis.

Mr. SABATH. On a pro-rata basis. They stated a line had been set aside for the committee, consequently, so much was to be charged against the committee. These amounts have been paid by the different agencies. It was thought unnecessary for the committee to send checks to the Post Office Department or to the other departments, and I understand these amounts have been eliminated from the resolution.

Mr. BOILEAU. How much does this amount to?

Mr. KRAMER. These amounts had already been paid, because the Government had in one instance paid them. I feel that the committee is not supposed to act as an investigating body or to make an accounting in order to find out what the pro-rata amount was in each instance, or whether or not the charges were justified. I simply made the suggestion to the members of the committee that these amounts be eliminated.

Mr. BOILEAU. Was this amount included on the original basis?

Mr. KRAMER. The $9,600; yes.

Mr. BOILEAU. How much does it amount to?

Mr. KRAMER. The items are all here. I think the gentlemen from New York [Mr. TABER and Mr. SNELL] have the items.

Mr. BOILEAU. Roughly speaking, I mean, is this the greater part of the $2,500?

Mr. KRAMER. Two thousand dollars or $3,000.

Mr. BOILEAU. This is the major part of the $2,500?

Mr. KRAMER. Yes.

Mr. BOILEAU. The gentleman also spoke about railroad fares. May we have some information about them?

Mr. KRAMER. There was one item of railroad fares.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KRAMER. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. TABER. As I understand the situation, the picture is about like this: Congress authorized this investigation and appropriated $110,000 for it. The money has been spent. We have had previous investigations where the money was all spent by the investigating committee. I can recall at the present time the investigation into communistic activities in this country, conducted by the gentleman from New York [Mr. FISH], where the committee attempted to come in with a similar resolution and the Committee on Accounts and the House turned it down. This is one definite precedent against the operation of this resolution.

After the expiration of this committee by the expiration of the last Congress the committee continued to carry these people on its pay roll and continued to let them work, as it has stated. One man was named Henry Garsson. I would like to have the gentleman from California [Mr. KRAMER] correct me on this if I am wrong. He had never previously been upon the pay roll of the committee but comes in now with an item for $500, for services rendered entirely since the 1st of January, as I understand. Am I not correct in this understanding?

Mr. KRAMER. I am informed that Henry Garsson was in the employ of the committee in New York prior to January, and that he was one of the most efficient men the committee had in that area.

Mr. TABER. Is it not a fact the $500 is to pay for his services since the 1st of January?

Mr. KRAMER. Yes; because he rendered additional service in order to complete the report of the investigation in New York City and that area. This also applies to the employment of the clerk and a stenographer in Boston. I inquired of the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MCCORMACK] why these people were in the service, and he explained the matter to me fully and satisfactorily. I left the item in there, and I think it is justified.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KRAMER. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. SABATH. I do not wish to take up the time of the House, but may I say that not a dollar, not a penny, has been expended unnecessarily. This has been a tremendous task. The House three different times, by unanimous vote, authorized an extension of the powers and duties of the committee. Personally, I had every reason to believe that the work of the committee would continue up to June or July this year in order to finish some of the most important investigations we had been conducting, but when I learned there was opposition to the committee's finishing its work, I immediately started to close the offices. However, the members of the committee thought they must finish the report, and in doing so and going over some of the special important matters which were under investigation it became necessary for us to retain a few of these men and the stenographers in the employ of the committee, so the report could be finished and intelligent information to be given upon all of the work.

In this connection I may say to the gentleman from New York that, although we have have spent $110,000 or $117,000, for every dollar the committee has spent the Government has collected over $100 in revenue that it would never have obtained otherwise. Nearly $20,000,000 of income tax has been collected from these committees, receivers, and lawyers where no reports had been made. It was due to our investigation that this money was collected, to say nothing of the millions and millions that have been saved the bondholders, and I only regret that we had to discontinue the work. I will give you my word of honor that during my 31 years of service I do not know of any committee here or on the other side that has performed the service to the Nation that this committee has performed.

Mr. RICH and Mr. LAMBERTSON rose.

Mr. KRAMER. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. RICH. This amount of $7,134.94 is going to be the final wind-up with respect to this committee?

Mr. KRAMER. Yes; and the amounts are specified in the resolution and they are to be paid to these specific persons in accordance with the resolution as adopted by the Committee on Accounts, and a list will be furnished to the chairman of the committee.

Mr. Speaker, let me say in conclusion that I have known the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SABATH], with one exception, longer than any Member of this House. I have known the gentleman for more than 32 years, and I have known him to be straightforward, honest, and a hard-working man whenever I have been confronted with any of his work, and have the highest respect for him.

Mr. RICH. I may say in connection with the work of this committee that if it had not been for the committee, a great many of the bondholders in this country would have been swamped. I think the committee did a lot of good work.

Mr. KRAMER. The gentleman is quite right. I know that in California the gentleman and his committee have done a tremendous job and have saved the taxpayers a large amount of money.

Mr. RICH. However, is the gentleman going to permit any more committees to come in like this without any authorization for the money before it is expended?

Mr. KRAMER. I have already stated, speaking for myself, that I shall be opposed to any further allocations being made, after the amount which they were authorized to spend to carry on the work of investigation had been exhausted.

Mr. RICH. I would like to conclude with this statement. The Members of the House understand what $7,134.94 means, but the Members of the House are responsible for the condition shown in the Treasury statement of August 4. You will find in that statement for the first 34 days of this fiscal year, beginning July 1, you have spent $224,152,111.66 more each day than you have received, which means over $6,400,000 a day. This amount represents $2,600,000 a day more than you spent last year. If you can understand what $7,134.94 means, I want you to know that you are responsible for spending over $6,400,000 a day more than you are receiving. This is contrary to all rules of good, common-sense business, and the House ought to stop it.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield me about 5 minutes?

Mr. LAMBERTSON. The gentleman agreed to yield to me for a question.

Mr. KRAMER. I yield first to the gentleman from Kansas for a question.

Mr. LAMBERTSON. If I may have the attention of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SABATH], as I understand, there has been the amount of $100,000 spent on this investigation and the gentleman thinks that $20,000,000 has been saved?

Mr. SABATH. The Government has received in income-tax collections nearly $20,000,000 due to the work of this committee.

Mr. LAMBERTSON. What I have in mind is that usually there is a good deal of expense in connection with these investigations, but I have a resolution before the Rules Committee asking for an investigation of a transaction involving $30,000,000 that will not cost the Government a dime, and as a member of the Rules Committee I hope the gentleman will see that I get my free investigation of this $30,000,000 proposition.

Mr. SABATH. I may say to the gentleman that this investigation involved defaulted bond, securities, and property valued at about $35,000,000,000. I say about thirty-five billions.

Mr. KRAMER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER].

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, I find that out of the $110,000 that this committee has spent, $5,842.50 was paid to a man named Murray Garsson. He was also paid $2,104.24. This man, I understand, has been in trouble several times and is very well known by the criminal circles of this country, due to the Lindbergh situation and many other things.

Mr. KRAMER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield there?

Mr. TABER. I yield.

Mr. KRAMER. I want to say to the gentleman that I was of the impression that he was asking for some compensation in this connection, and when I confronted him he said, "Not a penny." He did serve with the committee. He was a Republican and still is a Republican and belongs to the Republican Party and was in the administration of the Coolidge and Hoover regimes.

Mr. TABER. That is quite a character that the gentleman gives him. We would rather he would have that kind of a fellow. You gentlemen can have all of them. You are evidently paying them. It cost practically $8,000 to have you carry that kind of Republican along. I am opposed to paying that kind of Republican.

Mr. DIES. Does not the gentleman think that this man had to serve an apprenticeship somewhere?

Mr. TABER. But I cannot think that this committee's operations require that sort of apprenticeship.

Mr. DICKSTEIN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. Yes.

Mr. DICKSTEIN. I think the gentleman is fair, and I think the statement he made about the man being a part of a criminal gang ought not to be made.

Mr. TABER. I did not say that he was part of a criminal gang. I said that he was well known.

Mr. DICKSTEIN. The gentleman talks about a criminal indictment. I just happen to know the man through the Republican machine in the old administration. I do not know that he has been guilty of all the gentleman charges him with.

Mr. TABER. I cannot help that. I refuse to yield further. This man Murray Garsson's brother is on here for $500. There is a man named Joseph Tupy, who sent out a letter soliciting the deposit of bonds. He was connected with this committee, and he is on this account here for $500. Both of those items were for services since the 1st of January, after the committee had expired.

I do not like that way of doing business. I do not like the encouragement of that sort of thing. It is apparent to me that this is an attempt to establish a precedent for an investigating committee that was appointed in this House to go on and act after it has expired, as a result of the resolution of Congress, which created it. As a general rule, Mr. Speaker, the chairman of the Committee on Accounts brings in these resolutions. We have generally expected to see him here. I wonder what the chairman of the Committee on Accounts thinks of this proposition? I wonder if he is in favor of this kind of an operation. If the gentleman from California would go down the line, he could tell us that he would find that almost two-thirds of these items are for salaries which have accrued since the 1st of January, and some of it, a large portion of it, from the 1st of April to the 1st of June. On top of that there is a great big so-called stenographers' bill of $1,500; there is a telephone bill for Los Angeles of a very large amount, $707.40; there is a telephone bill for the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., $313.20; there is a New England Telephone & Telegraph bill of $93.40; and a bill of the Telephone Co. of Pennsylvania, $150.06. Personally, I am not very familiar with the operations of this committee, but I am familiar with the operation of the practices of this House in not being willing to authorize the expenditure of money for things after the committee has expired, and beyond the authorization of this House.

I hope the resolution will be defeated.

Mr. KRAMER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. FULLER].

Mr. FULLER. Mr. Speaker, it may be that this committee has exceeded its authority to some extent. If there is any complaint to be made on this account, the committee is responsible for it. No committee ever served in this House or in any part of this Government that has done harder work or accomplished more than this committee. Especial credit is due to the chairman [Mr. SABATH]. When I was serving as chairman of a subcommittee I spent about 60 days going over the country holding hearings, and I never even got my expenses back, as the bills will show. When we started in with this work it was so voluminous that we did not know when or where or how to start. When we got into the work we did not know when or how to stop. We have had $115,000, as I remember it, and inside of 90 days after we started we got three times that much back into the Federal Treasury; and we have caused to be gotten back in income taxes over $100 for every $1 we have spent since then. We caused these outstanding bonds, which were mostly sold to old men and women of moderate means, to increase in value from 3 and 5 cents on the dollar to 50 and 100 percent. This investigation has been the means of the Security and Exchange Commission going further, resulting in a voluminous and favorable report of our work with recommendations for remedial legislation. We thought that we were going to be able to go on and wind up our business within the appropriation. We did not figure correctly; we had more bills out than money to pay them. This year there have been a few men hired. For instance, as a result of all this work, as the House expects, we have been preparing and working on a bill before the Judiciary Committee to reap the fruits of our labor and to prevent further frauds such as have been perpetrated on the American public. This measure will probably come up for consideration in the House this week. It took a man of the type of Garsson as an expert to get up this information and show it to this committee. The gentleman from New York said we hired a man named Murray Garsson, who was a crook. That is a poor argument, and I am sure his information is false. Whether he is a crook or not, he did the work; he knew how, by reason of many years' experience in Government work under the Republican administration, and he got the information for us and made our work a success. We do know that he had the respect and admiration of the New York City authorities, and he has been of untold value to the people of this country and this committee.

We are at least morally bound to pay the back pay of these people who did excellent work at low wages. There is very little money in this bill now for Murray Garsson.

Mr. SABATH. Not a cent.

Mr. FULLER. Not a cent. It comes with poor grace for my economic friend, the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER], on the Republican side, to say that we should not have hired the man because he has heard he is a crook. The man is not here to defend himself, and I do not need to defend him, because of the work he has done and the results he has accomplished. Such bitter statements constitute no defense to paying those we owe for services. If we have made a mistake, there are two good hard-working Republicans on that side of the aisle who stood for what we did. They have done as valiant work as any man who ever served on a committee in the House of Representatives.

Mr. KRAMER. Mr. Speaker, in answer to the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER] I simply make this further statement: The gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER] charges

Murray Garsson with having received some money. I did not go into what he received, or anybody else received, prior to the time of January 1, 1936. I do not know whether the committee employed him, but I have investigated the assertions that have been made and the accusations that he was indicted. I have found no one who was familiar with it or who could make a statement and tell me when and where he was indicted. I have investigated his brother's attitude, and they tell me—and it comes from reliable sources, from Members on both sides of the House—that he is a very high-class, responsible, trustworthy gentleman.

Now, with respect to that account of one-thousand-five-hundred-odd dollars, for stenographic services for Chartres & Carroll at Chicago, I know those gentlemen. I have written them and asked them how it came that at this late date they have rendered a bill. They advised me that this work was done up to the last of December. The last services were rendered on December 29, 1936. They were contracted for before that time. They did the work at a very low rate, which included the services of the stenographers while he was there not even taking dictation.

In conclusion, I want to say that I have known the chairman of the Committee on Accounts ever since I have been a Member of this House and have a very high regard for his ability. Why he has delegated me to present this resolution I do not know. I did not ask him. He referred the matter to me and I accepted it and performed my duty to the committee.

Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question.

Mr. RICH. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. KRAMER. I will yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. RICH. It is possible the chairman of the Committee on Accounts asked the gentleman from California to handle this, because he would not have to say that he would not permit any more resolutions like this to come in. But that may not be a situation that is so important as one we should consider here now.

There are a lot of people hanging around here like leeches in Washington, and whenever an investigating committee is appointed they may be hanging over from some other administration, either Republican or Democratic, and they bear watching, because they are here trying to get money out of the Federal Treasury; trying to get jobs. When we set up any more investigating committees we ought to select some new people here, so that we do not have all these people and have to be criticized. I think it would be a fine thing if you took that into consideration.

Mr. DIES. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KRAMER. I yield.

Mr. DIES. I was impressed by a statement made by the gentleman from Arkansas that for every dollar spent the Treasury has gotten $100 back. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RICH] has been wondering where we are going to get the money. If we kept this committee in existence, we would soon have it all back.

Mr. RICH. If you keep this committee going so that you can get back $100 for every dollar spent, my hat is off to them.

Mr. KRAMER. I yield to the gentleman from New York [Mr. SNELL] 3 minutes.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, statements have been made about one hundred to one. I would like to have someone show me the authority for any such statement, or I would like someone to definitely prove that we have gotten so many hundred thousand dollars into the Treasury on account of this investigation.

Mr. KRAMER. I am not an investigator of the House.

Mr. SNELL. No; and no one else can tell me.

Mr. KRAMER. I simply investigated the validity of these charges in order to make this presentation.

Mr. SABATH. I have the statement right here.

Mr. SNELL. I cannot yield. The gentleman can get some time on his own side.

I have nothing to say against the personnel on this pay roll. I do not know anything about them. My position and the reason I am taking it is that I am against this policy of allowing a committee to spend money after the expiration of the authority of the committee and then bringing a bill into the House and having the House pay the bill. If you are going to adopt that policy, there is no reason why any committee should not continue itself almost indefinitely. From what has been said here it is evident to me that several of these employees simply continued on the pay roll.

Mr. KRAMER. They are all doing work to this very day.

Mr. SNELL. But the chairman of the committee, or the committee, was responsible for keeping those people there. They knew that they had expended their funds and their authority had expired. Is that not correct?

Mr. KRAMER. Let me explain that to the gentleman. This picture reminds me of a man who was a very prosperous businessman and he had a bookkeeper who was rather careless. He looked at his bank account one day and he saw he had an exorbitant balance. So he was rather happy about the situation. The next day in walked the bookkeeper and said, "We are paying these bills." When he paid them he found himself overdrawn in his bank account. That is just this situation.

Mr. SNELL. Is that any justification whatever for what you are doing today?

Mr. KRAMER. Oh, yes; it is. I believe in the Government paying its honest bills.

Mr. SNELL. That is the poorest one you have presented.

Mr. KRAMER. But the House must pay its bills.

Mr. SNELL. There is absolutely no justification whatsoever. There might be some in the other case you have cited, but not in this.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from New York [Mr. SNELL] has expired.

Mr. SABATH. Will the gentleman yield me just 1 minute?

Mr. KRAMER. I yield the gentleman from Illinois 1 minute.

Mr. SABATH. I only wish to say that from the investigations I have made, Mr. Murray W. Garsson has not been indicted.

Mr. SNELL. I agreed to that. I agreed that the personnel was all right. I do not know anything against them.

Mr. SABATH. I am pleased to have the statement of the gentleman from New York that the personnel was all right. It was all right, all worked fearlessly and honestly, notwithstanding the unwarranted and unfounded attacks and charges made against two of them. I wish to submit that Mr. Murray W. Garsson was recommended to me by several Members as a man who was unafraid and could penetrate these many outrageous manipulations on the part of the protective committees, trust companies, receivers, trustees, and unscrupulous lawyers. He was formerly the assistant to the Assistant Secretary of Labor under the Hoover administration. Early in the investigation, when he began to step on the toes of some of the conniving gentlemen in New York, immediately the select committee received anonymous letters and innuendoes concerning Mr. Garsson, but no one could give me any proof that he had committed any wrong. In fact, to my knowledge, several of the large committees and bankers whom he started to investigate, engaged two private detective agencies to shadow and investigate him, all in the hope of finding something against him to be used to stay his activities, but that did not deter him. On the other hand, he was able to penetrate and disclose manipulations of these committees which were astounding. Nearly all of the judges in New York had so much confidence in him and the select committee that, before taking final action in many cases, they requested the select committee's reports. Not only has Mr. Garsson been subjected to this unjust attack, but the integrity of Mr. Joseph L. Tupy, of Chicago, has been mentioned. I want to say that there is no more honorable or honest man——

Mr. SNELL. We admit it, so what are you arguing about?

Mr. SABATH. Because I cannot leave unanswered the insinuations that have been made about Mr. Tupy. I refer to the remarks of the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER] concerning Mr. Tupy, and I want to say to him and the membership of the House that he has rendered invaluable service to the committee and it is unfair to besmirch his name. I have known him since childhood. He is honest and has loyally and conscientiously served the committee. Once before he was subjected to an attack by a Member of this House, and in that instance I obtained positive proof that the statements against him were unwarranted and that my colleague had acted upon misinformation furnished from unreliable sources.

As to the amount of taxes collected, here is a statement from the Bureau of Internal Revenue. They reported that at the end of June 1936, the sum of $11,617,000 had been collected. Since that time they have collected a great many more millions, most of it upon information that the select committee submitted to them.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the committee amendment.

The committee amendment was agreed to.

Mr. KRAMER. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the adoption of the resolution.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the passage of the resolution.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. SNELL) there were—ayes 83, noes 21.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground there is not a quorum present, and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER. The Chair has just counted. Evidently a quorum is not present. The Doorkeeper will close the doors, the Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members, and the Clerk will call the roll.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 201, nays 94, answered "present" 1, not voting 134, as follows:

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

The doors were opened.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, I move to lay on the table House Resolution 78, continuing the Select Committee to Investigate Real-Estate Bondholders' Reorganizations.

The motion was agreed to.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. DICKSTEIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and to insert therein a speech made by the Commissioner General of Immigration on the subject of deportation.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

GOVERNMENT PARTICIPATION IN WORLD'S FAIRS AT NEW YORK AND SAN FRANCISCO

Mr. WOODRUM. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of House Joint Resolution 454, making appropriations for participation by the United States in the New York World's Fair and in the world's fair to be held at the San Francisco Bay Exposition, Inc., both in 1939.

The Clerk read the title of the resolution.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia?

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I have promised the gentleman from New York [Mr. FISH] that for today I would object to this resolution. I shall do so, not on my own account but on his.

Mr. WOODRUM. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman reserve his objection for a moment to permit me to make a brief statement?

Mr. TABER. Yes.

Mr. WOODRUM. Mr. Speaker, on July 9 resolutions were passed for participation by the United States Government in the New York World's Fair and in the Golden Gate Exposition in California. The House authorized $3,000,000 for participation in the New York Fair and $1,500,000 for participation in the Golden Gate Exposition. The deficiency subcommittee had hearings on July 23. Because of the urgency of procuring funds for the New York Commission, we reported out House Joint Resolution 454, and we have sought since then to bring the matter up.

I would like to advise the Members that there is great emergency need for some funds for the functioning of the Federal Commission handling the Federal Government's participation in the New York World's Fair, and this delay, which is most unfortunate, is proving very embarrassing to the Federal Commission and is retarding the Federal Government's preparation for participation.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, when we pass these resolutions providing $3,000,000 for the New York Fair and $1,500,000 for the Golden Gate International Exposition, will an effort be made to continue the fair into the succeeding year and ask the Federal Government for an additional contribution to participate further than this one year? That has been done several times recently. Are these to be 1-year fairs or are they to be 2-year fairs?

Mr. WOODRUM. I may say to the gentleman from Pennsylvania that in all probability they will run for 2 years or more, so far as the fairs are concerned; but I may say to the gentleman further that the Committee on Appropriations has a definite, positive assurance from the commissioners of both expositions that the Federal Government will not be required or requested to put up any additional funds.

Mr. RICH. The gentleman is one of the leading members of the Committee on Appropriations. He must know that the Federal Government is now $36,773,000,000 in the "red." We cannot continue making these appropriations or other continuing appropriations under the circumstances.

Mr. WOODRUM. I may say to the gentleman from Pennsylvania that this resolution is to meet an emergency. It is a Budget-balancing resolution. If every city of the United States would hold a world's fair and there should be the same attendance that there will be at the California exposition and the New York exposition, we would balance the Budget next year from the Federal tax collected from these fairs.

Mr. RICH. I wish the gentleman would explain that to the Members of the House, because I do not think they understand such a thing as that is possible. The fact of the matter is I cannot quite fathom that myself, and I would like to have the gentleman go into that.

Mr. WOODRUM. The gentleman must not assume from that that the other Members will not fathom it.

Mr. RICH. I want to say that this Congress has not fathomed anything when it comes to the financing of this country, because we are doing just the opposite from what we say we are doing.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. WOODRUM].

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, I object.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. CURLEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the Appendix of the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. McFARLANE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that on tomorrow after the reading of the Journal, the disposition of business on the Speaker's table, and the conclusion of the legislative program in order for the day, I may be permitted to address the House for 30 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. DONDERO and Mr. SABATH asked and were given permission to revise and extend their own remarks in the RECORD.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA DAY

The SPEAKER. This is the day set aside for the consideration of District of Columbia business.

REGULATION OF PROCEEDINGS IN ADOPTION

Mr. PALMISANO. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (S. 2281) to regulate proceedings in adoption in the District of Columbia, which is similar to H. R. 7902, and ask for its immeidate consideration.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Maryland?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That jurisdiction is hereby conferred upon the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia to hear and determine petitions and decrees of adoption of any adult or child (hereinafter called adoptee) with authority to make such rules, not inconsistent with this act, as shall bring fully before the court for consideration the interests of the adoptee, the natural parents, the petitioner, and any other properly interested party. No petition shall be considered by the court unless petitioner's spouse joins in the petition or consents to the adoption.

Jurisdiction is conferred if either of the following circumstances exist:

(1) If petitioner is a legal resident of the District of Columbia;

(2) If petitioner has actually resided in the District of Columbia for at least 1 year.

The petition shall state, so far as known, the name, age, race, occupation, and address of the natural parents, when known, and of the petitioner, whether the petitioner is married or single, the age and sex of the adoptee, the property owned by the adoptee, and such other facts as the court may require.

The court shall thereupon, if the adoptee is under 21 years of age, issue a rule with copy of the petition attached, which shall be served in such manner as the court shall therein direct, directed to all parties to the petition who do not appear and consent to the adoption, and to the Board of Public Welfare to verify the allegations of the petition, to make a thorough investigation for the purpose of ascertaining if the adoptee is a proper subject for adoption and if the home of the petitioner is a suitable one for the adoptee and within a period not in excess of 60 days to report its findings with recommendations to the court. If an investigation already has been made by a qualified social agency, the Board of Public Welfare shall accept it instead of making one itself.

SEC. 2. If adoptee is under 21 years of age, no decree of adoption shall be made unless the court shall find that the following persons have consented to the adoption: Adoptee, if 14 or more years of age; and the natural parents or adoptive parents by a previous adoption, if living. The consent of the father of an adoptee born out of wedlock shall not be necessary unless he has both acknowledged the adoptee and contributed voluntarily to its support. The consent of a parent who is a minor shall not be voidable because of that minority.

If adoptee shall have attained the age of 21 years or over, the only consents which shall be required are those of such adoptee, and its spouse, if any.

The consent of a natural parent, or parents, or adoptive parents by a previous adoption, may be dispensed with (1) where after such notice as the court shall direct it shall appear to the court that such person or persons cannot be located; (2) where they have been permanently deprived of custody of the adoptee by court order; (3) where it shall appear to the court that they have abandond the adoptee and voluntarily failed to contribute to his or her support for a period of at least 1 year next preceding the date of the filing of the petition; or (4) where investigation has shown to the satisfaction of the court extraordinary cause why such consent should be dispensed with.

SEC. 3. After considering the petition, the consents, and such evidence as the parties and any other properly interested person may wish to present, the court may enter a final decree of adoption if it is satisfied (a) that adoptee is physically, mentally, and otherwise suitable for adoption by the petitioner; (b) that the petitioner is fit and able to give the adoptee a proper home and education; and (c) that the change will be for the best interests of adoptee.

No final decree of adoption shall be entered unless the adoptee shall have been living with the adoptor at least 6 months prior to the filing of the petition. If, however, it shall appear in the interests of the adoptee, the court may enter an interlocutory decree for adoption, which decree shall by its terms automatically become a final decree of adoption on a day therein named, which shall not be more than 6 months from the entry of such interlocutory decree unless such decree shall be set aside for cause shown. If it shall appear in the interests of the adoptee, the Board of Public Welfare shall visit the adoptee during the period of the interlocutory decree at regular intervals.

SEC. 4. Notice of a final decree of adoption shall be sent to the Bureau of Vital Statistics of the Health Department. This Bureau shall cause to be made a new record of the birth in the new name and with the names of the adoptor and shall then cause to be sealed and filed the original birth certificate with the order of the court and such sealed package shall be opened only by order of the court.

SEC. 5. Entry of a final decree of adoption shall establish the relation of natural parent and natural child between adoptor and adoptee for all purposes including mutual rights of inheritance and succession the same as if adoptee was born of adoptor, except that adoptee shall not inherit from collateral relatives of or the parents of adoptor although such collateral relatives and parents of adoptor shall have the right of inheritance from adoptee. All rights and duties including those of inheritance and succession between adoptee, his or her natural parents, their issue, collateral relatives, etc., shall be cut off. In the event one of the natural parents shall be the spouse of petitioner, then the rights and relations as between adoptee, such natural parent, and his or her parents and collateral relatives, including mutual rights of inheritance and succession, shall in nowise be altered.

The family name of the adoptee shall be changed to that of adoptor unless the decree shall otherwise provide, and the given name of the adoptee may be fixed or changed at the same time.

SEC. 6. Records and papers in adoption proceedings, after the petition is filed and prior to the entry of a final decree, shall be open to inspection by the parties or their attorneys and members of the Board of Public Welfare or their agents, upon order of the court. Upon the entry of a final decree the Board of Public Welfare and the clerk of the court shall seal all papers in the proceedings. Said seals shall not be broken, and said papers shall not be inspected by any person, including the parties to the proceeding, except upon order of the court. Application for leave to inspect papers in adoption proceedings shall be by petition and shall be granted only for extraordinary cause shown. The court may appoint a master to consider and investigate the facts upon which such a petition is based, who shall make his findings and recommendations to the court.

The clerk of the court shall keep a docket of all adoption proceedings which shall only be inspected upon order of the court upon the same conditions hereinabove set out for the inspection of papers.

SEC. 7. Section 395 (title 15, sec. 1, New Code) of the Code of Law of the District of Columbia is hereby repealed. The provisions hereof shall have no retroactive effect and shall not be construed as affecting in any way the rights and relations obtained by any decree of adoption entered heretofore, and all proceedings instituted and pending on the date of this enactment shall be carried to their final determination in accordance with the provisions of section 395 as if this act had not been enacted, and all orders and decrees entered therein shall remain valid and binding on all parties thereby affected.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment, which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. McCORMACK: Page 2, strike out the period in line 24 and the remainder of line 24 and lines 1 and 2, page 3, and insert in lieu thereof a comma and the following: "except that the foregoing provisions of this section relating to investigations and reports by the Board of Public Welfare shall not apply if an investigation has already been made by a qualified social agency, or by an organization, religious or otherwise, having under its care minors for adoption, no part of the net earnings of which inures to the benefit of any private shareholder or individual, and if such agency or institution appears in the proceedings and reports to the court the results of its investigation and its recommendations with respect to the adoption."

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, this amendment is agreeable to the chairman of the Committee on the District of Columbia. It is simply a clarifying amendment, not controversial in any way. Unless some Member wants it explained more fully, I will rest with the brief statement which I have just made.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, I offer another amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. McCORMACK: Page 6, after line 20, insert a new paragraph as follows:

"Notwithstanding any of the foregoing provisions of this section, no records or otherwise of any institution or social agency referred to in section 1 and filed in the proceedings pursuant to an order of the court, shall be open to inspection by any person except with the consent of such institution or agency."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

A similar House bill (H. R. 7902) was laid on the table.

FURTHER MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A further message from the Senate, by Mr. Frazier, its legislative clerk, announced that the Senate insists upon its amendments to the bill (H. R. 7051) entitled "An act authorizing the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes", disagreed to by the House; agrees to the conference asked by the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and appoints Mr. COPELAND, Mr. SHEPPARD, Mr. BAILEY, Mr. McNARY, and Mr. JOHNSON of California to be the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The message also announced that the Senate insists upon its amendments to the bill (H. R. 2260) entitled "An act to provide for appearance on behalf of and appeal by the United States in certain cases in which the constitutionality of acts of Congress is involved", disagreed to by the House; agrees to the conference asked by the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and appoints Mr. McCARRAN, Mr. O'MAHONEY, Mr. VAN NUYS, Mr. BORAH, and Mr. AUSTIN to be the conferees on the part of the Senate.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGE CONTROL ACT

Mr. PALMISANO. Mr. Speaker, I call up the bill (H. R. 7950) to amend the District of Columbia Alcoholic Beverage Control Act.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

Mr. PALMISANO. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that this bill may be considered in the House as in the Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Maryland?

Mr. TAYLOR of South Carolina. Mr. Speaker, I object.

Mr. PALMISANO. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H. R. 7950) to amend the District of Columbia Alcoholic Beverage Control Act; and pending that motion, Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the debate on this bill be limited to 20 minutes, one half to be controlled by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DIRKSEN] and the other half by myself.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Maryland?

There was no objection.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill H. R. 7950, with Mr. DRIVER in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The first reading of the bill was dispensed with.

Mr. PALMISANO. Mr. Chairman, this bill amends various sections of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Act of the District of Columbia. One of the amendments provides that in event the license of a licensee is revoked or suspended he may have the right of appeal to a court for review. Another amendment permits lunch rooms that have liquor licenses to serve liquor at the counter. At the present time it is possible for a person to obtain only beer or wine, but not liquor. In case there are three or four in a group and they go into a lunch room and want to buy liquor, all of them are compelled to go back and sit at a table. This causes a lot of hardship to the workingmen.

I really do not belive there is any opposition to this bill. The Commissioners of the District recommend it, and the opposition of the gentlemen who objected to the bill is on account of the fact he is opposed to a bill which follows this one and hopes that discussion on this bill will perhaps prolong the time.

Mr. REES of Kansas. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PALMISANO. I yield to the gentleman from Kansas.

Mr. REES of Kansas. The gentleman described this measure as being one that permits the serving of hard liquor at a counter in addition to being served at a table?

Mr. PALMISANO. That is right.

Mr. REES of Kansas. Is not this loosening up the law a little more than was the case before?

Mr. PALMISANO. Yes. I may say that the bartenders' union of the American Federation of Labor is 100 percent for this amendment. This is its amendment.

Mr. REES of Kansas. In other words, it is the amendment of the District bartenders?

Mr. PALMISANO. It seems to me the convenience of the workingman should be considered. In other words, the workingmen feel that if they have to go back to a table some tips are necessary, whereas if they drink at the counter sitting on the stools no tips are required.

Mr. REES of Kansas. Therefore, the gentleman is including the workingmen as well as the general public in this attempt to make the drinking of hard liquor easier than before?

Mr. PALMISANO. The argument before the committee was that this would help the workingman in that respect.

Mr. REES of Kansas. How could it help the workingman when he would have to spend more money for liquor?

Mr. PALMISANO. If a man wants to drink he is going to get his drink whether he has to go back to a table or can get it at the counter. The question here is whether he will be permitted to drink at the counter, sitting on the stool which is provided in front of the counter, or whether he will be compelled to go back to the rear of the room and take his drink there.

Mr. REES of Kansas. My interest in this is that this bill looks to me as though it is brought here principally in the interests of the bartenders and persons serving liquor, because by this measure we are loosening up the liquor law a little more than before.

Mr. PALMISANO. I think, after all is said and done, if we are going to have liquor laws we must accommodate the people who want to buy liquor and the people who serve it. If the gentleman does not want to drink or wants to satisfy the element that does not drink, then, of course, that is a different proposition.

Mr. REES of Kansas. The gentleman is correct; I am against selling liquor at all, so far as that is concerned.

Mr. PALMISANO. Then, of course, the whole liquor-license law is not approved of by the gentleman.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PALMISANO. I yield to the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. COCHRAN. Can the gentleman from Maryland tell the Committee where, in this country, in his city of Baltimore, in my city of St. Louis, or in any other city of the United States, prior to prohibition, women—and especially young girls and young men—could go into a public place and get liquor in the way they can today?

Mr. PALMISANO. This practice is an orphan to prohibition, developed during the prohibition era, when young ladies learned to drink behind closed doors. The American people, especially the women themselves, would not tolerate such a practice before prohibition.

Mr. COCHRAN. Did not the gentleman, as well as I myself, take the floor time and time again and state to the House, "We plead with you to repeal the eighteenth amendment. The evil, the saloon, is gone."

But now so-called taverns and under other names, there are about 25 times as many saloons—that is all they are—in this country as there were before prohibition.

May I add that if the distributors of liquor and officials in charge do not find a way to protect the youth of this country from hard liquor, there is going to be a prohibition fight in this country with which the other fight will be in no way comparable. As one who wanted the eighteenth amendment repealed, I can see this coming. [Applause.]

Mr. PALMISANO. I agree with the gentleman, and I may say his statement applies not only to hard liquor but to the product of the breweries as well. I regret many of the laws which have been enacted in various States. I believe the laws we had in the various States before prohibition were better than the laws today. I hope the day will come when the sale of liquor is out in the open. This idea of making people drink behind closed doors, making them go back in the room and sit at a table, prohibiting them from drinking at the counter, and so forth, is all camouflage. We want people to drink out in the open if they are going to drink. I hope drug stores and grocery stores will not have the right to sell liquor anywhere, because I believe the police officer on the post ought to know when a minor goes into a place where he or she can obtain something he has no right to obtain, so he can then and there stop that minor; or if he should see a child come out of a liquor store, the presumption of law would be that the child had something it had no right to have. The way it is today, drug stores, grocery stores, and all kinds of stores sell everything under the sun. I want to prevent this, and I hope the day will come when it will be prevented.

Mr. MASON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PALMISANO. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. MASON. Will the gentleman agree with me that the important thing in the consideration of this amendment is not the position a man is in when he is drinking, whether he is standing up or sitting down, but the condition he is in afterward. It makes no difference whether he is standing at the counter or sitting at the table.

Mr. PALMISANO. In response to the question of the gentleman from Illinois, I may say that it is better to permit a man to drink at the counter, where the man in charge can see whether or not the customer is under the influence of liquor. In such a case the responsibility lies with the man in charge. When the customer is back in the room 15, 20, or 50 feet away from the bartender, the bartender is unable to observe the condition of the individual, and this is a bad situation.

Mr. DONDERO. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PALMISANO. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. DONDERO. On page 2 of the report, in connection with section 2, it is stated that the Alcohol Beverage Control Board has considered this proposal and is opposed to it. Is this statement correct?

Mr. PALMISANO. Yes.

Mr. DONDERO. Also, the Commissioners reported on this proposal and recommend unfavorable action?

Mr. PALMISANO. The gentleman is correct. However, as I have stated in answer to a previous question, the Federation of Labor and the working classes as a whole want this amendment. There is no reason why a man should be able to get a drink in a back room and not be able to get it right in front, where the public may observe the gentleman drinking as well as the man serving him.

Mr. DONDERO. The reason given by the Board is that this is a step in the direction of the return of the old saloon.

Mr. PALMISANO. What is the difference whether it is the old saloon or not? The point is that you ought to be in a position to observe the man who is waiting on the customer and the customer himself, to see whether the latter is in condition to take a drink.

Mr. DONDERO. The gentleman thinks the House should ignore the action of the two Boards entirely?

Mr. PALMISANO. I think so.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 5 minutes.

Mr. Chairman, before we get into a wide-open discussion of the entire liquor and prohibition situation in the country let us take a look at this bill, so that no one will be misinformed as to its contents. The bill is very simple.

The first section of the bill provides for a review in the District courts if the Commissioners or the Alcoholic Beverage Board undertake to revoke or suspend the license. I think everybody is agreed that if someone, with bona-fide intentions, lays down his money and gets a license and that license ultimately is revoked or suspended, he ought to have the right to go into court and there contest the merits and the substance of the cause before a final order of revocation or suspension is imposed. This is item no. 1, and no one can quarrel with this section of the bill. It simply preserves the right of judicial review.

The second section confers upon lunch counters in this town the right to sell hard drinks. I am probably more responsible for this section than anybody else, and I will tell you why it is there. In the first place, it is there because the bartenders in this District are interested and, secondly, because of an experience I saw over here on the corner. There is a little place over there that has a counter with some stools in it, and it also has two tables in it. They can have a license to sell hard drinks; but if the two tables are occupied and someone comes in for what the Scotchman calls a little snifter, he cannot sit down at the counter and get a drink. As a further instance, you may have on Pennsylvania Avenue a store with a 30-foot front that has a counter and 50 stools, where the substantial revenue comes from the food that is sold, while liquor is a secondary consideration. He cannot get a license, while next door to him may be a store or restaurant with 40 stools and 2 tables, so that you can sit down at one of the tables and get a drink, and such a place can receive a license. It looks to me like a rather unfair discrimination, and, after all the District Committee was only trying to put this in line so as to operate fairly with respect to all lunch rooms. There are some who are opposed to this provision. There are some restaurants that are opposed to it; but is there any reason why you should deny a license to one businessman in the District of Columbia as against another simply because he has stools in his restaurant instead of having, perhaps, half as many stools, and a couple of tables where people can take a drink?

The third section deals with advertising and notice of hearings. Under present conditions, if you have a license, off sale or on sale, in the District of Columbia, and the time comes for renewal at the end of the fiscal year, you have to go through all the rigmarole of advertising, notice, and so forth, which is absolutely unnecessary. Therefore this is nothing but a clarifying amendment.

The fourth section deals with bonds. You will recall that when we wrote the original act for the District of Columbia we did not have any stamp provision, so that they could buy their stamps and affix them to the bottles, and therefore we had a bond provision inserted to protect the District, and in a way this affected the degree of responsibility involved. Inasmuch as they must now buy the stamps, this bond provision is absolutely unnecessary and therefore we have undertaken to do away with it.

Section 5 deals with posting of notice when, for instance, there is a suspension or revocation of a license, and I will tell you how this works. There is a young chap here in town who runs a night club. I am not going to mention any names. It is a very decorous place. Now, what happened was this. He was behind in the payment of his bills, and under the regulations as imposed by the A. B. C. Board, if his credit is not in good standing the wholesalers have to report him. This young man failed to pay his bills. He had only been in business a short time. They reported him to the A. B. C. Board, and the result was that under existing law they had to suspend his license. I think they suspended it for 2 days. It then became necessary, under the law, for one of the officers of the District to go there and put a sign in his window or on the door announcing the fact he had been guilty of an infraction of the law and his license suspended, probably over a week end. There was no moral turpitude involved in the matter. It was just a case where he could not reach in his pocket or go into his bank account and pay his bills. It seems to me this is an injustice to a business enterprise of this kind, because if the patrons were to come there and see this sign, the ordinary inference would be that here is a gentleman who has violated the law, because we so seldom dissociate those violations of the law that involve moral turpitude from those that do not. So we feel that some discretion ought to be reposed in the A. B. C. Board to post the suspension sign or not, so as not to unfairly injure a man with respect to his business conduct.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself the additional 5 minutes.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIRKSEN. Let me finish this short statement, and then I shall yield.

The final section of the bill relates to bringing liquor, wines, and so forth, into the District of Columbia. I simply wish to say that in a great many States they have a provision in their liquor laws now whereby you cannot bring in more than 1 gallon, because, if you could, there would be a chance of violating, or at least avoiding or evading, the revenue laws of that State. You gentlemen who come from New York have such a provision in your liquor law. This was introduced at the instance of Mr. SHAFER of Michigan, and it seeks to put a limit of 1 gallon on the amount that they can bring in. Over and above that would make it an offense under this act. The only reason it is put in there is to discourage the idea of picking up wines and liquors, for instance, in some other jurisdiction, where there is no State tax, and bringing it in here and thereby avoiding the tax. It is essentially a reciprocal provision in conformity with the laws of other jurisdictions.

There you have the bill in six sections; it seeks to amend and perfect the existing laws of the District of Columbia.

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIRKSEN. Yes.

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. As I understand the gentleman, under the present law, you must sit down at a table in order to drink hard liquor?

Mr. DIRKSEN. And may I remind the gentleman of the time when we had that great debate on the floor as to whether the bend should be in the knee or the elbow, and the knee won?

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. Under this measure it permits the service of hard liquor to those sitting on stools.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Yes.

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. But you must sit on the stool in order to get the liquor.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Yes.

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. You cannot stand up and get a drink at the bar?

Mr. DIRKSEN. No.

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. Why not let the fellow get a drink who stands up?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I will say to my friend that we have gone through the whole gamut of hypocrisy on the thing, and find that one can get just as intoxicated sitting on a stool or at a table as standing at the bar. It makes no difference. It is, after all, a question of appetite and a question of education rather than of putting on this strange hypocritical restraint which seeks to make people good by legislative fiat.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIRKSEN. Yes.

Mr. McCORMACK. Do I understand that a delicatessen store in the District, where they have a license, can sell to people sitting at a table? I understand if one of the sections becomes a law anybody can go in there with a child, who may be in there buying something to eat, and get hard liquor at the counter.

Mr. DIRKSEN. He cannot get a license, in the first instance, under this bill.

Mr. McCORMACK. Assuming he has one now. Do drug stores have licenses?

Mr. DIRKSEN. They do not have on-sale license.

Mr. McCORMACK. I do not know anything about the law, and I am seeking information.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Has the gentleman ever gone into a drug store and gotten a drink?

Mr. McCORMACK. I am against prohibition, but I am somewhat interested in liquor. Can a delicatessen store have a license?

Mr. DIRKSEN. A certain kind of off-sale license. We have a dozen or 15 different kinds of licenses. It would make you woozy to try to keep in mind all of the licenses we have. The application of this section is to restaurants. The substantial portion of the revenues in such institutions must come from the sale of food. Drink is an incidental. All this seeks to do is to put a stool restaurant on a parity with one that has stools and tables. That is all.

Mr. McCORMACK. If that is all, it is enough to make me vote against the bill.

Mr. DONDERO. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIRKSEN. Yes.

Mr. DONDERO. The Commissioners of the District of Columbia are not here, nor are the members of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, to tell this House why they oppose this bill. Can the gentleman from Illinois tell us?

Mr. DIRKSEN. Yes. What I say is said not in a spirit of reproach or criticism of the Commission. Every one of them are gentlemen and scholars and have done a very splendid executive job for the District of Columbia. I have also the highest regard for the members of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board. They have been operating under the first law permitting the sale of liquor in the District of Columbia, and there is that tendency, that inertia, that probably makes them take a position against any innovation of any kind. I suppose I might be in a similar condition myself, but we must not forget that it is the Congress, after all, that is legislating for the District and not the A. B. C. Board.

Mr. DONDERO. What is the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board here for?

Mr. DIRKSEN. It is essentially an administrative body, and every once in a while we call them before the Committee on the District to give us their views. It is not a legislative group in any sense.

Mr. DONDERO. They have jurisdiction over this entire subject and rules and regulations.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Yes; of enforcement. They are to enforce whatever Congress writes into the bill. It is not a policy-making body except insofar as some regulations are concerned.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Illinois has expired. All time has expired. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the first paragraph of section 6 of the District of Columbia Alcoholic Beverage Control Act, as amended, is hereby amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 6. The right, power, and jurisdiction to issue, transfer, revoke, and suspend all licenses under this act shall be vested solely in the Board. In the event of the revocation or of the suspension by the Board of a license, the licensee may have a review of the Board's decision before the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia, sitting as an equity court, and the court may affirm, modify, or reverse the finding of the Board as the facts and law of the case may warrant."

Mr. COLLINS. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. COLLINS: Strike out all of the matter commencing in line 3, page 1, and ending in line 3, page 2.

Mr. COLLINS. Mr. Chairman, in order to revoke a license in the District of Columbia at the present time, the matter must be considered by the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, which has its investigators in the field, and who hear the question of revocation. If in their judgment conditions are such that a license should be revoked, they so order. There is an appeal from that to the Board of Commissioners of the District of Columbia. That is the procedure at the present time, and it has been a very efficacious way of handling the revocation of licenses in the District. This act, or the first section of the act, the one about which I am speaking at this point, undertakes to repeal that and permits the revocations to be appealed to the courts of the District for decision.

It means that it will be a very difficult matter to secure the revocation of a license.

This measure was submitted to the Board of Commissioners of the District of Columbia, and the report states this:

The Alcoholic Beverage Control Board is of the opinion that the present method of noting appeals to the Commissioners is more expedient and efficacious. No particular abuse has been complained of. They invite attention to the fact that the proposal authorizes a review for a 1-day suspension as well as a 30-day suspension, and believes that such practice will result in delay, with hampering effect upon the enforcement of the law—

And so forth. I think that a good system that has been in vogue for several years and about which no one has complained should not be set aside and a new method attempted, all of which ultimately would mean delay in the revocation of licenses.

Mr. LANZETTA. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COLLINS. I yield.

Mr. LANZETTA. Does not the gentleman think that in view of the investments that are made in connection with these liquor licenses they should not be revoked by a board such as this Board, and that a man should have a right to defend himself and protect his property?

Mr. COLLINS. Well, we have the Federal Trade Commission that decides questions immensely more important than the revocation of a liquor license. We have the Interstate Commerce Commission that is deciding questions infinitely more important than the revocation of a liquor license. If it is the disposition of this House to turn over to the liquor dealers of the District the enforcement of the liquor laws and put no restraint whatever upon persons who dispense liquors, this is a fine beginning to make.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Mississippi has expired.

Mr. PALMISANO. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, this amendment to this law, it is true, was opposed by the Commissioners, but I want to give you the reason why this amendment was introduced and asked to be adopted. They have adopted a system of stationing one or two policemen outside of a place. In one instance the testimony showed that a policeman stood 300 yards away from a place to recognize people he thought were under the influence of liquor, and on the testimony of that one police officer the man's license was likely to be revoked or suspended. Licenses in the District of Columbia are more valuable than in any other cities, for this reason: They have placed a limitation on the number of licenses. You can obtain $5,000 for a license from someone who is willing to sell. The Commissioners, in time, or the A. B. C. Board, might err in taking the testimony of one individual police officer in the District of Columbia. We are all subject to err. When that is done, that man has a right to take it to the court and have the testimony presented.

Let me give you an illustration. I have asked for the records of the A. B. C. Board in cases where they suspended licenses and revoked licenses. In many instances they saw a man come out of a place that the officer thought was under the influence of liquor. He would not take that individual back into the place and say, "Did you sell this man?" or ask the individual, "Did you buy from this man?" They would simply take that individual to the police court. The proprietor knows nothing at all about it, and finally he gets a summons to show cause why his license should not be suspended or revoked. I say that is not fair. At least the liquor dealer is entitled to know whenever there is a charge laid against him, and to be confronted with the individual right then and there so that he may be able to obtain witnesses who are in the place at that particular time in order that he may set up a defense. It is for that reason that we ask not for an appeal when a license is revoked or suspended. We give to the liquor license board absolute power in granting licenses in the first place, but we say the individual ought to be protected against any one person in having his license revoked or suspended. That is all we ask.

So I say the purpose of this is to prevent an abuse by any one individual of the police department who may see a customer coming out of a place. For instance, if I would go into a place under the influence of liquor and the man in charge refused to sell me a drink, and by chance I may be put out of the place, when I get outside a police officer happens to come along. He picks me up and he takes me to the police court and he charges that individual with violating the law, and the individual, even though observing the law, may lose his license or have it suspended.

So I appeal to you to vote against this amendment offered by the gentleman from Mississippi and permit this to exist, because it will not hurt anyone. If you cannot trust the courts, then let us wipe them out.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Maryland has expired.

Mr. SACKS. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. I shall not take the full 5 minutes, but I feel this amendment is important enough to explain. At the present time in the District of Columbia the A. B. C. Board took upon itself to suspend the license of individuals who do not pay their bills to the wholesalers on the day due—in 30 days. That was brought out in the investigation. There has grown up in this District a sort of tacit agreement amongst the wholesalers and others that if the bills are not paid the man who holds the license has it automatically suspended.

Mr. COLLINS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SACKS. I yield.

Mr. COLLINS. That is the law that the gentleman's committee passed.

Mr. SACKS. It is not the law; it is a regulation which grew up because the law is not clear but is a bit ambiguous. That was brought out at the hearings.

The important thing is the fact that the committee found that the A. B. C. Board and the Commissioners were taking evidence in cases of revocation and also of suspension and would suspend in certain cases but not in other similar cases. In looking over the situation, the members of the committe found that great inequities were done by the Board. I believe that we can trust our courts. This act does not give anybody but the courts of this District the right to review a suspension or revocation. The Board still has the right to revoke, the Board still has the right to suspend, but this just gives the person affected the right to have his case heard on appeal in the courts of the District. Many licenses have been suspended and revoked by the Board on evidence which, in my opinion, was not legal evidence. So if this provision is written into law it will prove to be a protection for the public, the licensee, and also the Board.

Mr. LANZETTA. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SACKS. I yield.

Mr. LANZETTA. I understand that the report states that the Commissioners are against this provision being in the bill. Is that right?

Mr. SACKS. Yes.

Mr. LANZETTA. Would not that be natural?

Mr. SACKS. Certainly. The Commissioners are against it because they do not want to have it reviewed by the court; they want to have the power themselves.

Mr. LANZETTA. They do not want their powers curtailed.

Mr. SACKS. There should be some control over the Board. If we give the courts the right and the power to review this evidence, we shall get better control.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SACKS. I yield.

Mr. LUCAS. Does the gentleman have the same philosophy about the Labor Relations Board that he has about the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board of the District of Columbia?

Mr. SACKS. I feel the same way about a lot of boards. I believe that there ought to be some appeal from their decisions. As to the Labor Relations Board, their power of control is subject to judicial review.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Mississippi.

Mr. COLLINS. Mr. Chairman, may the amendment be again reported?

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the Clerk will again read the amendment for information.

There was no objection.

The Clerk again read the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Mississippi.

The amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 2. That the first paragraph of subsection (g) of section 11 of the District of Columbia Alcoholic Beverage Control Act, as amended, is hereby amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 11. (g) Retailer's license, class C: Such a license shall be issued only for a bona-fide restaurant, hotel, or club, or a passenger-carrying marine vessel serving meals, or a club car or a dining car on a railroad. It shall authorize the holder thereof to keep for sale and to sell spirits, wine, and beer at the place therein described for consumption only in said place. Except in the case of clubs, hotels, and passenger-carrying marine vessels serving meals in interstate commerce of 100 miles or more, no beverage shall be sold or served to a customer in any closed container. In the case of restaurants and passenger-carrying marine vessels and club cars or dining cars on a railroad, said spirits, wine, and beer shall be sold or served only to persons seated at public tables or at bona-fide lunch counters, except that spirits, wine, and beer may be sold or served to assemblages of more than six individuals in a private room when such room has been previously approved by the Board. In the case of hotels, said beverages may be sold and served only in the private room of a registered guest or to persons seated at public tables or at bona-fide lunch counters or to assemblages of more than six individuals in a private room, when such room has been previously approved by the Board. And in the case of clubs, said beverages may be sold and served in the private room of a member or guest of a member, or to persons seated at tables. No license shall be issued to a club which has not been established for at least 3 months immediately prior to the making of the application for such license. All alcoholic beverages offered for sale or sold by the holder of such licenses may be displayed and dispensed in full sight of the purchaser."

Mr. COLLINS. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. COLLINS: Strike out all of the matter commencing in line 4, page 2, and ending in line 12 on page 3.

Mr. COLLINS. Mr. Chairman, under section 2 of this bill, as presented by the District legislative committee, there will be an increase in the number and a widening of the character of places in the District where hard liquors may be sold.

Mr. PALMISANO. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield right there? I know he wants to be fair.

Mr. COLLINS. Mr. Chairman, I must decline to yield for the moment. That is the purpose of section 2; to permit hard liquors to be sold in an additional number of places.

The amendment that I have offered proposes to leave the law as it is now. That is the difference in the position that I am taking and the position sponsored by the District legislative committee. The committee's proposition is generally spoken of as the high-school or elementary-school amendment; in other words, every lunch counter in the District of Columbia could be licensed to sell hard liquor. It would go even beyond opening up the old-fashioned saloon in the District of Columbia. Stripped of all surplus verbiage, that is exactly what it would mean. It would permit liquor to be sold at lunch counters so that you or I, or almost anybody else, young and old, could walk up to a lunch counter and get hard liquor because of its being a food-handling place. It would mean that in outlying sections at food dispensaries patronized by motorists and elsewhere all over the District liquor would be sold at lunch counters, which could only result in there being many additional places where hard liquor will be sold in the District of Columbia.

Instead of making it a more difficult matter to get a license, this proposition would open the door and let everybody who might wish to operate a delicatessen establishment, soda fountain, or any other place where food is dispensed sell liquor.

Let us see what the Commissioners have to say about this, for, after all, they are still the Commissioners of the District, and I think that on the question of the regulation of traffic in liquor they speak with as much wisdom as anyone to whom we might turn. Here is what they say:

Section 2 proposes—

And I want to strike it out, to leave the law as it is—the amendment of subsection (g) of section 11 by providing that spirits may be served "at bona-fide lunch counters"—

And that phase "at bona-fide lunch counters" is in quotation marks—

as well as tables as now provided under existing law. The Alcoholic Beverage Control Board has considered this proposal and is opposed to the same for the reason that it is considered to be a step in the direction of the return of the saloon. The Commissioners have reported on this proposal and recommended unfavorable action.

You will find that statement in the report of the committee which you have before you.

We have already fixed it so that it will be practically impossible, except after the lapse of a long period of time, to revoke a license. If we do not vote the committee's proposition down, it just looks to me like we are going to have with us all of the places, good and bad, now operating, and, in addition, a thousand other places where hard liquor may be sold where it may not now be sold, and then we shall have a beautiful place in which to live.

Mr. PALMISANO. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I am sorry the gentleman from Mississippi would not yield to me so that I could correct a misstatement he made while discussing the amendment he offered. He tells you, if we permit this law to be enacted, that in substance you will create liquor stores in lunchrooms, which is not true. As the law reads today, not one single license will be obtained in the District whether this bill is passed or not.

This bill does one thing and one thing only, and the best way to illustrate it is by assuming that this is the counter and this is the table. You can obtain your beer and wine sitting on a stool here, but your friend will have to sit at the table, within 1 foot of the counter, in order to obtain liquor. Now, what difference is there?

As I stated, not one new license will be obtained under this bill. It simply says that a man who has a liquor license will be permitted to sell liquor at the counter with meals the same as he is permitted to sell liquor at the table, and that is all there is to it.

What is the difference whether in the same room you sit at the table within a foot of the counter or sit at the counter? That is the whole question.

Mr. Chairman, I hope the amendment will be voted down and this bill passed under the recommendation of the Federation of Labor and the workingmen who cannot afford to pay tips when drinking at the table. He may obtain his drink with his meal direct from the man who serves him instead of having a waiter intervene.

Mr. REES of Kansas. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PALMISANO. I yield to the gentleman from Kansas.

Mr. REES of Kansas. The gentleman has stated that under this section no more licenses would be issued?

Mr. PALMISANO. That is true.

Mr. REES of Kansas. You mean they cannot be issued?

Mr. PALMISANO. The A. B. C. has set a definite number and that number is limited. No other license will be granted under this provision.

Mr. REES of Kansas. But if a man goes out of business there is no reason why some other lunchroom cannot get a license?

Mr. PALMISANO. That is true whether we pass this bill or not.

Mr. REES of Kansas. I just wanted to correct the situation as stated by the gentleman from Mississippi when he said lunch counters would be able to get licenses. There is nothing to prevent that under the present law, is there?

Mr. PALMISANO. There will not be one single license granted under this bill. It simply says to the man who now has a license that he may sell at the counter, as I tried to illustrate. He has a table and he has a counter. Today he may serve at the table within one foot of the counter, but he cannot serve at the counter. In other words, I cannot obtain my drink at the counter. I have to move around about a foot and then the waiter will come and bring me my drink within a foot or two of the counter.

Mr. REES of Kansas. Under this bill he could take out the tables and put in counters, could he not?

Mr. PALMISANO. Well, they would have to have stools anyway. He has to serve meals. Of course they have regulations.

Mr. LUCAS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PALMISANO. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. LUCAS. As I understand it, the District Commissioners are opposed to this bill?

Mr. PALMISANO. They are opposed to the amendment. This bill was proposed by the Federation of Labor, the Bartenders' Union and others, their contention being if three men come in together, one would perhaps want a drink of liquor. The others might want beer or wine. The beer and wine could be served at the counter, but the one who wanted the liquor would have to separate from the other two. Consequently, the three of them would go back to a table and necessarily, all of them wanting to be good sports, although not being able to afford it, would have to pay a little tip.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. COLLINS].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. COLLINS) there were—ayes 33, noes 41.

So the amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 3. That subsection (b) of section 14 of the District of Columbia Alcoholic Beverage Control Act, as amended, is hereby amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 14. (b) Before granting a retailer's license, except a retailer's license class E or class F, the Board shall give notice by advertisement published once a week and for at least 2 weeks in some newspaper of general circulation published in the District of Columbia. The advertisement so published shall contain the name of the applicant and a description by street and number, or other plain designation, of the particular location for which the license is requested and the class of license desired. Such notice shall state that remonstrants are entitled to be heard before the granting of such licenses and shall name the time and place of such hearing. There shall also be posted by the Board a notice, in a conspicuous place, on the outside of the premises. This notice shall state that remonstrants are entitled to be heard before the granting of such license and shall name the same time and place for such hearing as set out in the public advertisement; and, if remonstrance against the granting of such license is filed, no final action shall be taken by the Board until the remonstrant shall have had an opportunity to be heard, under rules and regulations prescribed by said Board. Any person willfully removing, obliterating, marring, or defacing said notice shall be deemed guilty of a violation of this act. This subsection shall not apply to the issuance of a license to a retailer for any place of business if such retailer is the holder of a license of the same class for the same place and if said last-mentioned license is in effect on the date the application for the new license is filed."

SEC. 4. That subsection (d) of section 14 of the District of Columbia Alcoholic Beverage Control Act, as amended, is hereby amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 14. (d) A separate application shall be filed with respect to each place of business. The required license fee shall be paid to the collector of taxes and his duplicate receipt shall accompany the application for license. In the event the license is denied the fee shall be returned. Every such application shall be verified by the affidavit of the applicant, if an individual, or by all of the members of a partnership, or by the president or vice president of a corporation. If any false statement is knowingly made in such application, or in any accompanying statement under oath which may be required by the Commissioners or the Board, the person making the same shall be deemed guilty of perjury. The making of a false statement in any such application, or in any such accompanying statement, whether made with or without the knowledge or consent of the applicant, shall, in the discretion of the Board, constitute sufficient cause for the revocation of the license.",

SEC. 5. That the second paragraph of section 17 of the District of Columbia Alcoholic Beverage Control Act, as amended, is hereby amended to read as follows:

"That in the event the Board at any time shall order the suspension of any license a notice may be posted by the Board, in a conspicuous place, on the outside of the licensed premises, at or near the main street entrance thereto; which notice shall state that the license theretofore issued to the licensee has been suspended, and shall state the time for which said license is suspended, and state that the suspension is ordered because of a violation of the District of Columbia Alcoholic Beverage Control Act, or of the Commissioners' regulations adopted under authority of said District of Columbia Alcoholic Beverage Control Act."

SEC. 6. That the District of Columbia Alcoholic Beverage Control Act, as amended, is hereby further amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section:

"SEC. 39. (a) It shall be unlawful for anyone, except a public or common carrier or the holder of a manufacturer's, wholesaler's, or retailer's license issued under this act, to transport, import, bring, or ship or cause to be transported, imported, brought, or shipped into the District of Columbia from without the District of Columbia any wines, spirits, or beer in a quantity in excess of 1 gallon at any one time.

"(b) No public or common carrier shall transport or bring into the District of Columbia wine, spirits, or beer in a quantity in excess of 1 gallon at any one time for delivery to any one person in the District of Columbia.

"(c) The provisions of this section shall not apply to bona-fide processors of old stocks who are moving into the District of Columbia nor to embassies or diplomatic representatives of foreign countries, nor to wines imported for religious or sacramental purposes, nor to wine, spirits, and beer to be delivered to the holder of a manufacturer's, wholesaler's, or retailer's license issued under this act.

"(d) The penalty for violation of this section shall consist of the forfeiture of the beverages transported, imported, or shipped or caused to be transported, imported, brought, or shipped in violation of this section, and a fine of not more than $500 or imprisonment for not more than 6 months."

Mr. PALMISANO. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. PALMISANO: Page 6, line 16, at the end of the line add the following: "other than the holder of a manufacturer's, wholesaler's, or retailer's license issued under this act."

Mr. PALMISANO. Mr. Chairman, I may say this is a clarifying amendment. It appeared that a common carrier might not be able to receive any assignments. We were trying to protect the revenues of the District of Columbia. This is the amendment recommended by the committee. It was thought a common carrier could not bring anything into the District and this amendment corrects that situation.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. PALMISANO].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. SACKS. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. SACKS: Page 7, at the end of section 39, insert a new section, as follows:

"SEC. 40. The word 'neighborhood' as used in paragraph (5), section 14, of the act of January 24, 1934, shall be defined as that territory lying within a radius of 600 feet of the premises for which the license is to be issued."

Mr. SACKS. Mr. Chairman, this is a clarifying amendment in regard to a situation that was brought out during the hearings which the Committee on the District of Columbia had with the A. B. C. Board. Under the present act a beer license is issued upon an application which must be consented to by a majority of the people living within a radius of 600 feet. In drawing the act with reference to hard liquor the words "600 feet" were omitted, and the act merely states "neighborhood." As a matter of fact, the Board has been deciding its cases on the basis of allowing people living within 600 feet of the premises concerned to come in and protest the issuance of a liquor license. By this amendment I propose merely to bring this provision in line with the act and with what the Board is doing, so there can be no question of any new powers being granted. Before our committee appeared many people who stated that the Board was arbitrary because it applied the 600-foot rule. Actually, this is the same rule the Board applies in respect of the issuance of a beer license. The "600 feet" provision was in the beer section of the act but was left out of the section with reference to hard liquor. The Board is applying the 600-foot rule. Therefore this amendment will only make this rule a part of the act bearing upon the issuance of class A licenses.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SACKS. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylania.

Mr. RICH. Previous to this act was not the requirement 800 feet?

Mr. SACKS. No; that was never the requirement. The practice has been to apply the 600-foot rule. The beer section contains these very words, but they were left out of the hard-liquor section. This merely brings it in line.

Mr. RICH. The Board has granted licenses even though it received complaints from within the 600-foot line.

Mr. SACKS. No; it did not. It held hearings.

Mr. RICH. How about the license issued to premises near the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, where those within 600 feet protested the granting of the license but the Board granted the license over the protest? Reverend Sizoo, who was formerly here, complained to the Board and had a lot of people complain, but, nevertheless, the Board granted the requested license.

Mr. SACKS. May I say in answer to the gentleman from Pennsylvania that what I am discussing now is not the question of discretion in issuing licenses.

Mr. RICH. I want to show the gentleman the Board grants licenses even though complaints are received.

Mr. SACKS. Of course, my amendment is not directed to that point. Such a provision is already in the act. We have already given the Board discretion to issue licenses. It has the discretion and issues licenses after hearings. As far as I am concerned, if the gentleman feels the law is not proper, he should introduce a bill in line with his ideas. However, this point is not now before us. My amendment merely clarifies a situation which is now being covered by regulations.

Mr. RICH. Does the gentleman think if I should introduce a bill placing the limit at 1,000 or 1,500 feet it would do any good?

Mr. SACKS. That is for the Congress to say.

Mr. RICH. Does the gentleman think the House would pass such a bill?

Mr. SACKS. I do not know. I suggest that the gentleman introduce such a bill and find out.

Mr. GREEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SACKS. I yield to the gentleman from Florida.

Mr. GREEN. In practice, now, are they selling hard liquor as near as the 600-foot zone?

Mr. SACKS. What does the gentleman mean by the "600-foot zone"? This amendment does not apply to a zone. This merely states that anybody living within the radius of 600 feet from the premises involved can protest the issuance of a license. This does not establish zones. The provision I refer to is now part of the law covering beer licenses and part of the regulations of the Board with respect to issuing hard-liquor licenses, but it is not in the section covering liquor licenses, being inadvertently omitted.

Mr. GREEN. I had the impression that protests were being made, even though the people lived more than 600 feet distant from the premises.

Mr. SACKS. No; they are not.

Mr. GREEN. Would not this amendment have a tendency to permit the sale of hard liquor anywhere beer could be sold?

Mr. SACKS. No; that is not so, because there are other regulations which govern the issuance of licenses for hard liquors which the Board applies. My amendment creates no more power, nor does it ease or facilitate the issuance of hard-liquor licenses.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. SACKS].

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. REES of Kansas. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, this measure is going to pass by a large majority, I know; but may I call attention for just a moment to page 4 of the report, which reads as follows:

Section 2 proposes to amend subsection G of section 11 by providing that spirits may be served at "bona-fide lunch counters" as well as at tables. The Alcoholic Beverage Control Board is opposed to the passage of this provision for the reason that it would, in their opinion, be a further step to the return of the saloon.

That statement is in the report attached to this bill, but it was not discussed by the sponsors of this legislation.

About the only reason given by those sponsoring the bill for the passage of this legislation seems to be that the Bartenders' Union wants it passed. Nothing has been said about a consumers' union wanting this bill. No parent-teachers' association wants it. No league of women voters' club has made any demand for it. As a matter of fact, there is no great public demand for the passage of the measure. Here is a group—the Bartenders' Union—which states it is perfectly agreeable to those who sell liquor in Washington that this measure be passed, and that is the group that is recommending the passage of this bill today. The sponsors of this bill tell you it will not make any difference. They say there is a very little difference but not much between selling liquor at the tables and selling liquor at the counters. The gentleman from Mississippi has called your attention to the fact that this measure will lead to the sale of hard liquor in restaurants and lunch counters, anywhere and everywhere a license may be obtained.

When the prohibitory law was repealed, the public was given to understand there would be no return of the saloon, and yet the report attached to this bill states that the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board is opposed to the passage of section 2, for the reason that it would, in their opinion, be a further step to the return of the saloon.

After all, the camel continually seeks to get his nose under the tent. Here is one more instance of what may be called an opening wedge, if you please. There is no good, sound, sufficient, or sensible reason, in my opinion, why this bill should be passed. It is poor legislation. There is no public demand for it, and nobody in particular wants it, except the Bartenders' Union. They are asking for its passage. I think the bill should be voted down.

The pro-forma amendment was withdrawn.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. RICH: Page 7, at the end of section 39, insert a new section, as follows:

"SEC. 40. The word 'neighborhood', as used in paragraph 5, section 14, of the act of January 24, 1934, shall be defined as that territory lying within a radius of 1,500 feet of the premises for which the license is to be issued."

Mr. RICH. Mr. Chairman, I refer the committee to the remarks of my colleague, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. SACKS], who offered an amendment similar to this providing a radius of 800 feet within which objections could be made to the issuance of these licenses. I am offering this amendment to see what the committee will do with respect to protecting the homes of the citizens of Washington in the issuance of these licenses. The amendment I have offered provides that people may object to the issuance of such licenses when they reside within a radius of 1,500 feet, and I present the amendment to the committee to determine whether or not the committee is interested in protecting the homes of the city of Washington by allowing them to protest against the sale of liquor within this radius of their homes.

Mr. BEITER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RICH. I yield.

Mr. BEITER. The gentleman's amendment not only protects the homes but likewise the churches and schools.

Mr. RICH. It certainly does; and I cannot refrain from calling attention to the fact that the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church objected very strenuously to the granting of a license within 800 feet of its premises, but the Board that we have set up here in Washington granted the license.

I hope you will see fit to vote in favor of the amendment.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, my good friend and colleague the gentleman from Pennsylvania wants to see what the House will do with this 1,500-foot amendment. I hope they will satisfy his curiosity by simply throwing it out of the window almost unanimously, because that is where it belongs.

When the gentleman brings up this question of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, he should remember that some judgment, as well as common sense, has to be exercised with respect to many of these things. Here is a church that is located right in the downtown district. It has been there a long time. Abraham Lincoln used to attend prayer meeting there when President of the United States. It is located in the downtown sector, where properties are valuable and where there is a high price put upon business property frontage. Only a block or two away is a brand new building, the Trans Lux Building. Someone preempted some space there at a fancy rental, and then found that they were under the interdiction of the regulations of the A. B. C. Board. I submit to you that in view of the developments you have in metropolitan centers, like Washington, you must exercise some judgment and discretion and not seek to impose undue penalties on property that is extremely valuable, and, after all, some concession must be made to commercial interests in such cases. In a great many instances cities like New York and Chicago have grown up with churches now located in the business section, and there is certainly no reason why we should penalize the onward march of progress and put some interdiction upon such property. It is not only unfair but it would be nonsensical, and I am not persuaded that fair-minded church folks would ask for such an onerous restriction.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I yield.

Mr. RICH. Which is the more valuable to the city of Washington, the Presbyterian Church which Abraham Lincoln attended, or the booze-selling place of business you have in the Trans Lux Building? We should protect our churches and our homes as well as our children.

Mr. DIRKSEN. I will tell my friend this: People go there to church on Sunday, and this particular liquor store is locked up on Sunday. This is the answer to the gentleman's question, and it seems to me if we are going to discuss this beverage law intelligently, some of the gentlemen who have been discussing it with such gusto and éclat should read it before they make so many observations on the subject.

Just a few hundred feet farther in other directions from this church are restaurants and food establishments which serve liquor by the drink and remain open until 2 o'clock in the morning. Under such circumstances, would it not be a bit of sheer bigotry on our part to punish a new building on Fourteenth Street, in the very heart of the business district, by contending against the issuance of a license to a store that sells liquor only in packages, closes before midnight, and is closed all day on Sunday?

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. PALMISANO. Mr. Chairman, I move that the Committee do now rise and report the bill back to the House with an amendment, with the recommendation that the amendment be agreed to and that the bill, as amended, do pass.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the Committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. DRIVER, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that Committee, having had under consideration the bill (H. R. 7950) to amend the District of Columbia Alcoholic Beverage Control Act, had directed him to report the same back to the House with an amendment, with the recommendation that the amendment be agreed to and that the bill, as amended, do pass.

Mr. PALMISANO. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the bill and amendment thereto to final passage.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed, read a third time, and was read the third time.

Mr. COLLINS. Mr. Speaker, I have a motion to recommit at the Clerk's desk.

The SPEAKER. Is the gentleman from Mississippi opposed to the bill?

Mr. COLLINS. I am, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. Is there any Member on the minority side opposed to the bill who desires to submit a motion to recommit?

Mr. REES of Kansas. I am opposed to the bill, Mr. Speaker, but I yield to the gentleman from Mississippi.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman desire to submit a motion to recommit?

Mr. REES of Kansas. I do not, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. COLLINS] offers a motion to recommit, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. COLLINS moves to recommit the bill (H. R. 7950) to the Committee on the District of Columbia with instructions to that committee to report the bill back forthwith with the following amendment: Strike out sections 1 and 2.

Mr. PALMISANO. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion to recommit.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. PALMISANO) there were—ayes 56, noes 64.

Mr. COLLINS. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote because there is no quorum present.

The SPEAKER. Will the gentleman withhold that to permit the Chair to make a statement?

Mr. COLLINS. Yes.

The SPEAKER. The Chair has promised to recognize one or two gentlemen on very brief matters before we adjourn. We are now anxious to consider a resolution of adjournment out of respect to a deceased Member. The Chair states to the gentleman from Mississippi that his motion to recommit will be the first order of business tomorrow, the unfinished business, so that we may have a vote on his motion to recommit when we reconvene tomorrow. With that understanding, does the gentleman withhold his motion?

Mr. COLLINS. That is satisfactory, Mr. Speaker, and I withhold the motion.

SMALL RESERVOIRS

Mr. WHITE of Idaho. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H. R. 2512) to authorize an appropriation for the construction of small reservoirs under the Federal reclamation laws, with Senate amendments thereto, disagree to the Senate amendments, and agree to the conference asked.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The Chair appointed the following conferees: Mr. WHITE of Idaho, Mr. GREEVER, Mr. DEMPSEY, and Mr. CASE of South Dakota.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted as follows:

To Mr. VINSON of Georgia, indefinitely, on account of illness in family.

To Mr. LAMNECK, for 10 days, on account of illness in family.

APPOINTMENT TO NEW YORK WORLD' FAIR COMMISSION

The SPEAKER. Pursuant to provision of Public Resolution 53, Seventy-fifth Congress, the Chair appoints as a member of the United States New York World's Fair Commission the gentleman from New York, Mr. WADSWORTH. [Applause.]

HOUR OF MEETING TOMORROW

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that when the House adjourns today it adjourn to meet at 11 o'clock tomorrow.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

LEAVE TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. GRISWOLD] had time this afternoon in which to address the House. He has very kindly given up his time. I ask unanimous consent that after the completion of the legislative program tomorrow and other special orders he be permitted to address the House for 30 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

INTERIOR APPROPRIATION BILL

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Mr. Speaker, I understand that the President of the United States has not yet signed the Interior appropriation bill. This is the tenth day, and it is likely, if he does not veto it, he will not add his signature to it, because of the things that were put into it that were awfully extravagant, and because the Budget, as I understand it, has asked him to veto the bill. The idea that the leaders should try to put that over on us, when we are trying to save a little money, and when your own President is not for it!

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. DIRKSEN, Mr. CARTWRIGHT, and Mr. TABER, by unanimous consent, were granted leave to extend their own remarks in the RECORD.

S. 1160. An act for the relief of Troup Miller and Harvey D. Higley.

THE LATE REPRESENTATIVE THEODORE A. PEYSER

Mr. CULLEN. Mr. Speaker, it is with profound regret and sincere sympathy that I rise in my place today to announce to the House that the messenger of death has again visited us and taken from our midst Representative THEODORE A. PEYSER, of the Seventeenth Congressional District of New York. Representative PEYSER came to the Seventy-third Congress, was reelected to the Seventy-fourth Congress, and reelected to the Seventy-fifth Congress. He was a genial personality. He was a lovable character, a man of ability, understanding, and atmosphere. He considered his membership in this House a great responsibility.

He served with distinction and ability on the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, a prominent and highly important committee of this House. When the New York delegation was called upon to select a man to serve on that committee, we thought seriously about whom we would place on that important committee, and it is an important committee, because it has to deal with the business interests of this country. I, in the responsible position that I hold with the New York delegation, was very careful as to whom I would recommend to the Committee on Ways and Means for that assignment. I realized, too, that it was an assignment that required skill, that required ability, that required common sense, and also that required that kind of a brain that would understand thoroughly the legislative problems that would come before the committee. He never faltered in his actions on the committee. He served under the distinguished chairman, Mr. SAM RAYBURN, now our distinguished floor leader, and again he served under the gentleman from California [Mr. LEA].

It is too bad, Mr. Speaker, to lose men of this type, because they are needed. They are needed at times to balance off the kind of problems that are brought before us when men have to decide very carefully what they should do in regard to the enactment of laws.

When PEYSER became a member of that committee he came to me and said, among other things, calling me by my first name, "Tom, you will never have to apologize for my actions on that committee." I congratulated him and said, "I know that, Teddy," because he was Teddy to me. I said, "I know that you realize your responsibility. I know that you are careful. I know you have been graduated from the business world of New York, and I am satisfied you will acquit yourself in a manner not only honorable to yourself, but to your Nation, to your State, to your party, and to your family." He has done so.

It is with great regret that we lose men of this kind. Sometimes, as I sit here listening to the debates, and see men in the heat of debate running rife around the Chamber, I pray to God that they will at least have some consideration for the legislation they are considering. And again, Mr. Speaker, when our dear Chaplain, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, comes in here every morning and delivers those beautiful prayers, when he puts up his right hand in supplication, asking God to preserve our health, to preserve the health of our families, and to give guidance to us in our labors throughout the day, what consolation and solace comes to us all, even though the inevitable must happen. Death, of course, comes to us all. It is only a question of time. As I said a moment ago, when I look at our beloved Chaplain asking God in His infinite wisdom to protect us in the labors we have to perform, I would like to supplement, in this sacred Chamber, if you please, this simple prayer: "May the soul of THEODORE A. PEYSER and the souls of all our departed colleagues rest in peace, in the glory of life and in the kingdom of heaven. Amen."

Mr. Speaker, I offer a resolution, which I send to the desk.

House Resolution 302

Resolved, That the House has heard with profound sorrow of the death of Hon. THEODORE A. PEYSER, a Representative from the State of New York.

Resolved, That a committee of four Members of the House with such Members of the Senate as may be joined, be appointed to attend the funeral.

Resolved, That the Sergeant at Arms of the House be authorized and directed to take such steps as may be necessary for carrying out the provision of these resolutions and that the necessary expenses in connection therewith be paid out of the contingent fund of the House.

Resolved, That the Clerk communicate these resolutions to the Senate and transmit a copy thereof to the family of the deceased.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

The SPEAKER appointed the following funeral committee: Mr. BOYLAN of New York, Mr. BLOOM, Mr. FITZPATRICK, and Mr. MILLARD.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read the balance of the resolution.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That as a further mark of respect the House do now adjourn.

Mr. CULLEN. Mr. Speaker, of course I understand the rule as far as it relates to the appointment of Members of the House to attend funerals, but I most respectfully suggest to my colleagues from New York, those who can conveniently attend his funeral and act as honorary pallbearers, that they may do so.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

ADJOURNMENT

Accordingly (at 3 o'clock and 2 minutes p. m.) the House, pursuant to its order heretofore entered, adjourned until tomorrow, Tuesday, August 10, 1937, at 11 o'clock a. m.

PORTRAIT OF THE LATE SENATOR ROBINSON

Mrs. CARAWAY submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 173), which was referred to the Committee on the Library:

Resolved, That the Architect of the Capitol is authorized and directed to accept a portrait of Hon. Joseph T. Robinson, late a Senator from the State of Arkansas, as a gift to the Senate of the United States from certain friends of his, and to cause such portrait to be hung in a suitable place in the Senate wing of the National Capitol.

HOME OWNERS' LOAN CORPORATION AND HOME OWNERSHIP—ADDRESS BY SENATOR COPELAND

WILDLIFE RESTORATION PROJECTS

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 2670) to provide that the United States shall aid the States in wildlife-restoration projects, and for other purposes.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, since this bill was taken up yesterday there have been some conferences between Senators who are particularly interested in the measure, and agreement has been reached on certain perfecting amendments, which I send to the desk and ask to have stated.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator desire that committee amendments be first considered?

Mr. PITTMAN. I ask unanimous consent that committee amendments be first considered.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered, and the clerk will state the committee amendments.

The amendments of the Special Committee on Conservation of Wildlife Resources were, in section 3, page 3, line 8, after the date "June 30", to strike out "1938" and insert "1939"; in section 5, on page 5, line 16, after the date "June 30", to strike out "1938" and insert "1939"; and in section 12, on page 9, line 17, after the words "from the", to strike out "date of its passage" and insert "1st day of July 1938", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of Agriculture is authorized to cooperate with the States, through their respective State fish and game departments, in wildlife-restoration projects as hereinafter set forth; but no money apportioned under this act to any State shall be expended therein until its legislature shall have assented to the provision of this act and shall have passed laws for the conservation of wildlife which meet the minimum requirements of the said Secretary of Agriculture, which requirements shall include a prohibition against the diversion of license fees paid by hunters for any other purpose than the administration of said State fish and game department, except that, until the final adjournment of the first regular session of the legislature held after the passage of this act, the assent of the Governor of the State shall be sufficient. The Secretary of Agriculture and the State fish and game department of each State accepting the benefits of this act shall agree upon the wildlife-restoration projects to be aided in such State under the terms of this act and all projects shall conform to the standards fixed by the Secretary of Agriculture.

SEC. 2. For the purposes of this act the term "wildlife-restoration project" shall be construed to mean and include the selection, restoration, rehabilitation, and improvement of areas of land or water adaptable as feeding, resting, or breeding places for wildlife, including acquisition by purchase, condemnation, lease, or gift of such areas or estates or interests therein as are suitable or capable of being made suitable therefor, and the construction thereon or therein of such works as may be necessary to make them available for such purposes and also including such research into problems of wildlife management as may be necessary to efficient administration affecting wildlife resources, and such preliminary or incidental costs and expenses as may be incurred in and about such projects; the term "State fish and game department" shall be construed to mean and include any department or division of department of another name, or commission, or official or officials, of a State empowered under its laws to exercise the functions ordinarily exercised by a State fish and game department.

SEC. 3. An amount equal to the revenue accruing during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1939, and each fiscal year thereafter, from the tax imposed by section 610, title IV, of the Revenue Act of 1932 (47 Stat. 169), as heretofore or hereafter extended and amended, on firearms, shells, and cartridges shall be set apart in the Treasury as a special fund to be known as "The Federal aid to wildlife restoration fund" and is hereby appropriated and made available until expended for the purposes of this act. So much of such appropriation apportioned to any State for any fiscal year as remains unexpended at the close thereof shall be available for expenditure in that State until the close of the succeeding fiscal year. Any amount apportioned to any State under the provisions of this act which is unexpended or unobligated at the end of the period during which it is available for expenditure on any project shall then be available for expenditure by the Secretary of Agriculture in carrying out the provisions of the Migratory Bird Conservation Act.

SEC. 4. So much, not to exceed 8 percent, of the revenue covered into said fund in each fiscal year as the Secretary of Agriculture may estimate to be necessary for his expenses in the administration and execution of this act and the Migratory Bird Conservation Act shall be deducted for that purpose, and such sum shall be available therefor until the expiration of the next succeeding fiscal year, and within 60 days after the close of such fiscal year the Secretary of Agriculture shall apportion such part thereof as remains unexpended by him, if any, and make certificate thereof to the Secretary of the Treasury and to the State fish and game departments on the same basis and in the same manner as is provided as to other amounts authorized by this act to be apportioned among the States for such current fiscal year. The Secretary of Agriculture, after making the aforesaid deduction, shall apportion the remainder of the revenues in said fund for each fiscal year among the several States in the following manner, that is to say, one-half in the ratio which the area of each State bears to the total area of all the States and one-half in the ratio which the number of paid hunting-license holders of each State in the preceding fiscal year, as certified to said Secretary by the State fish and game departments, bears to the total number of paid hunting-license holders of all the States: Provided, That the apportionment for any one State shall not exceed the sum of $150,000 annually: Provided further, That where the apportionment to any State under this section is less than $15,000 annually, the Secretary of Agriculture may allocate not more than $15,000 of said fund to said State to carry out the purposes of this act when said State certifies to the Secretary of Agriculture that it has set aside not less than $5,000 from its fish and game funds or has made, through its legislature, an appropriation in this amount, for said purposes.

SEC. 5. Within 60 days after the approval of this act the Secretary of Agriculture shall certify to the Secretary of the Treasury and to each State fish and game department the sum which he has estimated to be deducted for administering and executing this act and the Migratory Bird Conservation Act and the sum which he has apportioned to each State for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1939, and on or before February 20 next preceding the commencement of each succeeding fiscal year shall make like certificates for such fiscal year. Any State desiring to avail itself of the benefits of this act shall notify the Secretary of Agriculture to this effect within 60 days after it has received the certification referred to in this section. The sum apportioned to any State which fails to notify the Secretary of Agriculture as herein provided shall be available for expenditure by the Secretary of Agriculture in carrying out the provisions of the Migratory Bird Conservation Act.

SEC. 6. Any State desiring to avail itself of the benefits of this act shall by its State fish and game department submit to the Secretary of Agriculture full and detailed statements of any wildlife-restoration project proposed for that State. If the Secretary of Agriculture finds that such project meets with the standards set up by him and approves said project, the State fish and game department shall furnish to him such surveys, plans, specifications, and estimates therefor as he may require: Provided, however, That the Secretary of Agriculture shall approve only such projects as may be substantial in character and design and the expenditure of funds hereby authorized shall be applied only to such approved projects and if otherwise applied they shall be replaced by the State before it may participate in any further apportionment under this act. Items included for engineering, inspection, and unforeseen contingencies in connection with any works to be constructed shall not exceed 10 percent of the cost of such works and shall be paid by the State as a part of its contribution to the total cost of such works. If the Secretary of Agriculture approves the plans, specifications, and estimates for the project, he shall notify the State fish and game department and immediately certify the fact to the Secretary of the Treasury. The Secretary of the Treasury shall thereupon set aside so much of said fund as represents the share of the United States payable under this act on account of such project, which sum so set aside shall not exceed 75 percent of the total estimated cost thereof. No payment of any money apportioned under this act shall be made on any project until such statement of the project and the plans, specifications, and estimates thereof shall have been submitted to and approved by the Secretary of Agriculture.

SEC. 7. When the Secretary of Agriculture shall find that any project approved by him has been completed or, if involving research relating to wildlife, is being conducted, in compliance with said plans and specifications, he shall cause to be paid to the proper authority of said State the amount set aside for said project: Provided, That the Secretary of Agriculture may, in his discretion, from time to time, make payments on said project as the same progresses; but these payments, including previous payments, if any, shall not be more than the United States' prorata share of the project in conformity with said plans and specifications. Any construction work and labor in each State shall be performed in accordance with its laws and under the direct supervision of the State fish and game department, subject to the inspection and approval of the Secretary of Agriculture and in accordance with rules and regulations made pursuant to this act. The Secretary of Agriculture and the State fish and game department of each State may jointly determine at what times and in what amounts payments, as work progresses, shall be made under this act. Such payments shall be made by the Secretary of the Treasury, on warrants drawn by the Secretary of Agriculture against the said fund to such official or officials, or depository, as may be designated by the State fish and game department and authorized under the laws of the State to receive public funds of the State.

SEC. 8. To maintain wildlife restoration projects established under the provisions of this act shall be the duty of the States according to their respective laws. If at any time the Secretary of Agriculture shall find that any wildlife restoration project in any State established under the provisions of this act is not being properly maintained, he shall give notice of such fact to the fish and game department of such State, and if within 3 months from the receipt of said notice such wildlife restoration project has not been put in the proper condition of maintenance, the Secretary of Agriculture shall thereafter refuse to approve any further wildlife restoration project in that State until such project has been put in proper condition of maintenance.

SEC. 9. Out of the deductions set aside for administering and executing this act and the Migratory Bird Conservation Act, the Secretary of Agriculture is authorized to employ such assistants, clerks, and other persons in the city of Washington and elsewhere, to be taken from the eligible lists of the civil service; to rent or construct buildings outside of the city of Washington; to purchase such supplies, materials, equipment, office fixtures, and apparatus; and to incur such travel and other expenses, including purchase, maintenance, and hire of passenger-carrying motor vehicles, as he may deem necessary for carrying out the purposes of this act.

SEC. 10. The Secretary of Agriculture is authorized to make rules and regulations for carrying out the provisions of this act.

SEC. 11. The Secretary of Agriculture shall make an annual report to the Congress of the sum set apart in "the Federal aid to wildlife restoration fund", giving detailed information as to the projects and expenditures therefor.

SEC. 12. This act shall be in force from the 1st day of July 1938.

The amendments were agreed to.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PITTMAN. I yield.

Mr. VANDENBERG. I wish to ask the Senator a general question or two about the bill. Am I correct in understanding that it proposes to divert an existing excise tax for a special purpose?

Mr. PITTMAN. That is true.

Mr. VANDENBERG. How much is involved?

Mr. PITTMAN. Probably five hundred or six hundred thousand dollars.

Mr. VANDENBERG. It would have the same effect, of course, as making a new appropriation to a new facility, would it not?

Mr. PITTMAN. I will state to the Senator that the object of this tax originally—and it was discussed for many years—was for the benefit of the migratory-bird law which Congress enacted. That was the real object of the particular tax on sporting goods, shells, and firearms.

Mr. VANDENBERG. The proceeds of the tax are now going into the general revenues, are they not?

Mr. PITTMAN. Yes; they are.

Mr. VANDENBERG. And this is a withdrawal from the general revenues, and, to that extent, is a contribution made to the particular purpose?

Mr. PITTMAN. I should say that is true. However, I may say that it is necessary, or, at least, proper, for our Government to carry out its migratory-bird treaty with Canada. In the migratory-bird treaty with Canada both Governments assume certain obligations for the protection of migratory birds. In our efforts to provide a special fund for that purpose we imposed a special tax on sporting goods, firearms, shells, and cartridges. The intent was perfectly plain—to be able to carry out the treaty with Canada.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Has the Treasury Department reported one way or the other upon the bill?

Mr. PITTMAN. Not at the present session of Congress. There was a report at a prior session of Congress.

Mr. VANDENBERG. What was the nature of the report?

Mr. PITTMAN. The report was favorable in the prior session.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Nevada yield to the Senator from Missouri?

Mr. PITTMAN. I yield.

Mr. CLARK. I inquire of the Senator if the committee amendments have been adopted?

Mr. PITTMAN. The committee amendments have been adopted, but I should like to have reported the amendments just sent to the desk by me.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will state the amendments offered by the Senator from Nevada.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. In section 1, on page 1, at the beginning of line 10, it is proposed to strike out "meet the minimum requirements of the said Secretary of Agriculture, which requirements."

Mr. PITTMAN. I ask to have the amendment I have just presented adopted.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the amendment offered by the Senator from Nevada?

Mr. KING. Mr. President, unfortunately I was delayed on my way to the Chamber. I inquire if the Senator has explained the bill and its cost and the extent to which it will encroach upon the rights of the States in the control of their own fish and game preserves.

Mr. PITTMAN. The Senator from Nevada a few days ago, when the matter first came up and when he asked unanimous consent to proceed with the consideration of the bill, by consent of the Senate, made a brief statement. However, after the adoption of the perfecting amendments, the Senator from Nevada will make a brief statement, and I think other Senators will also do so. I should like action taken on the amendment offered by me which has just been read.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Nevada.

The amendment was agreed to.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will state the next amendment offered by the Senator from Nevada.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 1, line 7, after the word "legislature", it is proposed to insert the words "or other State agency authorized by the State constitution to make laws governing the conservation of wildlife."

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the amendment is agreed to.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, if there is no objection, I will ask the Senator from Missouri to explain the last amendment.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, the purpose of that amendment is simply to provide for a situation which, I think, exists only in the State of Missouri. By a constitutional amendment, adopted by an overwhelming majority in a popular vote of the people of Missouri at the last election, we have set up a conservation commission in the State of Missouri which has authority to legislate directly as to the control of the wildlife resources of the State without the necessity of recourse to the State legislature. This amendment is to take care of that situation and any other situation of a similar sort which may develop.

While I am on my feet, Mr. President, if the Senator from Nevada will permit me for just a moment, I should like to say a few words in support of this measure.

Mr. PITTMAN. I shall be glad to have the Senator do so.

Mr. CLARK. The State of Missouri is extremely proud of the fact that she has taken the latest and most forward step for the administration of wildlife within her borders. Missouri is the first State to set up within its constitution a complete authority for the administration of wildlife. The conservationists and sportsmen of my State are justly proud of this accomplishment.

The enjoyment of our wildlife areas is an important factor in the happiness and contentment of our people. We must preserve these values for posterity. We must not permit a further depletion of our wildlife population, nor the extinction of any more species.

The pending bill, introduced and sponsored by the Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN], will provide the needed impetus to bring about more quickly a restoration of wildlife species throughout the Nation in a manner somewhat similar to that which has brought about our wonderful system of State and National highways throughout the United States.

Thirteen million people in the United States annually take out hunting and fishing licenses. Many millions more are interested in the out of doors and the perpetuation of its living creatures. To all these the pending bill offers a new hope that our wildlife will increase and multiply so that in a comparatively short time it may be restored to some semblance of its former abundance.

I trust and hope that in pursuance of this movement, under the impetus to be given by this bill, other States may follow the example of Missouri and set up independent conservation commissions authorized to take the necessary steps to accomplish this much desired purpose.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Mr. President, I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. In section 8, on page 8, beginning in line 11, after the word "laws" and the period, it is proposed to strike out the remainder of the section, as follows:

> If at any time the Secretary of Agriculture shall find that any wildlife-restoration project in any State established under the provisions of this act is not being properly maintained, he shall give notice of such fact to the fish and game department of such State, and if within 3 months from the receipt of said notice such wildlife restoration project has not been put in the proper condition of maintenance, the Secretary of Agriculture shall thereafter refuse to approve any further wildlife restoration project in that State until such project has been put in proper condition of maintenance.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator from New Mexico explain the amendment?

Mr. CHAVEZ. Section 8 provides for the maintenance of wildlife-restoration projects under the terms of the bill. If my amendment should be adopted, section 8 would then read:

> SEC. 8. To maintain wildlife-restoration projects established under the provisions of this act shall be the duty of the States according to their respective laws.

All language of the section would be stricken out which would give to the Secretary of Agriculture the ultimate decision as to whether or not the maintenance was being provided according to law. We maintain that as long as maintenance of the respective projects is to be left to the States according to their laws, they should have the ultimate decision as to how the projects should be maintained. I propose to strike out of the section only that provision which would give full control and authority of the matter to the Secretary of Agriculture.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, will my colleague yield?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from New Mexico yield to his colleague?

Mr. CHAVEZ. I yield.

Mr. HATCH. My colleague has previously stated the objections to that part of the section which he now proposes to strike out. In addition I believe he will remember that the game commission of our State objected to certain features of the bill which it was thought would largely turn over to the Secretary of Agriculture the control and direction of wildlife conservation within the State of New Mexico, taking it out of the hands of our local authorities. Is not that correct?

Mr. CHAVEZ. That is correct.

Mr. HATCH. I also understand the bill has now been amended by striking out the provisions on the first page of the bill which would have given the Secretary of Agriculture possible control over our own State laws. Has not that provision been eliminated?

Mr. CHAVEZ. That is correct.

Mr. HATCH. The amendment which the Senator now offers would take from the bill certain objectionable features which would seem to interfere with local control and management, and would give our local authority within the State that control which we think it should have over our own projects.

Mr. CHAVEZ. My colleague is correct in his statement.

I invite the attention of the Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN] to the fact that after this amendment is adopted, if it shall be adopted, it is my desire to offer another amendment, on page 8, line 11, after the word "laws", to insert "and ability." I should like to have action on my pending amendment, and then I shall offer the amendment which I have just suggested.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from New Mexico.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. CHAVEZ. I now offer the amendment to which I just referred and ask that it may be stated.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. In section 8, on page 8, line 11, after the word "laws", it is proposed to insert "and ability", so that the section would read:

> To maintain wildlife-restoration projects established under the provisions of this act shall be the duty of the States according to their respective laws and ability.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, it would seem to me the Senator's amendment would remove any consideration for the contribution of 75 percent by the Federal Government. The Federal Government is to contribute 75 percent toward the State project, the consideration being a 25-percent contribution on the part of the States, to be taken out of the State license fund. It would seem that the Senator, by inserting the words "and ability", is attempting to take from the Secretary of Agriculture all power to stop the 75-percent contribution.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Let me explain what I have in mind. The Senator from Nevada knows, as I know, that most of the Western States are small States with very little revenue. The bill as now constituted under section 8, leaving the maintenance to the individual States, puts upon those States quite a problem for maintenance.

Mr. WHITE. Mr. President, will the Senator from New Mexico yield at that point?

Mr. CHAVEZ. I yield.

Mr. WHITE. Of course, the maintenance depends entirely upon the action of the State in the first instance, because whatever projects are set up in the State will be set up on the volition of the State itself. I seems to me if the words "and ability" are added it would inject an absolutely uncertain element. When a State acts according to its laws, that is something definite and ascertainable, but if we add the words "and ability", then there is absolutely no standard by which anyone can determine the desirability of the project.

It always comes back to the thought that the projects in the States are the projects of the States themselves and of their own choosing. I assume that a State would not sanction a project in the first instance unless the State were satisfied of its ability to carry on the project.

Mr. CHAVEZ. Perhaps I can clarify the matter. I have talked today with the chairman of our State game commission, Hon. Colin Neblett, Federal judge of that particular district. This is what he had in mind in regard to the suggested amendment which would add the words "and ability." It is his contention that in instances a game commission, whether it be the New Mexico Game Commission or the game commission of any other State that has a small revenue, would perhaps suggest a project to the Federal Government. It would be approved, but in time the State would find that it would be impossible, because of the small revenues collected by the State, to keep up maintenance of such a project. Would the State be permitted under the terms of the bill, if it did not contain the amendment suggested by me, to drop that particular project?

Mr. WHITE. The Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN] is better acquainted with the terms of the bill than am I, but I assume there is no mandatory provision requiring the State to keep up a project which it has once undertaken.

Mr. CHAVEZ. That is what I want to know from the chairman of the committee. Does the Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN], who has charge of the bill, understand, if any State were to initiate a project and then, after maintaining it several years, found it impossible under their revenue to keep up the project and maintain it according to regulations and the terms of the bill, that the State would have the power and the right under the terms of the bill to drop the project?

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, under the terms of the bill, the State having established a project which has been approved by the Secretary of Agriculture and having agreed to maintain it under the State laws, I think the abandonment of it would be subject to the approval of the Secretary of Agriculture, but if he refused to approve it, the State could simply refuse to participate under this act.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield at that point?

Mr. PITTMAN. I yield to the Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. HATCH. So long as the obligation is only to maintain the project in accordance with the State law, could not the State itself, under the provisions of this bill, modify a particular law if its terms should prove to be too onerous?

Mr. PITTMAN. I should assume that if the State, by State law, abandoned it, it would come within the provisions the Senator suggests. I should not say that the game commission could take that action, however.

Mr. CHAVEZ. I withdraw the amendment.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from New Mexico withdraws the amendment. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

Mr. WHITE. Mr. President, I desire to express to the Senate my complete approval of the purposes of this bill and of its provisions.

We have seen in our country, as our forests have been razed and our fields plowed up, the breeding grounds of our upland game disappear. With respect to our waterfowl, we find much the same situation. We have drained our lakes, and tens of millions of acres of marshland which have been the home of waterfowl. We have seen our coastal waters polluted and dams put across streams, preventing access of fish to breeding grounds. Our fish resources have been depleted. We face the time in this country when many species of our game life will disappear altogether unless the people of the country arouse themselves, and unless there are adopted measures of conservation and measures of restoration.

The two things are not identical. When we think of conservation measures, we ordinarily think of restrictions or limitations upon the killing of game. We think in terms of the sort of guns that may be used. We think of limitations upon the number of shells that may be carried in the automatic gun. We think of limitations upon the sort of fishing tackle that may be employed.

We think also in some degree of limitations of time for killing game. These things have made their contribution, and I think they have stayed somewhat the depletion which has been going on; but we need vastly more than that in America if we are to save what we have been blessed with in the past. We must adopt definite restorative measures; and restorative measures mean making adequate provision for homes for our wild animals, for feeding our wild animals, for their resting and breeding.

This bill recognizes this great necessity. I believe the American people are in sympathy with the efforts of our fish and game associations and the efforts of our States, and I believe the people of the country will give wholehearted approval to the efforts of the Congress to stay the wanton destruction of our game life which has been going on over the years.

I very much hope the bill will have the approval of the Congress.

EXPORTATION OF SCRAP IRON AND STEEL

Mr. NYE. Mr. President, I beg leave to take the attention of the Senate away from the pending bill for a matter of only 5 or 6 minutes.

There has been pending before this session of Congress a proposal for an embargo which would forbid the exportation of scrap iron from the United States. The proposal is pending before the Senate Military Affairs Committee. A subcommittee thereof has arranged for rather extensive hearings, to be conducted late this year or early in January.

There are certain phases of the subject which I am hopeful the subcommittee may take into consideration in the conduct of its inquiry.

It seems to me it is a significant thing, taken in connection with the Chinese-Japanese movement at the present time, that our exports of scrap iron and steel for the month of June reached the second highest monthly level in the entire history of the United States.

In June we exported 514,651 tons, as reported by the Department of Commerce only last week. That brings the first 6-month total for this year up to 2,134,000 tons, which exceeds the entire export for 1936. There is no secret about where this scrap iron is going. A great part of this raw material is going into the making of war. It is being shipped very largely to Japan. It is also alarmingly true to anyone who has made any study of the subject that in exporting this material abroad we are also stripping our own country of resources vital to the national defense and to our peacetime economy.

Statistics given out only yesterday reveal that the current price of no. 1 scrap is from $22.75 to $23.75 per ton at this time. This price constitutes an increase of at least $6 per ton for scrap developing during the past 3 months. American industry is using on an average of 20,000,000 tons of this no. 1 scrap steel annually. Thus we find that the exportation of scrap from this country at this time is on a scale which will cost the consumers of steel and iron in the United States $120,000,000 annually—a figure far in excess of any return that any Americans may realize from the sale of this scrap.

It can hardly be said, then, that the return from this foreign trade is in keeping with our best interests in this country. Indeed, it seems to me that the only return we may expect from a continuation of this exportation, aside from the munificent return in dollars to the several exporting companies, is the probability that one day we may receive this scrap back home here in the form of shrapnel in the flesh and in the bodies of our sons.

The War Department and the Navy Department are both aware of the danger of dissipating our resources of scrap iron and steel. During the 11-year period from 1923 to 1933 our exports of scrap iron and steel averaged less than 300,000 tons a year. During the past 6 months we have exported nearly seven times as much as we shipped abroad in any one of those normal years. If the present rate continues, as it certainly will if it is not restricted, we shall be sending abroad in the year 1937 more than we exported in all of the previous 11 years combined.

This commodity, scrap iron and scrap steel, is a basic material for war. Approximately 50 percent of the present exportation is going to Japan. Let us look at another phase of the situation. Practically every major country excepting the United States has restricted the exportation of its scrap. I do not know how many innocent women and children have been murdered in Spain by instruments of death fashioned from scrap metal exported from our country; but we cannot close our eyes to the fact that we are assisting in enriching merchants of death at the Nation's expense when we permit them to operate as they are now doing.

Who are the beneficiaries of this traffic, and why should they be permitted to benefit at such a deadly cost?

There are not more than a half dozen companies in the United States doing any considerable business in the exportation of scrap iron and steel. One of these—Luria Bros., of Philadelphia—sold last year 2,200,000 tons of scrap for a record take of $32,000,000. In fact, this firm is so prosperous that, in addition to its seven yards scattered throughout the country, it has now found it necessary to establish a separate concern to handle the enormously increased volume of export business. I have reliable information that Luria Bros. and their immediate relatives and associates divided a net profit of more than $3,000,000 last year, which represents, according to my information, a return of 150 percent on their capital stock.

I remind the Senate that the colossal success of this enterprise, and the four or five or six similar enterprises, is at the expense of this country of ours as a whole. There is no justification, morally, ethically, or nationally, for subsidizing these individuals while our country's resources are being drained for personal profit.

I suggest that it would be extremely advisable, and certainly informative, for the Senate Military Affairs Committee to investigate the profits growing out of this business, coming especially to Luria Bros. and their relatives and associates, and also to inquire if there has been any tax evading through the establishment of dummy holding companies or other devices.

I believe it is of interest to the country to know to what extent these dealers in death have profited and are profiting, and what bonuses, subsidies, and other methods of distribution of enormous profits have been employed.

Scrap iron and scrap steel are vital to our industrial economy, as well as to our national defense. Governmental experts predict that our basic supply of iron ore is very definitely limited. Scrap iron and steel become each year more vital components of finished metal products. Our resources are being used by foreigners for foreign wars. It is quite conceivable that our exports may one day be used for war against our own country.

WILDLIFE-RESTORATION PROJECTS

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 2670) to provide that the United States shall aid the States in wildlife-restoration projects, and for other purposes.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, before the bill is passed I wish to state that I have received a telegram from Mr. N. B. Cook, the efficient fish and game commissioner of Utah, in which he requests that the Senate withhold action on the bill until after the western international game conferences are held during this month. I am advised by the Senator from Nevada, in charge of the bill, that the objection which is voiced indirectly in this telegram has been met by the amendment which was offered by the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. CHAVEZ].

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, I feel certain that that is true, because there is in my possession a letter signed by the gentleman who sent the telegram, in which he expressed his hearty approval of the bill. There was one question, however, which I think he desired to submit to the conference, the same question raised by the junior Senator from New Mexico, which the Senator from New Mexico has covered in his amendment. I am therefore convinced that the gentleman who sent the telegram would be satisfied with the bill.

Mr. KING. This telegram was dated August 4, apparently after the communication to which the Senator referred. But assuming he had in mind the proposal suggested by the Senator from New Mexico, and that the objection has been successfully met, I will not object to the measure.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill (S. 2670) was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PROTECTION OF PROPERTY OWNED BY FOREIGN GOVERNMENTS

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, I ask that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Senate Joint Resolution 191.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 191) to regulate the use of public streets and sidewalks within the District of Columbia adjacent to property owned or occupied by foreign governments for diplomatic purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on Foreign Affairs with an amendment to strike out all after the enacting clause and to insert the following:

That it shall be unlawful to display any flag, banner, or device designed or adapted to bring into public notice any party, organization, or movement, or the political, social, or economic acts, views, or purposes of any individual, party, group, or organization, within 500 feet of any building or premises within the District of Columbia used or occupied by any foreign government or its representatives as an embassy or for diplomatic or other official purposes, except by, and in accordance with, a permit issued by the superintendent of police of the said District; or to congregate within 500 feet of any such building or premises, and refuse to disperse after having been ordered so to do by the police authorities of the said District.

SEC. 2. The police court of the District of Columbia shall have jurisdiction of offenses committed in violation of this resolution; and any person convicted of violating any of the provisions of this resolution shall be punished by a fine not exceeding $100 or by imprisonment not exceeding 60 days, or both.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, I offer an amendment as a substitute for the amendments of the committee. The amendment I offer is lying on the table. It has been printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, and I ask that it be stated.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will state the amendment.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 2, line 22, it is proposed to strike out all the language of the committee amendment and in lieu thereof to insert the following:

That it shall be unlawful to display any flag, banner, placard, or device designed or adapted to intimidate, coerce, or bring into public odium any foreign government, party, or organization, or any officer or officers thereof, or to bring into public disrepute political, social, or economic acts, views or purposes of any foreign government, party, or organization, or to intimidate, coerce, harass or bring into public disrepute any officer or officers or diplomatic or consular representatives of any foreign government, or to interfere with the free and safe pursuit of the duties of any diplomatic or consular representatives of any foreign government, within 500 feet of any building or premises within the District of Columbia used or occupied by any foreign government or its representative or representatives as an embassy, legation, consulate, or for other official purposes, except by, and in accordance with, a permit issued by the superintendent of police of the said District; or to congregate within 500 feet of any such building or premises, and refuse to disperse after having been ordered so to do by the police authorities of the said District.

SEC. 2. The police court of the District of Columbia shall have jurisdiction of offenses committed in violation of this joint resolution; and any person convicted of violating any of the provisions of this joint resolution shall be punished by a fine not exceeding $100 or by imprisonment not exceeding 60 days, or both.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, the object of the pending joint resolution is quite plain from the language used in it. It is intended to protect foreign diplomats in our country in their embassies and legations from harassment and annoyance from acts which would bring into odium the countries they represent, which would bring into disrepute their officers, and which would nullify the inviolability of ambassadors and ministers as they are protected in every country throughout the world.

I believe that since the beginning of government the inviolability of ambassadors and ministers has been universally recognized in all civilized countries. Even in times of vicious wars special ambassadors from one of the hostile countries to the other have gone without guards, realizing that the honor of the country to which they were going was sufficient to protect their lives and to protect them in the performance of their duties. If this were not so, intercourse between governments would be practically impossible. The peace of the world largely depends upon the treatment by governments of all foreign ambassadors and ministers within their borders. I think it is more important to us than to any other government in the world that at this time we maintain this policy.

Mr. President, I consider this a very important question. I feel that if we treat negligently or without consideration or regard an important subject such as this, we endanger the lives of our citizens in countries where there are today serious conflicts. I feel that if we do not take a step to protect foreign ambassadors and ministers and diplomatic officers and their homes, their embassies, and their chancelleries, we cannot expect any different treatment of our ambassadors, our ministers, our embassies, and our legations in other countries of the world.

A few days ago I took occasion to state on the floor of the Senate that there are 500 citizens of our country in Peiping, in a little compound, where they are threatened with destruction at any moment, not through action of the armed forces of either Japan or China, but through action of the great mobs which always follow armies.

The same situation exists today in Tientsin, as well as in Hankow, and our citizens are in the same situation in nearly all countries where there are conflicts today. Yet the subject is treated lightly; it is looked on with little interest. There is a disposition to treat foreign ambassadors as we treat citizens of the United States or unofficial foreigners who come here expecting only the same protection as a citizen of the United States.

We can go far back in legal and diplomatic literature to find references to this subject. We can consult Kent's Commentaries, we can go back to the earliest writers on international law, and we will find that the universal policy and rule has constantly governed in these matters. Let me read from Kent's Commentaries:

> Ambassadors form an exception to the general case of foreigners resident in the country, and they are exempted absolutely from all allegiance and from all responsibility to the laws of the country to which they are deputed. As they are representatives of their sovereigns, and requisite for negotiations and friendly intercourse, their persons, by the consent of all nations, have been deemed inviolable, and the instances are rare in which popular passions, or perfidious policy, have violated this immunity. Some very honorable examples of respect for the rights of ambassadors, even when their privileges would seem in justice to have been forfeited on account of the gross abuse of them, are to be met with in the ancient Roman annals, notwithstanding the extreme arrogance of their pretensions, and the intemperance of their military spirit. If, however, ambassadors should be so regardless of their duty, and of the object of their privilege, as to insult, or openly attack the laws or government of the nation to whom they are sent, their functions may be suspended by a refusal to treat with them, or application can be made to their own sovereign for their recall, or they may be dismissed, and required to depart within reasonable time.

That is the universal law of nations, and has been from the very beginning of governments. As I have said, we cannot treat them as we treat other foreigners within our borders who do not come here under special privileges. Other foreigners are subject to our laws. Such a condition is impossible in the case of an ambassador or a minister. They represent a government. Their embassies and their legations are part of the government they represent. To all intents and purposes, and under legal construction, their embassies, their chancelleries, and their homes are part of a foreign territory.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. GEORGE in the chair). Does the Senator from Nevada yield to the Senator from Michigan?

Mr. PITTMAN. I yield.

Mr. VANDENBERG. I call attention to the language of the joint resolution on page 2, beginning on line 3, making it illegal—

> To interfere with the free and safe pursuit of the duties of any diplomatic or consular representatives of any foreign government, within 500 feet of any building or premises—

And so forth. Is it legal to interfere with the free and safe pursuit of their duties everywhere else except within 500 feet of the buildings referred to?

Mr. PITTMAN. No; it is not. As a matter of fact, I strained this language very much so as to conform to the very strict interpretation by some of those for whom I have very high respect of the constitutional right of free speech and assemblage.

Mr. VANDENBERG. I ask the Senator what the implication is at this point? Here we definitely state that they must be protected in the free and safe pursuit of their diplomatic privileges within 500 feet of their legation or embassy. Does that not carry the implication that beyond 500 feet they do not have such protection?

Mr. PITTMAN. Beyond 500 feet they would undoubtedly have the protection that every American citizen has. What the joint resolution seeks to do is to protect these sanctuaries and the diplomats and their families within them. It has no other purpose. I seek not to protect its occupants so much from insult as to provide for their safety, to protect against the arousing of the hatred of a people because of mistreatment of the representatives of their government, to protect them in the free and safe use and enjoyment of their sanctuaries.

Mr. President, we have reports from the police department as to a number of incidents that have occurred here during the past year or so in front of various embassies. Not only do such incidents amount to discourtesy, not only is it what amounts to a refusal to protect and maintain the inviolability of the homes of ministers and ambassadors and their families, but it evidences a failure to protect their safety, when demonstrations in any form are allowed to be made before a legation or an embassy which are likely to incite mob violence.

I do not believe that the people themselves who display the banners and placards have in their hearts the intention of doing injury or damage. What is the result of such display and such demonstration? Do Senators think the wife of the ambassador or the children of the ambassador in the building know the intent of the people who are marching up and down in front of the building, with all kinds of devices which display inscriptions that are critical of the ambassador or his country or which tend to bring into odium or disrepute their country or their ambassador? Do Senators think the wife and the children know what the people who are on the outside are going to do? No. They are in their home in fear and trembling.

As a matter of fact, I think we can prove, if it shall be necessary, that some foreign representatives have found it necessary to move their families away from their official homes during such periods of picketing.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield again?

Mr. PITTMAN. I yield.

Mr. VANDENBERG. The Senator from Nevada referred to untoward instances which occurred during the past year or so. I ask the Senator if such incidents could not be prohibited under the terms of the substitute presented by the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE].

Mr. PITTMAN. It is the opinion of the Assistant Solicitor in the Department of Justice that they could not be. That is also the opinion of the Attorney General. The Attorney General is very anxious to assure foreign diplomats that they will have the time-honored inviolability that we on our part have demanded in their countries. The Attorney General is very anxious to assure them that their homes will be safe from any attacks, that their families will be safe from any attacks or intimidation, that their government shall not be brought into disrepute, and that odium shall not be placed upon them right in their faces by the display of placards and banners in front of their embassies or legations.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, will the Senator again yield?

Mr. PITTMAN. I yield.

Mr. VANDENBERG. I share all the Senator's aspirations to which he has just adverted, and I would join him in hoping to provide all the essential immunities. The fact remains that there is involved in this matter an abstract question of the right of free speech and free assembly, in which the whole American people have some concern.

Referring again to the proposal of the Senator from Wisconsin, which seeks to amend the existing law by prohibiting the use of banners, placards, and other means, and which seeks definitely to prohibit not only the things to which the Senator's resolution refers but a great many other things, I confess my inability to understand why the proposal submitted by the Senator from Wisconsin would not cover the legitimate cases of complaint; and I shall be obliged to the Senator from Nevada if he will indicate some incidents that would not be covered by the proposal of the Senator from Wisconsin.

Mr. PITTMAN. Very well. I think I have sufficiently covered the purposes of the joint resolution. A letter from the Secretary of State, most earnestly urging the adoption of this resolution, has been placed in the RECORD. It will be found in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of August 7, on page 8486.

Let me read the provision of the District Code. Here is section 117 of the District of Columbia Code. As proposed to be amended by the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE], it would read, as printed in the RECORD, on page 8519, the change being indicated by italics. This section, I believe, was adopted in 1892:

Unlawful assembly; profanity, etc., in public places, etc.: It shall not be lawful for any person or persons within the District of Columbia to congregate and assemble in any street, avenue, alley, road, or highway, or in or around any public building or enclosure.

The Senator from Wisconsin would add these words:

Including any building or premises used or occupied by any foreign government or its representatives as an embassy or for diplomatic or other official purposes)—

Then the language of the section follows:

or any park or reservation, or at the entrance of any private building or inclosure, and engage in loud and boisterous talking or other disorderly conduct—

We will assume that they do not engage in any loud or boisterous conduct, or other disorderly conduct, but are walking up and down in front of an embassy with banners on which is contained language bringing into odium and disrepute their own governments, their own rulers.

The section continues:

or to insult—

And then follows the language proposed by the Senator from Wisconsin:

(by the use of banners, placards, or otherwise)—

I continue reading from section 117:

or to make rude or obscene gestures or comments or observations on persons passing by—

I am not interested in persons passing by. The language continues:

or in their hearing—

I am not interested in the question of the hearing of persons passing by. I continue to read:

or to crowd, obstruct, or incommode the free use of any such street, avenue, alley, road, highway, or any of the foot pavements thereof—

That is a matter of minor consideration to me.

or the free entrance into any public or private building or inclosure; it shall not be lawful for any person or persons to curse, swear, or make use of any profane language or indecent or obscene words—or engage in any disorderly conduct in any street, avenue, alley, road, highway, public park or inclosure, public building, church, or assembly room, or in any other public place, or in any place wherefrom the same may be heard in any street, avenue, alley, road, highway, public park or inclosure, or other building, or in any premises other than those where the offense was committed, under a penalty of not more than $25 for each and every such offense.

That is a matter of small consideration to me in this matter—

I say in the first place that the amendment of the Senator from Wisconsin, while it does not meet the material questions at all, is in the nature of an insult to the very principle and policy that the nations have recognized with regard to ambassadors and ministers since the beginning of government. We are to put them in the same position, it is understood, as passersby on the street; if the picketers do not indulge in any swearing or use obscene language, then the ambassadors or ministers have no right whatsoever to complain.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President——

Mr. PITTMAN. Just a moment, until I finish the sentence; then I shall yield. We are to place the ambassadors and the ministers, the homes in which they and their families live as guests in this country, on the same basis that we place a slum tenement house, such as those we are endeavoring to destroy under the Wagner bill.

I now yield to the Senator from Wisconsin.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, will the Senator please tell the Senate, if my amendment were agreed to, what could take place that the Senator would consider objectionable if the police officers and the law-enforcement department of the District government enforced the law?

Mr. PITTMAN. Just exactly what the gentlemen who send us telegrams want to do. Let me read some telegrams.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Give us some specific examples.

Mr. PITTMAN. I will tell the Senator if he will be patient. I am not going to forget what the Senator has asked. I will show the Senate what could be done and what it is desired to do. But, in the first place, it will be understood, an attempt is being made to influence us to destroy the inviolability of ambassadors and ministers and their residences and their chancelleries, a principle which has been recognized for years, under the foolish assumption that the Constitution in guarding the right of free speech and free assembly, places no restriction thereon. Of course the Senator from Wisconsin knows that there are restrictions on that right. The Congress and State legislatures can prescribe reasonable regulations. True, the statute I have read is a restriction.

Let me read some of these communications by which it is sought to influence the Congress of the United States. This telegram is addressed to me as chairman of the committee:

Many Washington organizations and liberals throughout the country back us in demanding open public hearing on Senate Joint Resolution 191 and opportunity to express our considered opposition on grounds that measure violates letter and spirit of constitutional rights.

AMERICAN CIVIL LIBERTIES UNION.

Here is another telegram:

Strongly protest pending legislation to curb democratic rights in our country to please foreign and domestic Fascists. This refers to Senator PITTMAN's bill to prohibit picketing before foreign consulates and embassies. Request our legislators use their efforts for benefit of our people instead of for Hitler, Mussolini, Franco, Mikado.

Let me comment on that telegram. When persons picket a legation what is the object of doing so? The object of picketing a legation, as they have said in their letters and speeches time and time again, is to show that the government or the ruler of the government whose representative resides in the embassy or legation is cruel or murderous.

They want to show that a certain ruler is a murderer. How are they going to show it unless they have something on their banners and placards to indicate their sentiments and views? Otherwise they do not accomplish what they desire.

Let me read another telegram coming from New York:

North American Committee to Aid Spanish Democracy vigorously protests bill abolishing right of picketing of foreign embassies and legations in District of Columbia as encroachment on elementary American right to protest acts of barbarity and of repression no matter where originated. This bill would deprive great section of American people of their right to bring to the attention of governments concerned their position on issues which overstep the boundaries of states and affects all peoples throughout the world, the outstanding issue being that of fascism versus democracy. Americans must retain the right to demonstrate for democracy and human liberties. This right lost constitutes a betrayal of our great democratic heritage. We believe this issue to be of such importance that we are bringing it to the attention of the American public whose interests are most intimately affected by any denial of democratic rights.

HERMAN F. REISSIG,
Executive Secretary, N. A. C. A. S. D.

Let me ask what they can do besides insult? What can they do without using obscene language? What can they do without swearing? Those are the acts against which the statute protects. What can they do? They can inscribe on a banner and hold it right in front of the entrance of an embassy, "We believe that the Japanese are guilty of violating their treaties; we believe that the Japanese are without excuse in invading China and murdering innocent Chinese people."

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, does the Senator think that such placards would be considered as insults?

Mr. PITTMAN. They would constitute an expression of the belief of those displaying the banner. They would have an absolute right to say as much in any newspaper; they would have a right to say it in any speech wherever they wanted to.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. If the amendment which I suggest to section 117 of the District Code should prevail, obviously they could not violate the statute if it were enforced.

Mr. PITTMAN. I understand.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. The statute does not even permit any groups to congregate or assemble.

Mr. PITTMAN. That is all true enough.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Under the amendment which I have offered they would be prevented from insulting anyone by word of mouth or by the use of a banner, placard, device, or otherwise.

Mr. PITTMAN. But the question is, Is it necessary to go as far as an insult? Should people who may make speeches which would not be subject to punishment if made in a park be permitted to go to the front door of an embassy and make the same speeches?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Let us understand. If the Senator desires, and if it is the objective of his resolution, to prevent any person, no matter how orderly or how peaceful or how properly he may be acting in the exercise of his constitutional right, to go within 500 feet of an embassy or legation or a chancellery, then, of course, I grant the amendment which I have suggested would not take care of the situation.

Mr. PITTMAN. I know it would not take care of the situation.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. But I contend, if the Senator will permit me, that the amendments which I have suggested are all that are necessary in order to protect the premises or to protect the occupants of the premises from any insult or any untoward incident such as the Senator has stated in the main burden of his argument it was the objective of his resolution to protect against.

Mr. PITTMAN. I say that, under the Constitution, anyone has a right to express his or her opinion with regard to any ruler or with regard to any government, but I say that they have not the constitutional right—if prohibited by law—to make an offensive demonstration in front of an embassy or in front of a legation, the residence of a diplomat, who is our guest here, who depends on us wholly for his protection not only against murder, not only against insult, but against any character of annoyance or interference that will bring the hatred of the people of his country against our people.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Then, as I understand, the Senator frankly desires to prevent any person, no matter how well behaved he may be or how orderly he may be, or how respectful he may be, from coming within 500 feet on a public highway of any embassy, chancellery, or legation, unless he actually has business to transact there?

Mr. PITTMAN. Not at all. If the Senator from Nevada indicated any such position, he went beyond his amendment. I will read the amendment again and let the Senator comment on my amendment, since I am commenting on his. Here it is:

That it shall be unlawful to display any flag, banner, placard, or device designed or adapted to intimidate, coerce, or bring into public odium any foreign government, party, or organization, or any officer or officers thereof, or to bring into public disrepute, political, social, or economic acts, views, or purposes of any foreign government, party, or organization, or to intimidate, coerce, harass, or bring into public disrepute any officer or officers or diplomatic or consular representatives of any foreign government, or to interfere with the free and safe pursuit of the duties of any diplomatic or consular representatives of any foreign government, within 500 feet of any building or premises within the District of Columbia, used or occupied by any foreign government or its representative or representatives as an embassy, legation, consulate, or for other official purposes, except by, and in accordance with, a permit issued by the superintendent of police of the said District; or to congregate within 500 feet of any such building or premises, and refuse to disperse after having been ordered so to do by the police authorities of the said District.

Let us consider the provisions of the amendment:

That it shall be unlawful to display any flag, banner * * * designed or adapted * * * to bring into public odium any foreign government.

The very object of the picketing is to do that. The telegrams all indicate that the desire is to bring into odium the government whose embassy or legation is being picketed. Otherwise, the picketers do not accomplish anything. They want, as they say in their letters, to let the foreign governments, whose representatives they are picketing, know that they are odious, to know that they are in disrepute. That is their privilege, they say. I say they have not a right to any such privilege in front of an embassy, because it not only threatens safety from mob violence of the men, women, and children in that embassy but it threatens the peace of the United States. It threatens to bring the hatred of people upon us whose embassy is thus besmirched. I say to you, Mr. President, that all the armies that can be furnished will not protect our men and women in China and Japan if we arouse and incur the hatred not of those Governments but of their people by speaking unkindly or in a manner to bring into odium their Governments and their people.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PITTMAN. I yield.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. The Senator mentions the danger of mob violence. The Senator must realize that there is now on the statute books of the District of Columbia a statute which makes it unlawful for any person or group of persons to congregate or assemble on a public street, highway, or alley. If, under existing statutes, which are adequate to prevent such assemblage, the police department permits a mob to gather in front of an embassy, the passage of the Senator's joint resolution is not going to afford one iota of increased protection. What the Senator is complaining about, if he is alarmed concerning the danger of mob violence, is that the police department of the District of Columbia does not enforce existing law.

Mr. PITTMAN. The police department of the District of Columbia are trying to follow the law. They do not want to arrest a great many people and risk being charged with false arrest and false imprisonment. They have already stated that the language of the present act is quite indefinite, and the reports which I have put into the RECORD disclose the fact that the act is not adequate. But be that as it may, if there be only five or six beautiful women walking up and down in front of an embassy with placards over their shoulders intended to bring and bringing into actual odium the country represented by the ambassador inside that building, it is liable to arouse a spirit of mob violence that will have its effect before any police force can reach there.

Take our own situation today in Peiping and in Tientsin. In Tientsin we have no compound. In Tientsin we have been allotted a little space of about 3 acres in the former German Embassy grounds not surrounded by a wall. There are a million people in that town. Mobs congregate there as anywhere else, far more mobs and larger than we ever see in this country. In China and in other countries where there are a million people in one community, milling backward and forward, mobs are usually out for murder and loot. The whole history of the world conclusively proves that after every great fight, murder and loot have followed.

The Secretary of State has been appealing to the Japanese Ambassador and to the Chinese Ambassador to protect our legations and our compounds in China, not to protect them from the Armies, but to protect them from mob violence. Let us assume today, Peiping being in control of the Japanese and there being a large Japanese population there, that we permit demonstrations toward the Japanese Ambassador in this city that would bring his country in disrepute or odium. What would be the result? The Japanese people would be angered. Their hatred would be aroused against us. When the hatred of a people is aroused against another people it takes large armies to prevent the wreaking of their vengeance.

The danger to our people in Tientsin and Peiping and Hankow is not from the Japanese Army or the Chinese Army, because they are being moved backward and forward constantly. The danger there is that the sentiment of the Chinese and the Japanese should be aroused against the American people. The sentiment of the Japanese and Chinese at this time is one of friendliness and respect for our people, which is the greatest protection they can possibly have.

But if we attempt to treat this matter as a little police court affair, if we attempt to control it with amendments to the police code under the ordinances of the District of Columbia, if we refuse to recognize the great principle which has come down through history, that our legations and embassies, our ambassadors and consuls shall be considered inviolate throughout the world, as every other ambassador and consul, every embassy and consulate is considered inviolate here, then we would not only destroy one of the greatest agencies for peace in the world but we would tend to bring down the contempt and hatred of the people of the world upon us.

Whence come these protests against the joint resolution? Have we heard the American Legion appealing to us not to protect foreign ambassadors and ministers and their families, their embassies and legations. Have we heard the Veterans of the Foreign Wars appealing to us not to give such protection? Have we heard the Daughters of the American Revolution protesting that by the enactment of this resolution we are destroying constitutional rights? Have we heard any great farm organization making such protest? Have we heard any labor or other great organizations of citizens protesting to us that this would destroy the freedom of press, freedom of speech, or freedom of peaceful assemblage?

No! Telegrams are coming to us, but who are they from? Some day before our committee we will find out who is sending them, but I say now that the forces which desire to put on a show in front of foreign embassies in our national Capital, no matter on which side of a foreign controversy they may be, have no standing whatsoever in this body.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, I had hoped we might discuss this question with a little more light and a little less heat. So far as I am concerned, I am just as anxious as is any other Member of the Senate to protect the lives of American citizens who happen, unfortunately, to be located at the moment in areas where armed conflicts are in progress; but in the effort to afford such protection I do not desire to have citizens of this country deprived of their constitutional rights.

As I suggested the other day, as a Government we have existed for a great many years without any such statute as that proposed by the joint resolution now pending before the Senate. I do not believe, and I do not think any other Senator believes, that the protection of American lives and American property in China or elsewhere is dependent upon the passage of this joint resolution. The protection of American lives and property will depend upon the action of governments which are engaged in the conflict.

The Senator from Nevada has suggested that the danger to our people in Tientsin, for example, is from a mob. Assuming that the joint resolution which the Senator has introduced were a law and on our statute books, does any Senator imagine for a moment that any mob which intended violence against American citizens in Tientsin would stop to get a permit from the chief of police of that community before committing an act of violence? The proposition is not tenable, as I see it.

In the District of Columbia we have a statute covering the case. It is section 117 of the District Code. I contend that the amendment which I have offered to that section of the code would meet the very situation which the Senator from Nevada has described. That section of the code reads:

117. Unlawful assembly; profanity, etc., in public places, etc.: It shall not be lawful for any person or persons within the District of Columbia to congregate and assemble in any street, avenue, alley, road, or highway, or in or around any public building or inclosure.

At that point I propose to insert:

Including any building or premises used or occupied by an foreign government or its representatives as an embassy or for diplomatic or other official purposes.

If the amendment which I have suggested to that section of the code were adopted, it would be unlawful for any person or persons within the District of Columbia to congregate and assemble in any street, avenue, alley, road, or highway, or in any public building or inclosure, including any building or premises used or occupied by any foreign government or its representatives as an embassy or for diplomatic or for other official purposes. It seems to me that would completely dispose of any argument concerning the danger of mob violence or even the threat of it.

If the section of the code were amended as I have suggested, the police department and the officials of the District of Columbia would be completely and absolutely derelict in their duty if they permitted a mob or even a group of persons to congregate on the streets or sidewalks or in the alleys adjacent to any building or premises occupied by any diplomatic or foreign mission accredited to this Government.

We do not need to have any worry about the picture which the Senator from Nevada in his enthusiasm has drawn of the danger of mob violence. That is completely disposed of, because, after all, the entire question of whether or not the laws are enforced rests upon the officials of the District of Columbia and the police department.

What is it that people may not do under the section of the code to which I have referred, if my amendment should be adopted?—

Engage in loud and boisterous talking or other disorderly conduct.

That is as sweeping as the English language can make it.

Or to insult—

That is a broad term, Mr. President. It covers every possible act that could be criticized; but in order to make certain that it shall not only include acts which might come under the very broad term, "insult", which might be committed by word of mouth, I propose to insert the words:

by the use of banners, placards, or otherwise.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President——

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I yield to the Senator from Idaho.

Mr. BORAH. The Senator from Nevada has amended his original joint resolution by offering a substitute. From a constitutional standpoint, what is the difference between the two proposals—that is, from the viewpoint of the constitutional right of peaceful assemblage?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, as I see it, the Senator from Nevada is opposed to the harassment or the annoyance—that is the term he has used on several occasions—of representatives of foreign governments.

The issue on these two propositions is very clear and very plain. The Senator from Nevada proposes to create an area on the public streets and highways within 500 feet of any premises occupied by a representative of a foreign government accredited to this Government where no person may go, no matter how well-behaved he may be, no matter how proper his conduct may be, unless he has business to transact there.

Mr. PITTMAN. I do not see where the Senator finds that in the amendment I have offered. Of course, he may use any language he desires to use. He is correct in thinking that I object to harassment and annoyance of the representatives of foreign governments.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. President——

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I yield to the Senator from Delaware.

Mr. HUGHES. Does the Senator mean that a person could not pass by an embassy within 500 yards?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. No; I mean that the Senator from Nevada proposes to create an area of 500 feet where no person may harass or annoy, or go there for any purpose, excepting as he may have a legitimate purpose of transacting business there.

Mr. PITTMAN. I do not find that provision in the joint resolution. That is in the Senator's imagination.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, I have gathered it from some of the remarks which the Senator from Nevada has used when his imagination was running away with him.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I yield.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Looking at the Senator's amendment, after the words "or to insult", the Senator has inserted the words "by the use of banners, placards, or otherwise."

The original law is not quite clear as to who is to be insulted; but I take it, from reading the law, that it means insults to persons passing by, or within their hearing. There is that distinction between the Senator's amendment and the joint resolution of the Senator from Nevada; is there not?

The joint resolution of the Senator from Nevada attempts to prevent insults to foreign governments or the occupants of their embassies—it does not use the same words—while the amendment of the Senator from Wisconsin to the existing act is limited to preventing insults to persons passing by, or within their hearing.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Or persons sufficiently near the act, if it may be called an act to carry a banner, so that they may see or read the banner. The difficulty with the language used by the Senator from Nevada in his proposal is that it is too sweeping.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I take it, from reading the joint resolution of the Senator from Nevada, that he wishes to prevent bringing into public odium any foreign government, party, or organization, or any officer or officers thereof.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. "Or to bring into public disrepute political, social, or economic acts, views, or purposes of any foreign government, party, or organization, or to intimidate, coerce, harass"—and the Senator from Nevada himself has given to the word "harass" the connotation of the word "annoy."

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I thought merely about the part of the Senator's amendment which inserts the words "by the use of banners, placards, or otherwise." I am wondering whether or not the Senator from Wisconsin would be willing to extend that portion of it by adding, after the words "persons passing by, or in their hearing", language similar to the language of the Senator from Nevada—"foreign government, party, or organization, or any officer or officers thereof."

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Yes, Mr. President, I should be willing to modify my amendment accordingly; but I am not willing to accept the language "or to bring into public disrepute political, social, or economic acts, views, or purposes of any foreign government, party, or organization, or to intimidate, coerce, harass, or bring into public disrepute", because the Senator from Nevada has given to that language the connotation that he does not want anyone to come within 500 feet of these embassies or legations who may be there for a purpose that might be interpreted as an intent to annoy the occupants of the embassies or legations. I think it is going too far to attempt to deprive American citizens of the right to be on public highways or streets, so long as their conduct is orderly, so long as they do not congregate into a group, so long as their conduct is above reproach, and so long as they do not attempt to insult anyone or to commit any act, either by word of mouth or by banner, placard, or device which could be construed to be an insult or be construed to be provocative of violence, or any of the dire things which the Senator from Nevada has suggested he is alarmed about.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, I think I am as anxious to protect the constitutional rights of our citizens as is the Senator from Wisconsin.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I grant that.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. But I cannot see that anybody has a constitutional right to go out with some wisecracking placard and insult foreign governments. The inevitable result of enough of that is to lead this Government into hostilities with the foreign governments; and I do not think there is a constitutional right to do that. Personally, I feel that it is entirely proper to make such amendments as are necessary to prevent that sort of activity upon the part of our citizens. As I understand, the Senator would have no objection to amending his amendment to include "foreign governments and their officers" after the word "insult", so that they would be the object of that sentence.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. No; I should not have any objection to that.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I yield to the Senator from Michigan.

Mr. VANDENBERG. From one point of view, the Senator from Wisconsin is offering foreign countries and foreign diplomats a greater measure of protection than is the Senator from Nevada, for under the proposal of the Senator from Wisconsin, if it is appropriately worded in line with the suggestion of the Senator from Washington, the Senator from Wisconsin is going to prevent the display of insulting placards, and so forth, anywhere in the city of Washington, instead of just within 500 feet of an embassy.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President——

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I yield.

Mr. PITTMAN. There are other things besides insults. The Senator from Michigan ought to know that. There are many things that may be said that will bring a country or the rulers of a country into disrepute that are not insulting. There is no doubt about that. In other words, the Senator is trying to limit the thing down to the action of rowdies on the streets.

Mr. VANDENBERG. In the absence from the floor temporarily of the Senator from Nevada, the Senator from Wisconsin has been discussing an enlargement of his language which would specifically cover the situation which the Senator is now discussing.

Mr. PITTMAN. He has not attempted so far to do it.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, just one word in reply to the suggestion of the Senator from Nevada, which he has made on several occasions, that it is disgraceful for protection to be provided to representatives of foreign governments in sections of statutes which have to do with other acts which are of an unfortunate character. Of course, the fact remains that all of our statutes are drawn to cover a great many different situations; and I cannot conceive that any foreign government, or the representatives of any foreign government, could be annoyed, or could feel that they had not been treated with the proper deference and courtesy, if we were to extend to them the same protection which is extended to all other persons in the District of Columbia, and to extend to them protection which is now enjoyed under this statute by our own governmental officials and the property which they occupy.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator a question?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Yes, sir.

Mr. PITTMAN. Does not the Senator believe that the wives and daughters of ambassadors, such as the Chinese Ambassador or the Mexican Ambassador, are justified in being extremely frightened by any form of picketing in front of an embassy or legation?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, in my judgment, it all depends on the conduct and the character of the representations which are made. The Senator knows that the decisions of our own courts, so far as labor disputes are concerned, are filled with many decisions in which a very clear distinction has been made between peaceful picketing and picketing which is not peaceful.

Mr. PITTMAN. I agree with the Senator on that subject, and I am not an opponent of picketing in matters of domestic affairs; but again I say that the wives and children of foreign diplomats have a right to be frightened at picketing in front of their embassies and legations when the object of the picketing is criticism of their governments and their rulers, even if the criticism does not go to the extent of insult; and I regret to say that I think it is true that certain diplomats here have become so frightened that they have had their wives and families temporarily leave the city.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. If that be true, then the complaint should be made to the officials of the District of Columbia and to the police department.

Mr. PITTMAN. What would be the complaint?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. That they have permitted, contrary to section 117 of the District Code, the assemblage of persons in the proximity of embassies in such numbers, or of persons who are conducting themselves in such a way, as to engender or arouse fear of bodily harm or damage to property or to any person who was occupying any legation or embassy.

Mr. PITTMAN. But in some cases there has been no great assemblage. There were only five or six persons. They were not interfering with the traffic of the street. They were not using any language at all, but they carried placards which were critical of the governments represented by the embassies. Back and forward they walked, all day long. That is not illegal under any law of which I know. I am trying to have it made illegal, provided such devices and banners carry upon them a reflection on the government represented by the ambassador, and if they bring that government into odium, no matter whether or not there is now a law against it. It is not illegal picketing in any sense of the word, but it is calculated to frighten those within the building. It has frightened them, and such things should not be permitted. I do not believe we should allow the picketing of a foreign ambassador or a foreign minister or any picketing so close to him that it will cause fright.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I have stated on several occasions that the issue is very clear. The Senator from Nevada wishes to prevent people from going within 500 feet of any buildings or premises occupied by representatives of foreign governments unless they are going to those buildings and premises for the purpose of transacting business, or unless they are walking or using the streets in the ordinary course of their progress to and from some other point.

Mr. PITTMAN. I wish the Senator would not get that impression.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. The Senator from Nevada has once more repeated the statement which is the reason why I have gained the impression, and the Senator has given the connotation of the word "harass" in his amendment, that he does not propose that foreign representatives shall be annoyed. Of course, it might be annoying to some representatives if a man were to walk up and down in front of their premises with the Declaration of Independence printed in sufficiently large letters so that it could be read from the windows by those occupying the premises.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, the banner or device must be calculated to bring into odium the country and in disrepute the officers, and that is the method in which it is harassing.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. The Senator's amendment reads:

> To bring into public notice any * * * political, social, or economic acts, views, or purposes of any foreign government, party, or organization, or to intimidate, coerce, harass, or bring into public disrepute—

And so forth. The Senator has again and again indicated that he does not believe that people in this country have the right or should have the right, no matter how well they may conduct themselves, no matter how proper or appropriate their representations may be, to go within 500 feet of any premises occupied by the representative of any government accredited to this country.

Mr. PITTMAN. There is hardly any use in discussing the matter any longer with the Senator. The language shows that it refers to the carrying of banners or devices. If the Senator still thinks that the offense is walking up and down, I cannot go along with him.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator from Wisconsin yield?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. Does not the Senator recognize the difference between picketing a factory, or store, or any other establishment in the United States growing out of a labor dispute, or any other sort of dispute, and the picketing of an embassy or legation in the United States? Regardless of what any American citizen may feel with respect to the internal policy of any other nation, it strikes me that it is going a long way to allow American citizens to march up and down in front of a foreign embassy, or legation, or consulate, with placards, or in any other way, without placards, expressing their opinion of what is going on in the foreign country. It seems to me that, regardless of whether it annoys them or does not annoy them, it is asking quite a privilege to request that our citizens be allowed deliberately to take any action on the premises or within the precincts of a foreign embassy which is intended to show harsh criticism or disapproval of what may be going on in the foreign country, especially if it is a friendly country, and it would be, of course, if it had an embassy or an ambassador or a minister or consul here.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, it is a privilege which has been enjoyed by the citizens of this country ever since this Government was established, and, so far as I have been able to ascertain, in not a single democratic government in the world is there any such provision on the statute books as is now proposed to be put on our books by the Senator from Nevada.

Mr. BARKLEY. Let us take the recent situation in China, where there has been quite an internal division among the Chinese people growing out of politics perhaps brought about indirectly by difficulties between China and Japan. At least there has been a division of sentiment in the Chinese Republic with respect to the kind of government they wanted established.

Suppose someone takes it on himself, or any number of people, who desire to side with one faction or another in China, take it on themselves for some reason to march up and down in front of the embassy here with placards, or make a demonstration of any sort. Or let us take the Mexican situation of a few years ago, when Huerta and Villa and Carranza and others were engaged in internal difficulties there, trying to work out their internal policies. Does the Senator believe we ought to allow Americans to take sides with the different factions in such a way as to show their favoritism or partiality toward one faction or another by meeting at the embassy, or in front of it, or close enough to it to harass it? And if one side can do it, why not let the other side do it, and they might have a clash right in front of the embassy.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Bear in mind that no meeting can take place under the existing statute. People cannot even assemble or congregate.

Mr. PITTMAN. Under what?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Under section 117 of the District Code. The Senator from Kentucky suggested that rival meetings, public meetings involving conflict growing out of differences, might be held on the premises or near the premises adjacent to an embassy or other property occupied by foreign representatives.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, if one side can go along with banners and the other side decides it wants to have some banners, there is a conflict of banners, at least, in front of an embassy or legation. Of course, that may be an extreme illustration, but if we are going to allow the people of the United States to express their approval or disapproval of one side or one faction of people in a foreign country, we have to allow others, who may have a different view about it, to do the same, and there could very easily be a conflict of demonstrations.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, I cannot convince any Senator who thinks we ought to extend around premises occupied by representatives of a foreign government an area of 500 feet where people should not be permitted to go, no matter how well behaved they may be or how appropriate or proper their representations may be. If that is what is desired, the thing to do is to adopt the amendment the Senator from Nevada has offered; but I am contending that we can take care of this matter by simply amending the existing statute, that it will afford adequate and ample protection against any act which ought to be prohibited or prevented on the part of citizens.

I offer as a substitute for the amendment offered by the Senator from Nevada the amendment now on the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed to insert as a substitute for the amendment offered by the Senator from Nevada the following:

That sections 5 and 6, as amended, of the act entitled "An act for the preservation of the public peace and the protection of property within the District of Columbia", approved July 29, 1892, are amended (1) by inserting after the words "any public building or inclosure" the phrase "(including any building or premises used or occupied by any foreign government or its representatives as an embassy or for diplomatic or other official purposes)"; and (2) by inserting after the words "or to insult", the phrase "(by the use of banners, placards, or otherwise)."

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, I merely wish to say that the amendment has been considered by the State Department, because I took it to them, and the Secretary of State feels that in view of the situation as it is now the amendment would not only be inadequate but would be a very undignified way of treating this matter.

Heretofore a letter of the Secretary of State touching this subject has been printed in our report, and I wish to have it printed at this place in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, August 3, 1937.

The Honorable KEY PITTMAN,
Chairman, Committee on Foreign Relations,
United States Senate.

MY DEAR SENATOR PITTMAN: I refer to Joint Resolution No. 191, to regulate the use of public streets and sidewalks within the District of Columbia adjacent to property owned or occupied by foreign governments for diplomatic purposes and to express my approval of the resolution.

As you know, diplomatic officers are clothed with certain immunities under international law to enable them to transact in countries to which they are accredited or assigned the business of their respective governments. The immunity, therefore, is for a practical purpose—i. e., to allow governments to transact official business free from interruption which might flow from molestation of or interference with their representatives. Governments also send to foreign countries representatives who are not clothed with diplomatic immunity in the strict sense of the word, but who are, because of their representative status, entitled to certain special protection under the local law, as, for example, consuls, trade commissioners, et cetera.

The United States with its 338 diplomatic missions and consulates is, perhaps more than any other country, interested in obtaining for its representatives the protection which they must have if they are to function effectively.

If we are to obtain for our representatives in foreign countries that degree of protection to which they are entitled, we should be in a position to show a like consideration for representatives of other governments in this country. Unless we extend such reasonable protection to representatives of other governments, we cannot hope to receive protection for our representatives abroad.

It is extremely embarrassing to the Department to be reminded by representatives of foreign governments in the United States that their missions are being interfered with by individuals or groups, particularly when existing domestic law does not seem to cover the situations of which complaint is made. By the comity of nations, representatives of foreign governments in countries where law and order are supposed to prevail are entitled to freedom from any attempted intimidation or coercion.

I therefore trust that you may find no difficulty in procuring passage of the resolution.

Sincerely yours,

CORDELL HULL.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Wisconsin in the nature of a substitute for the amendment of the Senator from Nevada.

The amendment to the amendment was rejected.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, I offer an amendment to be inserted at the end of the amendment offered by the Senator from Nevada.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the amendment.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed to add at the end of the amendment offered by the Senator from Nevada the following words:

Provided, however, That nothing contained in this joint resolution shall be construed to prohibit picketing, as a result of bona-fide labor disputes regarding the alteration, repair, or construction of either buildings or premises occupied, for business purposes, wholly or in part, by representatives of foreign governments.

Mr. PITTMAN. I have no objection to that.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Wisconsin to the amendment offered by the Senator from Nevada.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Nevada, as amended, to the committee amendment.

The amendment, as amended, to the committee amendment, was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the joint resolution.

The joint resolution (S. J. Res. 191) was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "Joint resolution to protect foreign diplomatic and consular officers and the buildings and premises occupied by them in the District of Columbia."

CALL OF THE ROLL

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I make the point of order that no quorum is present.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Bulkley	Ellender	Holt
Andrews	Bulow	Frazier	Hughes
Ashurst	Burke	George	Johnson, Calif.
Austin	Byrd	Gerry	Johnson, Colo.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Eighty-four Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present.

RAILROAD TARIFF RATES

Mr. WHEELER. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Senate bill 1261, to amend the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended, and for other purposes. The bill is recommended by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Mr. WHITE. Mr. President, may I ask what the bill provides?

Mr. WHEELER. The bill for which I have asked consideration is Senate bill 1261, which was proposed by the Interstate Commerce Commission. My recollection is that it gives the Interstate Commerce Commission power to require railroads to publish in their tariff schedules the shorter route as well as the longer route. That practice was one in which the railroads engaged for 19 years. Then the Supreme Court of the United States said they had misinterpreted the law. They are now simply asking that the practice in which they engaged for 19 years previously be made lawful and that they be permitted to continue that practice.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Montana [Mr. WHEELER].

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 1261) to amend the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended, and for other purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on Interstate Commerce with amendments.

The first amendment was, in section 1, page 1, line 5, after the word "following", to strike out "The elimination of any existing through route or joint rate, fare, charge, or classification without the consent of all carriers parties thereto or authorization by the Commission shall be deemed prima facie unreasonable and contrary to the public interest" and to insert "If any tariff or schedule canceling any existing through route or joint rate, fare, charge, or classification without the consent of all carriers parties thereto or authorization by the Commission is suspended by the Commission for investigation, the burden of proof shall be upon the carrier or carriers proposing such cancelation to show that it is consistent with the public interest", so as to make the section read:

Be it enacted, etc., That paragraph (3) of section 15 of the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended, is further amended by adding the following: "If any tariff or schedule canceling any existing through route or joint rate, fare, charge, or classification without the consent of all carriers parties thereto or authorization by the Commission is suspended by the Commission for investigation, the burden of proof shall be upon the carrier or carriers proposing such cancelation to show that it is consistent with the public interest."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the committee.

PREVENTION OF AND PUNISHMENT FOR LYNCHING

Mr. DAVIS. Mr. President, in the brief time that I shall occupy the floor, I shall devote my remarks not to the pending question but to another measure which is pending on the calendar, being House bill 1507, to assure to persons within the jurisdiction of every State the equal protection of the laws and to punish the crime of lynching.

Mr. President, this year has brought the problems of mob violence and unrestrained lawlessness to the attention of the Nation in a peculiarly emphatic way. Many people who have never allowed ruthless violence and mob hysteria to have a place in their thoughts are now distinctly disturbed by it. But while we have had disorder and confusion in the industrial world, our attention must not be directed away from the age-long villainy of lynching, which we should oppose, irrespective of the locality in which it occurs or the race or color of those affected by it.

Mr. President, all too long lynching has been regarded as a sectional problem. But the problem of maintaining law and order in the Nation—the police power of the country—is not a local but rather a national consideration and one which we cannot dodge or escape. The inevitable logic of the many national laws which have been enacted in the last few decades, especially during the last 5 years, points, beyond all question, to the strengthening of the police power of the States and through the States by the Federal Government. The place to begin the practical application of this power is not alone in the great industrial sections of the land but also in rural districts where, for an extended period of time, mobs have been allowed to work their uncontrolled will in brazen defiance of every law of God and man. We shall not have any success in quieting labor disturbances until we have made a sincere beginning to solve this older and more deeply intrenched resistance to the orderly institutions of government.

Mr. President, I know the kind, generous-hearted people of the South. I have lived and worked among them. As a youth I sought employment as a puddler in the then newly opened steel mills of the great city of Birmingham. There I had an opportunity to rise in my trade to the rank of master puddler. I know, from long personal association with these people, their warmth of heart, their hospitality, and noble generosity of purpose. As a representative of a fraternal order, I have traveled in every State of the South and have made life-long friendships with people in practically every southern city. Therefore what I shall say at this time is not to be construed, in any sense, as a criticism of the South.

Mr. President, I know the improvements that have come in the South since 1890. I know the teeming industry of the new South. I have witnessed during my lifetime the rise in standards of living there. Conditions which prevailed there in my youthful days were greatly improved during the days of the World War. Wages were increased and conditions of labor were lifted to higher standards. No one who has historical perspective will silently stand by to hear rabid criticism of the South, for who would dare to offer justification for the rule of the "carpet baggers" following the death of the great Lincoln? I believe that if Lincoln had lived on to extend his spirit of humanity and understanding to the people of the South, whom he understood so well, economic conditions such as have harassed the southern States for many decades would have been banished and the standards of wages and work would have measured well with conditions anywhere in the land.

Mr. President, in view of the concern which is now being expressed throughout the land over the maintenance of law and order in all of its different phases I believe the Senate should consider and pass House bill 1507 before adjournment. The House approved of this measure by a large majority. The recent Gallup poll showed that 65 percent of the people of the South, with a somewhat larger percentage for the Nation as a whole, favor a Federal antilynching bill. It must, therefore, be apparent that it is no longer to be regarded as a sectional issue.

Mr. President, the discredit which such occurrences bring upon this Nation abroad is not always as well understood as it should be. We read in the press of various attacks upon the citizens of other lands, and our blood boils at the deliberate insults directed against them. We must never forget that lynching, like every other example of lawlessness and violence, in one country reacts in every other and intensifies existing tendencies to resort to intolerance, cruelty, and tyranny. The oppression by foreign dictators of minority groups in Europe is no more reprehensible than are the attacks directed upon minorities here, even though they be of a different race. The abuses in concentration camps and prisons which shame mankind are interrelated with excesses in our own country for which there is absolutely no defense.

Mr. President, in April 1935 the Macon Telegraph, one of the most forceful journals of the cotton South, indicated that in its opinion—

Public sentiment in the South has about crystallized into the feeling that only by Federal intervention can we ever hope to wipe out lynching.

To this is added:

There will be a certain amount of opposition to a Federal measure to prohibit lynching in the South, but it is a fair question to ask, What else are we to do? Lynching goes on year after year, and punishment for the crime is practically unknown. One of the most revolting of these crimes was the latest to gain general attention, when a Florida mob near Marianna, after bringing the victim from an Alabama jail, where he had been taken for safekeeping, sent out invitations in the morning to attend the lynching, which resolved itself into slow torture, with gruesome details hardly fit to be printed.

The Chattanooga (Tenn.) News of April 5, 1935, declares of this incident:

Members of that mob were well known to the officers of the law, who, indeed, might have prevented the lynching in the first place if they had cared to do so; and yet no one was ever punished, as no one in that State has ever been punished for such a crime, although, as the women of the State themselves point out, there have been 30 lynchings.

Mr. President, this unspeakable condition cannot longer be tolerated. The States have had ample opportunity through the years to do something to prevent this barbaric crime. The time has come when something must be done; and a Federal antilynching bill appears to be the answer. If we put a National Labor Relations Act, a Social Security Act, a national wage and hour bill, a National Housing Act, and other Federal measures on the statute books of the land, certainly, by the same power and authority, a national antilynching law can be enacted if those who have sponsored these other extensions of Federal control desire to do so. And we make take for granted that if no antilynching legislation is now passed it is because the administration does not favor it and wishes to enforce its rulings on industry to the exclusion of a much older and a far less excusable breach of the law.

On March 15, 1935, the New Orleans (La.) Item carried the following statement:

A Mississippi mob lynched a Negro for killing a highway worker. It was no crime of lust or hate. The killer was simply drunk and having himself a time with a pistol, firing it promiscuously. The victim demanded that he stop firing lest he hurt someone. So the Negro shot him.

In this unhappy event the apologist for lynch law will seek in vain for any element that might pardonably stir a community to a frenzy of vengeful indignation. Even the brother of the dead man counseled that the law take its course, and sent out messengers to intercept the mob. Mobs must act swiftly, else reviving sanity or decency will disintegrate them. This one lynched its victim in a schoolyard.

A few public lectures in that schoolyard would be timely. The teacher should trace for the audience the connection between a drunken Negro, careering about with a pistol, and white man's laws which permit anybody, criminal, moron, or lunatic, to buy and carry firearms. He might also be able to convince them that they have made themselves in some degree responsible for the present campaign to take the disciplining of lynching away from States and give it to the Federal Government.

President Roosevelt has recognized the need for some practical solution for this problem in his current statement that "Crimes of organized banditry, cold-blooded shooting, lynching, and kidnaping have threatened our security." The graves of more than 5,000 lynch-mob victims killed in the past 50 years testify that local communities have not met this problem in an adequate way. While we are all aware of the fact that the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People favor Federal legislation, I am frank to say that I do not think this problem should be regarded as a racial or sectional one, for I believe that so long as we permit this view to dominate thinking on this subject, we shall have entirely discredited the philosophy and social understanding which has actuated the great national measures which have won the support of the Senate during the last few years. If a Federal law is good for the settlement of labor disputes in the several States, it should also be invoked to protect the entire land from the evils of mob violence and lynching.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD as a part of my remarks an article by Franklyn Waltman on this subject, published in this morning's Washington Post.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Washington Post of Aug. 10, 1937]

POLITICS AND PEOPLE

ANTILYNCHING BILL SHOULD BE CONSIDERED BY SENATE BEFORE ADJOURNMENT

(By Franklyn Waltman)

Now that the Senate has showed such speed in clearing its calendar of the administration's "must" legislation, there is opportunity for that body this week while waiting for bills from committee and conference reports to take action on a really worth-while measure.

This particular measure has the support of President Roosevelt, and it is a little difficult to understand why it is not on his "must" list. It has the support of approximately 70 percent of the people of this country, according to a Gallup poll. Actually it has received the support of 71 percent of the House membership on a roll call in that body in April. The Senate Judiciary Committee in June voted 13 to 3 in favor of this measure.

And yet this piece of legislation has been on the Senate calendar for almost 2 months without any action on it. But that is not surprising when one considers that the leadership of the Senate comes from the South—for, we make bold to say, this measure is the Wagner-Van Nuys-Gavagan antilynching bill.

It would be indefensible for the Senate to adjourn without a serious attempt to pass antilynching legislation. The only excuse made for not bringing the matter before the Senate—where there is reported to be an overwhelming majority in favor of it—is that it would occasion a filibuster. But that is no excuse at all. If a small handful of Senators is to be able to frighten the Congress away from passing legislation inspired by a sense of decency and morality, then the Senate might as well close its doors.

If a small group of Southern Senators wish to thwart majority rule by filibustering this bill to death, they should have the opportunity to do so. Nothing would be lost through an immediate attempt to pass this bill. The Senate has little of importance to do this week—nothing, if you please, as important as this bill.

Instead of adjourning early to play golf or attend baseball games the Senate might well spend the remainder of this week at least in an effort to get action on the antilynching bill, and if the effort fails we will know those responsible and certain people masquerading as liberals will have the masks torn from their faces.

There is great objection to rushing legislation to passage in the heat of the summer at the fag end of a grinding legislative session. But such an objection cannot be applied to this legislation. Federal steps to prevent lynching, and, in the event of failure, to punish those guilty, have been debated in this country since 1922.

It has received intensive consideration for the last 3 years. Not only in the North but throughout the South tens of thousands of thoughtful men and women have studied this subject and have gone on record in favor of Federal legislation. Indeed, some of the very best research work on lynchings in this country has been done by organizations and men and women in Southern States. Agitation for such legislation has come in large part from the best of the southern press.

Neither is the passage of such a bill an insult to the South, nor is it a force bill. The decent men and women of the South want such legislation, as demonstrated by the attitude of the southern press, by the action of southern organizations, and by the recent Gallup poll, which showed that 65 percent of the sentiment in the South—compared to 70 percent the Nation over—favored a Federal antilynching bill.

It is a peculiar thing that certain gentlemen from the South on Capitol Hill howl about State rights only when it is proposed to take effective steps to stop the lynching of colored men. They forget about State rights when they propose to have the Federal Government tell an employer what wages he may pay and that he must go to jail if he lets any of his employees work longer than a certain number of hours.

They make a mockery of State rights when they propose legislation penalizing a cotton farmer if he grows more cotton than a bureaucrat in Washington decrees. Oh, it is all right, good, and noble for the Federal Government to do these things. But, say they, it would dishonor the sacred memory of Thomas Jefferson for the Federal Government to take steps to save a poor colored man's life.

And passage of this legislation may now be the means of saving the lives of a few colored men between now and next winter; and let it ever be remembered that close to 200 persons, including 25 who were white, have been lynched in this country for crimes of which it subsequently was proved they were innocent. But, guilty or innocent, every person in this country is entitled to his day in court and to be protected from bloodthirsty frenzied mobs. That is the primary guarantee of the Constitution, and until that guarantee becomes a reality nothing else is of very much importance.

RAILROAD TARIFF RATES

The Senate resumed consideration of the bill (S. 1261) to amend the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended, and for other purposes.

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. President, I desire to make a brief explanation of the bill. The bill would eliminate the provision against short hauling and leave the Interstate Commerce Commission with the necessary right to require the establishment and maintenance of through routes between railroads which it finds to be necessary or desirable in the public interest, just as it can now do in the case of joint rail-and-water routes.

When the bill was drafted it was referred to the Interstate Commerce Commission. After consideration the Commission has recommended the passage of the bill. The Committee on Interstate Commerce held hearings on the bill on two different occasions.

Mr. Eastman wrote a report on the bill, as follows:

INTERSTATE COMMERCE COMMISSION,
Washington, February 25, 1937.

Hon. BURTON K. WHEELER,
Chairman, Committee on Interstate Commerce,
United States Senate.

MY DEAR SENATOR: The Chairman of the Commission has referred to our legislative committee your communication of February 2, 1937, requesting comments on S. 1261, introduced by yourself, "to amend the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended, and for other purposes." This bill has had the careful consideration of the legislative committee, and I am authorized to submit the following comments in its behalf:

S. 1261 proposes to amend paragraphs (3) and (4) of section 15 of part I of the Interstate Commerce Act. We shall discuss, first, the amendment to paragraph (4), as being the more important. This amendment would enable the Commission to do what it cannot now do, and that is establish through routes and joint rates between connecting railroad lines "whenever deemed by it to be necessary or desirable in the public interest after full hearing upon complaint or upon its own initiative without complaint." This power is now in terms granted by paragraph (3), but is in part negatived by paragraph (4), which now contains the following provision:

"In establishing any such through route the Commission shall not (except as provided in section 3, and except where one of the carriers is a water line) require any carrier by railroad, without its consent, to embrace in such route substantially less than the entire length of its railroad and of any intermediate railroad operated in conjunction and under a common management or control therewith, which lies between the termini of such proposed through route, unless such inclusion of lines would make the through route unreasonably long as compared with another practicable through route which could otherwise be established."

This is what is known as the prohibition against short hauling, and the effect of the amendment would be to eliminate this prohibition, leaving the Commission with an unrestricted right to require the establishment of through routes between railroads which it finds to be necessary or desirable in the public interest, just as it can now do in the case of joint rail-and-water routes.

The history of this provision is of interest and significance. A major defect of the original act to regulate commerce of 1887 was that the Commission was given no power to require the establishment of through routes and joint rates. This defect was repeatedly called to the attention of Congress by the Commission, and in 1906 an attempt was made to rectify it. The Commission was given the desired power, provided no reasonable or satisfactory through route existed. The Supreme Court held that the existence of such a route could be inquired into by the courts, notwithstanding a finding by the Commission, and that such existence precluded the establishment of any other through route by the Commission, however desirable it might be in the public interest. By the Mann-Elkins Act of 1910, this proviso, which made the power practically ineffective, was eliminated. However, against the opposition of the Commission the prohibition against short hauling was inserted, with the following explanation by Senator Elkins:

"The second exception to the grant of this power is one which has always been recognized in the transportation business of the country. The road that initiates the freight and starts it on its movement in interstate commerce should not be required where it is a line not unreasonably long, to transfer its business from its own road to that of a competitor, especially when the commerce initiated by it can be as promptly and safely transported from the point of shipment to the point of designation by its road as by the line of its competitor."

Until 1929 the Commission interpreted the prohibition in line with this explanation by Senator Elkins. In that year, however, the Supreme Court in United States v. Missouri Pacific (278 U. S. 269), held that the Commission had been wrong in this interpretation, and that it cannot require a through route to be established which will short-haul any carrier, whether originating, or intermediate, or delivering.

This decision was a shock to the Commission, because it goes far to nullify its power to establish through routes between connecting railroads. This is so because there are innumerable instances where it is impossible to find a route in which two or more railroads would participate which does not short-haul some one of them. If the originating line is given its long haul, the delivering line is left with a haul shorter than it would have over some other route, or vice versa; and if an intermediate line is introduced, the chances of short hauling are magnified. As the situation now stands, paragraph (3) of section 15 might almost as well not be in the law, so far as practical value is concerned.

This situation could be improved by amending paragraph (4) so that it would have the interpretation which the Commission almost uniformly placed upon it for 19 years prior to the decision of the Supreme Court in the above-cited case. But why stop there? In 1920 the prohibition against short hauling was made inapplicable where one of the participating carriers is a water line. Why should it cease to have virtue in such circumstances but continue to have virtue where all of the participating carriers happen to be railroads?

Railroads were built primarily to serve the public interest. If it can be shown that in any particular situation a through route made up of the connecting lines of two or more different railroads is "necessary or desirable in the public interest", why should not the Commission have the power to establish that route, regardless of who may be short-hauled? We know of no good reason. The railroads have no constitutional right to a long haul. The present prohibition in paragraph (4) is wholly a statutory provision, and what Congress has enacted it can repeal. The Commission opposed the prohibition when it was originally enacted.

The objections which trunk-line railroads have raised to this bill seem to rest on the assumption that the Commission will act arbitrarily and without regard to the real public interest. There is no basis for such an assumption. If the bill is passed, the railroads will have full opportunity to present to the Commission their objections to the establishment of any particular through route, and the courts will protect them against any arbitrary findings on the part of the Commission unsupported by substantial evidence.

S. 1261, however, proposes to add a new clause to paragraph (4), as amended, to the following effect:

"In fixing through routes and in determining what is desirable or necessary in the public interest, the Commission shall not take into consideration the necessity or desirability of diverting revenue from one railroad to another."

Inasmuch as paragraph (4), as it is proposed to be amended, is confined to a grant of authority to the Commission, "in time of shortage of equipment, congestion of traffic, or other emergency" to establish through routes temporarily in a summary manner, it would seem that the more appropriate place for the proposed new clause is paragraph (3), which contains the general grant of authority to establish through routes. To conform to the language of that paragraph, also, the second word in the new clause should be "establishing", rather than "fixing." We are not persuaded, however, that the new clause should be added. There may be instances where there are plenty of good through routes, so that no more are needed to accommodate the actual movement of traffic, but by adding a new through route, over which traffic can move economically, a railroad which is in financial straits but which it is desirable to preserve in the public interest would be given an opportunity to share in the through traffic which might mean to it the difference between life and death. There is a possibility that the proposed new clause would preclude the Commission from taking into consideration this phase of the public interest, and for this reason it does not meet with our approval.

In addition to the proposed amendment of paragraph (4), S. 1261 proposes to add the following clause to paragraph (3):

"The elimination of any existing through route or joint rate, fare, charge, or classification without the consent of all carriers parties thereto or authorization by the Commission shall be deemed prima facie unreasonable and contrary to the public interest."

Probably this clause is intended merely to have the effect of putting the burden of proof upon the carriers which seek to eliminate an existing through route or joint rate, etc. Faced by such a declaration of the law, however, it would be difficult for the Commission to avoid suspending any such elimination for investigation, even if there were no protests. We suggest, therefore, that the clause take the following form:

"If any tariff or schedule canceling any existing through route or joint rate, fare, charge, or classification without the consent of all carriers parties thereto or authorization by the Commission is suspended by the Commission for investigation, the burden of proof shall be upon the carrier or carriers proposing such cancelation to show that it is consistent with the public interest."

With the exceptions mentioned above, S. 1261 meets with our approval.

Respectfully submitted.

JOSEPH B. EASTMAN,
Chairman, Legislative Committee.

Mr. DIETERICH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Montana yield to the Senator from Illinois?

Mr. WHEELER. I yield.

Mr. DIETERICH. From what was the Senator reading?

Mr. WHEELER. I was reading from a letter of Mr. Eastman, of the Interstate Commerce Commission. When this particular bill was referred to the Interstate Commerce Commission, they referred it to their legislative committee. I was reading Mr. Eastman's letter with relation to the provisions of the bill.

The only purpose of the bill is to give the Interstate Commerce Commission the power to require a railroad, when the Commission deems it to be in the public interest, to publish routes showing the long haul as well as the short haul. It would give the shipper the right to say whether or not he wants to have his goods shipped over the short route or the long route. That is all there is to the bill.

Hearings were held during the Seventy-fourth Congress on Senate bill 1636, which was similar to this proposed legislation, and testimony was received from railway officials and other interested parties.

Mr. DIETERICH. Mr. President, did the Senator say the bill would give the shipper the right to select the route?

Mr. WHEELER. Yes.

Mr. DIETERICH. Where does the Senator find any such provision in the bill?

Mr. WHEELER. The bill gives the shipper the right, because it provides that the railroads shall publish their routes showing the long route as well as the short route.

Mr. DIETERICH. It would give the Commission the absolute arbitrary right to tell the shipper over which route he must ship.

Mr. WHEELER. The Senator is entirely mistaken.

Mr. DIETERICH. Then I do not understand the language of the bill.

Mr. WHEELER. The bill simply gives the Commission the power to establish routes and to say, in effect, "Here is a route which is the short route and here is another route which is the long route." These routes must be published in the traffic rules and regulations issued by the railroads. The shipper then sees the routes as published, and is given the privilege and the right to ship over either of the routes he may desire. That is all there is to it.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator from Montana a question?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Montana yield to the Senator from Texas?

Mr. WHEELER. Certainly.

Mr. CONNALLY. Under laws enacted heretofore by Congress the initial carrier is responsible to the shipper for the safe delivery of his goods at destination, is it not?

Mr. WHEELER. No. What happens is this——

Mr. CONNALLY. Why is it not? Is not that statute law of the United States?

Mr. WHEELER. It is not statute law of the United States; but the shipper collects from the road on which he ships. If the shipment is injured on some other railroad than the one on which it is shipped, the second man pays.

Mr. CONNALLY. That is the point I am trying to make. If the initial carrier is to assume legal responsibility for seeing that the shipment is delivered to the ultimate consignee, and is under legal liability for doing so, ought not the initial carrier to have some voice as to the route over which it will handle the shipment, and as to the promptness with which the other carrier will repay the initial carrier, and the convenience of the route?

Mr. WHEELER. I think the Senator is wrong in saying that the original carrier is responsible.

Mr. CONNALLY. How about the Carmack Act?

Mr. WHEELER. I do not dispute the Senator, because I must confess that I am not sure.

Mr. CONNALLY. I am asking the Senator because I thought, as chairman of the committee, he would know.

Mr. WHEELER. I am not familiar with that act, I shall have to confess.

Mr. CONNALLY. I have not looked it up since I have been in the Senate; but when I used to practice law I know it was the law that the initial carrier could be sued and compelled to pay damages, no matter where the damage occurred. If we are going to provide for that, we ought to give the initial carrier some right to say over what system it will ship the commodity.

Mr. WHEELER. If that is correct, then we ought to change the other law that is on the statute books at the present time and take away from the Commission the apparent right that they have at the present time to prescribe through routes. The Commission for 19 years exercised this power, thinking they had the right to do so under the law; and the late Senator Elkins, who was the author of the act, interpreted it upon the floor of the Senate to the effect that they did have the power. The Commission put the same interpretation upon the law that Senator Elkins did; but the Supreme Court, in the Missouri-Pacific case, said that they did not have that power. So they are only asking to have given to them the same power that they have been exercising for 19 years; and, as Mr. Eastman says, if they cannot do that, they feel that it is going to handicap them very much in making through routes for the benefit of the shippers.

The shippers of the country have almost uniformly been in favor of this amendment. When the hearings were held and testimony was taken, the shippers' organizations from all over the country, and I think, if I am not mistaken, the shippers' organizations of the State of Texas, favored it; the State utility commissions of Minnesota, Missouri, Idaho Wisconsin, Utah, Iowa, Louisiana, Ohio, Washington, North and South Dakota, and the District of Columbia urged the enactment of legislation designed to remove the prohibition against short hauling; and again at this session various shippers' organizations have written in from all over the country requesting that this bill be enacted.

Mr. DIETERICH. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Montana yield to the Senator from Illinois?

Mr. WHEELER. I do.

Mr. DIETERICH. The Senator speaks of the hearings that were held. No hearings were held on this particular bill, were they?

Mr. WHEELER. Not on this particular bill; no.

Mr. DIETERICH. The hearings that were held were held during the last Congress and by the previous Committee on Interstate Commerce.

Mr. WHEELER. Yes.

Mr. DIETERICH. Not by the present Committee on Interstate Commerce?

Mr. WHEELER. Yes; by the present Committee on Interstate Commerce. There are now some new members of the Interstate Commerce Committee; but hearings were held upon the bill by the committee, and the hearings are available to anybody who wants them.

Mr. DIETERICH. What was the previous bill?

Mr. WHEELER. The previous bill was almost identical with this one.

Mr. DIETERICH. The Senator says "almost identical."

Mr. WHEELER. Yes; the same principle was involved.

Mr. DIETERICH. But it was not the same bill, and it was not exactly identical with this one.

Mr. WHEELER. No, that is true; but the same principle was involved.

Mr. DIETERICH. The hearings were held in the last Congress, and were held by the Interstate Commerce Committee of that Congress; and the Interstate Commerce Committee of this Congress has not had any hearings on this bill.

Mr. WHEELER. That is correct. The Interstate Commerce Committee of the Senate held hearings twice before upon the bill, and in addition the Interstate Commerce Commission recommended the passage of the bill on every occasion.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Montana yield to the Senator from New York?

Mr. WHEELER. I do.

Mr. COPELAND. I am at a disadvantage for the reason that the information I have came to me so recently; but I am informed, as the Senator from Illinois [Mr. DIETERICH] has said, that there were no hearings on this bill, even though they were requested by the Association of American Railroads. What has the Senator to say about that?

Mr. WHEELER. I am the chairman of the committee. If they ever requested any hearings upon this bill, I never knew anything about it, and I think I would have known about it if they had; but I never knew anything about any request from them for hearings upon the bill, and if they had made a request they would have been granted hearings.

Mr. COPELAND. The Senator from Montana has been engaged in a very much more important matter than this. He has been giving his life and energies to the successful battle to preserve the Constitution and the Supreme Court. Is it not quite probable that in view of his very proper preoccupation he may have overlooked the fact that there was a request from the Association of American Railroads for a hearing on this bill?

Mr. WHEELER. There was no request. If they ever wrote a letter to me requesting a hearing, I feel sure that the clerk of the committee would have brought it to my attention. I will send for the clerk of the committee and inquire about it, but I am sure no request was made for a hearing.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WHEELER. I yield.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Has there ever been a subject which has been more completely exhausted by hearings than this subject?

Mr. WHEELER. Not at all.

Mr. VANDENBERG. What could be developed in new hearings that has not already been brought out?

Mr. WHEELER Nothing. For 19 years the Commission did exactly this thing, and no shipper ever complained that he was injured by it. All in the world that the bill does is simply to give the Commission the power, which they say it is necessary for them to have in order properly to carry out the law in the public interest, to say that a certain route shall be established. That does not mean that the shipper has to ship over that route at all.

He has a right to ship over that route, or he has a right to ship over some other route; but the bill gives him the right to say, "This is an established route, and that is an established route. I want to get my goods to market quicker than I can get them to market over this route, and consequently I want to ship them over that route."

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WHEELER. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. I understand that the substance of the bill is that it authorizes the Interstate Commerce Commission to do what it did for 19 years; namely, that in making out their traffic and tariff schedules, the railroads shall make schedules for short as well as long hauls, so that the public may have that information, still leaving to the public the right of choice as to which route it shall ship its products over.

Mr. WHEELER. Absolutely.

Mr. BARKLEY. Is not that about what the bill does?

Mr. WHEELER. That is exactly what it does. The Commission acts only when it thinks it is in the public interest; and if any railroad is injured by it, the railroad has a right to have a hearing before the Commission, and it has a right to appeal to the courts if the Commission rules against it.

Mr. BARKLEY. In other words, a hearing before the Commission by any railroad which thought it might be aggrieved would be a much more important hearing than one before the committee here to determine whether or not the bill ought to pass.

Mr. WHEELER. Of course. As a matter of fact, the bill says:

> If any tariff or schedule canceling any existing through route or joint rate, fare, charge, or classification without the consent of all carriers parties thereto or authorization by the Commission is suspended by the Commission for investigation, the burden of proof shall be upon the carrier or carriers proposing such cancelation to show that it is consistent with the public interest.

That is all there is to it.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Montana yield to the Senator from Florida?

Mr. WHEELER. I yield.

Mr. PEPPER. Since I observe that the bill purports to deal with tariffs and schedules, I desire to ask the Senator from Montana whether there is any possibility that it might have the effect of ameliorating the burdensome rate discriminations that exist against some sections of the country, notably the Southeastern States.

Mr. WHEELER. The bill does not affect those rates in any way, shape, or form, except that the shipment might be over a shorter route to some point. To that extent the bill might affect the rates, but that is all.

Mr. PEPPER. I hope it will not increase the burden.

Mr. WHEELER. The bill will not increase any burden. It simply gives the shipper this right: For instance, if a shipper were shipping citrus fruit from the State of Florida, and desired to get the fruit into Chicago by the shortest route, because time was of the essence of the situation, the shipper would have the right to say, "I want to ship my fruit partly over this route and partly over that one, because it will get my fruit into Chicago quicker than if it were shipped over the other route."

That is all the bill does. It gives the Commission the power to say, and have published, that "Here is a route that is a short route and here is a route that is a long route; and, Mr. Shipper, you have the choice of selecting the route over which you want to ship your product." That is all there is to the bill.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WHEELER. I yield to the Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. WALSH. I should like to inquire of the Senator whether this bill has any relationship to the so-called Pettingill bill.

Mr. WHEELER. None whatever.

Mr. WALSH. That is what I assume. Some Senators seem to think it has some relation to it. It is an entirely different proposition?

Mr. WHEELER. Entirely different. It has no relation of any kind of character to the so-called long-and-short-haul bill. It is entirely different.

Mr. BONE. Mr. President——

Mr. WHEELER. I yield to the Senator from Washington.

Mr. BONE. For the purpose of my question, assume that a shipment was going from a point on the Pacific coast, Seattle or Tacoma, to St. Louis, and normally, through some harmonious arrangement between two of the western roads, it had been the common practice to send a car through Minneapolis and then divert it south to St. Louis, but there would be a shorter route by diverting the car, say, at Billings, Mont., and sending it down over the Burlington road to the Missouri River terminal.

Assume the route was 500 miles shorter by the Billings diversion. Would the fact that it was 500 miles shorter mean that there was a proportionately smaller charge for the shipment; or is there a through rate, which would not be changed?

Mr. WHEELER. There would be a through rate. In either case the railroads would get the same rate, but it would mean that the man who shipped the goods would say, "You are going to save me 2 days by this shipment by routing it through St. Louis, and I want to ship the goods over that route."

Mr. BONE. Then I take it that the most important element of the proposed amendment lies in the fact that it would expedite the handling of freight, such as perishables?

Mr. WHEELER. Yes. For instance, freight might originate at the present time in the State of Washington, be shipped through Montana, and then, if the shippers wanted it to go to a point north of North Dakota into Canada, or to a point north of South Dakota in North Dakota, the railroad originating it on the west coast would ship it clear to the east coast and then ship it back over some other road to North Dakota, whereas there is a short line coming up from South Dakota through North Dakota into Canada, and it would save the shipper a couple of days, or 2 or 3 days' time.

Mr. POPE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. WHEELER. I yield.

Mr. POPE. It seems to me the measure proposes a very sensible arrangement, but I am wondering why the railroad companies do not ship their freight by the most direct route anyway. It seems to me it would be to their interest to do so.

Mr. WHEELER. The reason is that they want to claim all the freight charge, and if they shipped it over some other road which was a shorter route the company which first originated the freight shipment might lose a little portion of the charge. That is the only factor.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WHEELER. I yield.

Mr. COPELAND. In the Senator's report on page 3 he says:

> Railroads were built primarily to serve the public interest.

Mr. WHEELER. Let me call attention to the fact that that is what Mr. Eastman said. That should be in small type, but when it was printed, a mistake was made. That is Mr. Eastman's statement.

Mr. COPELAND. I will read it, anyway. It proceeds:

> If it can be shown that in any particular situation a through route made up of the connecting lines of two or more different railroads is "necessary or desirable in the public interest", why should not the Commission have the power to establish that route, regardless of who may be short-hauled?

The statement is made to me that it was established in the hearings, and rather conclusively, that thousands of miles of branch-line railroads are unprofitable, a statement with which I think we will all agree, and that the only excuse for their continued operation is the fact that the railroad will get this long haul. This bill takes away that right. It may result, I am informed, in the abandonment of thousands of miles of branch-line railroads.

Mr. WHEELER. The Senator means if the bill does not pass?

Mr. COPELAND. If it passes.

Mr. WHEELER. No; quite the contrary. If the bill does not pass, and the short lines, which were built for the purpose of serving the public, do not get any of the freight, and the great road which originates and controls the traffic does not permit any of the traffic to go over the short line, it may mean that the short lines all over the country will have to be abandoned.

Mr. COPELAND. The Senator is doubtless correct; but the statement made to me is that it may result in the abandonment of thousands of miles of branch-line railroads, seriously affect communities located thereon, decrease employment for railroad employees, and the consequence would be another step toward public ownership.

Mr. WHEELER. There is not a word of truth in that. Let me call attention to the fact that for 19 years, as Mr. Eastman said, this law was in operation and the great railroads of the country did not suffer; there was not anyone thrown out of employment. As a matter of fact, the railroads were employing more men then than they are employing now, and it was only recently that the law was knocked out by the Supreme Court in a decision which I thought was wrong and still think was wrong.

Mr. COPELAND. Was that in the Missouri Pacific case?

Mr. WHEELER. Yes.

Mr. COPELAND. Of course, I am not speaking from my own wisdom, but the statement made to me is that the right of a carrier to the long haul is a common-law right.

Mr. WHEELER. It is not a common-law right, because the only right it has is what the Congress of the United States granted to it, and we granted it that right. At least the Supreme Court claimed we granted them that right; and, if we granted them that right, we have the right to take it away from them, and to provide in the interest of the general public that the Interstate Commerce Commission, which was established for the purpose of making rates and for the purpose of fixing routes, should have the power to say, "When it is in the public interest, you shall have the privilege of choosing as between a long route, that takes you 2 or 3 days longer to get your commodity to its destination, and the route which gets it there 2 or 3 days sooner."

Mr. COPELAND. Let me finish my statement, and then I will not interrupt further. Referring to the Missouri Pacific case, if I correctly understand, the Commission in that case attempted to deprive the Missouri Pacific of the haul from its own terminus in Memphis to within 46 miles of its terminus in Fort Smith, 266 miles, and deprive it also of the revenue from that haul, in order to give the Subiaco Line a haul of 54 miles; and, as was said in the dissenting opinion, it was proposed to take $5 from Peter, the Missouri Pacific, and to give $1 to Paul, the Subiaco, a proceeding which had no justification from any point of view.

Mr. WHEELER. The Commission did not take anything away from anybody. The Commission simply says, "Here is a route and there is a route." The shipper can ship his goods over either.

Mr. MINTON. What it does is simply to give to the Interstate Commerce Commission the right to require the railroad company to file a tariff outlining not only the long route but the short route, and that is all it does.

Mr. WHEELER. That is correct.

Mr. DIETERICH. Mr. President, it might work both ways. If the initial carrier owned the short route, the shipper could also take that, or have the freight shipped over the long route.

Mr. WHEELER. Of course, he could ship it either way; and that is proper.

Mr. DIETERICH. As I understand, that is the opinion of the Interstate Commerce committee, as represented by the chairman.

Mr. WHEELER. Yes. There is not any doubt about it. I think the shipping public should have the right to ship goods in any way they choose, so long as they own the goods.

Mr. DIETERICH. Mr. President, I wish to take up just a little time in the discussion of the proposed amendment.

No hearings were held on this particular bill at this session of the Congress by the Committee on Interstate Commerce. That is the first proposition. If the Congress is going to function through committees, then the committees, if it is necessary to have hearings on a bill of this kind, should afford the interested parties opportunity of being heard. Such opportunity has not been afforded in the case of the particular bill now being discussed. There may have been a similar bill pending in the last Congress, and before the committee, and hearings may have been had on that bill, but no information is furnished as to the difference between the provisions of the previous bill and the provisions of the pending bill. I have not had opportunity to go into the bills, and I doubt whether other Senators have had the opportunity to do so.

It may be that the bills were similar, but the membership of the Committee on Interstate Commerce changes with every session of the Congress; and I protest against the practice which has been indulged in during this session by the Committee on Interstate Commerce, through its chairman, of reporting measures on which hearings were held previously but on which no hearings were afforded during this session.

The bill before us seeks to give the Interstate Commerce Commission the right to control routing over long and short hauls. The chairman of the committee says it gives the shipper that privilege. Possibly it does. There is one thing it does—it absolutely denies every right a railroad has to operate its own property, to make its own contracts with shippers, and to enjoy the advantage of the investment it has made in its effort to accommodate the public.

The matter of establishing long hauls has been the subject of a long fight in this country. It has meant millions of dollars of investment, and those long routes were established for the purpose of accommodating and facilitating the transportation of commodities for the benefit of the citizens of this country, and the railroads which established those routes should have some right to the enjoyment of the property they caused to be created.

This bill absolutely denies them that right. The initial railroad that enters into the contract with the shipper, and whose contract is binding, and which, if the property is damaged or delayed, must respond in damages to the shipper, cannot control the shipment of the commodity. The initial road can receive it, take the responsibility, and perhaps have it diverted, not over a short haul, but have it diverted over a long haul, to its destination. That is manifestly unjust. It is manifestly wrong.

I do not know that I could say anything that would influence Members of the Senate; but I did not want to see this bill enacted into law without registering my protest, first at the action of the Interstate Commerce Committee in not permitting hearings to be held on this particular bill, and secondly, against denying or destroying the legal property rights of the carriers.

Mr. President, this bill should be recommitted, and hearings should be held upon it, and a further investigation made. The bill should not become a law, because it seriously affects property rights and is based upon a hearing held by some previous committee, in some previous Congress, which the chairman of the Committee on Interstate Commerce of the Senate, in his wisdom, determined to be sufficient to take the place of a hearing upon this bill.

Mr. President, I realize that the chairman is a great protector of the rights of the people. I know that he is one of the most zealous guardians of the Constitution. I know that he is the outstanding protector of the Constitution. The trouble is, however, that he has not only taken to himself the chairmanship of the committee, but apparently he has taken to himself to be the committee, and his word on whatever is necessary or not necessary must not be questioned, because it could not be otherwise than correct. In view of the great zealousness that we have seen displayed to have things done exactly right, exactly according to the law, it must seem that it is somewhat irregular to have a hearing by a previous committee on another bill, and then have the chairman translate the findings of the previous committee to the present committee with the resultant amendment to the bill, because we find that the bill sought to be enacted is not even the original bill that was introduced in Congress.

Mr. WHEELER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DIETERICH. I yield.

Mr. WHEELER. As a matter of fact, the bill was taken up in the committee, and the committee voted to report it favorably. That was not the action of the chairman. If the Senator from Illinois would attend committee meetings once in a while at other times than when hearings are being held on utility holding-company bills, he would know what is going on in the committee.

Mr. DIETERICH. Mr. President, if every member felt as free as I do when attending the meetings of the committee, there would be just one member present, and that would be the chairman.

GREAT SMOKY MOUNTAINS NATIONAL PARK

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I know that the Senator in charge of the pending bill wants a vote to be had on it; but I am going to take only about 5 or 10 minutes to speak about another bill which is of the greatest interest to the people of my State and to the people of a great section of the country.

The Senator from Nevada [Mr. McCARRAN] introduced a bill, which is on the calendar, providing authorization for an appropriation to continue to carry forward a park proposal in Nevada. I am interested in a similar situation with respect to the Great Smoky Mountains National Park; and I am going to offer an amendment to the so-called McCarran bill, when it comes before the Senate for consideration, for the purpose of effecting for the Great Smoky Mountains National Park the same thing that is sought to be effected for the forest preserve in Nevada.

As everyone knows who has seen the Great Smoky Mountains National Park, which has been established in eastern Tennessee and western North Carolina, it is one of the most picturesque and beautiful parks in the country. The park was begun in 1926, when I introduced and obtained the passage of a bill providing that the land should be purchased by the States of North Carolina and Tennessee in equal proportions. The line between North Carolina and Tennessee is substantially on the top of the Great Smoky range of mountains.

The proposal made was that the State of Tennessee and the State of North Carolina should buy, in round figures, 436,000 acres of land and create a national park.

The money was raised, for the most part, by bonds issued by the States of Tennessee and North Carolina and also by private subscription. Before the money was raised the depression came in 1929 and the private subscriptions were not paid in full.

The park, as I have said, is composed of 436,000 acres of land, about one-half lying in the State of Tennessee and about one-half lying in the State of North Carolina. Generally speaking, the dividing line between North Carolina and Tennessee is, as I have said, on the top of the Great Smoky Mountains, and the park is divided by this line. All who have seen it know that it is one of the most beautiful spots in America. It is one of the most picturesque and, I believe, the most picturesque and beautiful park east of the Mississippi River.

Under the original proposal Tennessee was to furnish one-half of the land and North Carolina the other half, it being expected that the Government would improve the park after all the lands were donated to the Government. The lands have been donated with the exception I shall now state.

The first bill was introduced in 1926. In the 11 years that have passed there have already been acquired and accepted 383,358 acres, leaving 53,336 acres to be acquired. However, 27,320 acres have been tied up for a number of years by a lawsuit, which lawsuit has finally been adjusted. The money for the 27,320 acres is not in question here. That leaves 26,014 acres to be acquired, and in order to acquire the 26,014 acres within the boundaries of the proposed park it will be necessary to obtain $743,265.29, as proposed in the bill I shall offer as an amendment to the so-called McCarran bill.

After the original bill was passed in 1926 the States of North Carolina and Tennessee went diligently to work, and both provided for the issuance of bonds, and then both undertook to raise large sums of money by public and private subscription. Then the depression came on and the money was not available. The Park Service took the matter to the John D. Rockefeller Foundation, and, after going over the matter carefully, Mr. Rockefeller agreed to put up $5,000,000 upon condition that the park be fully established, one-half by the people of the States of North Carolina and Tennessee and one-half in memory of Laura Spelman Rockefeller. After the $5,000,000 was obtained it was found that in addition to what the States had already put up and what Mr. Rockefeller had put up it would require a little over $1,550,000 more to complete the park. The State of Tennessee could not put up any more under the economic conditions then existing. The State of North Carolina could not put up any more. Yet this $1,550,000 was absolutely needed to match the unmatched Rockefeller fund.

In these circumstances the President, by Executive order of December 28, 1933, allotted $1,550,000 for land acquisition for C. C. C. purposes, which, plus the $500,000 of Rockefeller funds, made available $2,050,000, the amount then considered necessary to acquire all the remaining lands in the park area, the estimates of the States being $2,004,368.

The estimates of the States of North Carolina and Tennessee, however, proved too low. North Carolina had been prosecuting a condemnation suit for a large timber tract. The court award was far in excess of the highest State estimate. The North Carolina timber tract happened to be the last large tract to be acquired by that State, and payment was made into court to stop heavy interest rates. North Carolina was fortunate in securing a larger advance from the $2,050,000 Federal and Rockefeller funds because of the urgency of paying the condemnation award into court, and therefore North Carolina got most of the $2,050,000 and left 26,014 acres of land to be acquired in Tennessee.

Mr. President, Tennessee should not be penalized by reason of this situation. The Government, through the Executive order, has already put up North Carolina's portion of the deficit; and I maintain that the Government should put up the remainder of Tennessee's portion, which is $743,265.29, the amount authorized to be appropriated in the bill to which I have referred.

I want to give the figures:

The total area of the proposed park within minimum taking lines prescribed by the Department now amounts to 436,694.92 acres.

Of this, there have been acquired and accepted 383,358.85 acres.

This leaves still to be acquired 53,336.07 acres.

Of the 53,336.07 acres, funds are in hand to acquire 27,320.57 acres.

Funds amounting to $743,265.29 are needed to acquire the balance, 26,014.50 acres.

When State funds failed, Mr. Rockefeller requested that the area for the park be reduced to 400,000 acres, provided the remainder necessary to acquire the other lands was in hand. Estimates from the two States indicated that $1,550,000 was necessary; but, as I have explained, the estimates were incorrect. But $1,550,000 was secured, and the act was passed. It was made clear in a report to Congress that this minimum was predicated entirely upon the funds in hand being sufficient to achieve the purpose. It later turned out that those figures were inaccurate and that $743,265.29 additional is needed.

I might say the cost originally estimated by North Carolina and Tennessee for the 436,000 acres of land prescribed by the act of May 22, 1936 (44 Stat. 616), as the minimum completed park area was, in round figures, $9,750,000. The States had secured about half the amount needed, or $4,875,000, by State bond issues, land donations, and private pledges, when, upon the Park Service approaching Mr. John D. Rockefeller, Jr., he agreed to match, and did match, those funds dollar for dollar, giving not exceeding $5,000,000 upon condition that the park be fully established "one-half by the peoples of North Carolina and Tennessee and one-half in memory of Laura Spelman Rockefeller."

After approximately $9,000,000 had been expended from these joint funds for the acquisition of approximately 380,000 acres by the two State park commissions, the depression came, as I have stated. Consequently, some private pledges, amounting to approximately $300,000, could not be collected. This left over $500,000 of Rockefeller funds unmatched. Federal funds became available for the acquisition of lands within the park area for C. C. C. purposes. Each State was asked to furnish estimates of the cost of the lands needed to complete the park. North Carolina's estimate was $1,145,540 and Tennessee's $858,828, or a total of $2,004,368. Based on these estimates, only $1,550,000 of Federal funds were needed if the unmatched Rockefeller balance of $500,000 could be used, which would make a total of $2,050,000 available for land acquisition, including nearly $50,000 for contingencies. Mr. Rockefeller agreed to make his $500,000 available to match Federal funds, provided Congress established the park on the basis of the acreage that his original $5,000,000 matched by State and Federal funds would acquire. This was computed at 400,000 acres, and Congress enacted the necessary legislation prescribing 400,000 acres as the minimum for the park, it being clearly understood, however, that the additional 36,000 acres would be needed to round out the park, and for which sufficient funds were then believed to be in hand.

It now appears that $743,000 additional will be required to complete the land acquisition. Therefore, unless Federal funds can be secured to supplement the original $1,550,000 made available by the Executive order of December 28, 1933, by $743,000, North Carolina's equitable share of this deficit is $398,000 and Tennessee's share is $347,000. Neither State is able to put up this sum allotted to them.

One excellent road has been built all the way through the park from Gatlinburg, Tenn., on the Tennessee side, to Bryson City, N. C., on the North Carolina side. Some other roads have been built but none of them have been completed.

Notwithstanding this uncompleted situation in the park, it has proved to be a most popular park. The visitors to the Great Smoky Mountains National Park in 1936 reached the enormous number of 620,222. This year to July 24, 1937, 458,469 have already been to the park and the year not much more than half spent. The figures this year show an increase in 1937 over the same period in 1936 of 129 percent. The park is destined to become one of the most popular and attractive parks in the world.

Compare these figures with those for Yellowstone Park, that famous park in the Middle West, known of all people, one of the most wonderful parks in the world. Compare the figures, I ask you, for that great park which has been established for more than a quarter of a century and, perhaps, for nearly a half century, with the figures for the Great Smoky Mountains National Park. In 1936 there were 432,570 visitors to the Yellowstone Park as compared to 620,222 to the Great Smoky Mountains Park, and to July 24, 1937, there were only 236,670 visitors to the Yellowstone National Park, an increase of only 10 percent, while the visitors to the Smoky Mountains Park numbered 458,000, or nearly double the number visiting the Yellowstone National Park.

Mr. President, it is wholly unfair to the State of Tennessee that this money has not been appropriated. It ought to be appropriated and the park completed, and I am sure that the Congress, believing in doing the fair thing, inasmuch as the money has been furnished for buying up all the necessary lands in North Carolina to complete the park, will furnish the additional sum with which to buy the necessary lands to complete the park in Tennessee.

I appeal to Senators, since the money has been furnished for buying up all the necessary lands in North Carolina, the State of my distinguished friend [Mr. REYNOLDS] who sits beside me, and who, I know, would be willing, as I believe other Senators would be willing, to do the fair thing by the State of Tennessee, to appropriate the necessary amount to buy the land in Tennessee which is necessary to complete the park.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President——

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, may I be permitted——

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CLARK in the chair). Does the Senator from Tennessee yield to the Senator from Illinois?

Mr. McKELLAR. I yield.

Mr. LEWIS. May I be permitted to ask the Senator from Tennessee what is the position of Sir ROBERT REYNOLDS, the representative of the North Carolina and Asheville end of the park?

Mr. McKELLAR. I will say that if my good friend from North Carolina should not be 100 percent for making this appropriation for the benefit of the park in Tennessee I would be the most surprised man in the world, and I am almost tempted to say that I would agree to take my seat.

FOUR HUNDREDTH ANNIVERSARY OF SPANISH SETTLEMENT IN AMERICA

Mr. CHAVEZ. Mr. President, this morning my colleague, the senior Senator from New Mexico [Mr. HATCH] and I introduced a joint resolution (S. J. Res. 204) that will, if enacted into law, provide for Federal participation in the celebration of the four hundredth anniversary of the landing of the Spaniards in the American Southwest. I desire now, with the indulgence of the Senate, to speak briefly on that resolution and on the occasion of the celebration.

Mr. President, since taking my place in the Senate, I have tried to the best of my ability to comport myself in a manner respectful of the rules prescribed for the conduct of this body. I have tried to uphold the duties of the office, to represent a State different from all the rest by reason of its unique racial and historical origin.

In that time, Mr. President, I have addressed the Senate on but a few occasions and then briefly. I have felt that the rules of decorum required that a new Member should maintain a period of silence and observation.

But today we are faced with events so portentous, the specter of the impending crisis in Europe and Asia is so serious that to remain silent would constitute forgetfulness of duty or evasion of responsibility.

The people of the United States must be made aware that the events transpiring today in Spain and China are but heralds of a New World catastrophe, a historical occurrence which will be more terrible than the last, a war which will bring an end to Old World civilization. War drums rumble in the Orient.

Our role in the event of such a disaster should be well defined. Such a war will not be our war; we must not be dragged into it.

It is well to speak of isolating ourselves from such an event, but we must, nevertheless, recognize the fact that no civilization has ever existed and prospered on a self-contained basis. It was only through the exchange of commerce in the Aegean and Mediterranean that the cultures of Greece and Rome, which remain to this day the greatest cultural landmarks of antiquity, flowered and developed.

Thus today we cannot hope to regain and maintain our prosperity on the basis of an isolated economy. We must create and maintain economic relations which, in the event of another war, will not be shattered, bringing us down into the depths of panic and depression.

Let us direct our foreign policy with practical intelligence and common sense. So far as countries across the seas are concerned, the legacy of the Middle Ages is destroyed.

Let us direct our attention where our natural interests lie. Our great leader, the President of the United States, has led the way. Columbia extends a hand of friendship to her sister republics to the south.

We must cultivate the friendship of Latin America. It will not be enough, however, that we merely give evidence of our friendship. The overbearing and swaggering attitude, both official and commercial, that has characterized our relations with these nations in the past left sores too deep to be healed simply by extending a hand of friendship. It will not be enough to give evidence to assure our neighbors that we are not going to box their ears if they do not do as we say. What we must show these nations is that we appreciate a culture which is in many ways totally different from our own. In place of disdain, we must demonstrate and give evidence of our respect for the Latin culture that characterizes the civilization that extends from the Rio Grande to the southernmost point of South America.

A culture introduced 450 years ago has proved so strong and lasting that it exists even to this day. The southwestern part of this great Nation 400 years ago felt the measured tread of Spanish adventurers. Their descendants retain the language, the customs, and psychology of their kindred folk of the South. They are Americans by the grace of God, and proud of it, but ever mindful, nevertheless, of their glorious past. New Mexico, Arizona, the panhandle of Texas, and the Spanish Southwest constitute a linguistic and ethnological treasure house. It is possible there to form a plowshare on which will turn the success of our Latin American policy.

By making use of the history, of the language, of the viewpoint of these American peoples we can demonstrate to our sister republics the sincerity of our new foreign policy.

Mr. President, I beg the indulgence of my colleagues while I elaborate in a few words upon an event which in my opinion cannot help but arouse the attention of Latin America to the fact that we, too, have felt the influence of Latin civilization and that we respect and admire it.

The year 1940 will be a memorable one in the annals of the State of New Mexico, which I am honored to represent in this body, and in the annals of Arizona and the Texas Panhandle. It will mark the four hundredth anniversary of the journey and vast explorations of New Mexico's explorer, Francisco Vasquez de Coronado. His discoveries in the years 1540 and 1541 gave to the world its first comprehensive knowledge of that part of western America now included within the United States, and embracing the States of Arizona, California, Kansas, New Mexico, Texas, and Oklahoma. This was the real discovery of western America.

So, Mr. President, in order that the memory of the phenomenal accomplishments of New Mexico's first white explorer may never be forgotten, we in New Mexico are now preparing to properly commemorate this event.

This amazing expedition, called by historians one of the greatest land expeditions the world has ever known, wrote the first pages of American history. I may remark that a bare 50 years after Columbus had stumbled upon the American continent and 80 years before the Pilgrim Fathers had landed upon the cold, wind-swept shores of the North Atlantic, Coronado and his intrepid band had fought their way north over the sweeping vastness that is now the American Southwest.

It is difficult for us, living in this different age, to fully appreciate the spirit of religious fervor, adventure, and romance which seized the entire world following the discovery by the Genoese admiral of the new and strange continent. The Spanish explorer, evangelist, and soldier of the fifteenth century are without peers in recorded history. Scarce a score of years had elapsed since the discovery of America before the Spanish had circumnavigated the globe, colonized the islands of the West Indies, conquered the fabulously rich empires of the Incas in Peru, and of the Aztecs in Mexico, and with a never-failing zeal and urge for further conquests covered most of the Western Hemisphere in their explorations.

A product of the day and age was Francisco Vasquez de Coronado. Governor of the Province of Nueva Galicia, he was sought by Mendoza, the first Viceroy of Mexico, as the leader of his expedition for the conquest of the fabulous Seven Cities of Cibola.

No single event in the history of New Spain produced the enthusiasm and excitement that did the expedition for the conquest of the Seven Cities of Cibola. In order to appreciate fully what is meant it is essential to have a little of its background.

In the year 1528 Panfilo de Narvaez, a Spanish sea captain, set sail from Santo Domingo with a fleet of 3 ships, 300 men, and 50 horses. His destination was Florida, which he proposed to colonize. Shipwrecked upon the southern coast of Florida, all his crew but four perished. These—Alvar Nunez Cabeza de Vaca, treasurer of the expedition; Alonzo de Castillo Maldonado; Andres Dorantes; and a Barbary Negro named Estevan, slave of Dorantes—after 8 years of wandering, in which they crossed the continent, met with the Spanish settlements at Culiacan, on the west coast. These four wanderers took back to Mexico the wonderful tidings of the fabulous Seven Cities of Cibola, where gold and silver and precious stones abounded.

The tidings spread quickly and reached the capital, where Mendoza, a calculating, shrewd, and ambitious individual, but above all a man of action, immediately moved to secure for himself any advantage which might result. Having entertained the wanderers in Mexico City and purchased the Negro from Dorantes, he immediately sent the Negro with a Franciscan friar named Marcos de Niza to investigate. Proceeding up the valley of the River Sonora into Arizona and on to New Mexico, Niza, having viewed from afar the tall, towering walls of the Indian pueblo of Zuni—Estevan had proceeded within the pueblo where the Indians killed him—walls rising tier upon tier, the like of which had never been seen before, glistening white as silver in the New Mexico sunshine, was quickly persuaded that he was gazing upon the mighty citadels of the first of the Seven Cities of Cibola, and returned posthaste to Mexico to report to Mendoza.

Mendoza immediately began to organize his army. Recruits flocked from the noblest families in the New World and men even journeyed from the mother country to take part in the expedition. Charles V gave the venture his personal support, supplying arms and accouterments from the royal arsenal and money from the royal treasury. The total expense has been estimated at $1,000,000.

Time does not permit me to follow the entire journey of Coronado. At Zuni he found not a fabulously wealthy city, but one of the many adobe pueblos innocent of wealth except for a few blue-sky turquoises. The Seven Cities of Cibola proved a myth. The gold-paved city of Quivira which Coronado sought and found far east in Kansas proved to be the home of the peaceful Wichita Indians.

In camp for the second winter on a site near the present pueblo of Sandia, thousands of miles from the nearest men of their own race, without means of communication, and almost devoid of food after a stay of 2 years, Coronado was wounded in a jousting match, and while he lay ill with fever his dispirited men and captains induced him to return to Mexico, which he did in the spring of 1541.

In the eyes of his day, Coronado was a failure. The mighty cities he was sent to conquer and the wealth anticipated proved a myth. But he executed an exploration of unbounded magnitude. His explorations led directly to those which followed into this vast country which later men were to colonize—a country of which men have come to realize the value; though not studded with diamonds or paved with gold, yet a country rich in its fertile valleys, wonderful forests, glorious in its majestic mountains and its golden sunshine.

The Coronado Cuarto Centennial will give proper place in history to these events which so long antedate the other beginnings of our country. In brilliant pageant in a series of State-wide celebrations the visitor to New Mexico will see relived the 400 years of our colorful and romantic history. The visitor to New Mexico will see, off the beaten paths, quaint Indian pueblos where life goes on almost as in the day of Coronado. He will see New Mexico the last outpost of Spanish endeavor in the New World where a medieval culture still lingers side by side with a modern American civilization.

New Mexico invites the Nation to be its guests in 1940, to visit and become acquainted with our natural wonders such as the Carlsbad Caverns, our prehistoric sites, scenic attractions, recreational and cultural values.

RAILROAD TARIFF RATES

The Senate resumed consideration of the bill (S. 1261) to amend the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. LEE in the chair). The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the committee on page 1.

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The next amendment of the committee will be stated.

The next amendment of the Committee on Interstate Commerce was, on page 2, to strike out lines 16, 17, 18, and 19, as follows:

> In fixing through routes, and in determining what is desirable or necessary in the public interest, the Commission shall not take into consideration the necessity or desirability of diverting revenue from one railroad to another.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill (S. 1261) was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PRODUCTION AND USE OF HELIUM GAS

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Mr. President, I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Calendar No. 997, the bill (S. 1567) known as the helium gas bill.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, before the motion is acted on, I desire to ask the Senator from Utah a question or two. Upon his answers will depend my decision as to whether I shall oppose taking up the bill at this time.

Does the bill provide for the sale of helium to foreign countries?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. It provides for the sale and exportation of helium to foreign countries under restrictions and regulations to be set up by our Government. There is no provision for the sale of helium to foreign countries as such.

Mr. BORAH. The bill provides for its sale, and it may be sold to foreign countries?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. It may be sold to anyone under the regulations of our Government.

Mr. BORAH. What are those regulations?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. The regulations are to be established in the future and are to be determined by an interdepartmental board. Exportation would be allowed only after the issuance of a license by the munitions control board, which in turn is under the direction of several departments.

Mr. BORAH. If the board should see fit, would it be empowered under the terms of the bill to sell helium, for instance, to the German Government?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. I doubt whether the German Government would ever seek to buy helium as such. If we should sell helium to the German Government or to any other corporation, it could be used only for three purposes—scientific, commercial, and medical.

Mr. BORAH. No; it could be used for other purposes.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Including, of course, scientific purposes for use in connection with lighter-than-air craft, but merely for commercial purposes.

Mr. BORAH. The bill says "for medical, scientific, and commercial use, including inflation of passenger-carrying airships." As I understand, the sale might take place, if the board should see fit, for any of these purposes, to any government or to any individual within any government.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BORAH. I yield.

Mr. LODGE. I point out to the Senator that the provision which makes helium available to foreigners is in accordance with the recommendation signed by the Secretaries of the Interior, State, War, Navy, and Commerce. In their recommendation they advocate the export of helium on the ground that it is the duty of the United States to export helium gas "as a good neighbor" and for the sake of "promoting international good will"; and this recommendation was transmitted to the Congress by the President, who described it as expressing "a sound national policy." We may, therefore, assume that the power which the bill proposes to confer will actually be used and that gas will be exported.

Mr. BORAH. Yes; and for the "good neighbor" purposes.

Mr. LODGE. Yes, sir.

Mr. BORAH. It may be for the very opposite purposes.

Mr. LODGE. That is my contention.

Mr. BORAH. We have no control over how the foreign governments will use it, whether in a good-neighborly way or otherwise, after they get it.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Of course that is not true at all. The committee has gone into every phase of problems of that kind. The exportation is limited to peaceful purposes; and if, for example, a foreign government or a corporation in a foreign country should apply for helium to be used as a munition of war or to be used in aid of war craft, the Government of the United States would not export helium for that purpose.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, the bill provides, however, that it may be exported for medical, scientific, and commercial use; and if it is exported and sold for commercial use, after it is once purchased and in the possession of a foreign government, it may make such use of the helium as it pleases.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. The meaning of "commercial use", as I interpret it, is not putting helium into commerce in the world for the purpose of buying and selling it, but the aircraft would be used primarily and entirely for commercial purposes.

It should be remembered, Mr. President, that we must become realists in discussing a bill of this kind.

Mr. BORAH. That is exactly what I am trying to do. I should like to know what it really is that we propose to do.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BORAH. I yield.

Mr. LODGE. In connection with the use of helium to inflate commercial airships, I think it is noteworthy that Dr. Hugo Eckener, who is the greatest authority in the world on lighter-than-air navigation, appeared before the committee and was asked for his estimate of the military value of the commercial airship; and he said:

I could very well imagine that in view of the geographical location of the United States, which is not surrounded by countries that have military airplanes, and where you have open coast lines and wide oceans dividing you from the next country, that such ships could be possibly effectively used as instruments of scouting.

In other words, he made the point that commercial airships do not have great military value in Europe, but would have considerable military value in operations against the United States.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President——

Mr. BORAH. I yield to the Senator from Illinois.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Utah has the floor.

Mr. BORAH. I beg pardon; I thought I had. I will speak later.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Allow me to answer the Senator from Idaho by referring to the line at the bottom of page 11:

Such regulations shall not permit accumulations of helium in quantities of military importance in any foreign country, nor the exportation of helium to countries named in proclamations of the President issued pursuant to section 1 (a) or (c) of the Neutrality Act.

And so forth. That is probably an answer to the questions asked.

I yield to the Senator from Illinois.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, I have joined the junior Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE] in a written protest in the form of a minority report from the Military Affairs Committee upon this particular measure. I desire to press upon the able chairman of the subcommittee this interrogatory:

In what way, under the name of "good neighbor" or by any other theory, can we prevent Germany—to use an illustration—once possessing helium from America, from transferring it to what is now known as her military adjunct, Japan, for Japan to use in war, in her conflict in the Orient, as against either those friendly to the United States or the United States itself? In what way is there any protection against those who have the helium using it for military purposes of their own after they have possessed it?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Questions of that kind, and questions even more complex than that one, were put to both the Army and the Navy authorities; and both the Army and the Navy authorities felt that there was no risk of that sort of thing.

In the first place, the transportation of helium gas is quite a problem. It is a very, very bulky substance. In the second place, its loss through dissipation is also another problem for those who try to retain it. In the third place, helium is probably the easiest discovered of all military aids, and therefore one of the hardest to be hidden. As a military risk, it is one of the least from the standpoint of its use under regulations against us, or for military purposes against any other nation.

I assure the Senator from Illinois that if there were the remotest chance that helium could be used or would be used against us, of course no member of the Committee on Military Affairs would be in favor of that. I also should like to say that if I thought there was the least bit of chance that the exportation of helium to any foreign country could result in the use of that helium in a military way against another country, I would also be opposed to its exportation.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. I yield.

Mr. WALSH. Is helium gas produced in any other part of the world than in the United States?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. The United States has a virtual monopoly of helium. It is claimed that there are other places in the world where helium may be found, but up to date we practically have a monopoly.

Mr. WALSH. Is it possible to produce helium in any other part of the United States than in Texas?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. There are reserves in my State, there are a few reserves in Colorado, and the helium which is produced by a private corporation at the present time is produced in Kansas.

Mr. WALSH. Is it not correct that helium can be produced only from certain natural-gas deposits?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. There are deposits where helium predominates. It is assumed now that by tapping certain oil pipe lines we may, through experimentation, discover a way of getting from other sources helium that is now going to waste.

Mr. WALSH. Is our supply of helium inexhaustible?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. It is not inexhaustible, but the testimony of the Director of the Bureau of Mines, and also the testimony of both the Army and Navy officials, is to the effect that there is helium in great enough quantities so that that will not be a problem.

Mr. WALSH. So far we have used very little helium in this country?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Camparatively speaking, very little.

Mr. WALSH. A very small percentage of the total volume that can be produced has been used?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. That is correct. We have used up practically all we have produced, because we keep it in reserves.

Mr. WALSH. We have now no lighter-than-air naval craft or Army craft which use the helium gas?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. I understand that there are a few blimps, both in the Army and the Navy, but there is no great craft in which it is being used at the present time.

Mr. WALSH. I think the Senator is correct, that there are a few small ones in the Navy. Do all the departments of the Federal Government join in recommending the bill?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. There were five departments associated in the recommendations of the committee. All recommend the bill favorably.

Mr. WALSH. How valuable is helium, if it can be measured in terms of value?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. The price which the private manufacturers of helium attempt to get, which makes it too expensive for anyone to buy it, is somewhere between $25 and $30 a thousand cubic feet, if that is the measure. I may be wrong in the unit of measurement, but I think that is correct.

Mr. WALSH. Is it not true that in the process of obtaining helium inventions have been such as constantly to reduce the price?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. If, for example, the experts are successful in taking helium from ordinary oil, from which gasoline is taken, helium will become an entirely new by-product; and if it were taken in sufficiently great quantities, it would become very, very cheap, of course.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. I yield.

Mr. HATCH. I merely desire to ask the Senator from Utah a question in connection with the provision in the bill read by him a moment ago, from which I gathered that it was the intention of the legislation not to export helium for military purposes.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. That is true.

Mr. HATCH. I find in the bill this further sentence, just preceding the one the Senator from Utah read:

That under regulations governing exportation of helium approved by the National Munitions Control Board and the Secretary of the Interior, export shipments of quantities of helium that are not of military importance as defined in said regulations, and which do not exceed a maximum to be specified therein, may be made under license granted by the Secretary of State.

Then follows the language the Senator read. That convinces me that the intention is, as the Senator has expressed it, that no helium shall be exported for military purposes. That is correct, is it?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. That is absolutely true, and every safeguard we knew how to put into the proposed legislation to provide for just that has been inserted.

It should be remembered that helium has been conserved for two purposes—for the sake of conservation itself, and, second, for its use by our Army and our Navy. Of course, if we think of it only from a military standpoint, it would be very unwise to allow its export to foreign countries.

Mr. LOGAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. I yield.

Mr. LOGAN. I desire to make just one suggestion. The bill is one of considerable importance, and will require some discussion. It seems to me, rather than to ask the Senator from Utah these unrelated questions, if the motion to make the bill the unfinished business should be agreed to, then the Senator from Utah could go into his explanation, and we would all be able to understand the bill more thoroughly than we will by asking him scattering questions before the bill is taken up. So, I hope we may have a vote on the motion to take the bill up and then discuss it.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, I have been so impressed by the wisdom of the remarks of the Senator from Kentucky that I withhold an inquiry I had desired to make.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Utah [Mr. THOMAS].

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 1567) to amend the act entitled "An act to amend the act entitled 'An act authorizing the conservation, production, and exploitation of helium gas, a mineral resource pertaining to the national defense, and to the development of commercial aeronautics, and for other purposes'", which had been reported from the Committee on Military Affairs with an amendment to strike out all after the enacting clause and to insert the following:

That the act entitled "An act authorizing the conservation, production, and exploitation of helium gas, a mineral resource pertaining to the national defense, and to the development of commercial areonautics, and for other purposes", approved March 3, 1925, as amended, is amended to read as follows:

"SECTION 1. That for the purpose of conserving, producing, and selling helium gas the Secretary of the Interior, through the Bureau of Mines, is authorized:

"(a) To acquire by purchase, lease, or condemnation, lands or interests therein or options thereon, including but not limited to sites, rights-of-way, and oil or gas leases containing obligations to pay rental in advance or damages arising out of the use and operation of such properties; but such lands or interests in lands may be acquired by condemnation only when necessary for the production or conservation of helium to meet the needs of the Army and Navy and other agencies of the Federal Government;

"(b) To make contracts and agreements (with optional provisions where necessary) for the acquisition, processing, or conservation of helium-bearing gas;

"(c) To construct or acquire plants, wells, pipe lines, compressor stations, camp buildings, and other facilities, for the production, storage, repurification, transportation, and sale of helium and helium-bearing gas; and to acquire patents or rights therein and reports of experimentation and research used in connection with the properties acquired or useful in the Government's helium operations;

"(d) To dispose by lease or sale of wells, lands, or interests therein, not valuable for helium production; to dispose of oil, gas, and byproducts of helium operations not needed for Government use; and to issue leases to the surface of lands or structures thereon for grazing or other purposes when the same may be done without interfering with the production of helium.

"Any acquisition by purchase of properties developed or constructed for helium production by private parties prior to the passage of this amendatory act shall be at a price or prices recommended to be fair and reasonable by a board of three appraisers, the members of which shall be selected as follows: One by the Secretary of the Interior, one by the owner of the properties sought to be acquired, and one by the two appraisers so selected: Provided, That as to any such properties not acquired within 6 months from date of this act, the Secretary of the Interior shall proceed by condemnation to acquire such properties; and prior to the acquisition thereof the Federal Government shall not sell helium as authorized under section 3 (b) of this act, so long as helium may be procured for medical, scientific, or commercial use, including inflation of passenger-carrying airships, at reasonable prices from the operators of such developed or constructed properties.

"Any known helium gas bearing land on the public domain not covered at the time by leases or permits under the act of February 25, 1920, entitled 'An act to promote the mining of coal, phosphate, oil, oil shale, gas, and sodium on the public domain', as amended, may be reserved for the purposes of this act, and the United States reserves the ownership and the right to extract, under such rules and regulations as shall be prescribed by the Secretary of the Interior, helium from all gas produced from lands so permitted, leased, or otherwise granted for development: Provided, That in the extraction of helium from gas produced from such lands, it shall be so extracted as to cause no substantial delay in the delivery of gas produced from the well to the purchaser thereof.

"SEC. 2. That the Bureau of Mines, acting under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, is authorized to maintain and operate helium production and repurification plants together with facilities and accessories thereto; to store and care for helium, to conduct exploration for and production of helium on and from the lands acquired, leased, or reserved; and to conduct experimentation and research for the purpose of discovering helium supplies and improving processes and methods of helium production, repurification, storage, and utilization.

"SEC. 3. (a) That the Army and Navy and other agencies of the Federal Government may requisition helium from the Bureau of Mines and make payments therefor from any applicable appropriations by advancing or repaying to and for the use of said Bureau proportionate shares of the expenses incident to the administration, operation, and maintenance of the Government's helium plants and properties.

"(b) That helium not needed for Government use may be produced and sold upon payment in advance in quantities and under regulations approved by the President, for medical, scientific, and commercial use, including inflation of passenger-carrying airships: Provided, That such sales of helium shall be at reasonable prices (established by said regulations) based upon the cost of acquiring, developing, maintaining, and operating the Government properties used for such helium production; and such sales of helium shall be upon condition that the Federal Government shall have a right to repurchase helium so sold that has not been lost or dissipated, when needed for Government use, under terms and at prices established by said regulations.

"(c) All moneys received under this act, including moneys from sale of helium or other products resulting from helium operations (except moneys received in payment for helium from Government departments or agencies under subsection (a) hereof), shall be credited to a special helium-production fund from which purchasers of helium may be reimbursed for payments for helium in excess of deliveries, and the Secretary of the Interior through the Bureau of Mines may draw on said fund to pay expenses of acquiring, administering, operating, maintaining, and developing helium properties. Amounts accumulating in said fund in excess of amounts the Secretary of the Interior deems necessary to assure payment of such expenses shall be deposited in the Treasury to the credit of miscellaneous receipts: Provided, That the Secretary of the Interior shall render to Congress on or before the 1st day of January of each year a report showing the amount of moneys credited to such helium-production fund and the amount of disbursements made therefrom during the preceding fiscal year, and the unexpended and unobligated balances on hand in such fund as of the end of such fiscal year.

"SEC. 4. No helium gas shall be exported from the United States, or from its Territories and possessions, until after application has been made to the Secretary of State and a license authorizing said exportation has been obtained from him on the joint recommendation of all the members of the National Munitions Control Board and the Secretary of the Interior: Provided, That under regulations governing exportation of helium approved by the National Munitions Control Board and the Secretary of the Interior, export shipments of quantities of helium that are not of military importance as defined in said regulations, and which do not exceed a maximum to be specified therein, may be made under license granted by the Secretary of State without such specific recommendation. Such regulations shall not permit accumulations of helium in quantities of military importance in any foreign country, nor the exportation of helium to countries named in proclamations of the President issued pursuant to section 1 (a) or (c) of the Neutrality Act of May 1, 1937 (Public Resolution No. 27, 75th Cong.) while such proclamations are in effect, and shall require exporters to submit a sworn statement to the Secretary of State showing the quantity, destination, consignee, and intended use of each proposed exportation.

"Any person violating any of the provisions of this section or of the regulations made pursuant hereto, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be punished by a fine of not more than $5,000 or by imprisonment for not more than 1 year, or by both such fine and imprisonment; and the Federal courts of the United States are hereby granted jurisdiction to try and determine all questions arising under this section.

"The National Munitions Control Board shall include in its Annual Report to the Congress full information concerning the licenses issued hereunder, together with such information and data collected by the Board as may be considered of value in the determination of questions related to the exportation of helium gas.

"SEC. 5. The Secretary of War and the Secretary of the Navy may each designate representatives to cooperate with the Department of the Interior in carrying out the purposes of this act, and shall have complete right of access to plants, data, and accounts."

Mr. THOMAS of Utah obtained the floor.

Mr. LOGAN. Mr. President, will the Senator from Utah yield for a statement?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. I yield.

Mr. LOGAN. An amendment has been offered by me, which lies on the table, and which was agreed to by the subcommittee, and I believe by all the departments which are interested. With the consent of the Senator from Utah, I should like to be permitted to offer the amendment at this time and ask for its adoption, before the Senator from Utah discusses the bill, if he will be so kind as to consent to that.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Mr. President, the purpose of the amendment is identical with the purpose of one of the provisions appearing in the bill, and the committee has no objection to the new wording at all.

Mr. LOGAN. Then I ask that the amendment be stated from the desk so that it may be adopted, and then I will have finished my connection with the matter.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the amendment offered by the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. LOGAN], to the committee amendment.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. In the amendment of the committee it is proposed on page 8, beginning in line 3, to strike out:

Any acquisition by purchase of properties developed or constructed for helium production by private parties prior to the passage of this amendatory act shall be at a price or prices recommended to be fair and reasonable by a board of three appraisers, the members of which shall be selected as follows: One by the Secretary of the Interior, one by the owner of the properties sought to be acquired, and one by the two appraisers so selected: Provided, That as to any such properties not acquired within 6 months from date of this act, the Secretary of the Interior shall proceed by condemnation to acquire such properties; and prior to the acquisition thereof the Federal Government shall not sell helium as authorized under section 3 (b) of this act, so long as helium may be procured for medical, scientific, or commercial use, including inflation of passenger-carrying airships, at reasonable prices from the operators of such developed or constructed properties.

And to insert the following:

The Secretary of the Interior is hereby directed, if possible under the terms hereof, to acquire by purchase all properties developed or constructed by private parties prior to the passage of this act for helium production, such purchase to be at a price or prices recommended to be fair and reasonable by at least two of a board of three appraisers, the members of which shall be selected as follows: One by the Secretary of the Interior, one by the owner of the properties sought to be acquired, and one by the two appraisers so selected. The Secretary of the Interior is authorized to incur obligations and enter into agreements for the purchase of such properties, and every such agreement shall be deemed a contractual obligation of the Government for the payment of the cost thereof, such payment to be made from any appropriations hereafter made for such purpose. Prior to the date of execution of an agreement or agreements for the purchase of such properties, the Government shall not sell helium as authorized in section 3 (b) of this act: Provided, That the foregoing restriction upon the sale of helium by the Government shall be inoperative in the event that (1) the owner of any such properties shall refuse or neglect to appoint an appraiser within 30 days after approval of this amendatory act, or (2) the owner of any such properties having so appointed an appraiser shall refuse or neglect to execute an agreement or agreements for the sale thereof, at the price recommended by at least two members of the board of appraisers, within 30 days after said appraisers shall have recommended such price.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, will the Senator from Utah yield?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. I yield.

Mr. CONNALLY. I rise merely to suggest that the procedure now suggested by the Senator from Kentucky is hardly in harmony with what he suggested a while ago, to interrupt a speech to get an amendment adopted, when we have not had the bill explained and know nothing about the amendment. I have been trying for 30 minutes to get a copy of the bill, and just this moment have been able to get one.

Mr. LOGAN. If the Senator from Utah will allow me to respond to the Senator from Texas, I shall offer an excuse for making the suggestion at this time. I am not well, and I wish to get away. I am interested in the amendment I have offered because it affects only the people within my own State, the private producers of helium.

Mr. CONNALLY. I am perfectly willing, if the Senator from Utah desires to yield the floor and let the Senator from Kentucky offer his amendment——

Mr. LOGAN. I have not asked that.

Mr. CONNALLY. That is the only way it can be done.

Mr. LOGAN. If the Senator from Texas objects to this proceeding, I shall not press the amendment. I was making the request because the amendment has been agreed upon, and it affects no one except the private producers, who are people from my own State, in connection with some others. They are satisfied with the amendment, the Department of the Interior and other departments are satisfied, and the Senator from Utah is satisfied, so I thought there would be no objection to having the amendment adopted, as I do not desire to remain in the Senate for further consideration of it, because I do not feel able to.

Mr. CONNALLY. I desire to accommodate the Senator from Kentucky, and I think it is perfectly agreeable for the Senator from Utah to yield and allow the Senator to explain his amendment briefly, and I may be for it.

Mr. LOGAN. I have explained all there is to it.

Mr. CONNALLY. All I heard the Senator say was that it was satisfactory to some constituents of his in Kentucky, satisfactory to the Department, and satisfactory to the Senator from Utah, but the rest of us do not know whether or not it is satisfactory to us. We do not know anything about it.

Mr. LOGAN. The amendment takes care of those engaged in the private production of helium at this time. There is only one concern that is producing helium, and the property of that concern will be absolutely destroyed if this bill should be adopted without some provision for taking over their property. The Government is creating a monopoly. The purpose of the amendment is to provide a reasonable and fair way, satisfactory to all parties concerned, for taking over the private property. Otherwise the private property will be completely destroyed.

Mr. BARKLEY. The amendment would have no effect on the general bill at all.

Mr. LOGAN. None whatever.

Mr. BARKLEY. It provides the machinery by which the Government and private owners may get together.

Mr. CONNALLY. I imagine it would have some slight influence on the Treasury, because the money is to come out of the Treasury to pay for the plant. I am not objecting. I am interested in helium, because probably more helium is produced in my State than is produced in any other State, and we want to conserve it. I have no objection to the consideration of the amendment. I simply wanted to know what it was about.

Mr. LOGAN. I have tried to explain to the Senator the best I can, and if the Senator is not satisfied, I shall not press the amendment further.

Mr. McGILL. Mr. President, will the Senator from Utah yield to me?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. I yield.

Mr. McGILL. I wish to accommodate the junior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. LOGAN] in every way I possibly can, but this is the first opportunity I have had to know anything about the proposed amendment. I did not know such an amendment was pending. From what the Senator has said, and from what I am able to learn from listening to the clerk read the amendment, it is proposed that the Government shall take over all property where helium is produced. Is that correct?

Mr. LOGAN. Let me say to the Senator, first, if the Senator from Utah will permit me, that the only difference between this amendment and the provision which is written on the face of the committee amendment is that my amendment would allow the Government to condemn the property if the parties could not reach an agreement. Property cannot be condemned except for public purposes, and being afraid that a provision for condemnation of the property would render the whole measure illegal, that is eliminated, and it is provided that the private owners and the Secretary of the Interior shall appoint appraisers to arrive at a price for the property. That is the only difference the amendment makes in the bill as it has been reported, if I understand it correctly. The amendment was prepared by the Department of the Interior at my request.

Mr. McGILL. It appears to me that this is a very important amendment and a very important bill, and we ought to have more time than we are having this afternoon for consideration. Various States are interested in the production of helium, my own among them.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, as my colleague has said, there is only one private producer of helium at this time.

Mr. McGILL. One corporation that produces helium, or disposes of it on the market, and that is a corporation located in the State of Kentucky, I understand.

Mr. BARKLEY. And its property is in the State of Kansas.

Mr. McGILL. Its property is in the State of Kansas.

Mr. BARKLEY. The Government desires to acquire that property; and the amendment simply provides a method by which the value of it may be determined.

Mr. McGILL. I assume that what the Senator states is quite correct, but I have had no opportunity to look into the bill. I did not know it was to be brought up at this time. Certainly States where helium is produced are interested in the bill.

Mr. BARKLEY. That is undoubtedly true; but this does not at all affect the production of helium in any State. It is a long story.

Mr. McGILL. As I see it, the object is to enable the Government to take over all property where helium is produced, and I presume it would provide the rule affecting helium when it is discovered in the future, as well as for the present.

Mr. BARKLEY. It would provide a method by which, if the Department should desire to have helium as a Government monopoly—and it is desired, as I understand, by the Department involved, that there be only one producer of helium, outside of the Government—that could be done. It has been felt that the Government ought really to control the entire production of helium. While nobody can tell where helium may be discovered or how it may be produced in the future, the present situation is that if the Government is to be allowed, out of the production, in which it is now engaged, to sell helium for commercial purposes, of course the only private producer of helium will be completely put out of business. The Government does not wish to do that. Therefore, it is desired that the Government take over the private property that is now operating as a helium-producing plant, which happens to be in the State of Kansas, although the corporation is in the State of Kentucky. This amendment simply sets up fair machinery by which the value of that property may be ascertained; and if the parties cannot get together on it, then, of course, the right exists in the Government to condemn it, as in other matters. That right is reserved in the Government.

Mr. McGILL. Mr. President, is it contemplated that the Government will take over all the physical assets, including the oil rights, the oil royalties, the production of helium where helium is found, and the production of gas where helium is found?

Mr. BARKLEY. Not by this bill.

Mr. McGILL. They all go hand in hand.

Mr. BARKLEY. Of course, the question whether there will ever be any more helium discovered, or any more fields or areas where helium can be produced, outside of the possibility or probability that helium can be captured in oil and gasoline in ordinary oil fields, has not yet arisen. This amendment is only designed to take care of an acute situation which now exists with respect to one property which the Government desires to take over.

Mr. McGILL. Mr. President, it is my understanding from talking to some of the men who are interested in the corporation in the State of Kentucky that sources of helium are known by some of the producers to exist in this country, and it has not been generally made known just where those sources are located. There is quite a quantity of helium, as I understand, in the State of Kansas other than on the properties owned by the Kentucky corporation.

Mr. BARKLEY. I have no knowledge of that.

Mr. LOGAN. The amendment will not have anything to do with that. Of course, no one will enter into the helium-producing business after this bill shall be passed; and, of course, it will apply to all private producers. The only thing this amendment does is to prevent the United States Government from passing a law which absolutely destroys every nickel of investment of private producers, and they are the only ones affected. The amendment simply provides that the Government shall name one arbitrator, the company another arbitrator, that those two shall choose a third arbitrator, and that the arbitrators shall fix the price. If the owner does not accept the price fixed by the arbitrators within the 30 days in which he has to accept it, he will have to take his chances. The passage of this bill without such an amendment would completely and absolutely destroy the property.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, this is certainly a very important bill. It creates a Government monopoly of one of the very important natural resources. I wonder if the Senator from Utah [Mr. THOMAS] will permit the bill to go over until tomorrow. It came up unexpectedly, and there has been no opportunity presented to know the full import of the bill unless a Senator is a member of the committee. I do not know what the program is for tomorrow, but I take it that it will not be very crowded.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, if the Senator from Utah [Mr. THOMAS] will yield to me for that purpose, I wish now to ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Finance be authorized to make report during the recess of the Senate upon any legislation upon which it may take action.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the unanimous-consent request of the Senator from Kentucky? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. BARKLEY. I will say to the Senator from Idaho that it is expected that the Committee on Finance may take action this afternoon on the sugar bill, being House bill 7667. If it makes a favorable report on the bill, we hope to take up the bill tomorrow.

Mr. BORAH. I was advised by the chairman of the Finance Committee that while the committee were going to make a favorable report on the sugar bill, they would not, for certain reasons, take it up until the next day.

Mr. BARKLEY. Then we shall have tomorrow for the consideration of the bill now before the Senate.

Mr. BORAH. I should like to have it go over until tomorrow.

Mr. BARKLEY. It would be well to have the Senator from Utah [Mr. THOMAS] make an explanation of the bill today, and then consideration of the bill can go over until tomorrow.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Mr. President, I have no objection to the bill going over until tomorrow, providing it shall be the pending business, and that I then may start making an explanation of the bill.

Mr. BARKLEY. It will be the unfinished business. I thought the Senator from Utah would desire to make an explanation of the bill this afternoon.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. I should like to do that.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, in the course of his explanation I should like to have the Senator from Utah discuss one question to which I shall call his attention.

I notice that the letter to the President, signed by various members of the Cabinet, contains this language:

> The United States would serve as a filling station, and no great amount of helium would be exported except in airships plying between this and other countries.

I cannot find in the bill a definite provision carrying out that suggestion in the letter. I should like to ask the Senator to discuss it if it is in the bill. If it is not in the bill, I should like to have the Senator discuss the reason why that particular suggestion was not carried out in the bill.

It seems to me that if that suggestion is in the bill, it will completely answer the argument of the Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH] and the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. WALSH].

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Mr. President, I will answer that question now. There is no such provision as that in the Senate bill, and the reason why that provision is not here is because of the general limitation put upon the exportation of helium to all countries in the world. It was the feeling of the committee that if helium were allowed to be exported, we should not play favorites. It was suggested that such helium would be used only in ships plying between the United States and some foreign country; but upon analysis, and after going over the conditions in the world and the condition of the corporations in those countries that are able to enter into this kind of business, we discovered that such a provision would bring about a situation in which the only countries between which aircraft filled with helium would be flown would be the United States and Germany.

The committee saw no reason for making the provisions of the bill of such a nature that only one class of foreign users would be the beneficiaries of it, and was definitely opposed to such action. It was pointed out that if, in working out better facilities and a finer and better understanding of the weather and the control of these great ships, the world should come to the time when, for example, Holland would like to establish a line between Holland and the Dutch East Indies, it would be proper for the United States to sell helium to a corporation in Holland for that purpose. It would be just as proper to do that as it is for the United States to sell helium to a German corporation to use in ships which it operates between our country and Germany.

It must be constantly and always kept in mind that for a great number of years we shall get no further along than the experimental stages, and the bill provides an opportunity for the world to experiment with a safe gas in the development of lighter-than-air craft for commercial purposes.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Utah yield to the Senator from Missouri?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. I yield.

Mr. CLARK. I dislike to interrupt the Senator at this point in his remarks, because I know he would probably prefer to continue his original exposition of the bill; but I wish to say that it is necessary for me to go to the Committee on Finance to attend a very important meeting of the committee.

I should like to ask the Senator how he or his committee proposes to insure that when we give over possession of helium gas it will be used for commercial purposes. In the hearings held during the munitions investigation we discovered, long before it had been disclosed that Germany was rearming, although at that time Germany was bound under the provisions of the Treaty of Versailles not to rearm, and several months before Mr. Hitler made his announcement of his accomplishments and his purposes, that Germany was buying American airplanes and American airplane parts, ostensibly for commercial use, but, as afterward transpired, actually for secret military purposes. There is no doubt that some of those planes which were purchased by Germany in the United States, ostensibly for commercial purposes but actually in violation of the Treaty of Versailles, were used in such bloodthirsty and heartrending expeditions as the bombing of the ancient capital of the Basques, when women and children, gathered at the market square on market day, were slaughtered by German planes.

What assurance have we now that if we allow Germany to have helium the Germans will not turn around and violate their agreement, as they previously violated the terms of the Treaty of Versailles, and convert some of these big helium-filled ships into bombers to bomb other innocent women and children?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. The Senator will remember that under the present law we could lease helium to Germany for that very purpose right now.

Mr. CLARK. I will say to the Senator that I think the provisions of the present law are wrong, and we ought not to lease helium. The fact that we now have authority to lease helium does not to my mind justify two wrongs in order to make one right, by going one step further and selling it. I think we ought to cut off the supply, and keep it for ourselves.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. If the Senator will think the matter through he will discover that we are not making two wrongs by trying to make one thing right, but we are making two things right. In the second place, there are private producers of helium in our country, and they may sell helium to whomever they choose. In the third place, we must always and constantly keep in mind that whenever war is the aim practically every country on earth will turn to a lighter gas than helium for war purposes. All other things being equal, in the case of two ships of the same size, a disadvantage exists in the case of the ship filled with helium gas.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, will the Senator permit me to interrupt him further?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. I yield.

Mr. CLARK. Of course, unquestionably there is less lifting power to helium than there is to lighter gases. Nevertheless, I think it is also unquestionable that helium is very much safer than any other gas, and the reason other countries have not used helium is that we have all the helium and they could not get it.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. That is hardly correct. The reason other countries did not use helium was because of the expense of helium; it was assumed until the Hindenburg disaster that the risk in the use of other gases was not great, and it is assumed now by some authorities that the risk is not great.

Every military authority testified to the fact if lighter-than-air craft were used for war purposes that no military man would shrink from using lighter gas than helium gas. In the first place, the helium-propelled machine is slower; it is heavier. The lighter gas can drive the vessel faster and can enable the craft to carry more. So that, if you can lay aside the one single reason—that is, the destruction of the craft by burning—from the military standpoint the advantages are on the side of the gas which is lighter than helium, and probably that is the type of gas that would be used where risk was not the ultimately important factor.

Coming back to the original question, every safeguard that can be put upon the export of the commodity has been put into this bill. The storage of helium is practically impossible. Our military intelligence would know where every thousand cubic feet of it were. We know that it is dissipated; we know just how much gas is lost in a flight across the Atlantic, for example. We would be able to keep track of that at all times. From the standpoint of military risk both the authorities of the Army and the Navy mark it down as nil. I understand what Germany did, and I understand what some other nations have done, but they could not possibly take advantage of the purchase of the helium for doing what they did because of the physical characteristics of the gas, its bulk, the trouble in exporting it.

Dr. Eckener himself, when we asked the question, How are you going to get this gas over to Germany? said, "That is the biggest problem that faces us." And it is a big problem.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. I yield.

Mr. CLARK. If a ship of the Zeppelin type were once filled with helium there would be no great difficulty in converting a ship of that type into a bomber, would there?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Not at all. If, for example, the use of the bomber were going to be begun immediately, if one wanted to he could paint a picture of this kind, the Germans would probably build a ship in our country so that they could fill it with our gas; then use our bombs, and, then, instead of sailing across the ocean, drop the bombs on our country. Of course, that is painting a picture that is possible, but very improbable.

Mr. CLARK. I will say to the Senator that I was not immediately envisioning the picture of craft being used against us. I was thinking of such a situation as has just been before us, before our eyes, the Germans taking aircraft, bought ostensibly for commercial purposes, and using them against a defenseless people with whom they were not supposed to be at war, to wit, in the case of Spain.

(At this point Mr. THOMAS of Utah yielded to Mr. MCCARRAN to present a conference report and then to Mr. BARKLEY to have a resolution considered. The business thus transacted appears at the conclusion of the speech of Mr. THOMAS of Utah.)

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Mr. President a moment or two may be spent in further explanation of the bill. I think it has been fairly well explained already, but I welcome questions, for it would be definitely wrong if we should pass a bill of this kind if any single person in the United States felt it was unwise, and we were adding to the uncertainty in the world by doing so.

It must be remembered that we now have a law on the statute books which creates, in a way but not absolutely, a monopoly of helium gas for the use of our Army and our Navy. That statute provides that we may lease the gas to anyone who wishes to use it. When the law was written it was assumed that if helium was an element it would never be lost, but experience has shown that it does dissipate into the air, that about 5 percent of the total gas is lost in the flight of an airship across the Atlantic, and that gas is never recovered. It was assumed that helium could be leased much as other products that do not dissipate could be leased, and that we could blend it and use it over again, which is done; but it was soon learned that it was impossible to carry out the leasing provisions, for the simple reason that those who did the leasing could not be responsible for the return of the gas.

Mr. President, as the result of the unsatisfactory condition of the leasing feature, the Bureau of Mines, Department of the Interior, suggested new legislation providing for the sale of helium. The bill was considered by the Committee on Military Affairs, reported favorably, and placed upon the calendar.

Just previous to the bill being placed upon the calendar the great Hindenburg disaster took place, and attention in a rather emotional way was attracted to helium. The bill was thereupon withdrawn from the calendar, recommitted to the Committee on Military Affairs, and further hearings were held. A new bill was then reported.

This new bill provides much the same as the first bill except that it adds to the provisions relating to the conserving, production, and sale of helium gas a provision for the creation of a virtual governmental monopoly of helium in our country.

That is where the bill stands today, so at this point I yield the floor.

COURT REFORM AND JUDICIAL PROCEDURE

During the delivery of the speech of Mr. THOMAS of Utah,

Mr. MCCARRAN. Mr. President, will the Senator from Utah yield to me in order that I may present a conference report?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. I yield.

Mr. MCCARRAN. I present a conference report on Senate bill 2260 and ask unanimous consent for its immediate consideration.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The report will be read.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 2260) to provide for appearance on behalf of and appeal by the United States in certain cases in which the constitutionality of Acts of Congress is involved, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate to the text of the bill and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the amendment of the Senate to the text of the bill, insert the following:

"That whenever the constitutionality of any Act of Congress affecting the public interest is drawn in question in any court of the United States in any suit or proceeding to which the United States, or any agency thereof, or any officer or employee thereof, as such officer or employee, is not a party, the court having jurisdiction of the suit or proceeding shall certify such fact to the Attorney General. In any such case the court shall permit the United States to intervene and become a party for presentation of evidence (if evidence is otherwise receivable in such suit or proceeding) and argument upon the question of the constitutionality of such Act. In any such suit or proceeding the United States shall, subject to the applicable provisions of law, have all the rights of a party and the liabilities of a party as to court costs to the extent necessary for a proper presentation of the facts and law relating to the constitutionality of such Act.

"SEC. 2. In any suit or proceeding in any court of the United States, to which the United States, or any agency thereof, or any officer or employee thereof, as such officer or employee, is a party, or in which the United States has intervened and become a party, and in which the decision is against the constitutionality of any Act of Congress, an appeal may be taken directly to the Supreme Court of the United States by the United States or any other party to such suit or proceeding upon application therefor or notice thereof within thirty days after the entry of a final or interlocutory judgment, decree, or order; and in the event that any such appeal is taken, any appeal or cross-appeal by any party to the suit or proceeding taken previously, or taken within sixty days after notice of an appeal under this section, shall also be or be treated as taken directly to the Supreme Court of the United States. In the event that an appeal is taken under this section, the record shall be made up and the case docketed in the Supreme Court of the United States within sixty days from the time such appeal is allowed, under such rules as may be prescribed by the proper courts. Appeals under this section shall be heard by the Supreme Court of the United States at the earliest possible time and shall take precedence over all other matters not of a like character. This section shall not be construed to be in derogation of any right of direct appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States under existing provisions of law.

"SEC. 3. No interlocutory or permanent injunction suspending or restraining the enforcement, operation, or execution of, or setting aside, in whole or in part, any Act of Congress upon the ground that such Act or any part thereof is repugnant to the Constitution of the United States shall be issued or granted by any district court of the United States, or by any judge thereof, or by any circuit judge acting as district judge, unless the application for the same shall be presented to a circuit or district judge, and shall be heard and determined by three judges, of whom at least one shall be a circuit judge. When any such application is presented to a judge, he shall immediately request the senior circuit judge (or in his absence, the presiding circuit judge) of the circuit in which such district court is located to designate two other judges to participate in hearing and determining such application. It shall be the duty of the senior circuit judge or the presiding circuit judge, as the case may be, to designate immediately two other judges from such circuit for such purpose, and it shall be the duty of the judges so designated to participate in such hearing and determination. Such application shall not be heard or determined before at least five days' notice of the hearing has been given to the Attorney General and to such other persons as may be defendants in the suit: Provided, That if of opinion that irreparable loss or damage would result to the petitioner unless a temporary restraining order is granted, the judge to whom the application is made may grant such temporary restraining order at any time before the hearing and determination of the application, but such temporary restraining order shall remain in force only until such hearing and determination upon notice as aforesaid, and such temporary restraining order shall contain a specific finding, based upon evidence submitted to the court making the order and identified by reference thereto, that such irreparable loss or damage would result to the petitioner and specifying the nature of the loss or damage. The said court may, at the time of hearing such application, upon a like finding, continue the temporary stay or suspension, in whole or in part, until decision upon the application. The hearing upon any such application for an interlocutory or permanent injunction shall be given precedence and shall be in every way expedited and be assigned for a hearing at the earliest practicable day. An appeal may be taken directly to the Supreme Court of the United States upon application therefor or notice thereof within thirty days after the entry of the order, decree, or judgment granting or denying, after notice and hearing, an interlocutory or permanent injunction in such case. In the event that an appeal is taken under this section, the record shall be made up and the case docketed in the Supreme Court of the United States within sixty days from the time such appeal is allowed, under such rules as may be prescribed by the proper courts. Appeals under this section shall be heard by the Supreme Court of the United States at the earliest possible time and shall take precedence over all other matters not of a like character. This section shall not be construed to be in derogation of any right of direct appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States under existing provisions of law.

"SEC. 4. Section 13 of the Judicial Code, as amended (U. S. C., 1934 edition, title 28, sec. 17), is hereby amended to read as follows:

" 'SEC. 13. Whenever any district judge by reason of any disability or absence from his district or the accumulation or urgency of business is unable to perform speedily the work of his district, the senior circuit judge of that circuit, or, in his absence, the circuit justice thereof, shall designate and assign any district judge of any district court within the same judicial circuit to act as district judge in such district and to discharge all the judicial duties of a judge thereof for such time as the business of the said district court may require. Whenever it is found impracticable to designate and assign another district judge within the same judicial circuit as above provided and a certificate of the needs of any such district is presented by said senior circuit judge or said circuit justice to the Chief Justice of the United States, he, or in his absence the senior associate justice, shall designate and assign a district judge of an adjoining judicial circuit if practicable, or if not practicable, then of any judicial circuit, to perform the duties of district judge and hold a district court in any such district as above provided: Provided, however, That before any such designation or assignment is made the senior circuit judge of the circuit from which the designated or assigned judge is to be taken shall consent thereto. All designations and assignments made hereunder shall be filed in the office of the clerk and entered on the minutes of both the court from and to which a judge is designated and assigned, as well as on the minutes of the Supreme Court of the United States, to the clerk of which both of such other clerks shall immediately report the fact and period of assignment.'

"SEC. 5. As used in this Act, the term 'court of the United States' means the courts of record of Alaska, Hawaii, and Puerto Rico, the United States Customs Court, the United States Court of Customs and Patent Appeals, the Court of Claims, any district court of the United States, any circuit court of appeals, and the Supreme Court of the United States; the term 'district court of the United States' includes the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia; the term 'circuit court of appeals' includes the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia; the term 'circuit' includes the District of Columbia; the term 'senior circuit judge' includes the Chief Justice of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia; and the term 'judge' includes justice."

And the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate to the title of the bill, and agree to the same.

PAT MCCARRAN,
JOSEPH C. O'MAHONEY,
FREDERICK VAN NUYS,
WM. E. BORAH,
WARREN R. AUSTIN,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

HATTON W. SUMNERS,
ZEBULON WEAVER,
FRANCIS E. WALTER,
CHARLES F. MCLAUGHLIN,
U. S. GUYER,
CLARENCE E. HANCOCK,
Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. MCCARRAN. I move the adoption of the conference report.

The motion was agreed to.

PRICE OF AGRICULTURAL COMMODITIES

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to call up Senate Resolution 158; and if my request shall be granted, I desire to offer an amendment to the resolution.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. May I ask what it is?

Mr. BARKLEY. It is a resolution from the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry which provides for hearings and investigations concerning farm legislation.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. MINTON in the chair). In the absence of objection, the resolution will be read.

The legislative clerk read the resolution (S. Res. 158), as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, or any duly authorized subcommittee thereof, is authorized and directed to conduct investigations and draft legislation to maintain both parity of prices paid to farmers for agricultural commodities marketed by them for domestic consumption and export and parity of income for farmers marketing such commodities; and, without interfering with the maintenance of such parity prices, to provide an ever-normal granary for each major agricultural commodity; and to conserve national soil resources and prevent the wasteful use of soil fertility; and, in particular, so to consider S. 2787, the committee shall report to the Senate, at the earliest practicable date, the result of its investigations, together with its recommendations.

For the purposes of this resolution the committee, or any duly authorized subcommittee thereof, is authorized to hold such hearings, to sit and act at such times and places during the sessions and recesses of the Senate in the Seventy-fifth Congress, to employ such clerical and other assistants, to require by subpena or otherwise the attendance of such witnesses and the production of such books, papers, and documents, to administer such oaths, to take such testimony, and to make such expenditures as it deems advisable. The cost of stenographic services to report such hearings shall not be in excess of 25 cents per 100 words. The expenses of the committee, which shall not exceed $10,000, shall be paid from the contingent fund of the Senate upon vouchers approved by the chairman.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, there are amendments to the resolution as reported by the committee. The amendments were authorized this morning by the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry. I should like to have the amendments stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendments will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 1, line 12, after the name "Senate" and the comma, it is proposed to strike out "at the earliest practicable date" and insert in lieu thereof "within one week from the beginning of the next session of Congress", and on the same page, line 14, after the word "recommendations", to insert "for legislation upon the subject covered by this resolution."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendments.

Mr. BLACK. Mr. President, will the Senator from Kentucky yield for a question?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield .

Mr. BLACK. The Senator from Kentucky is aware of the fact that I offered an amendment, which is pending, which would have required a report to be made or to be ready by October 15?

Mr. BARKLEY. Yes; I remember that.

Mr. BLACK. As I understand the amendments offered by the Senator from Kentucky—and I wish to have it made clear in the RECORD—if adopted, would require a report to be made by the committee during the first week of the next session, whether that session be a regular session or a specially called session of Congress?

Mr. BARKLEY. That is correct. At the time the Senator from Alabama offered his amendment fixing October 15, as indicated by the discussion at the time, it was impossible to ascertain or foresee whether the committee would be ready to report on that particular date if circumstances should make it advisable for an extra session of Congress to be called. Of course, it will be expected that the Executive will be in touch with the committee and its progress, and if the committee should have proposed legislation ready earlier than the regular session, and the President should be so advised, he would then, of course, decide whether Congress should be called together earlier than January; but, whether it be the regular session or any called session, the committee is required or instructed to report within 1 week from the beginning date of that session.

Mr. BLACK. Under those conditions I shall not insist upon the amendment which I have offered. I had, of course, personally hoped, and so expressed myself many times during the session, that we could have passed legislation before the Congress adjourned touching the farm situation; but, in view of the amendments to the resolution as reported by the Agricultural Committee, and with the understanding, which is very clear, as stated by the Senator from Kentucky, that the resolution, as now proposed to be amended, would require a report within a week of the beginning of the session, whether a regular or a special session, I will not offer the amendment which I had suggested.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment of the Senator from Alabama is withdrawn. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the resolution.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendments offered by the Senator from Kentucky.

The amendments were agreed to.

The resolution, as amended, was agreed to.

TAHOE NATIONAL FOREST, NEVADA

After the conclusion of the speech of Mr. THOMAS of Utah,

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, during the call of the calendar recently the bill (S. 2583) to provide for the acquisition of certain lands for and the addition thereof to the Tahoe National Forest, in the State of Nevada, and for other purposes, was passed over temporarily at the request of the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. McKELLAR]. He has withdrawn his objection. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2583) to provide for the acquisition of certain lands for and the addition thereof to the Tahoe National Forest, in the State of Nevada, and for other purposes.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I have several amendments which I desire to submit. I send them to the desk and ask that they may be stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The first amendment will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 1, line 9, after the word "purpose", it is proposed to strike out "except from the general fund of the Treasury", so as to read:

That the Secretary of Agriculture is hereby authorized to acquire, by purchase when purchasable at prices deemed by him reasonable, or by exchange under the provisions of the act of March 20, 1922, as amended, or by condemnation under the provisions of the act of August 1, 1888, on behalf of the United States with any fund or moneys available for such purpose, any of the following-described lands in the State of Nevada now in private ownership.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment of Mr. McCARRAN was, on page 3, after line 11, to insert a new section 5, as follows:

SEC. 5. The Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized to acquire on behalf of the United States by purchase, at prices deemed by him to be reasonable, the lands needed to complete the Great Smoky Mountains National Park in the State of Tennessee, in accordance with the provisions of the act of Congress approved May 22, 1926 (44 Stat. 616), and the Secretary of the Interior is further authorized when, in his opinion, unreasonable prices are asked for any of such lands, to acquire the same by condemnation under the provisions of the act of August 1, 1888.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment of Mr. McCARRAN was, on page 3, to insert a new section 6, as follows:

SEC. 6. There is hereby authorized to be appropriated out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated the sum of $743,265.29 to complete the acquisition of lands within the limits of said park, such funds to be available until expended.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill (S. 2583) was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill to provide for the acquisition of certain lands for and the addition thereof to the Tahoe National Forest, in the State of Nevada, and the acquisition of certain other lands for the completion of the acquisition of the remaining lands within the limits of the Great Smoky Mountains National Park in east Tennessee."

RECIPROCITY IN THE LUMBER TRADE

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, we are now in the third year of the Reciprocal Trade Agreements Act. Under its authority, 16 trade agreements have been negotiated with foreign countries. Other important pacts are pending.

The renewal of the act for a second period of 3 years, at a time of economic recovery, makes it no longer a temporary or emergency measure. The United States has undertaken a continuing policy of world trade through reciprocal agreement. From now on, for practical purposes, our commerce with the rest of the world will not be governed by old-fashioned tariff legislation but by trade bargains made across the diplomatic table.

The avowed purpose of this policy is to remove barriers to trade between the United States and each contracting foreign nation, through a fair "quid pro quo"—to give him as good as he brings. It is rewriting the tariff structure of the United States and the tariffs and other trade controls of foreign nations on the business principle of a fair deal between willing buyer and willing seller.

It is not my purpose to debate the merits of this policy or to question its wisdom. I wish rather to point out the need for its consistent application to an important field of American industry and land use. To forest industry and to forestry, the foreign trade undertakings of the Government to date have spelled reciprocity in reverse.

I couple forestry with foresty industry deliberately. The trade problems of lumber and other wood products are like the trade problems of agriculture. They go right back to the use of the land. Forest industry represents the only profitable employment of one-fourth of the soil of the United States, five-hundred-odd million acres. This is more than all the land in all forms of agricultural crops, not including pasturage.

This point will bear exploration. The National Recovery Administration has recently determined that the continental United States contains 495,000,000 acres of forest land. This is the aggregate of the acres which bear old timber, second-growth timber, and young forest trees, or which have been denuded by forest fire or by logging and not converted to any other use. But it is all timber-growing land. No parks, no Alpine forests, nor semiarid woodlands are included in this acreage. Nor are the extensive forests of Alaska.

Forest clearing for farms is practically over. A reverse movement is under way. Land is being turned from tillage back into forests. Beyond the nearly half billion acres of original forest land still remaining, over 50,000,000 of abandoned farm land is reverting to forest. Twenty-five million acres more of submarginal farms are expected to revert to forest. Nearly every land use or planning commission in every part of the United States advocates less farming and more farestry. The United States is becoming more of a forested country—not less. Forest industries and markets for forest crops are growing in importance to the economic welfare of this country, because upon them rests the support of more land and more people.

America went through an era of free timber just as it went through a pioneer era of free land. Our conception of the forest problem is still colored by the rapid exploitation of virgin timber and its residue of denuded land. For many years we feared a timber famine. Then the conservation movement demanded a reckoning with our forest resources. It created the national forests and State forests. It organized Nation-wide protection from forest fires. It set in motion tree planting, research in forestry, and new methods of timber use.

The viewpoint of industry toward the forest is changing. A growing number of forest owners recognize their social obligation to cut and protect their forest lands so as to insure a regrowth of timber. Many are undertaking plans for continuous timber cropping and for permanent industries in lieu of the migratory sawmills of earlier days. The old order of working timber as a mine is gradually changing to a new order of growing timber as a crop.

The survey of the Recovery Administration found that during the 5 years ending with 1934 all our forest cutting and losses from fire and other natural causes only slightly exceeded the current growth of timber. One-fifth of the present drain upon our forests is caused by fire, insects, tree disease, and storms. If this tremendous loss, much of which is preventable, were reduced by only one-half, the present forest crop of the United States would fully supply all our timber requirements at the rate of consumption and exportation from 1929 to 1934.

As a national form of land use, forestry has but fairly begun. Its practice is far from complete, either in application or in technical development. The experts of the Forest Service tell us that under known methods of timber culture, adapted to the different regions and forest trees of the United States, our present timber crop can be increased nearly two and a half times. In broad terms, our half billion acres of forest land will ultimately support a consumption of wood products—at home or abroad—more than double the total consumption of today.

That is to say, just as scientific agriculture is replacing the exhausting usage of virgin soil, scientific forestry is replacing the exploitation of virgin timber. The significance of this fact to national policy is not simply a matter of satisfaction over the future security of a prime natural resource. It imposes a public responsibility to provide a secure economic basis for forestry in the United States.

Here, again, the analogy between forestry and agriculture is direct. One of our chief concerns is to put economic security under the farm to make agriculture pay. Likewise must it be our concern to make forestry pay. We can no more expect the forest owner to grow timber which he cannot sell than we can expect the farmer to produce crops that have no market. Sustained timber culture cannot be brought about on one-fourth of the soil of this country unless forestry in land use is backed up by adequate markets for forest products.

The leading forest countries of Europe learned this lesson generations ago. In Germany, France, and Sweden the security of forest industries and timber values is deeply entrenched in public policy. Economic protection is the foundation of their forestry.

We have not yet learned this truth in the United States. Our forest policies and propaganda have been focused upon the land. Well and good. That was the place to start. But it is high time we carried forestry into our economic thinking and planning. My plea, in a word, is that the economic needs of forestry be accorded the same recognition in national councils and commercial undertakings as the economic needs of agriculture. And the particular undertaking now in point is the expansion of world trade through reciprocal negotiation.

By the high authority of the Secretary of State the lumber industry of the United States has been declared to be "fundamentally an export industry." The Secretary has also pointed out that—

> Improvement of conditions in the American lumber industry depends in general upon economic recovery * * * and in particular upon reduction of barriers to international trade and the removal of discrimination against American commerce.

This sound statement is fully supported by the lumber history of the United States. For a full quarter century prior to 1930 our exports of logs and lumber ranged between three and three and one-half billion board feet annually. We held first place in the international lumber trade, supplying approximately 21 percent of the world's interchange of this commodity. Next in order came Finland, Sweden, Canada, and Russia.

During that quarter century, 9 percent of the total production of American lumber was sold abroad. That was the average for the entire country, including inland manufacturing regions whose exports were nil. In our coastal forest areas, like the Pacific Northwest, export markets took 20 percent of the total production; and mills established in offshore trade frequently exported 50 or 60 percent of their cut. Foreign trade was the chief factor in logging many areas of standing timber adjacent to tidewater and in building many sawmills on our rivers and harbors. The manufacture of lumber items desired by export markets took an important part in the utilization of our timber and in the conservation of material not readily marketable in the United States. Foreign trade created much of the employment in forest industries. It was an integral part of our forest economy. It had an important place in the economic basis on which a permanent timber culture was foreseen and began to take shape.

Today this favorable situation of the American lumber industry in world markets has completely changed. A fundamentally export industry has lost one-half of the foreign trade which it used to have and upon which its present structure was built. From the first we have dropped to fifth place in the world's interchange of lumber.

This enourmous loss has not been due to any shortage of raw material, or to any lack of well-equipped sawmills or efficient labor to manufacture it. The loss has occurred at a very time when hundreds of American sawmills and thousands of millworkers have been idle.

Neither has the loss been due to the reduced consumption of lumber in foreign countries. In fact, the largest international lumber market, Great Britain, has in the last 2 years consumed lumber far beyond its normal requirements.

Our loss of export trade in lumber is the result primarily of discriminatory tariffs imposed upon our forest products abroad, and particularly of the preferential tariffs against American lumber within the British Empire. Discriminatory tariffs against American as compared with Canadian lumber have steadily dried up our trade with United Kingdom, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, and other British dominions. While the domestic lumber market has been restored to approximately 70 percent of its volume before the depression, the recovery of foreign lumber trade is almost negligible.

This has not resulted from depression in the world's buying power. It arises from a fixed channelization of lumber trade against the United States. On the entire blotter of international commerce there is no more glaring example of international barriers and discriminations against American industries. There is no more outstanding need for the restoration of natural trade relations through reciprocity.

The loss of foreign lumber markets has fallen most heavily upon the Pacific Northwest, whose Douglas fir industry long furnished over one-half of the entire export lumber trade of the United States.

No region more clearly exemplifies the fundamentally export nature of the lumber industry. It contains hundreds of billions of feet of virgin timber accessible to tidewater ports where manufacturing industries were naturally established. Its exports of lumber began shortly after the establishment of the fur trade, when a cargo of clapboards left the sawmill of the Hudson Bay Co. on the Columbia River in 1835 destined for the Hawaiian Islands. Expanding markets in Japan, China, Australia, both coasts of South America, and the United Kingdom had a large part in the growth of west coast lumber manufacture to an industry of substantial proportions. The sailing masters of the eighties and nineties sold Oregon pine in almost every open trading port of the world.

In the late twenties, offshore lumber shipments from Oregon and Washington harbors reached nearly 2,000,000,000 board feet a year, attained an annual value of $35,000,000, marketed from 17 to 20 percent of the entire production of the Douglas fir region, and employed approximately 18,000 wage earners.

In its foreign trade, as in its domestic markets, the lumber industry of the Pacific Northwest had a natural competitor in British Columbia. Both regions had similar forests, similar kinds of lumber, and equal access to the Pacific. Prior to 1930 the lumber manufactured by American and Canadian mills on the North Pacific coast entered world trade, including overseas British Dominions, on a substantial parity. There were no significant trade barriers against the lumber of either country. Offshore shipments of Douglas fir were shared by the two countries, one year with another, in approximately the ratio of their sawmill capacity. That meant about 20 percent to the manufacturers in British Columbia and about 80 percent to the manufacturers in Oregon and Washington.

Beginning in 1930, this normal relationship in foreign trade was broken down. Lumber exports from Oregon and Washington progressively declined; those from British Columbia progressively increased. The outstanding cause of this diversion was preferential trade agreements within units of the British Empire. These began with an agreement between Canada and Australia in 1930. In connection with the Ottawa Conference in 1932, the system of preferential tariffs was extended in trade pacts between Canada and the United Kingdom, South Africa, New Zealand, and the British West Indies. In the five largest markets of the British Empire a protected status was created for Canadian lumber. Two of them, Great Britain and Australia, were leading world markets formerly shared by the Pacific Northwest.

The effect of discriminatory tariffs against American lumber throughout practically the entire British Empire is plainly revealed in the tables here given. They show, from 1929 through the first part of 1937, the report movement in northern Pacific lumber from British Columbia and the United States respectively. Of the entire world market for these woods, American mills supplied 80 percent in 1929, but were reduced to 32 percent in 1936 and 1937. Of the British Empire markets for North Pacific lumber, American mills supplied 74.5 percent in 1929 but were reduced to 6 percent in 1936.

Take, for example, the largest British Empire lumber markets, United Kingdom and Australia. The sawmills of Oregon and Washington shipped to United Kingdom over 71 percent of its trade in North Pacific lumber in 1929; but less than 5 percent in 1936. To Australia, the mills of Oregon and Washington shipped 84 percent of the Douglas fir and associated lumbers purchased in 1929; but only 4 percent in 1936.

I might run the gamut of British Empire discriminatory tariffs, in South Africa, in New Zealand, in the West Indies; but the statistics tell their own story. The British Empire consumed in 1936 nearly 60 percent more North Pacific lumber than in 1929; but the Empire trade of Oregon and Washington sawmills was only one-eighth of its volume in 1929. This economic support of American industry and American forestry has all but disappeared in a maze of discriminatory tariffs and trade barriers.

Let us now look for a moment at the reverse of this picture. What has been the policy of the United States toward foreign lumber seeking a share of our domestic market?

Prior to 1932 there was no substantial restriction upon lumber imports. The Tariff Acts of 1913 and 1922 placed lumber on the free list. The Tariff Act of 1930 imposed a duty of $1 per thousand board feet, roughly equivalent to 5 percent ad valorem. Up to 1932 tariffs offered no practical barrier to lumber imports. They supplied, one year with another, from 4 to 5 percent of the total consumption in the United States. Approximately 90 percent of all these imports were softwoods from Canada. By far the greater part of the Canadian importations were Douglas fir and west coast hemlock from British Columbia and spruce from the eastern Provinces, competing directly with lumber produced in the Pacific Northwest. From 1927 to 1931 the imports of Canadian fir, hemlock, and spruce ranged from a half billion to over a billion board feet annually, equivalent to 12 or 14 percent of the domestic consumption of Pacific northwestern lumber.

Shipments of Russian softwoods appeared in 1927 and attained a volume of 71,000,000 feet in 1930. Russian lumber entered the North Atlantic ports and created a fresh source of competition with the products of the Northwest as well as of other American forest regions.

To the existing tariff of $1 per thousand board feet, the Revenue Act of 1932 added an excise tax of $3 on imported lumber. The aggregate duty of $4 per thousand board feet cut down the total imports of lumber by somewhat more than one-half. It reduced still more sharply the importations of Canadian Pacific woods. During the 3½ years while the excise tax was in full effect the volume of the more competitive Canadian woods which entered the United States—fir, hemlock, and spruce—was restricted to about one-sixth the footage of previous years.

At this point, before the entry of the reciprocal-trade policy upon the stage, it may be observed that each of the great timber-growing countries of North America had erected a protective wall around a trading area for its lumber industry. In the case of the United States, this was its own domestic market, held by virtue of revenue legislation. In the instance of Canada, it was the world market of the British Empire, gained through preferential tariffs which were rooted in colonial traditions. A balance in lumber trade, of a sort, had been struck by policies of mutual exclusion.

This balance was shattered by the first significant instrument of the Reciprocal Trade Agreements Act. The trade agreement with the Dominion of Canada, taking effect January 1, 1936, reversed the status, not only of Canadian, but of Russian and other imported lumber. The agreement gave Canada a reduction of 50 percent, or $2 per thousand board feet, on her lumber exports to the United States. In the case of Douglas fir and west coast hemlock, the reduction is limited to an annual quota of 250,000,000 feet. On imports of other Canadian woods, there is no limitation. And by virtue of the reciprocity doctrine of "generalization", the reduction on Canadian lumber was automatically extended, without limit, to the lumber of Russia and of every other country exporting this product to the United States.

It might well have been expected that the new reciprocity would work both ways; that in opening the American market to Canadian lumber, the State Department would have obtained an equivalent share of the British Empire market for American lumber. The old trade balance resting upon mutually exclusive markets was destroyed. Surely a new trade balance resting upon mutual reciprocity would take its place.

But this was not done. The Canadian trade agreement contained no concessions to American lumber in the markets of the British Empire, aside from a gesture of meaningless reduction in the Canadian tariff. The agreement, indeed, went out of its way to exclude from any possible effect of its provisions all Canadian rights and benefits under British Empire trade pacts. The lumber industry of Canada may eat its cake and still have it.

By conceding the American lumber market to Canada with no reciprocal concession from the Canadian lumber market in the British Empire, the United States failed to use its bargaining power to reinstate its own lumber industry in the foreign trade formerly enjoyed. The hard facts of commercial competition are realities. Building upon British colonial traditions and Empire sentiment, Canada has shrewdly and effectively created a protected market, almost world wide in scope, for her lumber. She did this at an enormous cost to the lumber industry of the United States. And now the American Government, in the name of reciprocity, has graciously given Canada another market for her lumber, saying in the very grant: "Your British Empire markets are not involved. They remain wholly yours."

The lumber balance sheet of the reciprocal-trade policy, in its first year of practical operation, 1936, stood thus:

American lumber exports declined 33,000,000 feet, or 2½ percent.

American lumber imports increased 218,000,000 feet, or 50 percent.

In the case of the woods most largely manufactured in the Pacific Northwest, Douglas fir and west coast hemlock, the augmented imports during the first year of reciprocity exceeded 100 percent.

This brief review of lumber history supports my initial statement that, to forest industry and to forestry, the foreign-trade undertakings of the Government have brought reciprocity in reverse. I recognize the minor gains for lumber in a few foreign-trade agreements. But last year's balance sheet speaks for itself. The Government has conceded its domestic lumber market to our principal foreign competitor; and gained nothing in return.

Let me again emphasize that this outcome affects not simply some thousands of sawmills and some hundreds of thousands of workers. It goes directly to the employment and earning power of one-fourth of the soil of the United States. It is on all fours with the market needs of agriculture.

Let it also be recognized that the loss of our foreign lumber trade is due to tariffs which discriminate against products of the United States, in favor of products of other countries. The tariffs of Great Britain, Australia, South Africa, and other units of the Empire grant preferentially low rates on lumber produced in the Dominion of Canada. This situation raises several significant questions. Among them is—whether or not Canada, Australia, and South Africa accept an unconditional favored-nation status in their relations with the rest of the world. Or do they play a dual role on the international stage—that of sovereign countries in certain relations and of British colonies in other relations where trade preferences may thereby be gained?

Another question may be asked. How long will the United States tolerate discriminatory tariffs against her products without retaliation by the lawful means now available to the executive departments? Section 338 of the Tariff Act of 1922 was drawn precisely to arm the Government for meeting such situations, by penalty tariffs on the importations of countries which discriminate against products of the United States. It is an effective defense against the discriminations imposed upon American products by British Empire preferential tariffs, when and if this Government sees fit to employ it.

These matters have practical bearing on the immediate situation in the negotiation of reciprocal agreements. We are led to believe that a trade agreement is now under discussion with Great Britain. Under her Ottawa compact of 1932, England gave Canada a preferential tariff on lumber, equivalent to 10 percent of its delivered value at British ports. That preference has practically destroyed the former important lumber trade of the Pacific Northwest with the United Kingdom. Can the United States accept a reciprocal-trade agreement with Great Britain and leave stand such a clear discrimination against our industry and our natural resources? In its recent renewal of the Ottawa pact, Great Britain reserved certain rights as to revision of its terms. The State Department can, with all fairness, now ask that this right of revision be exercised in respect at least to discriminatory lumber tariffs and that American lumber be put on parity with Canadian lumber in the British market.

The Canadian trade agreement itself will, by due notice, be open to revision on January 1, 1939, after 3 years of operation. The Department of State doubtless desired, in the conclusion of this important compact, to demonstrate to the world its good faith in removing barriers to international trade. We may assume that in offering the world this sign and seal of honest intent in reciprocity, the Department even leaned over backward in making concessions; that it hoped its spirit of liberality would be followed by other nations and a world-wide removal of trade barriers set in motion. We may assume that the State Department chose to deal with the preferential lumber tariffs of the British Empire by this method of example and precept rather than by demanding an instant concession across the table.

But if, after a real test of the Canadian agreement and its effect upon the policies of the British Empire, the lumber concessions therein are not met with equivalent reciprocity—as in the pending negotiations with the United Kingdom, it seems to me clear that our Government must adopt a different course. It cannot continue to permit its reciprocal-trade program to weigh so heavily against one of our great primary industries and against the development of our forest culture. The only course open will be to withdraw the concession made to Canadian lumber in the agreement of 1935; or to make its renewal conditional upon equivalent concessions for American lumber in the British Empire.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, I have listened to the address of the Senator from Oregon with great interest. Not only have I listened to it, but I assure him I shall read it when it appears in the RECORD.

Mr. McNARY. I thank the Senator for his complimentary remarks.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. What is the pleasure of the Senate?

LEAVE OF ABSENCE FOR SENATOR M'NARY

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, I find it necessary to leave the Senate for the remainder of the present session of the Congress. Therefore I refer to rule V, which provides that—

> No Senator shall absent himself from the service of the Senate without leave.

It is my purpose to leave for Oregon on Thursday afternoon next. In view of the rule I ask unanimous consent at this time that I may be permitted to absent myself.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ELLENDER in the chair). Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Oregon?

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, I may say that we all, not only now but always, regret to see the Senator from Oregon [Mr. McNARY] leave our midst. Inasmuch as he has good reasons, which he has already imparted to me, I merely wish to express my hope that he will have a happy trip home and a very delightful and pleasant vacation, and that he will return to us in due season refreshed in mind and body.

Mr. McNARY. I appreciate the kindly remarks of the Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I withdraw my reservation of the right to object to the Senator's request for leave and hope his request will be granted.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the request of the Senator from Oregon is granted.

GENERAL ANTHONY WAYNE MEMORIAL COMMISSION

Mr. MINTON. Mr. President, on August 2 the House passed the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 406) to establish the General Anthony Wayne Memorial Commission to formulate plans for the construction of a permanent memorial to the memory of Gen. Anthony Wayne. I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the joint resolution.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 406) to establish the General Anthony Wayne Memorial Commission to formulate plans for the construction of a permanent memorial to the memory of Gen. Anthony Wayne, which was read, as follows:

> Whereas the people of the United States owe a deep debt of gratitude to Gen. Anthony Wayne, whose military career meant so much during the War of Revolution and whose activities in the Indian wars succeeded in opening such a large tract of territory in the Middle West; and
> Whereas no adequate memorial exists at the junction of the St. Marys, St. Joseph, and Maumee Rivers where he established his fort and carried on his campaign: Therefore be it
>
> Resolved, etc., That there is hereby established a commission, to be known as the "General Anthony Wayne Memorial Commission", and to be composed of nine commissioners, three to be appointed by the President of the United States, three Senators to be appointed by the President of the Senate, and three Members of the House of Representatives to be appointed by the Speaker of the House. Such Commission shall consider and formulate plans for designing and constructing a permanent memorial in the city of Fort Wayne to the said Gen. Anthony Wayne.
> SEC. 2. Such Commission may, in its discretion, accept from any source, public or private, money or property to be used for the purpose of making surveys and investigations, formulating, preparing, and considering plans for the construction of such memorial, or other expenses incurred, or to be incurred, in carrying out the provisions of this joint resolution.
>
> SEC. 3. The Commission shall report its recommendations to Congress as soon as practicable.

Mr. MINTON. Mr. President, I offer an amendment which I send to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. At the end of the joint resolution it is proposed to insert a new section, as follows:

> SEC. 4. There is hereby authorized to be appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated the sum of $2,500, which shall be available to defray the necessary expenses of the Commission for the performance of their duties hereinafter prescribed. Disbursement of sums herein authorized to be appropriated shall be made upon vouchers approved by the chairman of the Commission.

The amendment was agreed to.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed, and the joint resolution to be read a third time.

The joint resolution was read the third time, and passed.

The preamble was agreed to.

SUGAR PRODUCTION AND CONTROL—REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON FINANCE

Mr. BROWN of Michigan, from the Committee on Finance, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 7667) to regulate commerce among the several States, with the Territories and possessions of the United States, and with foreign countries; to protect the welfare of consumers of sugars and of those engaged in the domestic sugar-producing industry; to promote the export trade of the United States; to raise revenue; and for other purposes, reported it with amendments and submitted a report (No. 1157) thereon.

EXECUTIVE SESSION

Mr. BARKLEY. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business.

EXECUTIVE MESSAGES REFERRED

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ELLENDER in the chair) laid before the Senate messages from the President of the United States submitting sundry nominations, which were referred to the appropriate committees.

(For nominations this day received, see the end of Senate proceedings.)

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON NAVAL AFFAIRS

Mr. WALSH, from the Committee on Naval Affairs, reported favorably the nomination of Capt. William R. Furlong to be Chief of the Bureau of Ordnance, Department of the Navy, with the rank of rear admiral, for a term of 4 years, which was ordered to be placed on the Executive Calendar.

THE CALENDAR

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there be no further reports of committees, the clerk will state the nominations on the Executive Calendar.

THE JUDICIARY

The legislative clerk read the nomination of Eugene Rice to be United States district judge for the eastern district of Oklahoma.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, inasmuch as there is a vacancy in this position and inasmuch as the Senate has just confirmed the nomination, I ask unanimous consent that the President may be notified.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The legislative clerk read the nomination of Everett M. Grantham to be United States attorney for the district of New Mexico.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

The legislative clerk read the nomination of Whitfield Y. Mauzy to be United States attorney for the northern district of Oklahoma.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

The legislative clerk read the nomination of William McClanahan to be United States attorney for the western district of Tennessee.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the President may be notified of the confirmation of this nomination.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The legislative clerk read the nomination of Paul E. Ruppel to be United States marshal for the southern district of Illinois.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

The legislative clerk read the nomination of John P. Logan to be United States marshal for the northern district of Oklahoma.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

The legislative clerk read the nomination of Charles W. Miles to be United States marshal for the western district of Tennessee.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the President may be notified of the confirmation of the nomination of Mr. Miles.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The legislative clerk read the nomination of John M. Comeford to be United States marshal for the western district of Wisconsin.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

DEPARTMENT OF LABOR

The legislative clerk read the nomination of Gerard D. Reilly, of Massachusetts, to be Solicitor for the Department of Labor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

CALIFORNIA DEBRIS COMMISSION

The legislative clerk read the nomination of Maj. Frank M. S. Johnson to be a member of the California Debris Commission.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

COAST GUARD OF THE UNITED STATES

The legislative clerk read the nomination of Charles J. Brasefield to be professor (temporary) with the rank of lieutenant commander.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

The legislative clerk proceeded to read sundry other nominations in the Coast Guard.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the remaining nominations in the Coast Guard are confirmed en bloc.

POSTMASTERS

The legislative clerk proceeded to read sundry nominations of postmasters.

Mr. McKELLAR. I ask unanimous consent that the nominations of postmasters on the calendar be confirmed en bloc.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nominations are confirmed en bloc.

IN THE NAVY

The legislative clerk proceeded to read sundry nominations in the Navy.

Mr. BARKLEY. I ask unanimous consent that the nominations in the Navy be confirmed en bloc.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nominations are confirmed en bloc.

IN THE MARINE CORPS

The legislative clerk read the nomination of Francis P. Griffiths, of New York, to be second lieutenant in the Marine Corps.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

That concludes the Executive Calendar.

RECESS

The Senate resumed legislative session.

Mr. BARKLEY. I move that the Senate take a recess until 12 o'clock noon tomorrow.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 4 o'clock and 23 minutes p. m.) the Senate took a recess until tomorrow, Wednesday, August 11, 1937, at 12 o'clock meridian.

NOMINATIONS

Executive nominations received by the Senate August 10 (legislative day of Aug. 9), 1937

DIPLOMATIC AND FOREIGN SERVICE

The following-named Foreign Service officers of class 3 and consuls general, to be also secretaries in the Diplomatic Service of the United States of America:

Homer Brett, of Mississippi.
Edward A. Dow, of Nebraska.
Dudley G. Dwyre, of Colorado.
John G. Erhardt, of New York.
Carol H. Foster, of Maryland.
Samuel W. Honaker, of Texas.
Wilbur Keblinger, of Nevada.
Graham H. Kemper, of Kentucky.
George A. Makinson, of California.
O. Gaylord Marsh, of Washington.
Lester Maynard, of California.
Myrl S. Myers, of Pennsylvania.
John R. Putnam, of Oregon.
Emil Sauer, of Texas.
Hugh H. Watson, of Vermont.

The following-named Foreign Service officers of class 3 and consuls, to be also secretaries in the Diplomatic Service of the United States of America:

George L. Brandt, of the District of Columbia.
Charles Bridgham Hosmer, of Maine.
John D. Johnson, of Vermont.

The following-named Foreign Service officers of class 4 and consuls general to be also secretaries in the Diplomatic Service of the United States of America:

Henry H. Balch, of Alabama.
Walter F. Boyle, of Georgia.
Parker W. Buhrman, of Virginia.
Ralph C. Busser, of Pennsylvania.
Harold D. Clum, of New York.
Leslie A. Davis, of New York.
Edwin Carl Kemp, of Florida.
Dayle C. McDonough, of Missouri.
Lucien Memminger, of South Carolina.
Harold B. Quarton, of Iowa.
Walter H. Sholes, of Oklahoma.
Alfred R. Thomson, of Maryland.

The following-named Foreign Service officers of class 4 and consuls to be also secretaries in the Diplomatic Service of the United States of America:

Richard F. Boyce, of Michigan.
Richard P. Butrick, of New York.
Cecil M. P. Cross, of Rhode Island.
Hasell H. Dick, of South Carolina.
John W. Dye, of Minnesota.
Louis H. Gourley, of Illinois.
Edward M. Groth, of New York.
Robert W. Heingartner, of Ohio.
Frank Anderson Henry, of Delaware.
George D. Hopper, of Kentucky.
James Hugh Keeley, Jr., of the District of Columbia.
William R. Langdon, of Massachusetts.
Robert D. Longyear, of Massachusetts.
Robert B. Macatee, of Virginia.
Charles J. Pisar, of Wisconsin.
John Randolph, of New York.
George P. Shaw, of California.
Samuel Sokobin, of New Jersey.
Harold S. Tewell, of North Dakota.
Henry S. Waterman, of Washington.
Henry M. Wolcott, of New York.

The following-named Foreign Service officers of class 7 and consuls, to be also secretaries in the Diplomatic Service of the United States of America:

Lawrence S. Armstrong, of New York.
Roy W. Baker, of New York.
William E. Blitz, of New York.
Sidney A. Belovsky, of New York.
William A. Bickers, of Virginia.
Ellis A. Bonnet, of Texas.
Roy E. B. Bower, of California.
Howard A. Bowman, of New York.
Edward Caffery, of Louisiana.
Augustus S. Chase, of Connecticut.
Warren M. Chase, of Indiana.
Alexander P. Cruger, of New York.
Ernest E. Evans, of New York.
Harvey T. Goodier, of New York.
Franklin C. Gowen, of Pennsylvania.
Leonard N. Green, of Minnesota.
Knowlton V. Hicks, of New York.
Frederick W. Hinke, of New York.
Carlton Hurst, of the District of Columbia.
John B. Ketcham, of New York.
Henry A. W. Beck, of Indiana.
Kenneth C. Krentz, of Iowa.
Rufus H. Lane, Jr., of Virginia.
Harvey Lee Milbourne, of West Virginia.
Hugh S. Miller, of Illinois.
Nelson R. Park, of Colorado.
James E. Parks, of North Carolina.
Joseph P. Ragland, of the District of Columbia.
Albert W. Scott, of Missouri.
Winfield H. Scott, of the District of Columbia.
George E. Seltzer, of New York.
Horace H. Smith, of Ohio.
Harry E. Stevens, of California.
Alan N. Steyne, of New York.
Mason Turner, of Connecticut.
Robert S. Ward, of Ohio.
George H. Winters, of Kansas.
Lloyd D. Yates, of the District of Columbia.

The following-named Foreign Service officers of class 8 and consuls, to be also secretaries in the Diplomatic Service of the United States of America:

Gordon L. Burke, of Georgia.
Horace J. Dickinson, of Arkansas.
Edmund J. Dorsz, of Michigan.
Andrew W. Edson, of Connecticut.
Carlos C. Hall, of Arizona.
Monroe B. Hall, of New York.
Thomas A. Hickok, of New York.
Phil H. Hubbard, of Vermont.
Charles A. Hutchinson, of Minnesota.
Robert Jenz, of Oklahoma.
John A. Littell, of Florida.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

TUESDAY, AUGUST 10, 1937

The House met at 11 o'clock a. m.

The Chaplain, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Heavenly Father, we pray that quiet thought, quiet duty, and the freshness of a new day may steal upon us. Teach us a religion of brotherhood and forgiveness that touches the joy and beauty of human life; true merit lies in service and sacrifice to make the world better and happier. We pray Thee to confirm that which is good in us and rebuke that which is foolish and allow not evil desires to have dominion over us. Give us liberty, our Father, from all fetters and help us to stand erect for the truth and right. As we tread our pathways impress us that life means industry, bravery, and patience. At the last may it mean for us fullness of joy and a glorious sunset. In our Savior's name. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Frazier, its legislative clerk, announced that the Senate had passed without amendment bills of the House of the following titles:

H. R. 5969. An act to amend an act entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States", approved July 1, 1898, and acts amendatory thereof and supplementary thereto; and

H. R. 6384. An act to liberalize the provisions of existing laws governing service-connected benefits for World War veterans and their dependents, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the Senate insists upon its amendments to the bill (H. R. 7642) entitled "An act to authorize the completion, maintenance, and operation of Bonneville project for navigation, and for other purposes", requests a conference with the House thereon, and appoints Mr. COPELAND, Mr. SHEPPARD, and Mr. MCNARY to be the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed bills of the following titles, in which the concurrence of the House is requested:

S. 1816. An act to amend section 77 of the Judicial Code, as amended, to create a Brunswick division in the southern district of Georgia, with terms of court to be held at Brunswick;

S. 2253. An act conferring jurisdiction upon the Court of Claims to hear, examine, adjudicate, and render final judgment on any and all claims of whatsoever nature which the Shoshone or Bannock Indians living on the Fort Hall Indian Reservation, in the State of Idaho, or any tribe or band thereof, may have against the United States, and for other purposes; and

S. 2874. An act requiring the deposit in a safe place ashore of the names and addresses of passengers sailing on vessels plying the inland or coastal waters of the United States.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed the following resolution:

Senate Resolution 172

Resolved, That the Senate has heard with profound sorrow the announcement of the death of Hon. THEODORE A. PEYSER, late a Representative from the State of New York.

Resolved, That a committee of two Senators be appointed by the Vice President to join the committee appointed on the part of the House of Representatives to attend the funeral of the deceased Representative.

Resolved, That the Secretary communicate these resolutions to the House of Representatives and transmit a copy thereof to the family of the deceased.

Resolved, That as a further mark of respect to the memory of the deceased Representative the Senate do now take a recess until 12 o'clock meridian tomorrow.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGE CONTROL ACT

The SPEAKER. The unfinished business this morning is the question on the motion of the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. COLLINS] to recommit the bill (H. R. 7950) to amend the District of Columbia Alcoholic Beverage Control Act. The Clerk will read the motion, for the information of the House.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. COLLINS moves to recommit the bill H. R. 7950 to the Committee on the District of Columbia with instructions to that committee to report the bill back forthwith with the following amendment: Strike out sections 1 and 2 of the bill.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion to recommit.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. PALMISANO) there were—ayes 61, noes 31.

Mr. PALMISANO. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground there is not a quorum present, and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Maryland objects to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and makes the point of order that a quorum is not present. The Chair has just counted. Evidently a quorum is not present. The Doorkeeper will close the doors, the Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members, and the Clerk will call the roll.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 191, nays 119, not voting 120, as follows:

The doors were opened.

Mr. PALMISANO. Mr. Speaker, pursuant to the instructions of the House on the motion to recommit, I report back the bill H. R. 7950 with an amendment, which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Strike out sections 1 and 2 of the bill.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, and was read the third time.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the passage of the bill.

The bill was passed.

Mr. PALMISANO. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the section numbers may be corrected.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Maryland?

There was no objection.

By unanimous consent, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

GENERAL FARM LEGISLATION

Mr. WEARIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Iowa?

There was no objection.

Mr. WEARIN. Mr. Speaker, we have heard considerable during the past few weeks with reference to the necessity of general farm legislation and I join with those who feel we should have some action. In order to keep faith with my constituents and the farmers of America I have today filed a petition at the Clerk's desk to discharge the Committee on Agriculture from further consideration of the bill (H. R. 7577), which is a general farm bill introduced by the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. FLANNAGAN]. Farm legislation is imperative before we can have a sound program of commodity loans which are necessary this fall in order to preserve the price of corn at a reasonable figure, and the price of cotton, wheat, and other products. It has been generally understood that such legislation is needed and this Congress should take action with reference to the matter.

Because of the pending crisis with reference to the prices of farm products I have filed this petition and urge the Members of the House to sign it immediately. [Applause.]

We should put forth every effort to maintain a satisfactory price for this year's crop. It is the first normal season we have had for several years insofar as several major farm products are concerned. If farmers receive a satisfactory return on them agriculture will be on a more stable basis than it has been for a decade and if they do not much of our past effort will have been in vain.

I am fully aware of the fact that there is a wide difference of opinion as to the type of legislation that should be passed either at this session or at the next. The bill that I have asked to be discharged from the Committee on Agriculture without any further consideration is not, in my opinion, a perfect measure by any means, but it involves some valuable principles that this House ought to consider, and, furthermore, it constitutes a general farm bill that we can use as a basis of discussion. There should be opportunity for amendments and ample discussion on the floor. It is reasonable to assume that the result of such action would be some constructive legislation.

The statement has been made that no bill that we might pass would have any effect upon this year's crop, but it would, insofar as it could, be used as a basis for commodity loans which will be needed this fall to maintain a stable and satisfactory price level for corn and cotton, not to mention a number of other products, and which we cannot expect without general legislation. If, in setting up the administration of the act during the course of the next few months, we find that it will need further amendments or revision, we will be ready then to obtain such action when the Congress convenes in January. It ought to be easier to make some corrections at that time than to pass a complete legislative program having to do with 1938 crops in time to make it effective for cotton and wheat, or anything else, for that matter.

An attempt has been made in these Halls of late and throughout the country to shift the burden of our failure to offer American farmers a long-time program to the shoulders of farm organizations upon the basis of the fact that they are not in agreement at the moment as to what type of legislation they desire. In my opinion it is the responsibility of Congress to hear all the evidence in the case and from it draft the most generally satisfactory measure possible under the circumstances keeping the principle of the general welfare as a guiding star. The fact of the matter is that is our job and we are expected to deliver the goods.

The necessity for a farm bill and the form it should take have been a matter of discussion in Washington for the past 7 months, in fact by the Committee on Agriculture throughout the entire Roosevelt administration that has dedicated itself to the cause of American agriculture so we should be ready now to advance a long-time program without being charged with any undue haste. If we cannot do it now, how can we expect to do it during the month of next January?

I repeat that the seriousness of the situation justifies the action I have taken in filing the motion for withdrawal of H. R. 7577 from further consideration of the committee in order to get the subject of general farm legislation before the Congress and I hope the Members will sign motion number 27 immediately.

[Here the gavel fell.]

COMMITTEE ON ELECTIONS NO. 3

Mr. KERR. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Elections No. 3 may sit during the sessions of the House.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Louisiana?

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. PLUMLEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein an address I delivered at Plymouth, Vt., on Sunday last.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Vermont?

There was no objection.

Mr. OLIVER. Mr. Speaker, my colleague the gentleman from Maine, Mr. SMITH, is unavoidably detained because of illness. Had he been here, he would have voted "yea" on the motion to recommit the bill just passed.

COMMITTEE ON INTERSTATE AND FOREIGN COMMERCE

Mr. CHAPMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bridge subcommittee of the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee may sit today during the session of the House.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky?

There was no objection.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. HOBBS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that, after the disposition of business on the Speaker's table and at the completion of legislative business in order for the day, and after the disposal of previous orders heretofore made, I may address the House today for 10 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama?

There was no objection.

AMENDMENT OF THE BANKRUPTCY ACT

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Rules Committee, I call up House Resolution 300 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution as follows:

House Resolution 300

Resolved, That upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of H. R. 6963, a bill to amend an act entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States", approved July 1, 1898, and acts amendatory thereof and supplementary thereto. That after general debate, which shall be confined to the bill and continue not to exceed 2 hours, to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on the Judiciary, the bill shall be read for amendment under the 5-minute rule. At the conclusion of the reading of the bill for amendment, the Committee shall rise and report the same to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted, and the previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit, with or without instructions.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. MAPES].

Mr. Speaker, this resolution makes in order the consideration of the bill (H. R. 6963) to amend an act entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States", approved July 1, 1898, and acts amendatory thereof and supplemental thereto. If this resolution is agreed to, the bill will be taken up and considered under the 5-minute rule. At this time I desire to explain the need for the legislation.

During the past three sessions I have repeatedly brought to the attention of the Members the outrageous abuses and collusions that the Select Committee to Investigate Real Estate Bondholders' Reorganizations has brought to light. In the RECORD I have inserted a good deal of information regarding the activities of the self-appointed so-called "protective" committees—what they are, who they represent, and what they have really done to the bondholders whom they are pledged to represent and safeguard.

In the 140 pages of the committee's preliminary and supplemental reports conditions now existing are exposed which are, to say the least, not only deplorable but criminal. This is not a matter of one or two people or a small group being robbed. It is a case of 5,000,000 bondholders and an equal number of industrial security holders being defrauded and deprived of the very last penny of their investments, in many instances by the approval of some of the courts.

By use of deposit agreements these avaricious protective committees are enabled to control the bondholders' properties even without approval of the courts, although in innumerable cases the courts sanction their activities.

Mr. Speaker, this is not the finding only of the select committee. Similar findings have been arrived at by a special commission appointed by former Attorney General Mitchell, by a Senate committee in 1931, by a Senate committee in its report of 1936, by the Judiciary Committee in 1935, by investigative committees of the States of New York, Michigan, and others, and lately by the Securities and Exchange Commission. Bills to end these abuses were introduced as far back as 1931, when Senator Hastings proposed remedial legislation; in the House by our colleague [Mr. MICHENER] and by myself and others in 1933.

When the Securities and Exchange Commission bill was being considered by the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee I made strenuous efforts to have embodied in that bill a provision giving the Commission jurisdiction over real estate and other defaulted securities. If such an amendment had been accepted, millions of investors would have been aided and savings made for them to the tune of billions of dollars, or partial protection, at least, would have been afforded them.

So you will see that this is not an obsession with me, but the result of a cold matter-of-fact consideration of facts. On three separate occasions the House has unanimously voted for a thorough investigation by this select committee in order that upon its recommendations legislation might be enacted to safeguard, as far as possible, the unfortunate investors and to prevent a future recurrence of abuses.

Mr. Speaker, for this purpose the House appropriated $110,000 and yesterday an additional $7,000 was appropriated in order that this investigation could be properly made, and, right here, may I say that our work has made possible the collection of large sums of money by the Treasury Department in taxes which otherwise, I doubt very much, would have been collected.

The bill before us today, Mr. Speaker, is not only based upon the findings of your committee. It considers the recommendations made by all these other investigative bodies I have mentioned. However, as I wished to avoid any question of constitutionality, the select committee has softened many controversial features contained in previous bills. Notwithstanding this, the Judiciary Committee, after reporting the bill H. R. 12064—predecessor to H. R. 6963—last session, eliminated many of its provisions before it was again reported in May of this year. In my desire to secure early consideration I reintroduced the bill in the form in which it now appears, but I can truthfully state that this bill before you now is not my bill but a substitute arrived at by the Judiciary Committee. I am thankful for what the Judiciary Committee has left, since it gives me an opportunity today to bring before the entire House a number of provisions which I believe should be retained, and which I will offer when the bill is taken up under the 5-minute rule.

While I naturally regret the action of the Judiciary Committee, I realize that the group of lawyers, trustees, receivers, and even some judges have been able to mislead and misinform many members of that committee, and I firmly believe that if the Judiciary Committee had been able to spend one-tenth as much time as the select committee did in investigating these abuses that they would not have permitted this group to mislead them.

Had the members of the Judiciary Committee been able to read all the reports of the many other investigative committees and to consider the statements of honest judges and independent groups of lawyers, I feel sure the bill as reported last session, and as I reintroduced it this year, would be before you now, and I would be saved the task of asking that these amendments be enacted.

I do want to take this occasion of thanking the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. CHANDLER] and members of his subcommittee for their patient cooperation, and to express the appreciation of the entire select committee for their fine assistance. I know they have honestly endeavored to secure the best bill possible, and believe that the present bill, together with the one Mr. CHANDLER has before us referring to the general bankruptcy law, will enable us in the future to prevent many of these abuses.

Mr. Speaker, I am not only interested, and we should not only be interested, in preventing these abuses from recurring. I am interested in the millions of bond and security holders who have in many instances lost their all in purchasing securities which they believed to be gilt-edge investments—not speculative ventures. My aim is to at least save part of their investments and to keep these bankers, lawyers, and their agents from grabbing the last penny. I am interested in seeing that many hundreds—yes, thousands—of properties are taken from the hands of these vultures and turned over to the bondholders, the rightful owners, who in most cases have not received a cent of interest during the past 6 years, even though the properties often were earning profits. During all these years they were not able to even obtain information as to what was being done with the properties; and worst of all, during all these years no taxes at all were paid. The committees, receivers, and trustees permitted an accumulation of taxes which now amount to millions upon millions of dollars, and may cause the complete loss of properties and deprive bond and security holders of an opportunity of ever getting a penny.

It is claimed that these bondholders are being represented when trustees are appointed. Trustees! Trustees! Who are they? Who did the courts appoint as trustees? I will tell you. The very members of these protective committees who represent the houses of issue, the investment bankers, the guaranty companies, and the large law firms.

They are not the trustees that should be appointed to protect the rights and interests of the bondholders and the security holders.

They are given control of the property belonging to bondholders for 10 or 15 years, and from our investigations I am satisfied that the bondholders will never receive a cent, that all income will be absorbed by these same trustees and these same committees unless the amendments I shall propose today are adopted and the bill passed as originally reported.

Now, as to the receivers. Who were the receivers appointed by the courts? Again the representatives of this vicious clique controlled by these protective committees and this group of bankers, financiers, and the large law firms.

In 1934 the Bankruptcy Act was amended, and there was added sections 74 and 77B, which you and I and the country believed would aid the bankrupt, the fee owner, and would also protect the bondholder. But I charge now that uppermost in the minds of those who were instrumental in drafting that bill was the idea of eliminating the fee restrictions in our bankruptcy law, and by the passage of 77B the sky became the limit as to fees.

Under our bankruptcy laws there are very strict restrictions as to the amount of fees, but when 77B was passed they clearly eliminated those restrictions, and the sky has been the limit as to fees, charges, and costs in all these proceedings.

I could give you hundreds of instances where the fees and charges were greater than the value of the property, and properties in many instances were sold for less than the fees and charges of the committees, receivers, trustees, depositaries, appraisers, managers, and subcommittees created by them for the purpose of absorbing every dollar of revenue as well as the proceeds of sales.

The report well shows that in many instances, due to collusion and conspiracy on the part of these committees, receivers, and attorneys, properties have been leased for one-quarter of their real value. I could give you the history of hundreds of outstanding apartment buildings, hotels, and theaters. You would be amazed that such things are possible.

You have perhaps read the report of the Van Sweringen manipulations as disclosed by the Senate committee. I assure you that has been a universal practice on the part of these manipulators, aided by these committees and sanctioned and approved by the courts.

There is pending before the Rules Committee a resolution to investigate the moving-picture industry. Some of you older Members remember the effort I have made to help bring that about, and though my committee has obtained a great deal of information and evidence, we have been unable to complete that work that will prove beyond doubt that some of the equity receiverships and bankruptcies in that was nothing but collusion and fraud to enable them to break the hundreds of leases on theaters built for them by people in nearly every section of the country, whereby the equity owners lost their all and the bondholders nearly all, and if this bill is not speedily passed, all that will be left to the hundreds of thousands of investors will be a few sad memories.

I have hurriedly given you again the reasons why the bill should pass, and why amendments that I will offer should be adopted. I want to extend my sincere thanks to the House for the confidence reposed in me and the committee.

Had the bill passed last session and the select committee been given broad powers of subpena and otherwise, we would have been able to more speedily and efficiently have performed our duty, but I wish to assure you once more that during my entire life I have not worked harder nor more strenuously than I have in bringing to light what to my mind is the greatest crime I know of.

You and I are incensed when we read of a man being held up and robbed. Here we have a condition where nearly 10,000,000 people are being robbed, and this has been going on for 5 long years. I have given 6 years to this work, and today is the day when something should be done.

This wholesale robbery of old men and women, of estates, societies, charitable and labor and benevolent groups, insurance companies, and others, should be stopped at once. They never meant to gamble their money; they looked for a safe investment for their savings. And now is the time for us to see that robbing them shall no longer be continued with impunity. Now is the time for us to see that confidence in our courts is reestablished, and that is why I urge that this bill, with the amendments, be adopted.

Mr. McGRANERY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SABATH. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. McGRANERY. I understand the gentleman's committee served in Philadelphia in connection with the Philadelphia Co. for Guaranteeing Mortgages?

Mr. SABATH. Yes.

Mr. McGRANERY. That company involved a loss to bondholders of some $132,000,000 is that correct?

Mr. SABATH. Well, that is not the only one. There were a great many other such companies.

Mr. McGRANERY. But somewhere in the neighborhood of $132,000,000 for this one company?

Mr. SABATH. Yes.

Mr. McGRANERY. The officers of that company were indicted in the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania last October; is that correct?

Mr. SABATH. The gentleman is correct.

Mr. McGRANERY. Does the gentleman know anything concerning the unusual and extraordinary circumstances in connection with the nolle prossing of certain bills last Thursday in the Eastern District Court of Pennsylvania?

Mr. SABATH. No; I do not. I heard they were nolle prossed, but I do not know how or why. Later on, although the committee is not active, I myself shall endeavor to ascertain why the bills were nolle prossed.

Mr. McGRANERY. Does not the gentleman believe this Congress should know something of those circumstances?

Mr. SABATH. I believe the Congress and the country as well should know them.

Mr. MICHENER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SABATH. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. MICHENER. Of course, if criminal cases were nolle prossed, it would be at the direction of the Department of Justice. I am sure that if the gentleman from Pennsylvania will inquire of the Department, he will be given the information he wants.

Mr. SABATH. I believe if the gentleman is correct there must have been a very good reason why that was done.

Mr. McGRANERY. The gentleman will agree that the manner in which that was done is most unusual?

Mr. SABATH. I was not there and I do not know. I had my hands full right here with this investigation.

Mr. FISH. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. GRISWOLD). Evidently a quorum is not present.

Mr. CHANDLER. Mr. Speaker, I move a call of the House.

A call of the House was ordered.

The Clerk called the roll, and the following Members failed to answer to their names:

[Roll No. 139]

Allen, La.	Fernandez	Kramer	Pfeifer

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Three hundred and thirty-seven Members have answered to their names, a quorum.

By unanimous consent, further proceedings under the call were dispensed with.

COMMITTEE ON NAVAL AFFAIRS

Mr. SCOTT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that a special subcommittee of the Committee on Naval Affairs may have permission to sit during the sessions of the House this afternoon.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from California asks unanimous consent that a subcommittee of the Committee on Naval Affairs may be permitted to sit during the session of the House this afternoon. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. CHURCH. Mr. Speaker, who made the request that the subcommittee of the Committee on Naval Affairs have permission to meet this afternoon?

Mr. SCOTT. I did.

Mr. CHURCH. Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the chairman, I shall have to object.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The objection comes too late.

AMENDMENT OF THE BANKRUPTCY ACT

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Speaker, so far as I know, there is no objection to the adoption of this rule. There are some who question the advisability of passing the bill, I understand, in view of other legislation which is pending in the House. Personally, I may say I am for the rule and for the passage of the so-called Sabath bill, which the rule seeks to make in order.

There has been some criticism of the select committee appointed to investigate real-estate bonds, bondholders' protective committees, and related subjects, of which the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SABATH] was chairman, but, on the whole, I think that committee has done very commendable work. The committee was created over 3 years ago and during the progress of its work held hearings in different parts of the country. As far as the subject matter covered by the investigation is concerned, I think there is no one in the House who does not have a sympathetic feeling toward the work of the committee and the objectives sought to be accomplished by it. The Sabath bill is the result of more than 3 years' intensive work on the part of that committee. If real-estate bondholders can be protected to any extent by the passage of the Sabath bill, I, for one, am in favor of its passage. The general objective of the legislation is to give the Securities and Exchange Commission more jurisdiction than it now has over the so-called bondholders' protective committees, and to give that Commission a voice, at least, before the Federal courts in fixing the fees which are allowed receivers in bankruptcy cases.

My understanding is that the same subject matter is to some extent treated of in the so-called Chandler bankruptcy bill, which has also been reported by the Committee on the Judiciary, but I further understand there is no conflict between the two measures. Also, there is pending before the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce a bill recommended by the Securities and Exchange Commission which treats of somewhat the same subject matter. There may be some pride of authorship with respect to these different bills. However, the Sabath bill is before us for action this afternoon, and I, for one, favor its passage and enactment into law.

Mr. Speaker, there have been no requests for time on the rule on this side, but I have agreed to yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. DIES], who, I understand, wants to speak not on the rule but on another matter.

Mr. DIES. Mr. Speaker, ladies and gentlemen of the House, when we first assembled in January we were told that one of the chief items in our legislative program was a farm bill. After 7 months of this session we appear to be no nearer farm legislation than we were the day we convened. In my own congressional district the price of cotton has fallen below the cost of production, and is declining steadily.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Speaker, on a point of order, is the gentleman going to speak out of order?

Mr. DIES. I hope the gentleman will not press his point of order.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Speaker, I shall object. There has been so much criticism of this special committee that now that it has a bill before the House I am not going to stand idly by and see anybody torpedo the bill.

Mr. DIES. Very well; I shall talk on bankruptcy. You have here a bill which proposes to do something about bankruptcy.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Yes.

Mr. DIES. I will tell you what you will do. If you undertake to raise the price of everything which the farmers must buy, if you undertake to vote billions of dollars out of the Federal Treasury to subsidize every class of your citizenship except agriculture and then expect the farmers of this country to survive under the problems which now face them, then it seems to me, Mr. Speaker, that the Congress has lost all sense of proportion and of that equal and exact justice which is the foundation of a democracy.

Talk about bankruptcy! The average cotton farmer of the South does well to derive $300 a year from his cotton crop; yet you say you are going to establish a minimum wage for the industrial worker of 40 cents an hour and a maximum workweek of 40 hours a week; you propose to subsidize the man who lives in the city by paying 60 percent of his rent and permitting him to live in quarters that will cost the Government ten or fifteen thousand dollars. Then you are going back to your farmer constituents, some of whom are living in houses without any screens, without running water, and without the convenience and comforts of modern life. When you report to him you are going to say, "Well, I voted for adjournment before a farm bill was passed and I am sorry to see you getting less for your cotton than it cost you to produce it, but I am glad to inform you that I made possible the passage of a wage and hour bill to establish minimum wages and maximum hours for industrial workers, and I made it possible for the man in the city to live in a nice home, with every modern convenience, and with the Government paying 60 percent of his rent." And your farmer constituent is going to say to you, "I have no objection to the low-paid workers receiving better wages or shorter hours, and I have no objection to the abolishment of slums, but all of these things will add to the price that I must pay for the things I buy, and yet you expect me to sell my farm products below the cost of production. I will support some man for Congress who will see that the same consideration is accorded me as is given to industrial workers and people who live in the city. You voted to appropriate $700,000,000 to build houses for the people in the big cities, but you only voted for $10,000,000 to enable tenant farmers to acquire their own farms, which is less than $3,000 for each county, even if you allow nothing for administration costs."

It has been suggested that the President might consent to loan 10 cents per pound on this year's cotton crop. Now, what is 10 cents? It is less than the farmer got when Hoover was President in actual purchasing power. Since that period everything the farmer buys has more than doubled in price. The dollar was reduced in value 40 percent. Actually the farmer made more in 1932 and 1933 from 6-cent cotton than he can make today with 10-cent cotton, because today the farmer is paying considerably more for everything that he buys. There seems to be no difficulty in raising the price of everything that the farmer has to buy, but when it comes to giving the farmer a fair price for his products you say, "We might lend him 10 cents a pound on his cotton", and in so doing you acknowledge that you are putting the farmer back where he was under the Hoover administration.

Now, it does seem to me that if we are going to establish a minimum wage for the industrial worker, in all fairness and justice we ought to establish a parity price for the farmer. Certainly the farmer is entitled to the same return upon his labor and investment as the worker or industry in the city. It must not be forgotten that the farmer not only works the same as the industrial worker but, as a rule, his family works with him and in addition to his labor and the labor of his family he has a capital investment in his farm and machinery. The farmer has no more assurance that he will raise a crop than the average workingman that he will secure a job. He may work ever so hard and yet the fruits of his labor come to naught as a result of droughts, storms, insects, or other unforeseen causes.

How can you say that in one field of activity you can guarantee men a living wage, whereas in another field of activity you refuse the same protection and consideration? If you say to one man, "The Government is going to see that you receive 40 cents an hour for your work and that you will not work more than 40 hours a week", then you can certainly say to the farmer, "the Government is going to guarantee to you a parity price for your products which means a living wage for you and your family." The cotton farmers of my district did not get a parity price under the A. A. A. program and the Bankhead Act. The facts show conclusively that the cotton farmers under the A. A. A. received far less in proportion than the tobacco, the corn, and the wheat farmers. I called attention to this time and time again when the A. A. A. program was in effect, but we were unable to receive any relief at the hands of the Department of Agriculture. Under the Bankhead Act the little farmers in my district who normally raised a bale or two of cotton were given an allotment of a few hundred pounds which meant starvation wages and sweatshop conditions for them. The big farmers got millions of dollars. One sugar refinery received $1,800,000 out of the Federal Treasury, and yet we talk about equal and exact justice. The corporation farm or the big plantation, which was largely responsible for overproduction and which could produce cotton at a much lower cost, got the cream and the little farmers were given the skimmed milk. Now, Mr. Speaker, we are not going to permit this to happen again. The farmer who farms for a living must be given first consideration before we seek to solve the problem of the farmer who farms for profit.

What I wish to emphasize, Mr. Speaker, is that if we are going to provide minimum wages and maximum hours for the industrial worker at this session, if we are going to build homes for people in the cities, the least we can do before we adjourn is to guarantee the farmers for this year's crop a sum of money that will at least give him for his labor as much as you propose to give to the industrial workers. If we do this, there will be no complaint from the farmers, but to say that farm legislation shall go over to another session, and then say that certain other measures shall be considered at this session, is wrong. It does seem to me, Mr. Speaker, that all of these great measures should be placed on a parity so that we, who represent farm districts, can at least have the satisfaction of knowing that we protected the interests of our constituents before adjournment.

Mr. WOOD and Mr. SABATH rose.

Mr. DIES. I yield to the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. WOOD. Does not the gentleman think that we have ample time to pass an agricultural bill if our Committee on Agriculture will only report a bill out and give us the opportunity?

Mr. DIES. Yes. There is one thing that we know we can do and one thing every man ought to agree upon. We all know what the parity prices of basic farm products are. The parity price for cotton has been established at 17 cents a pound. We know that if the Government is going to undertake to build homes and guarantee certain things for other people, we can guarantee the farmer this parity price. Let the farmer sell this year's crop on the world market and let the Government give him as a tariff benefit or equivalent the difference between what he sells that portion of his crop domestically consumed for and what the parity price is. The farmer is entitled to this consideration as a matter of justice. This is no subsidy any more than the tariff is a subsidy for protected industries. We all know that protected industries are able to get much more for their products on account of the tariff than the world market price would bring.

Therefore on that part of the farmer's crop domestically consumed he is entitled to as much return upon his labor and investment as industry receives as the result of the tariff. No one complains when protected industries are able to sell their products on the American market at a price from 30 to 100 percent in excess of the world market price. No one denounces this as a subsidy which the American consumer must pay. But when we propose to give the farmer the same tariff protection in the form of tariff payments, such as I propose, then it is called a raid upon the Treasury. We do not tell protected industries that in order for them to get this higher price for that portion of their products sold on the domestic market that they must agree to a reduction program. But, when it comes to the farmer, we refuse to give him any tariff benefit unless he enters into a binding agreement to reduce his production. As I have said many times, Mr. Speaker, either the tariff should be abolished entirely so that all industries in America must compete with foreign industries the same as the farmer is compelled to do today or else the farmer must be given the same tariff benefit in dollars and cents as that received by the protected industries. So it seems to me that with this simple principle acknowledged that a farm bill can be immediately reported that will guarantee to all farmers a tariff benefit on this year's crop.

Mr. WOOD. We can pass an agricultural bill at this session, and I am willing to stay here until January, and I am asking the gentleman if he does not think we can pass a good agricultural bill at this session, if we can get the bill out of the committee.

Mr. DIES. Yes; and I am not willing to agree to a 10-cent loan or a 10-cent price when I know that 10-cent cotton today will buy less than 6-cent cotton would buy in 1932. The cotton farmer must receive as much as 15 cents a pound if we are to guarantee to him what has already been given to other groups.

Mr. SABATH. Does not the gentleman know that those fortunate farmers who had saved a little money have been robbed by conditions that have been permitted, and that by the passage of this bill they will be protected in the future?

Mr. DIES. I will say that the gentleman's bill is logical legislation if the present policy of inaction is to continue, because if we are going to raise the price of everything the farmer must buy and not give him a parity price for his products, the farmers will need the gentleman's bill, because most of them will be in bankruptcy.

Mr. SABATH. This will protect them from being imposed upon and robbed.

Mr. DIES. It will enable them to get over their misery quickly.

Mr. HOOK. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield.

Mr. DIES. Yes.

Mr. HOOK. Does the gentleman know that the Committee on Agriculture called all the farm organizations and their leaders together and conferred with them, and that they could not agree on what they wanted at all?

Mr. DIES. I am not condemning the Committee on Agriculture. I think that it is a splendid committee, and that Mr. JONES is one of the ablest Members of this House. I know that he has the farmers' interest at heart. But, of course, the farm organizations and leaders are not elected by the people to write farm bills. We are the ones who have the responsibility of legislating for the farmers, and we cannot escape that responsibility by saying that the farm organizations and leaders could not agree upon a bill. What I say is that a simple proposition can certainly be agreed on by this House. Whether we have permanent farm legislation or not, the least we can do is to guarantee to the farmer for his present crop, that is now facing ruinous and disastrous market conditions, a fair price, or, if you please, a minimum living wage, the same as we propose to give to others. [Applause.]

Mr. McFARLANE. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIES. Yes.

Mr. McFARLANE. In regard to the question of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. HOOK], I will call attention of the gentleman to the fact that in January of this year there were about 50 of the 65 farm leaders in the country that met here in Washington and did agree on a program, but later discord arose, and that has blocked farm legislation thus far.

Mr. DIES. I do not know what they agreed to, but that has nothing to do with my responsibility, as a Member of the House, to see that my farmers receive fair consideration. I want to say another thing. I will not support any farm bill that will give the corn farmers one-half of the total payments. I will not support a bill that proposes to give to the cotton farmers less than that received by the tobacco, wheat, or corn farmers. Any bill that is passed must deal fairly and honestly with the cotton farmers, and the small producers must be fully protected. I believe that the Representatives from the Corn and Wheat Belts are willing to agree to that, and it seems to me that we can at least work out a temporary measure in the next 2 weeks that will give to our cotton farmers at least 15 cents a pound.

Mr. WEARIN. That is a responsibility of this Congress at this session, in view of the prices prevailing in corn and cotton at this time.

Mr. DIES. Of course, it is our responsibility at this session. I would like to see immediate action to guarantee a fair price for this year's crop, and I would also like to see a permanent farm bill passed before adjournment. [Applause.]

Let me warn my city friends that if farm products continue to fall and nothing is done to arrest this downward curve, the farmers will not have any money to buy the products of your industries this year. This would mean the end of prosperity for your districts and a further increase in unemployment. You cannot be prosperous unless agriculture has a purchasing power sufficient to buy the products of your industries. No program can be successful that does not include the farmers. [Applause.]

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from Texas has expired.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the resolution.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the adoption of the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

Mr. CHANDLER. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H. R. 6963) to amend an act entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States", approved July 1, 1898, and acts amendatory thereof and supplementary thereto.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill H. R. 6963, with Mr. BUCK in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection the first reading of the bill will be dispensed with.

Mr. CHANDLER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 20 minutes to the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. FULLER].

Mr. FULLER. Mr. Chairman, this bill, to my way of thinking, is one of the most important that has come before the House at this session, and it is here due to conditions that existed in the past and still obtain in this country. It is a relief measure in the truest sense. Naturally when you first look at this measure, unless you study it, if you are a lawyer, your inclination is to be against it. Based on 40 years' experience, I know something about a lawyer's natural tendencies, and I know that we are all more or less inclined toward all laws that will give us good fees, and give the court permission to allow them to us, but there is nothing in this bill that affects honest, legitimate lawyers; there is nothing in this bill that will affect the fee that will be allowed a lawyer except that all fees of every nature have to pass under the scrutiny of the Securities Exchange Commission. The conditions that brought forth this bill are well known to the older membership of the House. It was of so grave a consequence that this House, with scarcely a dissenting vote, repeatedly appropriated money for the Real Estate Bond Committee to investigate the conditions existing throughout the country. From 1926 to the time of the panic in 1929 a racket developed in the Nation that is a disgrace to American politics and American government, and how on earth we went so long and left the gates down so that such a thing could happen I cannot understand. During that period real-estate dealers, brokers, and bankers made a business of going out and getting a piece of ground, in many instances only a lease, in many instances without even paying for the land, and then issued bonds for more than the property, which they proposed to build, would cost. These bonds were known as gold bonds. They bore 6- or 7-percent interest. They were turned over to brokerage houses, principally to big bankers, to be sent over the country, sent to other banks, and by those banks sold to an unsuspecting public.

In my district they erected no such buildings, but they sold their bonds to old men and old women. They specialized on this class of savers, and widow's and orphans' estates. In the golden era of financing in this country in 1928 and 1929 those bonds sold readily. The big banks in the cities sent these to my bank and your bank to hand out to the public. Our bank thought it was good, and they sold it to their customers. They bore 6- and 7-percent interest, but in many instances not even the first payment of interest was ever paid. It went from bad to worse. Think of it! Thirty-five billion invested in this kind of business; fifteen or sixteen billion dollars of it an entire loss to the American people, and the poor investors of the country are the ones who suffered. One-half the amount of the public debt of the United States has been wiped out by these crooks and parasites.

No sooner did the default occur than they, who were on the inside, constituted what is known as select protective committees. In most instances they were the ones who initiated and sold the bonds. They circularized a contract agreement asking people to sign it so that they could protect them. They were scattered all over the United States. These were cutthroat contracts. These were so drawn that signers absolutely turned their property over to these committees, and the first thing the committeemen would do would be to put those bonds in a bank or trust company and borrow several hundred thousand dollars on them for the purpose of legal expenses, so they claimed, and in a great many instances they wiped it all out, and the people got nothing.

This condition continued until we passed section 77B of the bankruptcy law, that we are today seeking to amend. No one could anticipate that these great institutions would take advantage of that law. You can go to Philadelphia or New York City, or even here in Washington, and see these apartments, these hotels and skyscrapers, and 90 times out of a hundred they were built or financed by this kind of money, and they are now in receiverships or in the Federal court or in bankruptcy under section 77B.

Now, what do we seek to do by this bill? We simply provide that the Securities and Exchange Commission shall act as a friend of the court to see that these bondholders, scattered all over the country, are not further robbed and plundered. Down in your district, in every little hamlet in this country, there are men and women and estates which own these bonds. They have no opportunity to represent themselves. Enough of them cannot get together to come in and hire an attorney to look after them specially; whereas, on the other hand, the protective select committee and the bankers and the brokers always have the best attorneys that money can hire, who are not interested in the little bondholders. As a result, we of this congressional committee had to go up against the legal brains of America in this investigation, and all we could do, with our limited appropriation, was to hire a few lawyers at small fees. A few times some of the best of lawyers would volunteer their services.

Mr. PARSONS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FULLER. I yield.

Mr. PARSONS. Is this bill the outgrowth of the investigation by this committee?

Mr. FULLER. Yes. It is known as the Sabath bill, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SABATH] being chairman of the committee.

Now, what does this bill seek to do? It is very simple. There are 4,000 of this kind of cases pending in the Federal courts today. In every one of those cases a trunk would not hold the files. The files are higher than my head in any case of consequence. The court sits on the bench, and we will concede for the sake of argument that he is honest and wants to do right. My own experience has been, scarcely without exception, that the men who grace the bench in this country are honest and want to do what is the right and proper thing, but they are being criticized, and justly so, because of the way they have approved these reports. Who is it now who helps the court to pass judgment on these matters? It is a bank; it is a trust company; it is a broker that has selected the people who are administering this estate. Courts have a tendency to appoint receivers, trustees, masters, and select attorneys who are their friends, or who the plaintiff recommend. Too often relatives are appointed. This is particularly true of Federal courts. Every lawyer knows it is always easy to get good fees for attorneys, good fees for receivers, and good fees for trustees and masters and everything else. This does not necessarily take that away from them, but this gives the court the information that the court ought to know.

Mr. PARSONS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FULLER. I yield.

Mr. PARSONS. I want to say to the gentleman that his eloquent appeal has almost persuaded me to support this bill.

Mr. FULLER. That is the reason I am making this speech.

Let us conclude. Here is the court sitting on the bench like the chairman. Here is a case that has taken not only committees and attorneys and several trials and months and months to get ready for the court to decide. How can this court know what is in these papers down here by me stacked as high as my head? How can he know the record? He cannot know it. He has many other cases to hear and try every day and cannot keep the facts and record in his mind. We found out from practical experience, especially in New York, the Federal judges were eager for information and they listened with scarcely an exception to the recommendation that this committee made. The lawyers who grace this House would bow their heads in shame of their profession if they knew the robbery and the outrages that the so-called lawyers of this country have perpetrated on the poor and unsuspecting people of this country through this bond racket.

Some years ago a bill similar to the pending bill was considered. From page 6 of the committee report you will find that Hon. Thomas D. Thatcher, judge of the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York, in a case in which Col. William J. Donovan participated, made similar recommendations. Afterward President Hoover appointed him to bring out this kind of law, and the Judiciary Committees of the House and the Senate have approved this kind of procedure. In summing up he said:

> The courts should be relieved of administrative responsibilities, and these responsibilities should be centralized in the executive branch of the Federal Government. The creditors will not exercise these responsibilities. Their attempted exercise by the courts has been ineffective, burdensome, and generally inefficient, has produced a multitude of rules and legalistic formalities, and has resulted in criticism of the bench itself. Trustees should be supervised and licensed or subject to approval by the executive branch of the Federal Government.

The Judiciary Committee is to be complimented for their excellent services in this matter. The bill was pending before that committee 5 or 6 months. It was not an easy matter to decide. Hon. WALTER CHANDLER, of Tennessee, chairman of the subcommittee has performed a Herculean task and not only deserves but will receive the thanks of a grateful House. Our committee wanted this conservator, and that is all there is in this bill, a conservator in the Treasury Department under the Comptroller to clean up these bankrupt institutions just as they cleaned up the defaulted banks. Nobody ever heard a word of criticism, because they are experts and know their line of business. But it developed that the Treasury did not want it. In the meantime it also developed that the Securities and Exchange Commission has conducted a similar investigation, but not so extensive, as that conducted by the Real Estate Bondholders' Investigating Committee of the House. They brought out an elaborate opinion insisting that something should be done in bankruptcy along the line of this bill. The Judiciary Committee has brought out a bill which will follow this one on general bankruptcy. No Member should vote against that bill any more than they should vote against this bill. I would like to know one reason why a Member should vote against the pending bill. I would like somebody to ask me a question from which an inference could be drawn as to why a vote should be cast against this bill.

This measure does nothing in the world but constitute what is known as a conservator. This conservator is the Securities and Exchange Commission. It is given authority in all reorganizations of these bankrupt cases pending in the Federal court to intervene, and the court is required to notify them in order that they may intervene, in order that they may send their experts there to investigate whether or not the settlement that is sought for these bondholders is right, fair, and honest, or whether the big boys who were on the ground with their legal staff are getting all the best of it. The conservator will make his report to the court, but the court is not bound by this report and can take such action as the court thinks is proper, but in this way they are telling the court what the reorganizers are trying to do.

Mr. FORD of California. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FULLER. I yield.

Mr. FORD of California. Is not this bill designed to break up one of the most iniquitous rackets ever perpetrated on the American investing public?

Mr. FULLER. That is true, but it goes further than that, it is an effort to try to take care of what is left of this $15,000,000,000 in bond issues now tied up in courts and to prevent further dissipation. You know what happened to the people in your district, and there is not a district in the United States that is not affected by it. While the buildings are in the big cities, the bondholders are in every community. They are in the little country hamlets and towns in every congressional district and there are many, formerly in good circumstances but now on relief.

Mr. KENNEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FULLER. I yield.

Mr. KENNEY. Have not most of these cases been cleaned up?

Mr. FULLER. No; they have not been cleaned up, 4,000 of them are outstanding in the Federal courts today. About half of the thirty-five billion has been wiped out, and paid small amounts, as results of sales, and many took stock in reorganizations.

Mr. KENNEY. And this bill would apply to all of them?

Mr. FULLER. Yes.

Mr. CREAL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FULLER. I yield.

Mr. CREAL. Would this bill apply to present cases?

Mr. FULLER. Yes.

Mr. CREAL. Or will it apply only to future cases?

Mr. FULLER. The bill will apply to all cases now in the Federal court but not to those settled and wound up.

Here is what the bill does: The bill does not command the judge to do anything in the world. All in the world it does, and nothing else, is where these reorganization cases are pending the reorganization cannot proceed until the proposal is investigated by the Securities and Exchange Commission. Every lawyer knows that when you foreclose a mortgage a receiver is appointed. You cannot keep the receiver going all the time; he has got to quit some time.

You have to sell the property or reorganize. In connection with this bond matter they have trustee receivers, and committees which are robbing the estates now, and every Federal court in the United States knows that. These committees and receivers have a chance to graft from insurance premiums, from the management, and they can and often do fix the books so as to show no profit. They do everything to pull down the real value of the property, thereby pulling down the value of the bonds. However, there has to be a day of reckoning in every one of these cases. They will either have to put the property up and sell it to the highest bidder or else there will be some kind of a reorganization. Most of the cases are going through reorganization now. What does this mean? They have to give notice to these people all over the country who hold these bonds. The court will want to know what these people want to do in connection with reorganization. The court wants to know whether it is honest and fair for the people who have money invested in it.

That is what his conservator is supposed to do. He is also supposed to recommend to the court as to whether or not attorneys will receive a million dollars as fees, as has been the case in matters we investigated, or whether they shall receive a fee according to the services performed. He makes recommendations on all fees and matters of settlement and allowance.

Mr. Chairman, this bill cannot harm anybody except the man who has his long bony fingers in the Treasury robbing the unsuspecting people. It will not cost the Government one single cent. When the Exchange Commission sends a man, who is an expert, to do this work, it charges the cost of that work up to the estate, just like the services of a Federal bank examiner when he examines a bank.

Mr. Chairman, I have talked longer than I expected. I have made a rather extemporaneous, rambling statement about the bill, but if the Members will read it—and the bill is not long—they will see that there is no reflection upon the courts. The Members will see this bill takes no authority from the courts, but, on the contrary, gives assistance to the courts. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. HANCOCK of New York. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 5 minutes.

Mr. Chairman, the fact that this bill is before the House today is a tribute to the popularity and influence of the gentleman from Illinois, our esteemed friend [Mr. SABATH]. It is here simply for the purpose of pleasing him and the members of his special committee. As we all know, the Sabath investigating committee spent a lot of time and a lot of money investigating certain bankruptcy abuses. I have no doubt that they unearthed some valuable information.

As a climax to their work, they desire the glory of placing some legislation on the statute books. Several bills have been introduced with the Sabath label and discarded. The bill before us today is practically one section of the Chandler bankruptcy bill which will come before the House for consideration in a few hours.

Mr. Chairman, referees in bankruptcy of the United States, district judges, committees of the bar associations of the big cities of the country and representatives of various credit men's associations, as well as the excellent subcommittee of the Judiciary Committee of the House, headed by our able colleague from Tennessee [Mr. CHANDLER], have studied the general revision of the bankruptcy laws of the United States for several years. I do not suppose any bill has come before us that has been as thoroughly studied and as carefully worked out by so many competent men as the Chandler bankruptcy bill. It embraces the entire subject of bankruptcy. It includes the subject matter of the bill we are now considering.

Mr. Chairman, to pass this bill today would be exactly the same as taking an item out of an appropriation bill and passing it before the appropriation bill itself came before the House for consideration. It is totally unnecessary and a waste of time. There is no serious objection to the bill on this side, as far as I know, but it is foolish to consider it when another bill will be passed later in the day superseding it. As I stated, the bill is simply here for the glorification of one Member, whom we all like, admire, and esteem. We want him to have all the fame and happiness in the world but we are wasting time and money by considering his bill. The bill should be defeated without further discussion so we can attend to the important business of acting on the Chandler bill.

The whole subject of bankruptcy will be dealt with in the Chandler bill. The Sabath bill is merely patchwork, and it is silly that it should be here at all. I do not violate any confidence when I say that the Judiciary Committee reported this bill out on account of friendship for the gentleman from Illinois, never thinking it would reach the floor. It was our idea and the idea of everyone interested in this type of legislation that the whole matter would be dealt with in the Chandler bill. We reckoned without considering the influence of the gentleman from Illinois on the Rules Committee, of which he is a member. Everyone has tried to please the gentleman from Illinois and that is why his bill is here.

Mr. DOCKWEILER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HANCOCK of New York. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. DOCKWEILER. Why is it that under the terms of the bill there is taken into account creditors or bankrupts whose debts amount to $250,000 or more in order to get relief?

Mr. HANCOCK of New York. Of course, the real abuses have been in the big reorganizations, involving large issues of securities that are widely held.

Mr. DOCKWEILER. I understand that, but does the gentleman feel, since these abuses exist in the big reorganizations, amounting to great sums, that $250,000 is a sufficient minimum?

Mr. HANCOCK of New York. There is a difference of opinion as to where the limit should be set. It was the feeling of the members of the committee that the Securities and Exchange Commission should not be required to interfere in small, trivial, and unimportant bankruptcy matters, where no serious abuses could occur. Perhaps the limit is too high or too small; I do not know.

Mr. DOCKWEILER. Why not make it $100,000?

Mr. HANCOCK of New York. Or $50,000 or $500,000? It is a matter of judgment; that is all.

Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may desire to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DIRKSEN].

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Chairman, it appears to me that this august and enthusiastic legislative body wastes enough time as it is. I shall not be a party to any legislative procedure which by indirection or otherwise has been characterized as a waste of time.

May I ask my friend on the Committee on the Judiciary, the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. CHANDLER], whether all the subject matter in the bill now pending before the House is embraced in the bankruptcy bill which is to come on for consideration later this afternoon? The gentleman from Tennessee can probably qualify as the most expert authority in the House on this whole subject. I should like to know from the gentleman for the benefit of this committee whether the remarks of my esteemed colleague the gentleman from New York [Mr. HANCOCK] are quite accurate.

Mr. CHANDLER. There are a very few minor provisions in the bill now pending which are different from the bankruptcy revision bill which the Committee on the Judiciary itself has prepared, and which will be before the House this afternoon if we finish the pending bill early enough. The provisions in the Sabath bill, however, are not in conflict with the provisions of the committee's own bill. What the gentleman from New York [Mr. HANCOCK] probably had in mind was that these provisions simply touch one phase of one part of the law of bankruptcy, dealing entirely with the matter of protecting investors in corporations and in large businesses operated by individuals against the loss of their investments. I can point out the differences if the gentleman wishes me to do so, but they are not serious.

Mr. DIRKSEN. No. I think the committee has implicit faith and confidence in the gentleman from Tennessee. If the gentleman states there is a need for this legislation and that its subject matter is distinctive from that which is embraced in the general bill coming on later this afternoon, this thoroughly disposes of the argument just made that this Committee is going to waste time. I would not make that statement if I were a member of the Committee on the Judiciary. I certainly would not commit myself to the position that we were bringing in a bill merely for the glory and honor of a Member of this House. Therefore we, the members of the subcommittee which made investigations in every section of the country, ask you to bear with us this afternoon. We believe this legislation is necessary, and this belief is now supplemented by what the gentleman from Tennessee, who was the chairman of the subcommittee handling all this legislation, has just now retailed to the Committee. I think that is answer enough.

May I say for myself as a Member of this legislative body that I will not lend myself to any proceeding which is so vainglorious and so full of sound and fury without any substance in it. There is a necessity for this legislation. We need only to go back to 1915 and the anterior period to find out why this proposed legislation is before the Committee this afternoon.

I do not know at just what point in the history of this country the trust indenture was invented. Certainly there was some ingenious cuss with all the wisdom of a Solomon who saw the possibilities of a trust indenture as applied to the building of properties, the financing through a house of issue, and the sale of bonds to the general public. However, I do know that in 1915 this procedure of trust indentures came out into the open and was used in wholesale fashion. Because of this fact there is pending before this Committee today a bill which is designed to protect and to defend the uninformed investors of the country.

I need but recite the general pattern for your information, and you will find that it conforms substantially to what happens in almost every metropolitan center in the country. For example, here on the edge of town in some metropolitan center is a rather desirable piece of unimproved real estate. John Jones looks at it and decides that he ought to build an apartment there, so he sends somebody out, if he does not go himself, and makes a deal to buy this parcel of real estate for $50,000. Then, because he is implemented with his own auditors and appraisers, he writes this value up to $100,000, so there is $50,000 in water with which to start. John Jones then builds a building which costs, say, $750,000, and writes it up to $1,000,000, so there is $300,000 in water to start with. He then goes to a house of issue, it makes no difference what the name is, and says to it, "I want to float an issue of bonds to the amount of 65 percent of the value of the property according to the appraisal sheets which I am ready to file with you." Before you can say "Jack Robinson" they have made a deal. When the deal is financed and a 65-percent trust indenture applied against that property, with $300,000 of water in it, the result is that John Jones suddenly becomes the equity owner of a million-dollar property with enough bonds against it to represent almost the entire value of the property, these bonds to be sold either directly by the house of issue or through an underwriting firm. The bonds then fall into the hands of the American public, not thousands, not hundreds of thousands, but millions of people scattered in every obscure hamlet and village and in every metropolis from the Dominion of Canada to the Gulf and from the Atlantic to the Pacific. This is what we found.

Mr. DOCKWEILER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIRKSEN. Let me continue this pattern for just a little while longer.

When this trust indenture was applied and the bonds were issued against the building there was a recital in the indenture that first of all nominated a trustee. On page after page there were set out in meticulous fashion the duties of the trustee. All well and good. The rents were collected. Those were the halcyon days of 1926, 1927, 1928, and 1929, when wages were high and when people could afford to pay fancy rentals for apartments. So these apartments rented, and on this inflated value the owners could make it go and pay the interest and retire the serial principal amounts of the bonds.

Then something happened. What was it? Oh, it was what the literati, shall I say, call the economic dislocation of 1929. "Economic dislocation" is such a beautiful phrase, and takes the sting off the shocking word "depression." What happened? Great streams of people were spewed out into the streets jobless. They had suddenly exhausted their earnings and did not have the wherewithal to pay their rent. They vacated their properties overnight and went to live with their fathers, their mothers, their fathers-in-law, and their mothers-in-law. They doubled up. And so there were vacancies. In a little while the vacancies caught up with the day when the interest had to be laid on the line in the house of issue, the bank, or the trustee, and then what happened? They suddenly sent notice that they had to default on the interest, and there was a property suddenly in default.

What was the duty of the trustee under these trust indentures? He was supposed to conserve this properey, he was supposed to look after the rent, he was supposed to pay the taxes. He stood in a fiduciary relationship under the law of every Commonwealth of this country to the people who bought these bonds. He was their trustee and he should have administered the property for their benefit and welfare, as economically and as conservatively as possible. Is that what he did in most cases? Oh, no; there was no disposition to go in and ask for an equity receivership. There was no disposition to go in and probably summarily liquidate the property. Here was a beautiful plaything with millions of dollars involved and potentialities of thousands in fees. In fairness, of course, it must be said that trustees could not always liquidate the properties because the market was demoralized and the bondholders would have suffered. So what happened? Well, the wise men got together again and decided there ought to be a bondholders protective committee, and then they wondered who was to go on that committee. Here was a bank over here that was interested, and we will put the vice president on the committee. Here is the house of issue that had a third mortgage or the equity in the property and we will put one of its members on, and the first thing you knew you had thousands of bondholders protective committees in which a conflict of interest was just as abrupt as if two billy goats had come together.

We saw so many such instances, and you simply could not defend this conflict of interest but it was there.

Now, what did the bondholders' protective committee do? The first thing it did was to hire a lawyer. I hold no prejudice against members of the bar. I am a kind of young member of the bar myself and I like to see them make fees, but I do believe there is a way of dealing morally and justly with the considerations that involve the people of this country who cannot defend themselves. So they hired a lawyer, and the first thing that was done was to draw up a deposit agreement, 40 pages long usually, and so involved that not even a Philadelphia lawyer can understand it.

All the astuteness and all the wisdom that has been contrived since the days of Chitty, Coke, and Blackstone have gone into the fabrication of these deposit agreements. Then they asked these people to surrender their bonds. They went to the house of issue that sold the bonds and got hold of the salesmen and said to them, "Do you want a job?" "Sure; what doing?" "You go out and contact your old customers and we will give you $1 a hundred on the bonds you bring in." So, as a general thing, they got from 90 to 95 percent of the bonds which were surrendered under this deposit agreement. The people did not know what was in these agreements. Most of them could not even read the first paragraph, let alone understand the legal implications of the agreement. And what was in the agreement? Oh, sinister clauses like this: Once you had surrendered your bonds under this agreement you had given this committee power to take your bonds and lay them down on the counter of a bank and pledge them for a loan on the property. There was a paragraph in most of these agreements which said that once you had deposited your bonds, it would cost you 5 percent to get your bonds back. So they had these bondholders in a sack where they could not wiggle, and then they began to manipulate the property. Fees were taxed up to the limit.

We not only went into apartment and hotel financing but we went into the Paramount-Publix case in New York City. Do you know what the legal fee was in that case to the firm of Root, Clark, Buckner & Ballantine, of which Arthur Ballantine, former Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, is a member? They taxed a fee of $970,000 for legal services. God save the mark! Nine hundred and seventy thousand dollars was the fee taxed. We went before the eight district judges in chambers after supper in New York City and we protested that fee, and those judges could understand that that was an unreasonable fee and they cut it down to something like $400,000, but the essential point for this Congress to remember is, Who was going to pay this fee? Wts it the committees, the fiduciaries, or one of those strange instrumentalities and legal fictions that had been set up? No; it is the poor devil out in the country who by the wily and oily tongue of a salesman had been sold one of these bonds. He is the one who pays the fee and the one who does not have protection.

This is the way these bondholders' committees operated, and then they set up committees within committees. When they got control of the property they often set up a management corporation and too often you could not even buy a can of scouring powder for a bathroom in one of these apartments without paying through the nose to a management corporation that was hooked up with the original committee.

Is there anybody in this Chamber or elsewhere who will defend that kind of proceeding and that kind of public morality in the year of our Lord 1937?

Mr. FULLER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIRKSEN. Yes.

Mr. FULLER. Is it not a fact that the Roosevelt committee had over 100 of the biggest hotels in New York, and if the bond committee did not have over 200 of these different kinds of bond issues, and each one had a bond committee and an attorney to look after it?

Mr. DIRKSEN. That is true. As time went on the committee had to supply a plan of reorganization, they had to reorganize this property, and do you know what the common plan was? A liquidation trust. What a swell legal name for a fiction that has been created to bilk the people—a liquidation trust! How does it work? They will take the salvage of property and they will set up a new corporation. If you have a thousand dollars worth of bonds, you are asked to surrender your bonds. You get one of two things. You get an income bond which has nothing behind it and under which you have surrendered your right to foreclose on whatever interest you had in the tangible property, and that bond says to you that you will get a return if and when any income is earned—just as wide open as the paneled ceiling of this Chamber—an income bond, or they will give you stock in this new corporation that they set up. Somebody has to administer it, and who is designated in the first instance? Three or more trustees. Yes, they are going to administer the property, and they administer the income, and you are going to get something if and when anything is left over.

The three trustees are sitting in the driver's seat. You may not agree with what they do, but how are you going to get them out? By indirection they have recited in this trust agreement that it will take 66⅔ of all of the bondholders to change the trustees. Where are the bondholders in these properties? They live in Chicago, in Cleveland, in Milwaukee, in New York—scattered all over the country. These were interstate transactions, and how can you expect a humble coal miner who goes into the bowels of the earth day after day and works to support a family to know anything about what is going on or get to a place where the trustees hold a meeting, for the purpose of inquiring into the management of a reorganized property?

Mr. HANCOCK of New York. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIRKSEN. Yes.

Mr. HANCOCK of New York. Can the gentleman conclude his remarks in a few minutes? I have some other requests for time and I understand that as soon as this is disposed of, the Chandler bill will be taken up for consideration.

Mr. DIRKSEN. When this committee went to New York and Milwaukee and Chicago and elsewhere we were confronted, not with hundreds but thousands of people with blood in their eye. I saw Polish women start across the barrier in the courtroom in Chicago ready to lay hands of violence on somebody who was appearing before that committee, because they saw there, vicariously represented, the loss that represented the frugality and accumulations of a lifetime. Can you understand how millions of people have been looking to the Congress of the United States for some kind of affirmative remedy that can be applied to this very distressing situation? That is why that bill is here today.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIRKSEN. Yes.

Mr. COCHRAN. In view of what the gentleman has just said, it is very important that the gentleman make it plain that there is no power which the Congress has by which we can do anything that might bring back to these poor people the billions of dollars that they have lost. This bill is to prevent in the future what might have occurred in the past. The gentleman must have had letters, as I have had, from people expecting, as a result of your committee's investigation, that some of their losses might be recovered.

Mr. DIRKSEN. The gentleman is right. We cannot restore the money. The protective committee that went around and brought these people before the committee had a very wholesome effect in bringing about some semblance of morality in them so that these bonds went up, and those who hung on probably will get something.

Mr. COCHRAN. That is true, but we can do nothing for these people by this or any other legislation? We cannot get a dollar of their money back, and I think the RECORD should show that. However, I join the gentleman in supporting legislation that will prevent a recurrence of what happened in the past. I only wish it was possible to recover some of the losses of the people who were robbed—that is the correct word in describing what happened in the past.

Mr. FULLER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIRKSEN. Yes.

Mr. FULLER. What we are trying to do is to protect these people who hold bonds now where their cases are pending in the Federal courts, 4,000 of them, and where there is going to be a reorganization.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Let me complete my statement about this bill. All this bill does is to provide that the Commission shall act as an auxiliary arm to the Federal court. How can you expect a Federal judge sitting on the bench to deal with cases that involve two or three thousand pages of documents in a single case? One judge in New York said it is manifestly impossible; you cannot do it unless you work yourself to death 24 hours a day.

They have been wanting some assistance. This is the best kind of assistance that can be rendered, under an administrative agency that shall examine into plans and proposals that are offered with respect to these organizations; an administrative agency that shall put the seal of approval or disapproval upon committee membership and certain limitations upon their solicitation of proxies, and so forth, and certain limitations upon fees. That is what this bill seeks to do, and nothing more. It is very timely and necessary legislation. It is not to be supplanted by the bill that will come after this in the form of a general bankruptcy bill. You have just had it from the chairman of the subcommittee, who has handled this, that this is necessary legislation, that it contains new substance that you will not find in the other bill. That is the recommendation for it.

Mr. McGRANERY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I yield.

Mr. McGRANERY. The gentleman has described a picture of the distress in connection with the reorganization plans. What has been the gentleman's experience, as a member of the Sabath committee, where they had deliberately sold mortgages already in default?

Mr. DIRKSEN. Oh, we have seen so much of that that it was almost a common occurrence in different parts of the country.

In connection with this and other legislation we have so often reproached lawyers, we have so often reproached trust companies, we have thrown handfuls of abuse and vituperation, but I prefer to be charitable about it, because they were all a part and parcel of the great economic maelstrom that took values away up and then dropped them precipitately. So too often they were only part and parcel of a very irresistible force that was operating in this country. One instance will suffice. We had Mr. Halsey, of Halsey-Stuart Co., on the stand at Chicago. I asked him about the financing of the Steuben Building there. I think on the basis of $250,000 and half a lot, they put up a building for about $5,000,000 that will not yield the bondholders so much as 1 cent on the dollar today. I said to him, "Mr. Halsey, is that sort of thing defensible?" He said, "Well, Congressman, you will have to remember that we were in that period of inflation when everybody was subject to mass hysteria and emotion, and everybody was reaching up to see where the ceiling was." So instead of throwing too many abuses let us be charitable about that which is water over the dam and support this bill that is aimed at those cases now pending in the courts and those that shall come on in the future. It is the least that the Congress of the United States can do for these sorry bondholders. [Applause.]

Complete fairness and candor demands that one say that most of the hotels, apartments, theaters, commercial structures, and others that were built in those lush days of 10 years or more ago were bona-fide ventures. The bond houses which placed trust indentures on them and sold the bonds that were issued against such mortgages were reputable houses which had been doing business for many years. It was a hysterical market. People had money, and they clamored for investments. Hence any kind of a bond could be sold, including many that advertised a yield of 7 and 8 percent. People should have been suspicious of such bonds, but they were not. There was evident everywhere in the land that clamor for securities, and it is small wonder that human fortitude was not substantial enough to withstand that profit lure. Every conceivable kind of promise and inducement was made, and the public eagerly swallowed them up. But when the crash struck in 1929, and jobless men were everywhere, then came the day when the properties yielded an insufficient amount to pay interest or retire the principal, and then the day of reckoning was at hand. So, as we seek to fasten the blame, one must regard it as the evil product of those hectic and unregenerate days when the sky was the limit.

But it is difficult to defend the despoiling of the carcasses after the crash of 1929 fell. I realize full well that many men of integrity who had been instrumental in issuing and selling those bonds could stand the pressure and took a short cut to their mortal end. It was not all beer and skittles in seeking to rehabilitate these properties and bring order out of chaos in a demoralized real-estate market. On the other hand, there can be no defense for the complete looting of many of these properties. I believe that lawyers, and especially those skillful lawyers who know the reorganization business, are entitled to generous fees for their time and learning. But is that an excuse for so complete stripping the property of its last farthing of income that millions of bondholders were deprived of every cent and ushered into the relief lines? In no other nation in the world could such a thing have happened, and often it inspires some doubts about our collective morality and our boasted enlightenment. Fancy an apartment where the cost of taking out the ashes for a single winter was more than the cost of the coal that was consumed. Yet such a case came to our attention.

To be sure, we cannot gather up spilt milk, but there is one thing this Congress can do and that is to provide the machinery for supervising property reorganizations in the future. There is little big-type construction now. The pain of the losses occasioned by the last crash is still too fresh and vivid. But we have an amazing capacity for forgetfulness. How easily we forget the losses of yesterday. Like children playing with matches, the lesson is forgotten. But another generation will be coming on. They, too, may get caught in the maelstrom of skyrocketing values and then we shall be ready for another crash. Shall we then go through all the misery, the anguish, and the heartache that marked the last one, or shall there be legal machinery upon the books of this Nation to soften the blow and carry assurances to the humble holders of bonds in every corner of the land, that the very majesty of the sovereign power will stand by to see that equity is done.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Illinois has expired.

Mr. HANCOCK of New York. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. REES].

Mr. REES of Kansas. Mr. Chairman, first I want to say we appreciate very much the fine speech we have just heard from Mr. DIRKSEN, with reference to conditions that have existed and the terrific losses that have been sustained by various individuals and corporations because of the failure of the present Bankruptcy Act to do certain things it should have done to protect innocent investors from the losses they sustained. I think we all sympathize with these people and do not want the situation repeated. I believe our attention ought to be directed to some matters of importance in connection with this paricular bill that is before us here and now, known as the Sabath bill.

It has been suggested that as a matter of fact this bill was considered by a subcommittee of the Judiciary Committee, which gave it some consideration and thought. It seems they decided not to recommend the bill to the general committee. The Judiciary Committee itself seems to have turned down the measure at one time, and then it appears they got together and reconsidered the matter and decided to bring the bill out. But here is a situation that seems rather peculiar this afternoon. One member of the Judiciary Committee has told us that after all this measure was brought out because of one man whom they appreciated very much as a Member of the House. They appreciate the work he has done on the special investigating committee that worked to do something in investigating the situation regarding the losses of bondholders in Chicago and elsewhere. But here is an interesting thing about it: There are 25 members of the Committee on the Judiciary, all of whom are leading and influential Members of this House. How many of them have spoken on this bill this afternoon? Only one, as far as I know, possibly two. The one who spoke is against it. Where are the rest of them? Have they run out on us? It just looks as if they would rather not hurt the feelings of one individual Member of Congress, and they feel quite sure the Chandler bill, which covers the features embodied in this bill, together with many other questions, will be passed.

One thing more; you will notice when you examine this bill that the original bill of the gentleman from Illinois is all stricken out, and someone has inserted other sections to the bill which appear, at least, to be the same sections that are embodied in the Chandler bill. Now, I am advised that the Chandler bill will be considered by this House following this measure. The Chandler bill is one that has received hours and days and weeks of consideration by members of this committee. As a matter of fact, the substance of this legislation has been considered by the Judiciary Committee of the House for the past 3 or 4 years. Extensive hearings have been held on it, and I have been informed by members of the Judiciary Committee that it is a most comprehensive and constructive piece of legislation.

I am also informed that the entire membership of the Judiciary Committee recommends the Chandler bill. It is a bill upon which a great amount of work has been done. It is a bill which covers the entire ground of the Bankruptcy Act. Here we are spending our time, so we are told by a member of this committee, to please one individual member; to bring this bill out for the reason that his name appears as author of the measure, even though the committee or someone has stricken out everything he put in the original bill and inserted new sections in lieu thereof. Even at that, of course, he is entitled to consideration as author of the bill.

I am sure that every Member of this House is in sympathy with the purport of this bill. Each and every one of us wants or should want to see that the damage which has been done shall not be repeated; and that measures and safeguards should be provided so far as it is possible, to prevent unscrupulous individuals and corporations from swindling, and causing losses to innocent investors. We can take care of all the desirable features of this measure by adopting the Chandler bill; and in doing so we will also provide a good many additional safeguards that are not included in the measure which is under consideration.

Mr. KNUTSON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. REES of Kansas. I will be glad to yield to my friend from Minnesota.

Mr. KNUTSON. Can the gentleman inform the House whether it is true or not that the Committee on the Judiciary refused to report this bill out?

Mr. REES of Kansas. I can only tell you what I have heard, and that is that they refused at one time to report it out, and then it seems they got together and decided they would let it come out, anyway, thinking it would not pass, or, so I am informed, they thought it would not even get to the floor of the House. That is just hearsay as far as I am concerned. As I have said before, it seems to me that we ought to pass the Chandler bill and let this one go by. If we pass the Chandler bill we will cover all the features of the present measure, and in addition thereto will provide efficient legislation that should be for the best interests of our people.

Mr. CHANDLER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. FORD].

Mr. FORD of California. Mr. Chairman, it seems to me that the statement made by the gentleman from New York in the early part of the discussion that this bill was silly, is very characteristic of a certain type of mind in this country, that type being the one which thinks that anything that will protect, by and large, the great mass of people is silly.

It is my reasoned judgment that the so-called bondholders' protective committee—and when I use the word "protective" I do so repeating the exclamation of the gentleman from Illinois, "God save the mark"—is probably one of the most outrageous, inexcusable, indefensible rackets that has ever been perpetrated on the investing public. I know of instances where protective committees took a property over and absolutely looted it, and they had no other purpose in mind when they took it over. What astounds me is that Congress should wait for 3 or 4 years, being thoroughly conversant with the situation, and not take action long ago.

The investigation made by the Sabath committee was a long, intensive, intelligent, and strenuous one; and they bring to us today in this bill the results of their investigation in the hope that Congress will take some action to remedy the situation and that will render that investigation and its disclosures effective for the future protection of the investing public of the United States.

Mr. REES of Kansas. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FORD of California. I yield.

Mr. REES of Kansas. In view of the fact that the Chandler bill covers the same field, and covers it more thoroughly, does not the gentleman feel it would be well to pass the Chandler bill?

Mr. FORD of California. I have the word of the chairman of the subcommittee that the matter contained in this bill is entirely outside of the purview of the Chandler bill, that it touches a separate and distinct situation; and for that reason I believe we ought to enact this bill into law.

Mr. REES of Kansas. Will the gentleman explain that particular part of the bill?

Mr. FORD of California. I am taking the word of the chairman of the subcommittee.

Mr. REES of Kansas. But the gentleman having the floor cannot give us that material?

Mr. FORD of California. It is not necessary that I should. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DIRKSEN] covered that. I am merely making a general statement of the broad characteristic of this measure, and anybody who has had any experience, who has had any contact with these so-called protective committees in the manner in which they have looted and robbed, and scandalized morals and decency in the conduct of these so-called reorganizations should not be opposed to the passage of a measure which tends at least to correct that abuse.

Mr. REES of Kansas. We agree with the gentleman that those conditions exist, but it is my contention that they are covered more comprehensively in the Chandler bill.

Mr. FORD of California. My information is that they are not fully covered, that they do not touch the matter reached by this bill.

I am convinced that this measure, if enacted, will save millions of dollars to investors who hold securities in the 4,000 cases still pending in the courts.

It seems to me, regardless of the more general bill which comes from the Judiciary Committee dealing with bankruptcy matters, that since this bill deals specifically with the control of fees paid in so-called reorganization rackets, that the bill stands on its own feet and should be passed.

I shall therefore vote for the Sabath bill.

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. CHANDLER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. O'MALLEY].

Mr. O'MALLEY. Mr. Chairman, it has become apparent from some of the discussions, particularly from some of the remarks of two gentlemen upon the Republican side, that a number of Members of the House have not read the long and extensive report of the hearings of the special investigating committee into real-estate bonds. I appreciate that when a committee makes an investigation and renders a report covering many volumes that it is quite a job for a Member of Congress to read even a portion of the report, but if every Member of this House would just browse through the report of the special committee on which I had the honor of serving for nearly 3 years, they would find there the history of the worst financial skulduggery that ever existed in this country, and the answers to the need for passage of this bill.

My colleague the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DIRKSEN] portrayed what some of these protective committees did.

The reason for this bill is very simple. Millions, yes, billions of dollars worth of bonds were sold to men and women in all parts of the country, in the cities, as well as out in the "stocks", as some people in New York would say. These bonds were sold by advertisements: "47 years without loss to an investor"; "you cannot lose any money if you buy our bonds", and similar phrases. They were sold by mail, they were sold by oily-tongued salesmen; and people who knew nothing about finance, many who could neither read nor write, invested their life savings in these bonds. Then what happened? In my city, millions of dollars' worth of bonds were sold on a building. When the bonds were sold the company that promoted the building did not even own the land on which it had built the building. Then they went to the Railroad Commission and said: "We have got to sell another bond issue in order to protect the bonds already sold. We did not know that we had not paid in full for the building lot." And the Railroad Commission, like securities commissions in other States, let them sell another issue of bonds to pay for the land in order that the first purchasers might not be wiped out. The result was, quite naturally, that a building like that could not survive. It was over-bonded to begin with. The bonds went into default a few months after they were issued. Then what happened? A bondholders' protective committee was formed, and that bondholders' committee was composed of the sellers of the bonds, the promoters of the building, and the owners of the stock in the corporation that issued the bonds—not a bondholder on it.

The fellows who sold them the bonds figured they did not have enough brains to protect themselves, supposedly because they were able to sell them the bonds in the first place. So it turned out that the company that sold the bonds administered the building. The protective committee for a number of years made no attempt to reorganize that property and give those bondholders either new securities or beneficial interests in the property. They wanted to carry it on as long as they could until these people who owned the bonds were forced to sell the bonds at 1 and 2 cents on the dollar. A good many of the bondholders gave up their bonds to the bondholders' protective committee; others sold them on the market at great loss.

The house of issue sent a salesman around to buy the bonds from them and in certain instances our committee has known members of the bondholders' protective committee, also employed by the house of issue, buying on the side, under assumed names, the bonds from the people whom they were supposed to protect, and using those bonds later to bid in the property.

This bill does only one thing. This bill protects the people that our committee found suffering from this evil, people who cannot afford lawyers in most instances. They are the people who have their life savings invested in these bonds. The bill sets up a conservator and does nothing more than put a Government agency upon the side of millions of people who own these bonds in order to protect them from the depredations of crooked lawyers and crooked financiers.

Mr. Chairman, some mention has been made of New York, and I want to say right now that 50 percent of the evils we investigated emanated from New York. Fifty percent of the skulduggery that these protective committees participated in was patterned and diagrammed in offices in New York and later was copied in all parts of the country, right down to the wording of deposit agreements.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. HOBBS. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman 2 additional minutes.

Mr. O'MALLEY. Mr. Chairman, this bill does nothing more than appoint the Securities and Exchange Commission as a sort of public defender for millions of people who have their life savings in these bonds. If there is any Member of Congress who wants to deny to the poor, to the millions of people in this country who still have the hard-earned dollars of their savings at stake in these reorganization proceedings in the various courts, the right to have Uncle Sam protect them from thievery, it would be a reflection on the high character of this body.

Mr. McGRANERY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. O'MALLEY. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. McGRANERY. The gentleman served on the committee that investigated the Philadelphia company in Philadelphia?

Mr. O'MALLEY. Yes.

Mr. McGRANERY. Does the gentleman know the indictments against the defendants were nolle prossed on last Thursday?

Mr. O'MALLEY. I know that. I happened to be a member of the committee that investigated the matter and sent the evidence to the United States district attorney upon which he obtained the indictments. I read with a great deal of regret that in spite of the work of our committee, a jury of their peers was not able to pass upon the guilt of those gentlemen. The public has a right to suspect the integrity of such summary proceedings in such a prominent case.

Mr. McGRANERY. As a result of the gentleman's experience, would he support a resolution which might give the real facts to the people of this country concerning the nol-prossing of those true bills?

Mr. O'MALLEY. I will support any resolution that will give any facts which show that justice has been interfered with or the orderly processes of the law have been set aside through influence.

Mr. MURDOCK of Utah. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. O'MALLEY. I yield to the gentleman from Utah.

Mr. MURDOCK of Utah. What did the investigation of the gentleman's committee disclose with reference to the Federal courts and other courts that were permitting all this skulduggery to go on? As a Member of Congress I am rather anxious to learn if something should not be done to those courts.

Mr. O'MALLEY. I may say to the gentleman that our investigation discovered two types of courts, one type of court that as long as the lawyer for the protective committee happened to be a friend of the court, the court passed on the matter very quickly; and another type of court that went as thoroughly as it could into the case and in many instances appointed masters who had no connection with the case to hold long and extensive inquiry. It depends on the judge. But in this bill we want to give the people some protection from a disinterested agency, thus helping the court to get at the facts, and this bill should pass for that reason.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. HANCOCK of New York. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. SAUTHOFF].

Mr. SAUTHOFF. Mr. Chairman, I have asked for this time because I wanted to ask the Members of the Committee some questions and ascertain some facts relative to this entire proceeding.

It is a matter of regret that a matter involving $36,000,000,000, five times the amount we voted for relief, equal in fact to the entire national debt, a matter that affects 10,000,000 investors and probably four times that many indirectly, should have less than one-third of the membership of the House present to take part in its deliberations. As far as I am concerned, I am going to vote for the bill, but I regret exceedingly that it does not go farther than it does, for to me it seems fully possible under this measure as now written to have the same thing happen as happened before, i. e., the fleecing of innocent and unsuspecting investors, and that is the thing we are trying to prevent.

May I call attention to one or two things that the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SABATH] wrote to us in a communication received this morning. He stated, among other things:

> Fraud and misrepresentation was originally employed in the sale of these bonds. Under fraudulent deposit agreements, these groups secured absolute power over properties and over the bonds. Later they purchased many of the bonds from unfortunate bondholders at a few cents on the dollar after further false representations as to their value.

Mr. Chairman, fraud voids every transaction from the beginning. That being the case, may I ask, What has been done to recover these properties that have been fraudulently taken from the bondholders? I wish the gentleman from Illinois would give me some information on that subject. What action has been taken by the Government to restore these properties?

Mr. SABATH. We have done everything humanly possible and even have gone in some instances further, perhaps, than the jurisdiction of our committee, by having our attorneys appear in court and calling the court's attention to the fraud that has been perpetrated on the courts and to the misrepresentation that was indulged in. May I say that in many instances, when we called the court's attention to these things, the reorganization, sale, and so forth, has been stopped and in a number of cases we forced these crooked committees to turn over the property to the bondholders themselves, and within a few months after the bondholders obtained possession and control of the properties they started to earn and declare dividends on the bonds.

Mr. SAUTHOFF. That is exactly what I want to know, and I want to compliment the committee for its conduct. Now, let us go a step further. The gentleman from Illinois in his communication also makes this statement:

> That some courts are indifferent. Others are being imposed upon, and still others are even sanctioning the activities of these committees and unscrupulous groups.

Mr. Chairman, we, the Members of the House of Representatives, are the judge of the actions of the Federal courts. If they have acted in anywise contrary to the best ethics of the profession, then we should impeach them and ask the Senate to hold a hearing, and, if possible, oust them. No judge is fit to sit upon a Federal bench and permit fees to be charged that are utterly out of line with the service rendered. It has been stated that fees have been charged which were greater than the value of the building that was bonded. If that is true, then a judge who sits idly by and permits it to be done is himself a party to the crime and is unfit to sit upon the bench. I will go further than that: I assert that any judge who will permit the charging of fees out of line with the income and value of the property under his jurisdiction is not fit to pass solemn judgment on grave matters affecting human rights and property rights.

Mr. MURDOCK of Utah. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SAUTHOFF. Yes; I yield to the gentleman from Utah.

Mr. MURDOCK of Utah. Does not the gentleman think a few impeachments of judges of that character would do more to clear the situation than all we can do in the way of legislation here today?

Mr. SAUTHOFF. Absolutely. I am for it, and I hope the gentlemen of the special committee will bring before the House the names of the judges who sanction such practices as the gentleman from Illinois has set forth in his communication and will file charges in the Committee on the Judiciary against such judges.

I again read from this communication:

> That through collusive sales and unconscionable leases these combinations, through their committees, are acquiring control and ownership of most valuable businesses and properties and eliminating the interests of investors.

No doubt this statement is correct. Then let us proceed to take action against the guilty parties.

This is our business. It has been stated here we are doing all we can when we pass this bill. I challenge that statement. It is not true and it is not correct. We are not doing all we can. The Department of Justice has all the machinery it needs to proceed against anyone who has used the mails to defraud, or who has in anyway by fraud and misrepresentation worked a scheme on these investors in order to get their money.

Mr. O'MALLEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SAUTHOFF. I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. O'MALLEY. May I point out to the gentleman that our committee, as the result of hearings and evidence submitted to a grand jury in Philadelphia, is supposed to have been responsible for the indictment of 12 men who participated in what we believed to be fraud. The daily papers last week gave the information that upon motion of the Department of Justice the cases were nolle-prossed.

Mr. SAUTHOFF. Then, may I ask my colleague, the gentleman from Wisconsin, why not have the gentleman's committee send a communication to the Attorney General of the United States asking for the facts in the matter, so that we may know all the facts?

Mr. O'MALLEY. I think the gentleman's suggestion is very good.

Mr. SAUTHOFF. May I quote again from this communication:

That in every district in the United States there are hundreds—yes; thousands—of unfortunate men and women who are being defrauded through this Nation-wide racket, and their investments wiped out.

This has been true in my district. I have had clients who were bilked out of their money, and I may add that I myself was a sucker.

Over 400,000 investors who purchased these "gold bonds" and invested their all were forced on relief.

From my own experience, I know that a client of mine, a printer, 68 years of age, who had saved up $30,000, lost it all in one of these bond swindles.

I say, Mr. Chairman, that this is our business. We are paid $10,000 a year to see that such frauds are not permitted. It is our duty to impress upon the Department of Justice and upon the judiciary their particular function of taking care of these people. If they have sat idly by and permitted the defrauding of investors, then we should impeach them, throw them out, put an end to them, and put honest men in their places. [Applause.]

Mr. CHANDLER. Mr. Chairman, I do not desire to yield further time and ask that the Clerk read the bill for amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That this act may be cited as the "Conservator in Bankruptcy Act."

Mr. FULLER. Mr. Chairman, on behalf of the Committee on the Judiciary, I offer a committee amendment to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert——

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman wi'l have to receive unanimous consent that the further reading of the bill be dispensed with.

Mr. FULLER. The Clerk read the first sentence. I may offer the amendment now, may I not?

Mr. MICHENER. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the further reading of the bill be dispensed with.

Mr. FULLER. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry. After the Clerk has read the first paragraph, cannot my amendment be offered?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair may state to the gentleman from Arkansas that the Clerk has not yet read the first section.

Mr. FULLER. The Clerk started the reading of the section.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk has not yet read the first section.

Mr. MICHENER. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the original bill may be dispensed with, and that the committee amendment may be read in lieu thereof.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

Mr. CREAL. Mr. Chairman, I object.

Mr. BOILEAU. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Chairman, may I ask a question of the chairman of the subcommittee in charge of this bill? As I understand, the gentleman is also the author of a bill which is to be considered probably after we conclude the consideration of this bill.

I have been advised by numerous Members of the House that the provisions of the bill we are now considering are identical with the provisions contained in another bill which it is understood we will take up later this afternoon, with the exception of one matter concerning the limitation of fees. May I ask the gentleman from Tennessee if this is not correct?

Mr. CHANDLER. Yes; they are the same in substance, except with respect to the limitation on the fees of trustees. There are a few slight changes.

Mr. BOILEAU. Is it the intention of the gentleman to call up the other bill later this afternoon?

Mr. CHANDLER. I should like to call it up if I can get the consent of the House.

Mr. BOILEAU. I appreciate the importance of this measure, and am certainly willing to do any honor I can to a Member of this House, especially my distinguished friend the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SABATH], who has worked hard and done splendid work on this investigation. I approve of all the gentleman has done. I believe that legislation such as this should be enacted, but I do not understand why we should be wasting 2 or 3 hours this afternoon in considering this bill when we are going to consider the same thing right over again in the next few minutes. I do not know any good reason for this.

Mr. FULLER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BOILEAU. I yield to the gentleman from Arkansas.

Mr. FULLER. I think the members of the Committee on the Judiciary are more interested in their bill than in our bill. We are for this bill. I may say to the gentleman and to the members of the Committee on the Judiciary that the committee's bill does not start to hit the mark we are seeking to hit with this bill. This bill has more to do with reorganizations and the appointment of conservators for that purpose. Their bill is a general revamping of the bankruptcy laws of the United States, and has somewhat indirectly, so they say, the same object and purpose as ours. Why should the gentleman or any members of this committee worry about our bill or their bill when the Committee on the Judiciary wants our bill to pass? Is this not true, may I ask the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. CHANDLER]?

Mr. BOILEAU. Will not the gentleman admit the same provisions are to be considered later on this afternoon?

Mr. FULLER. I do not admit that. They are not the same.

Mr. BOILEAU. The gentleman has made the statement, and the chairman of the subcommittee has made the statement, that with the exception of the limitation on fees the provisions are identical.

Mr. FULLER. I never said that.

Mr. BOILEAU. The gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. CHANDLER] made that statement, and he is chairman of the subcommittee. I think this question ought to be clarified.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

Mr. BOILEAU. Mr. Chairman, I am reserving the right to object, because there seems to be a difference of opinion here this afternoon between two distinguished gentlemen who are very much interested in this bill. One gentleman makes one statement while the other gentleman makes an entirely different statement.

The CHAIRMAN. If the gentleman will permit the Chair to make a statement, the gentleman can only reserve the right to object to dispense with the reading of the original bill. The gentleman cannot prevent its consideration by the Committee at this stage.

Mr. BOILEAU. I appreciate that fact, Mr. Chairman, and I am reserving the right to object until I am satisfied about the matter, because I propose to do all I can to prevent the consideration of duplicate bills, and unless I can get some assurance about getting the matter clarified at this time, I shall object.

Mr. HOBBS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BOILEAU. Reserving the right to object, I will be pleased to yield to the gentleman in order to get the information I seek.

Mr. HOBBS. Mr. Chairman, I wonder if the distinguished gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. BOILEAU] is acquainted with the fact that the Chandler bill is the first and only thorough revision of the entire Bankruptcy Act ever attempted, and in its scope it covers every phase of the Bankruptcy Act. The pending measure, which deals with section 77B only, is one of its many provisions.

Mr. BOILEAU. The gentleman is a member of the committee and can give us the information I seek. Do I understand that the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. CHANDLER] is correct or the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. FULLER] is correct? One gentleman states the provisions of this bill are practically identical or that all the provisions of this bill are in the other bill which we are to consider this afternoon, while the gentleman from Arkansas states that is not the fact. I would like to have the gentleman give the members of the Committee his idea about which statement is correct.

Mr. HOBBS. I do not think there is any conflict between the two statements when they are rightly interpreted.

Mr. BOILEAU. I am attempting to interpret them properly, but the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. FULLER] said that the provisions of this bill are not substantially the same as the provisions of the Chandler bill.

Mr. HOBBS. If the gentleman will yield in order that I may attempt to interpret them, I may say that both this bill and the Chandler bill, deal with 77B, corporate reorganization, and therein they are similar. Many of us prefer some of the provisions dealing with 77B that are in this bill. Personally I do. I think it is an erroneous criticism of the Committee on the Judiciary to say that it would have reported out this bill unless there was a bona-fide desire that this bill should be given favorable consideration by the House, but I do say that many of the provisions of this bill are, in substance, covered in that provision of the Chandler bill relating to the subject matter of 77B, but I think when we come to the consideration of that measure, the distinguished gentleman who is now reserving the right to object and every other Member of the House will see that there is room for both, and I sincerely hope the gentleman will not object to the request in order that we may expeditiously conclude the consideration of the amendments and pass the bill.

Mr. CREAL. Mr. Chairman, I did not reserve the right to object, but I objected to the request.

The CHAIRMAN. Objection is heard. The Clerk will read the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That this act may be cited as the "Conservator in Bankruptcy Act."

SECTION 1. Chapter VIII, as amended, of the act entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States", approved July 1, 1898, is amended by adding at the end of such chapter the following new section:

"CONSERVATOR IN BANKRUPTCY

"SEC. 77C. (a) As used in this section—

"(1) The term 'individual debtor' means a debtor as used in section 74 of this chapter, whose liabilities include obligations in a total amount of $50,000, or over, which are evidenced by at least 10 credit instruments severally owned by not less than 10 persons.

"(2) The term 'proposal' means a proposal for a composition or extension as used in section 74 of this chapter.

"(3) The term 'debtor corporation' means a debtor as used in section 77B of this chapter, whose liabilities include obligations in a total amount of $50,000, or over.

"(4) The term 'plan' means a plan of reorganization as used in section 77B of this chapter.

"(5) The phrase 'proceeding involving an individual debtor or a debtor corporation' means a proceeding under section 74 or 77B (as the case may be) of this chapter, as amended.

"(6) The term 'securities' means interests in or claims against any individual debtor or a debtor corporation.

"(7) The term 'committee' means any person or group of persons acting, or proposing or purporting to act, for or in behalf of owners or holders of securities for the purpose of protecting, preserving, and forwarding, or either, the common interests of owners or holders of such securities in connection with, or in contemplation of, any proceeding involving an individual debtor or a debtor corporation.

"(8) The term 'committee agreement' means any agreement by which the owner or owners, or holder or holders of securities confer upon a committee authority to act for or in their behalf.

"(9) The term 'depositor' means any person conferring upon a committee power to act for or in his behalf.

"(b) (1) There is hereby established a Conservator in Bankruptcy (hereinafter referred to as 'Conservator'), who is charged with the duty of aiding the courts in the administration of the laws by the exercise and performance of the various powers, functions, and duties conferred or imposed upon him by this section. The Comptroller of the Currency, ex-officio, shall be Conservator. The principal office of the Conservator shall be located in the District of Columbia, but the Conservator may establish branch offices in any city or cities of the United States or of any Territory. The Conservator shall be entitled to the free use of the United States mails in the same manner as the executive departments of the Government. In carrying out the provisions of this section, the Conservator may avail himself of the information, services, and facilities of any other governmental or quasi-governmental agency, subject to the consent of the executive authority of such other agency. The Conservator shall make an annual report to Congress at the commencement of each regular session thereof.

"(2) The Conservator shall appoint, and prescribe the duties of, such persons as are necessary for the enforcement of this section. The employment, compensation, and expenses of such persons shall be without regard to the provisions of other laws applicable to officers or employees of the United States and shall be governed solely by the provisions of this section, specific amendments thereto, and rules and regulations of the Conservator not inconsistent therewith. The Conservator shall determine and prescribe the manner in which his obligations shall be incurred and his disbursements and expenses allowed and paid. Attorneys appointed by the Conservator are authorized to act as counsel for the Conservator in any matter in which the Conservator is acting in any capacity authorized under the provisions of this section. The Conservator is authorized to conduct, supervise, and direct all litigation in the trial or appellate courts pertaining to the powers, functions, and duties authorized by the provisions of this section to be exercised and performed by him through such attorneys as may be designated by him for that purpose. Any power, function, or duty conferred or imposed upon the Conservator may be exercised and performed by a Deputy Conservator under the direction of the Conservator. During any vacancy in the office of Conservator, or during the absence or inability of the Conservator, the Acting Conservator shall exercise and perform all powers, functions, and duties conferred or imposed upon the Conservator.

"(3) The Conservator is hereby authorized and empowered to prescribe such rules and regulations as are necessary and proper to enable him effectively to exercise and perform the powers, functions, and duties conferred or imposed upon him by this section. The rules and regulations prescribed by the Conservator, and any alteration, amendment, or revocation thereof, shall be published in the Federal Register.

"(4) For the purpose of any investigation or examination which, in the opinion of the Conservator, is necessary and proper for a thorough study of any proposal or plan, or of any proposed allowance or payment of compensation or reimbursement, or is necessary and proper in the exercise or performance by him of the powers, functions, and duties conferred or imposed upon him by the provisions of this section, the Conservator, or any officer or employee designated by him, is empowered to administer oaths and affirmations, take evidence, and require by subpena or otherwise the attendance of witnesses and the production of any books, papers, or documents which the Conservator deems relevant or material to the inquiry. Such attendance of witnesses and the production of such books, papers, or documents may be required from any place in the United States or any Territory at any designated place of hearing. In case of contumacy by, or refusal to obey a subpena issued to any person, any Federal court (the term 'Federal court' having the same meaning in this section as when used in section 77B of this act, as amended) within the jurisdiction of which such person guilty of contumacy or refusal to obey is found or resides, upon application by the Conservator, may issue to such person an order requiring such person to appear before the Conservator, or officer or employee designated by him, there to produce books, papers, or documents, if so ordered, or there to give evidence touching the matter in question; and any failure to obey such order of the court may be punished by such court as a contempt thereof. No person shall be excused from attending and testifying or from producing books, papers, or documents in obedience to the subpena of the Conservator, or officer or employee designated by him, on the ground that the testimony or evidence required of him may tend to incriminate him or subject him to a penalty or forfeiture; but no individual shall be prosecuted or subjected to any penalty or forfeiture for or on account of any transaction, matter, or thing concerning which he is compelled, after having claimed his privilege against self-incrimination, to testify or produce evidence, except that such individual so testifying shall not be exempt from prosecution and punishment for perjury committed in so testifying.

"(c) In any proceeding now pending or hereafter instituted involving an individual debtor or a debtor corporation, the Conservator, when so appointed by the court in which the proceeding is pending, is authorized to exercise and perform the powers, functions, and duties which, by this act, as amended, are conferred or imposed upon any official designated in this act, as amended. In any equity receivership proceeding in any Federal court, the Conservator, when so appointed by such court, is authorized to exercise and perform any power, function, or duty which by this section he is authorized to exercise or perform in connection with proceedings involving an individual debtor or a debtor corporation. The Conservator, when exercising or performing any powers, functions, or duties conferred upon him by the provisions of this subdivision (c), shall not be required to furnish bond and shall have the right to appoint agents to assist him in the exercise or performance of such powers, functions, or duties.

"(d) In any proceeding under section 77B of this chapter, as amended, for the reorganization of a debtor corporation, the Conservator shall be deemed to be a party in interest within the provisions of subdivision (f) of such section 77B. The Conservator shall be entitled to be heard in any proceeding involving an individual debtor or a debtor corporation upon all questions with respect to which the debtor, any creditor or shareholder, or any intervening party in any such proceeding, may be heard. A proposal or plan in any proceeding involving an individual debtor or a debtor corporation may be proposed in the first instance by the Conservator.

"(e) In any proceeding involving an individual debtor or a debtor corporation, the debtor shall file a proposal or plan within 6 months of the entry of the order approving the petition or answer (as the case may be) as properly filed. In the case of any such proceeding pending on the date of enactment of this section, in the event such 6 months expires within 180 days from such date of enactment, the debtor shall file such proposal or plan within 60 days from the expiration of such 6 months, or if such 6 months has expired on or before such date of enactment, within 60 days from such date of enactment. The judge may from time to time extend the period within which a debtor is required to file such proposal or plan, but no single extension shall be for more than 90 days.

"(f) The Conservator shall be given due notice of all steps taken in connection with any proceeding involving an individual debtor or a debtor corporation; and there shall be transmitted to the Conservator a copy of the petition in such proceeding; the answer, if any; the order approving or dismissing a petition; any order determining the time in which claims or interests of creditors may be filed or evidenced and allowed; any order for the division of creditors and stockholders in.to classes according to the nature of their respective claims and interest; all orders extending the time in which such claims may be filed or evidenced; any order for a hearing issued upon the report of a special master; any order fixing the time for confirming the proposal or plan; any order confirming the proposal or plan; any order directing the liquidation of the debtor's assets; any order adjudging the corporation to be solvent or insolvent; any order dismissing the proceeding; and such other papers filed in the proceedings as the Conservator may request be transmitted to him.

"(g) (1) Prior to the confirmation of any proposal or plan by the court, the following provisions shall be complied with—

"(A) The proposal or plan shall have been filed in the proceeding and a copy thereof transmitted forthwith to the Conservator.

"(B) In accordance with such orders or rules of procedure as such court may prescribe, the Conservator shall have been allowed a reasonable time for a thorough study of the proposal or plan.

"(C) In case such proposal or plan is disapproved by the Conservator, after the statement of disapproval and recommendations, or after the acceptances, have been filed in the proceeding, whichever occurs later, a reasonable time shall have been allowed within which any creditor or stockholder who has theretofore accepted such proposal or plan shall be allowed to withdraw his acceptance, and the trustee, custodian, or receiver, or, in case no trustee, custodian, or receiver has been appointed, the debtor, shall have transmitted to each such creditor and stockholder a copy (which shall be furnished by the Conservator) of such statement of disapproval and recommendations, together with a notice stating that such creditor or stockholder has the right to withdraw his acceptance within such time.

"(2) The Conservator shall disapprove any proposal or plan unless he finds that it is fair and equitable. The Conservator shall, so far as possible, determine what securities, if any (including certificates of deposit therefor), have been purchased or transferred after the commencement, or in contemplation of, the proceedings and what consideration was paid therefor, and, if in his opinion the provision made for such securities in the proposal or plan is unfair or inequitable in any material respect, he shall disapprove such proposal or plan. In case of an approval by the Conservator he shall file a statement of approval in the proceeding. In case of a disapproval by the Conservator he shall file a statement of disapproval of the proposal or plan and his recommendations with respect thereto, and shall take such further action, not inconsistent with the provisions of this section as may be proper, in order that a fair and equitable proposal or plan may be developed.

"(h) (1) No committee shall solicit, or permit the use of its name to solicit, from any creditor or stockholder of an individual debtor or debtor corporation (A) any proxy, authorization, or power of attorney to represent any such creditor or stockholder in a proceeding involving such individual debtor or debtor corporation, or any matter relating to such proceeding, or to vote in his behalf for or against, or to consent to or reject, any proposal or plan in connection with such proceeding; or (B) the deposit by any such creditor or stockholder of any securities under a committee agreement; or (C) the acceptance or consent of any such creditor or stockholder to, or rejection of any such creditor or stockholder of, a proposal or plan in connection with such proceeding;

"(2) No petition praying for leave to intervene in any such proceeding, filed by or on behalf of any committee, shall be granted; and

"(3) In any proceeding involving a debtor corporation, no payment to a committee, or to any member or employee thereof, or attorney therefor, in his capacity as such, of any compensation, reimbursement, or other amounts, for services or expenses incident to the reorganization or in connection with the proceeding, whether or not such payment is to be made by the debtor or by any corporation acquiring the debtor's assets, shall be approved or allowed, unless—

"(i) There have been filed with the Conservator the committee agreement under which such committee is acting, or proposing or purporting to act, a statement regarding the membership of such committee and the affiliations of the members thereof and counsel therefor; a statement of the reasons for and the circumstances surrounding the selection of each member of such committee and counsel therefor; and a statement of any changes in such agreement, membership, or counsel made prior to such solicitation, and of the reasons for and the circumstances surrounding such change;

"(ii) The provisions or limitations of such agreement and the membership of such committee, together with any such changes in such provisions or limitations or such membership, have been approved by the Conservator, or the action of the Conservator disapproving such provisions, limitations, or membership, or any such changes, has been set aside as provided in subdivision (i) (4) of this section;

"(iii) There have been filed with the Conservator, at such times as the Conservator may direct, but not more frequently than once every 30 days, a statement of the activities, receipts, and expenditures of the committee for the period not covered by previous statements (including, in the case of the first statement, the period since the date of formation of the committee), and a statement showing the securities (including certificates of deposit therefor) directly or indirectly acquired or sold by the committee or any member thereof during such period, the dates of any such acquisition or sale, the amounts paid in pursuance of any such acquisition, and the amounts received in pursuance of any such sale; and

"(iv) There have been filed with the Conservator copies of advertisements, letters of solicitation, and all other communications addressed to depositors either before or after the commencement of the proceeding.

"Whoever aids, abets, counsels, commands, induces, or procures any committee to violate any provision of this subdivision (h) shall upon conviction be fined not more than $5,000 or imprisoned for not more than 2 years, or both.

"(i) (1) The Conservator shall either approve or disapprove the provisions or limitations of any such committee agreement and the membership of any such committee. In case of an approval by the Conservator, he shall file a statement of approval in the proceeding. In case of a disapproval by the Conservator, he shall file a statement of disapproval in the proceeding, together with his reasons therefor.

"(2) The Conservator shall approve the provisions or limitations of a committee agreement (including any changes therein) unless he finds that such provisions or limitations (A) deny, or place undue restrictions upon, the right of depositors to withdraw their securities from such committee; (B) deny to depositors the right to withdraw their acceptances to a proposal or plan in accordance with the provisions of subdivision (g) of this section; (C) give to such committee power to hypothecate such securities for any purpose other than that of paying actual and reasonable expenses of the committee (as such expenses may be defined by rules and regulations of the Conservator); (D) give to such committee the right to dispose of such securities without notice and affirmative consent subsequent to such notice; (E) entitle such committee to an unreasonable amount for the purpose of paying fees, expenses, or other remuneration to members of such committee, attorneys for the committee, or any person performing services for such committee; (F) otherwise prejudice the formulation or acceptance of a fair and equitable proposal or plan.

"(3) The Conservator shall approve the membership of a committee (including any change therein) unless he finds (A) that any member of such committee is or has been directly or indirectly connected with the debtor, issuer, underwriter, or guarantor of the securities deposited with the committee and that such connection prejudices the formulation or acceptance of a fair and equitable proposal or plan; (B) that the membership of such committee otherwise gives rise to a conflict of interest prejudicial to the formulation or acceptance of a fair and equitable proposal or plan; (C) any member of such committee has previously violated any of the provisions of subdivision (h) of this section; or (D) that any advertisements, letters of solicitation, or other communications addressed to depoistors are or have been misleading.

"(4) Any committee or member thereof aggrieved by the action of the Conservator disapproving the provisions or limitations of a committee agreement, or membership of such committee (including any changes in such agreement or membership), may obtain a review of such action in the court in which the proceeding is pending by filing in such court, within 30 days after the filing by the Conservator of his statement of disapproval, a written petition praying that the action of the Conservator be modified or set aside in whole or in part. A copy of such petition shall be forthwith served upon the Conservator and thereupon the Conservator shall certify and file in the court a transcript of the record upon which the action complained of was taken. Upon the filing of such transcript such court shall have exclusive jurisdiction to affirm, modify, or set aside such action, in whole or in part. No objection to the action of the Conservator shall be considered by the court unless such objection shall have been urged before the Conservator or unless there were reasonable grounds for failure so to do. If application is made to the court for leave to adduce additional evidence, and it is shown to the satisfaction of the court that such additional evidence is material and that there were reasonable grounds for failure to adduce such evidence before the Conservator, the court may order such additional evidence to be taken before the Conservator and to be adduced in such manner and upon such terms and conditions as to the court may seem proper. The Conservator may modify his findings as to the facts, by reasons of the additional evidence so taken, and he shall file such modified or new findings, and his recommendation, if any, for the modification or setting aside of his original action. The judgment and decree of the court affirming, modifying, or setting aside, in whole or in part, any such action of the Conservator, shall be final, subject to review by the circuit court of appeals and by the Supreme Court of the United States as provided by law in other cases.

"(j) (1) Prior to the allowance or payment of any compensation or reimbursement (except fees and commissions allowed as compensation for services pursuant to sections 40, 48, and 52 of this act, as amended, and except amounts provided for in subdivision (l) of this section), to whomsoever paid or to be paid, whether or not by the debtor or by any corporation acquiring any debtor's assets, the Conservator, in accordance with such rules of procedure as the court may prescribe, shall have been allowed a reasonable time for the investigation and examination in respect of the proposed allowance or payment provided for in paragraph (2) of this subdivision.

"(2) The Conservator shall before the expiration of such time either approve or disapprove the proposed allowance or payment, either in whole or in part. During such time the Conservator shall conduct an investigation and examination in respect of each item of the proposed allowance or payment, and if he finds as a result of such investigation and examination that any such item (A) in case it is to be paid by the debtor or any corporation acquiring the debtor's assets, should not be charged against the debtor or such corporation, or (B) whether or not it is to be so paid (i) exceeds the value of the services rendered, or is otherwise unreasonable, or (ii) constitutes reimbursement for expenses not actually incurred, or compensation for services not actually rendered, or (iii) is to be or has been paid to any person or committee which has purchased or sold securities of the debtor (including certificates of deposit therefor) during the pendency or in contemplation of the proceeding, he shall disapprove such item. In case of an approval by the Conservator he shall file a statement of approval in the proceeding. In case of a disapproval by the Conservator he shall file a statement of disapproval, together with his objections to the item disapproved, and his recommendations with respect thereto which in his opinion may be necessary.

"(k) In any proceeding involving an individual debtor or a debtor corporation, wherein a trustee, custodian, or receiver (other than the Conservator) has been appointed, and where, under the provisions of section 48, as amended, of this act, such trustee, custodian, or receiver would be entitled to receive for his services in such proceeding an amount which by itself or when added to other amounts received by him during the same calendar year for services performed by him as a trustee, custodian, or receiver in any such proceeding, will exceed $10,000, the court shall not allow to such trustee, custodian, or receiver compensation in any amount which by itself or when added to such other amount will exceed $10,000.

"(l) The Conservator shall be entitled to the costs of administration, supervision, and services in the performance or exercise by him of his powers, functions, and duties under the provisions of this act, as amended; such costs shall be equitably allocated to, assessed against, and payable out of the property of the debtors in such amount or amounts as shall be determined by the Conservator and approved by the judge and shall be in lieu of all fees to which the Conservator would otherwise be entitled by law. The funds derived from such costs, as well as all funds coming into the possession of the Conservator in any capacity in which he is authorized to act under the provisions of this section, shall be deposited with the Treasurer of the United States, subject to the order of the Conservator, or in any regular Government depositary or in any national banking association, or in any State bank, the deposits of which are insured under the provisions of section 12B of the Federal Reserve Act, as amended: Provided, however, That any deposits in any national banking association or in any State bank in excess of the amount insured under the provisions of section 12B of the Federal Reserve Act, as amended, shall be secured by bond satisfactory to the Conservator or by the deposit of United States bonds or other securities satisfactory to the Conservator with the Treasurer of the United States for the safekeeping and prompt payment of the funds so deposited and such funds shall not be construed to be Government funds or appropriated moneys.

"(m) There is hereby authorized to be appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $2,000,000, which shall be available for expenditure by the Conservator in connection with the carrying out of the powers, functions, and duties authorized to be exercised and performed by him under the provisions of this section."

SEPARABILITY CLAUSE

SEC. 2. If any provision of this act, or the application thereof to any person or circumstances, is held invalid, the remainder of this act, and the application of such provision to other persons or circumstances, shall not be affected thereby.

Mr. FULLER (interrupting the reading of the bill). Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the further reading of the bill be dispensed with.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Arkansas?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the committee amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Committee amendment: Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

"That chapter VIII, as amended, of the act entitled 'An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States', approved July 1, 1898, is amended by adding at the end of such chapter the following new section:

"'SEC. 77C. (a) As used in this section—

"'(1) The term "individual debtor" means a debtor as used in section 74 of this chapter, whose liabilities include obligations in a total amount of $250,000, or over, which are evidenced by at least 10 credit instruments severally owned by not less than 10 persons.

"'(2) The term "proposal" means a proposal for a composition or extension as used in section 74 of this chapter.

"'(3) The term "debtor corporation" means a debtor as used in section 77B of this chapter, whose liabilities include obligations in a total amount of $250,000, or over.

"'(4) The term "plan" means a plan of reorganization as used in section 77B of this chapter.

"'(5) The phrase "proceeding involving an individual debtor or a debtor corporation" means a proceeding under section 74 or 77B (as the case may be) of this chapter, as amended.

"'(6) The term "securities" means interests in or claims against any individual debtor or a debtor corporation.

"'(7) The term "committee" means any person or group of persons acting, or proposing or purporting to act, for or in behalf of owners or holders of securities for the purpose of protecting, preserving, and forwarding, or either, the common interests of owners or holders of such securities in connection with, or in contemplation of, any proceeding involving an individual debtor or a debtor corporation.

"'(8) The term "committee agreement" means any agreement by which the owner or owners, or holder or holders of securities confer upon a committee authority to act for or in their behalf.

"'(9) The term "depositor" means any person conferring upon a committee power to act for or in his behalf.

"'(10) The term "Commission" means the Securities and Exchange Commission.

"'(b) (1) The Commission is hereby charged with the duty of aiding the courts in the administration of the laws by the exercise and performance of the various powers, functions, and duties conferred or imposed upon it by this section.

"'(2) The Commission is hereby authorized and empowered to prescribe such rules and regulations as are necessary and proper to enable it effectively to exercise and perform the powers, functions, and duties conferred or imposed upon it by this section. The rules and regulations prescribed by the Commission, and any alteration, amendment, or revocation thereof, shall be published in the Federal Register.

"'(3) For the purpose of any investigation or examination which, in the opinion of the Commission, is necessary and proper for a thorough study of any proposal or plan, or of any proposed allowance or payment of compensation or reimbursement, or is necessary and proper in the exercise or performance by it of the powers, functions, and duties conferred or imposed upon it by the provisions of this section, the Commission, or any officer or employee designated by it, is empowered to administer oaths and affirmations, take evidence, and require by subpena or otherwise the attendance of witnesses and the production of any books, papers, or documents which the Commission deems relevant or material to the inquiry. Such attendance of witnesses and the production of such books, papers, or documents may be required from any place in the United States or any Territory at any designated place of hearing. In case of contumacy by, or refusal to obey a subpena issued to any person, any Federal court (the term "Federal court" having the same meaning in this section as when used in section 77B of this act, as amended) within the jurisdiction of which such person guilty of contumacy or refusal to obey is found or resides, upon application by the Commission, may issue to such person an order requiring such person to appear before the Commission, or officer or employee designated by it, there to produce books, papers, or documents, if so ordered, or there to give evidence touching the matter in question; and any failure to obey such order of the court may be punished by such court as a contempt thereof. No person shall be excused from attending and testifying or from producing books, papers, or documents in obedience to the subpena of the Commission, or any member thereof, or officer or employee designated by it, on the ground that the testimony or evidence required of him may tend to incriminate him or subject him to a penalty or forfeiture; but no individual shall be prosecuted or subjected to any penalty or forfeiture for or on account of any transaction, matter, or thing concerning which he is compelled, after having claimed his privilege against self-incrimination, to testify or produce evidence, except that such individual so testifying shall not be exempt from prosecution and punishment for perjury committed in so testifying.

"'(c) In any proceeding under section 77B of this chapter, as amended, for the reorganization of the debtor corporation, the Commission shall, upon the filing of a notice of its appearance, be deemed to be a party in interest, with the right to be heard on all matters arising in such proceeding, and be deemed to have intervened in respect of all matters in such proceeding with the same force and effect as if a petition for that purpose had been filed with and allowed by the court. The Commission shall be entitled to be heard in any proceeding involving an individual debtor or a debtor corporation upon all questions with respect to which the debtor, any creditor or shareholder, or any intervening party in any such proceeding, may be heard. A proposal or plan in any proceeding involving an individual debtor or a debtor corporation may be proposed in the first instance by the Commission.

"'(d) In any proceeding involving an individual debtor or a debtor corporation, the debtor shall file a proposal or plan within 6 months of the entry of the order approving the petition or answer (as the case may be) as properly filed. In the case of any such proceeding pending on the date of enactment of this section, in the event such 6 months expires within 180 days from such date of enactment, the debtor shall file such proposal or plan within 60 days from the expiration of such 6 months, or if such 6 months has expired on or before such date of enactment, within 60 days from such date of enactment. The judge may from time to time extend the period within which a debtor is required to file such proposal or plan, but no single extension shall be for more than 90 days.

"'(e) The Commission shall be given due notice of all steps taken in connection with any proceeding involving an individual debtor or a debtor corporation; and there shall be transmitted to the Commission a copy of the petition in such proceeding; the answer, if any; the order approving or dismissing a petition; any order determining the time in which claims or interests of creditors may be filed or evidenced and allowed; any order for the division of creditors and stockholders into classes according to the nature of their respective claims and interest; all orders extending the time in which such claims may be filed or evidenced; any order for a hearing issued upon the report of a special master; any order fixing the time for confirming the proposal or plan; any order confirming the proposal or plan; any order directing the liquidation of the debtor's assets; any order adjudging the corporation to be solvent or insolvent; any order dismissing the proceeding; and such other papers filed in the proceedings as the Commission may request be transmitted to it.

"'(f) (1) Prior to the confirmation of any proposal or plan by the court, the following provisions shall be complied with—

"'(A) The proposal or plan shall have been filed in the proceeding and a copy thereof transmitted forthwith to the Commission.

"'(B) In accordance with such orders or rules of procedure as such court may prescribe, the Commission shall have been allowed a reasonable time for a thorough study of the proposal or plan and shall have made a report thereon to the court, or has notified the court that it will not file a report, or until the expiration of such reasonable time for the filing of the report, whichever first occurs.

"'(2) Any reports which the Commission is required to make by this section shall contain such findings or comments as the Commission may deem necessary or appropriate with respect to the fairness and equity of the treatment accorded various classes of security holders and claimants by terms of the proposal or plan; the adequacy of the steps taken to discover, disclose, and collect all assets of the issuer or of individual security holders or claimants, including causes of action against officers and directors of the issuer and underwriters of its securities; the reasonableness and propriety of the fees and the expenses of the reorganization charged or to be charged, directly or indirectly, against the assets of the issuer or against security holders; whether or not the provision which has been made in the proposal or plan for management of the reorganized issuer is in the interests of the security holders; and any other phase or phases of the plan. The Commission shall notify the court before which any proceedings for reorganization are pending of all action taken by it under this act in respect of any such proposal or plan.

"'(g) (1) No committee or other person shall solicit, or permit the use of its or his name to solicit, from any creditor or stockholder of an individual debtor or debtor corporation (A) any proxy, authorization, or power of attorney to vote in behalf of any creditor or stockholder for or against, or to consent to or reject, any proposal or plan in connection with such proceeding; or (B) the deposit by any such creditor or stockholder of any securities under a committee agreement which has, or may have, the effect of an acceptance of or consent to a proposal or plan; or (C) the acceptance or consent of any such creditor or stockholder to, or rejection of any such creditor or stockholder of, a proposal or plan in connection with such proceeding—

"'(i) Until a report, if any, thereon has been made by the Commission and the court has authorized the submission of such proposal or plan to the creditors or stockholders; and

"'(ii) Unless there shall have been transmitted to such creditors and stockholders (A) a proposal or plan or proposals or plans authorized to be submitted, together with a summary thereof; (B) the opinion of the court, if any, approving the proposal or proposals or the plan or plans or a summary thereof approved by the court; (C) the report, if any, filed in the proceeding by the Commission as provided in subsection (e) of this section, or a summary thereof prepared by the Commission; and (D) such other matters as the court may deem necessary or desirable for the information of the creditors or stockholders.

"'(2) Unless the conditions specified in paragraph (1) of this subsection are satisfied, no person shall solicit any acceptance, conditional or unconditional, of a proposal or plan, or any authority, conditional or unconditional, to accept a proposal or plan, whether by proxy, deposit, power of attorney, or otherwise; and any acceptance or authority given, procured, or received in violation of the provisions of paragraph (1) of this subsection shall be invalid. Whoever aids, abets, counsels, commands, induces, or procures any committee to violate any provision of paragraph (1) of this subdivision (g) shall upon conviction be fined not more than $5,000 or imprisoned for not more than 2 years, or both.

"'(h) (1) The Commission shall either approve or disapprove the provisions or limitations of any such committee agreement and the membership of any such committee. In case of an approval by the Commission, it shall file a statement of approval in the proceeding. In case of a disapproval by the Commission, it shall file a statement of disapproval in the proceeding, together with its reasons therefor.

"'(2) The Commission shall approve the provisions or limitations of a committee agreement (including any changes therein) unless it finds that such provisions or limitations (A) deny or place undue restrictions upon, the right of depositors to withdraw their securities from such committee; (B) give to such committee power to hypothecate such securities for any purpose other than that of paying actual and reasonable expenses of the committee (as such expenses may be defined by rules and regulations of the Commission); (C) give to such committee the right to dispose of such securities without notice and affirmative consent subsequent to such notice; (D) entitle such committee to an unreasonable amount for the purpose of paying fees, expenses, or other remuneration to members of such committee, attorneys for the committee, or any person performing services for such committee; (E) otherwise prejudice the formulation or acceptance of a fair and equitable proposal or plan.

"'(3) The Commission shall approve the membership of a committee (including any change therein) unless it finds (A) that any member of such committee is or has been directly or indirectly connected with the debtor, issuer, underwriter, or guarantor of the securities deposited with the committee and that such connection prejudices the formulation or acceptance of a fair and equitable proposal or plan; (B) that the membership of such committee otherwise gives rise to a conflict of interest prejudicial to the formulation or acceptance of a fair and equitable proposal or plan; (C) any member of such committee has previously violated any of the provisions of subdivision (g) of this section; or (D) that any advertisements, letters of solicitation, or other communications addressed to depositors are or have been misleading.

"'(4) Any committee or member thereof aggrieved by the action of the Commission disapproving the provisions or limitations of a committee agreement, or membership of such committee (including any changes in such agreement or membership), may obtain a review of such action in the court in which the proceeding is pending by filing in such court, within 30 days after the filing by the Commission of its statement of disapproval, a written petition praying that the action of the Commission be modified or set aside in whole or in part. A copy of such petition shall be forthwith served upon the Commission and thereupon the Commission shall certify and file in the court a transcript of the record upon which the action complained of was taken. Upon the filing of such transcript such court shall have exclusive jurisdiction to affirm, modify, or set aside such action, in whole or in part. No objection to the action of the Commission shall be considered by the court unless such objection shall have been urged before the Commission or unless there were reasonable grounds for failure so to do. If application is made to the court for leave to adduce additional evidence, and it is shown to the satisfaction of the court that such additional evidence is material and that there were reasonable grounds for failure to adduce such evidence before the Commission the court may order such additional evidence to be taken before the Commission and to be adduced in such manner and upon such terms and conditions as to the court may seem proper. The Commission may modify its findings as to the facts, by reason of the additional evidence so taken, and it shall file such modified or new findings, and its recommendation, if any, for the modification or setting aside of its original action. The judgment and decree of the court affirming, modifying, or setting aside, in whole or in part, any such action of the Commission, shall be final, subject to review by the circuit court of appeals and by the Supreme Court of the United States as provided by law in other cases.

"'(i) (1) Prior to the allowance or payment of any compensation or reimbursement (except fees and commissions allowed as compensation for services pursuant to sections 40, 48, and 52 of this act, as amended, and except amounts provided for in subdivision (k) of this section), to whomsoever paid or to be paid whether or not by the debtor or by any corporation acquiring any debtor's assets, the Commission, in accordance with such rules of procedure as the court may prescribe, shall have been allowed a reasonable time for the investigation and examination in respect of the proposed allowance or payment provided for in paragraph (2) of this subdivision.

"'(2) The Commission shall before the expiration of such time make a report to the court on the proposed allowance or payment.

During such time the Commission shall conduct an investigation and examination in respect of each item of the proposed allowance or payment, and if it finds as a result of such investigation and examination that any such item (A) in case it is to be paid by the debtor or any corporation acquiring the debtor's assets, should not be charged against the debtor or such corporation, or (B) whether or not it is to be so paid (i) exceeds the value of the services rendered, or is otherwise unreasonable, or (ii) constitutes reimbursement for expenses not actually incurred, or compensation for services not actually rendered, or (iii) is to be or has been paid to any person or committee which has purchased or sold securities of the debtor (including certificates of deposit therefor) during the pendency or in contemplation of the proceeding, it shall so report such item.

"'(j) In any proceeding involving an individual debtor or a debtor corporation, wherein a trustee, custodian, or receiver has been appointed, and where, under the provisions of section 48, as amended, of this act, such trustee, custodian, or receiver would be entitled to receive for his services in such proceeding an amount which by itself or when added to other amounts received by him during the same calendar year for services performed by him as a trustee, custodian, or receiver in any such proceeding, will exceed $10,000, the court shall not allow to such trustee, custodian, or receiver compensation in any amount which by itself or when added to such other amount will exceed $10,000.

"'(k) The Commission shall be entitled to the costs of administration, supervision, and services in the performance or exercise by it of its powers, functions, and duties under the provisions of this act, as amended; such costs shall be equitably allocated to, assessed against, and payable out of the property of the debtors in such amount or amounts as shall be determined by the Commission and approved by the judge and shall be in lieu of all fees to which the Commission would otherwise be entitled by law. The funds derived from such costs, as well as all funds coming into the possession of the Commission in any capacity in which it is authorized to act under the provisions of this section, shall be deposited with the Treasurer of the United States.'"

Mr. FULLER (interrupting the reading of the committee amendment). Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the further reading of the committee amendment be dispensed with.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Arkansas?

There was no objection.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment to the committee amendment, which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment to the committee amendment offered by Mr. SABATH: Page 24, line 9, after "(c)", insert "(1)"; and after line 23, insert the following paragraph:

"(2) In any proceeding now pending or hereafter instituted involving an individual debtor or a debtor corporation, the Commission, when so appointed by the court in which the proceeding is pending, is authorized to exercise and perform the powers, functions, and duties which, by this act, as amended, are conferred or imposed upon any official designated in this act, as amended. In any equity receivership proceeding in any Federal court, the Commission, when so appointed by such court, is authorized to exercise and perform any power, function, or duty which, by this section, it is authorized to exercise or perform in connection with proceedings involving an individual debtor or a debtor corporation. The Commission, when exercising or performing any powers, functions, or duties conferred upon it by the provisions of this subdivision (c), shall not be required to furnish bond and shall have the right to appoint agents to assist it in the exercise or performance of such powers, functions, or duties."

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Chairman, some gentlemen say that all of the provisions of our bill are contained in the so-called Chandler bill. Our bill goes much further, and we are trying to reach in our bill the activities of these crooked committees and all cases that are pending now in the courts, so that the rights and interests of these unfortunate bondholders and stockholders may be protected. This amendment that I have offered gives the Securities and Exchange Commission the right to act when designated by a court as a receiver or trustee, eliminating the high fees and unnecessary costs that are brought about by the so-called professional receivers and trustees in these matters. Later on in the bill we endeavor to, and the bill, if passed, will, eliminate those excessive fees in the future. We do not desire to take jurisdiction away from the court. However, these excessive fees and costs will be eliminated if the court who finally has the power will see fit in the interest of economy and justice in matters of that kind to appoint the Securities and Exchange Commission. In view of the fact that they have made an investigation and examination and report to the court, we feel that it will simplify the procedure and to a greater degree safeguard the interest of all.

Mr. WALTER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SABATH. Yes.

Mr. WALTER. In the event the gentleman's amendment is adopted, how many additional employees will be required to carry out the provisions?

Mr. SABATH. I do not know; but it will not cost the Government any money at all, because in our bill we provide that the actual cost of such an investigation and examination, and so on, shall be borne by the estate, and the cost will be nominal and may not be 10 percent or even 5 percent of what it costs the property owners or bondholders or security holders today.

Mr. WALTER. And the more employees that are added to the Securities and Exchange Commission, the greater will be the cost of the administration of the estate, and the less there will ultimately be derived by the poor unfortunates we are trying to protect.

Mr. SABATH. Oh, no, there will not be any additional employees added, with the exception of those men who will be actually required to do this work, and their compensation will be repaid to the Securities and Exchange Commission from the estate and I assure the gentleman the cost will be less than 10 percent of what the costs have been and what they are today. If the gentleman from Pennsylvania would see some of the tremendous costs in these reorganizations, he would agree that this amendment is necessary, together with those other amendments that I am going to offer, to eliminate in the future the exorbitant fees and costs and charges that have been imposed against these properties that these unfortunate bondholders are obliged to pay.

Mr. SAUTHOFF. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SABATH. Yes.

Mr. SAUTHOFF. Does the gentleman's amendment put any ceiling on the fees that they are to receive?

Mr. SABATH. Oh, yes, we restrict that. For the information of the House let me say that in our bankruptcy law there is a provision where only 1 percent can be charged for trustees' fees where the amount exceeds $10,000, and the fees of the attorneys and receivers and trustees are restricted. When these gentlemen put over on the Congress section 77B we believed that that was for the best interests and for economy and for protection, but in 77B they very nicely and cleverly eliminated the restriction on the fees and the sky was and is the limit. In many instances there are three-, four-, and five-hundred-thousand-dollar fees on some properties that fell into the hands of these committees.

Mr. WALTER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman point out where in his bill there is a limitation placed on the fees that may be charged?

Mr. SABATH. We have a limitation on page 33, subdivision (j).

Mr. WALTER. Where is the provision with respect to the payment by the estate?

Mr. SABATH. I assure the gentleman that there is a provision that the cost shall not be borne by the Government, but by the estate. This provision may be found on page 33 and provides that the Commission shall be entitled to the costs of administration supervision and services in the performance of its duties, such costs to be assessed against and payable out of the property of the debtors in such amount as shall be determined by the Commission and approved by the judge, and the funds derived from such costs to be deposited with the Treasurer of the United States.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. We all remember when the Securities and Exchange Commission legislation was pending, that its passage received severe opposition. The law was in operation not more than a year when those who bitterly opposed the passage of the bill were loud in their praise of the manner in which the law had been administered under the very skillful direction of the then chairman, Joseph P. Kennedy.

As chairman of the Commission, Mr. Kennedy commanded the attention and respect of all persons for the constructive and courageous manner in which he administered the law, doing so in accordance with the intent of Congress and in the able manner in which he performed the duties of his office. At great expense to himself he gave the Government the benefit of his profound knowledge and broad experience. Under his leadership, he and the members of the Commission have shown the workability of the law which established the Securities and Exchange Commission, the necessity for its passage, and in a manner which thoroughly protects the interest of the public and commands the respect and support of the great majority of those covered by the law. Mr. Kennedy resigned after he had laid the foundation for the success of the Commission, to return to private business, and later was recalled into service when he was appointed Chairman of the United States Maritime Commission, in which capacity he is laying the foundation for the future success of this Commission.

Most of those who bitterly opposed the bill when it was pending would equally bitterly oppose a bill to bring about its repeal. The Securities and Exchange Commission has been rendering fine service in the administration of the law. The legislation was necessary to correct certain abuses—abuses in connection with the issuance and sale of stock and of bonds; abuses that existed not only in connection with the original issue of stock and bonds but in connection with reissues and of recapitalization of corporations.

This bill is simply a step in another direction, which is a necessary consequence of the passage of the original bill creating the Securities and Exchange Commission.

I am glad to note that the bill has been changed from its original provisions by placing the jurisdiction of this bill under the Securities and Exchange Commission. I want to congratulate the special committee, under the chairmanship of the distinguished gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SABATH], for the wonderful work they have done; for the service they have rendered in disclosing to the American public the abuses in connection with this particular activity. The sale of bonds, in the main, is to persons of average means. The Securities and Exchange Commission, in protecting the American investing public against any misrepresentations, against false statements in connection with corporate organizations, must see that the interest of the investor is safeguarded and protected. It is reasonably necessary, and it is proper that the American investing public be protected. That is what this bill also aims to do. I am not concerned with all of its details. There may be some provision here and there therein that I am not in agreement with, but I am not concerned with that. I am concerned with the objective of this bill, its worthy and deserving objective. It is proper and fitting that the operation of the law should be placed within the jurisdiction of the Securities and Exchange Commission.

I want to congratulate the special committee, and I want to congratulate the chairman of the special committee for the great work they have rendered to the American public in disclosing the abuses in connection with the type of reorganizations covered by the pending bill, and the vicious methods employed, as a result of which millions of American citizens in the past have been mulcted out of hundreds of millions of dollars. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. WALTER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last two words.

Mr. Chairman, I dislike very much to be compelled to oppose the amendment just offered by the distinguished chairman of this committee, who has worked so diligently in an endeavor to recommend legislation that will enable us to work out a way to perhaps save something of the wreckage of investments made by a great many of our people, but I feel it is my duty to do so because during the many months of discussion, not only of this bill but of the Chandler bill, all of the matters contained in this bill were very thoroughly discussed, and it was agreed there would be nothing additional offered. We now have an amendment before us that members of the committee have not had an opportunity to study. We do not know whether its adoption will bring about a situation which we complained of or not, namely, that in the original Sabath bill it would have been necessary to appoint approximately 4,000 conservators, and our committee felt very much opposed to any legislation that would have brought about a result such as that.

The bill which we are considering today was reported by the Committee on the Judiciary upon my motion and at the time I made this motion I felt I knew entirely what the scope of the bill would be.

I trust the House will vote against this amendment.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WALTER. Yes; surely.

Mr. SABATH. This amendment was in the bill that was reported last year, H. R. 12064. That is all it is. It strengthens the bill to some extent and does not in any way affect the bill. I know that if the gentleman would have time to read it he would not oppose it. All we are interested in is to offer two more amendments to the bill which I believe are necessary to make the bill workable and that will not in any way affect the bill.

Mr. WALTER. Mr. Chairman, I decline to yield further. Had this amendment been necessary, I am quite certain the distinguished chairman could have convinced the members of the Judiciary Committee of the importance of the matter contained in this amendment, and that the bill would then have been reported with that subject matter in the bill. I do not feel that amendments offered at a time like this ought to be adopted, particularly in view of the fact that with the exception of the $10,000 limitation placed upon fees, the Chandler bill covers in the section dealing with 77B identically the same subject matter.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WALTER] has expired.

The question is on the adoption of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SABATH] to the committee amendment.

The question was taken; and on a division there were ayes 19 and noes 30.

So the amendment to the amendment was rejected.

Mr. O'MALLEY. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment to the committee amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. O'MALLEY to the committee amendment: Page 21, lines 1 and 8, strike out "$250,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$100,000."

Mr. O'MALLEY. Mr. Chairman, I offer my amendment to reduce the amount which must be involved in order that the authority and power granted in this bill may be operated in behalf of the bondholder. I do that because as a member of the special investigating committee hundreds of people had bonds in buildings on which the capitalization was $100,000 or less. There were bond houses throughout the country that took a number of buildings and joined them all together and put $100,000 on each of them. These will escape investigation unless my amendment is adopted. If the limit, $250,000, remains in the bill as written, properties under that amount will escape and the Securities and Exchange Commission will not be able to aid bondholders in such properties by investigating the protective committees. I want to say as one member of the special committee—I will be frank—let us take the hair down this afternoon—I do not agree that this bill goes far enough to help the bondholders, but our committee had no power to bring a bill before this House. We had to take what we could get; we had to take this bill or nothing if we hoped to get legislation this session; and we have been 2½ years trying to reach this stage in the interest of protecting 10,000,000 bondholders. This amendment will strengthen the bill. My amendment was not submitted to any committee in advance, but I do say that unless this bill takes in properties that are capitalized at $100,000 all we shall do will be to skim the surface and not reach the fellows who have been operating most of the rackets of these protective committees.

Mr. WALTER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. O'MALLEY. I yield.

Mr. WALTER. How many additional cases will be involved?

Mr. O'MALLEY. If we put the limit at $100,000, it will bring in possibly 20,000 cases, many, of course, not yet in the courts.

Mr. WALTER. How many additional employees would be required to handle these 20,000 cases?

Mr. O'MALLEY. I say to the gentleman that I do not know, but if we have employees working for the Government on these cases they can well afford to watch the interest of the little fellow instead of reading newspapers in their offices. One agency of Government can protect people who have lost millions of dollars because Congress has not acted before this even though they may need a few more employees to do it.

Mr. McFARLANE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. O'MALLEY. I yield.

Mr. McFARLANE. The gentleman mentioned that it took his committee 2½ years to get this bill to the floor. I wonder if he will tell the House what has blocked it before.

Mr. O'MALLEY. The gentleman knows as well as I do that a bill designed to take some money away from a lot of fellows who have been operating in the shadowy field of high finance always has a hard time reaching the floor. I do not have to tell the gentleman why, he has been here as long as I have.

This bill is not everything we wanted, but we had to take what we could get in the hope that when it reached the floor we could put a few teeth in it. The amendment I have offered is necessary if the bill is to be of real good, the amount must be reduced from $250,000 to $100,000.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. MICHENER. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, it is all very well to make speeches such as that made by the gentleman who just preceded me. The whole afternoon has been taken up in a discussion of what has happened in the past. What we are attempting to do today is to write a prescription to cure an evil. These splendid speeches which wring our hearts and bring tears to our eyes will not, however, get any of this money back. The Judiciary Committee feels just as the gentleman feels so far as helping people is concerned, but we do not want to do any demagoguing. We want to write a bill that will get results.

Mr. O'MALLEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MICHENER. Not for the present.

The gentleman would reduce the limit from $250,000 to $100,000. The bonds of a concern capitalized at $100,000 are not, as a general rule, scattered all over the country. It is not always that the holders of the securities of concerns capitalized at $100,000 resort to protective committees. That is the first thing.

If we are going to write effective legislation, we must listen somewhat to the Securities and Exchange Commission, the people who are going to enforce the legislation. They tell us what kind of legislation can be enforced. I am ready to vote for that kind of a bill. They do not want the $100,000 limitation in the bill, for, they say, it would be impracticable, that it would not be workable, and it would require the employment of a great many additional employees. The Sabath committee wanted a conservator. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SABATH] told us about that on the floor. The bill originally provided for a conservator under the Comptroller of the Currency, but the Comptroller of the Currency in substance said, "Do not give us that; we are not qualified; we cannot do it. We would have to set up another bureau; we would have to set up a lot of professional receivers and trustees to go about the country"—something like the Sabath committee went about the country.

Mr. O'MALLEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MICHENER. No; I cannot yield.

The Committee on the Judiciary attempted to get results. We have attempted to do the best we could.

The gentleman from Wisconsin said Government workers might do something besides sitting around reading newspapers, but we must all realize that just any fellow reading a newspaper in any agency of the Government could be of no possible help in rendering the type of service here to be required. I know, and you know, that this amendment means another agency. As suggested by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WALTER], it would require a lot more employees.

There is no objection to the Sabath committee and the splendid work the Sabath committee has done. They have called attention to these things.

If they made a mistake, it is the mistake of leaving the impression with the people of the country that they are going to get back some of this money which has already been lost. The horse has been stolen. It is too bad the barn was not locked before, but you cannot get that horse back. We are trying in the Chandler bill to take care of everything that can be taken care of as suggested by the Sabath committee, and in a sensible, proper, and effective way.

Mr. O'MALLEY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MICHENER. I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. O'MALLEY. Will the gentleman explain, if $100,000 is too small an amount to put in this bill, why the Securities and Exchange Commission was given $100,000 as the base upon which it could start registrations and investigations in reference to stock and bond issues?

Mr. MICHENER. There is a whole lot of difference.

Mr. O'MALLEY. Will the gentleman tell me the difference?

Mr. MICHENER. If you are going to form a company and issue stock or bonds and the issue has to be passed upon, the set-up must be passed upon as well. If the gentleman were a practicing attorney at the present time he would not ask that question.

Mr. O'MALLEY. I may say to the gentleman I am not an attorney.

Mr. MICHENER. I suspected as much.

Mr. O'MALLEY. And I could say more on that, but I will not.

Mr. MICHENER. If the gentleman were an attorney and he had anything to do with the Securities and Exchange Commission at this time, he would know if he wanted to get authority to issue securities, he would have to prepare his set-up and no one else could prepare it. The facts warranting the bond issue must be presented to the Commission. The Commission's work will be entirely different under this proposed law.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. TOWEY. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, in opposing the amendment I want to give to the Committee some of the facts that arose in connection with this particular proposition. When originally proposed in the bill the figure was $50,000. It was pointed out to the committee that that was a very small amount and most of these bond issues—I am sure the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SABATH] will corroborate what I am saying—exceeds that amount.

We are trying to salvage the wreckage from this real-estate debacle. After the committee discussed this matter, we sent for the Securities and Exchange Commission in order to get their expert advice, and they told us that the figure we now have written in the bill of $250,000 was too low. They suggested a much higher amount. We finally agreed to compromise on $250,000.

If you attempt to bring it down to $100,000, the administrative machinery which will be necessary to carry this out and the creation of the bureaucracy which will follow will defeat the very worthy purpose of the bill.

I would like to know from the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SABATH], if the statistics are available, how many genuine real-estate bond issues his committee has under consideration in excess of $100,000 in amount? One of the members speaking for this bill said altogether to date, without any limitation as to amount, there are only 4,000 cases. I understood the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. O'MALLEY] to say there were 20,000 cases.

Mr. O'MALLEY. If the gentleman will yield, the gentleman from Arkansas said their were 4,000 cases pending in the courts. That is cases that have come into court on petition under 77B proceedings. There are thousands and thousands of cases that have never gone near the courts, which cases have been operating under a protective committee for years, which we hope by this bill to force in, if possible, under reorganization proceedings.

If you are going to exclude anything under $250,000 you are, of course, going to cut down the work the Commission will have to do; but there are thousands of cases in which a bond issue over $100,000 was issued. If you will read the record of the hearings had before our committee, you will find in there a list of first and second mortgages upon which there were bond issues of $100,000, $150,000, and upward. If we set this figure at $250,000 before they can get in, it will be a very large amount. The gentleman in his own city knows of many apartment buildings in which the equity is $100,000 and there was a $100,000 bond issue placed on the property and those bonds have gone bad.

Mr. TOWEY. My professional experience has been very broad in this particular field. In fact it covered a period of 10 years. I do not think there are that many bond issues that the gentleman speaks of; that is, approximately, 15,000, of around the sum of $100,000.

Mr. O'MALLEY. I said it was my opinion there must be that many in the brackets between $100,000 and $200,000. There may be a great many under that. Let us speak of the ones now between $100,000 and $250,000.

Mr. TOWEY. I have not the basic statistics that probably the gentleman's committee has. I can only give the considered judgment of the Securities and Exchange Commission, which has dealt with this problem, and that Commission states it will be impossible to administer the act if we set such low amount as $100,000.

Mr. O'MALLEY. I may say to the gentleman, if you leave it at $250,000, all of us are going to have to write back to the thousands of bondholders in our respective districts, "It is too bad. Nothing can be done for you under this bill, because the bill only takes in property on which there is a bond issue of at least $250,000."

[Here the gavel fell.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. O'MALLEY] to the committee amendment.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment, which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. SABATH: Beginning on page 27, line 16, strike out all of subdivision (g) and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"(g) (1) No committee or other person shall solicit, or permit the use of its name to solicit, from any creditor or stockholder of an individual debtor or debtor corporation (A) any proxy, authorization, or power of attorney to represent any such creditor or stockholder in a proceeding involving such individual debtor or debtor corporation, or in any matter relating to such proceeding, or to vote in his behalf for or against, or to consent to or reject, any proposal or plan in connection with such proceeding; or (B) the deposit by any such creditor or stockholder of any securities under a committee agreement; or (C) the acceptance or consent of any such creditor or stockholder to, or rejection of any such creditor or stockholder of, a proposal or plan in connection with such proceeding;

"(2) No petition praying for leave to intervene in any such proceeding filed by or on behalf of any committee shall be granted; and

"(3) In any proceeding involving a debtor corporation, no payment to a committee, or to any member or employee thereof, or attorney therefor, in his capacity as such, of any compensation, reimbursement, or other amounts, for services or expenses incident to the reorganization or in connection with the proceeding, whether or not such payment is to be made by the debtor or by any corporation acquiring the debtor's assets, shall be approved or allowed, unless—

"(i) There have been filed with the Commission the committee agreement under which such committee is acting, or proposing or purporting to act, a statement regarding the membership of such committee and the affiliations of the members thereof and counsel therefor; a statement of the reasons for and the circumstances surrounding the selection of each member of such committee and counsel therefor; and a statement of any changes in such agreement, membership, or counsel made prior to such solicitation, and of the reasons for and the circumstances surrounding such change;

"(ii) The provisions or limitations of such agreement and the membership of such committee, together with any such changes in such provisions or limitations or such membership, have not been disapproved by the Commission, or the action of the Commission disapproving such provisions, limitations, or membership, or any such changes, has been set aside as provided in subdivision (h) (3) of this section;

"(iii) There have been filed with the Commission, at such times as the Commission may direct, but not more frequently than once every 30 days, a statement of the activities, receipts, and expenditures of the committee for the period not covered by previous statements (including, in the case of the first statement, the period since the date of formation of the committee), and a statement showing the securities (including certificates of deposit therefor) directly or indirectly acquired or sold by the committee or any member thereof during such period, the dates of any such acquisition or sale, the amounts paid in pursuance of any such acquisition, and the amounts received in pursuance of any such sale; and

"(iv) There have been filed with the Commission copies of advertisements, letters of solicitation, and all other general communications addressed to depositors either before or after the commencement of the proceeding.

"(4) The statements required by this subdivision to be filed with the Commission shall be in such form, and shall contain such information and documents as the Commission may by rules and regulations prescribe as necessary to enable it to make the findings provided for in subdivision (h).

"(5) Whoever aids, abets, counsels, commands, induces, or procures a committee to violate any provision of paragraph (1) of this subdivision, or in any statement required by this subdivision to be filed with the Commission, to make any untrue statement of a material fact, or to omit to state a material fact required to be stated or necessary to make the statements made not misleading, shall upon conviction be fined not more than $5,000 or be imprisoned for not more than 2 years, or both."

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Chairman, I greatly appreciate the many complimentary statements made about me personally and the acknowledgment of the accomplishments and activities of the select committee, but I assure you I would rather prefer if the House would see fit to adopt the amendment which would actually give the Securities and Exchange Commission supervision and control of these protective committees.

Mr. Chairman, this is the only other amendment I shall offer.

Under the bill as reported by the Committee on the Judiciary, there are no enforcible provisions relating to the regulation of protective committees. The very heart of the amendment now proposed is an attempt to regulate the activities of such protective committees. It is not necessary for me to state how these committees have been organized by the houses of issue. Many of these committees have already obtained hundreds of thousands of dollars of fees. If this provision is not adopted, the chances are the so-called protective committees will collect in fees hundreds of millions of dollars under the depositary agreements, and these sums will all be taken from the residue of the estates or the pieces of property.

I say to you frankly I consider this a very important amendment. You have heard it said there are thousands of cases in the courts, but do you know there are more properties in the hands of the protective committees in cases which have not reached the courts? And over which even courts have no jurisdiction? There are committees which have 300, 400, and 500 properties but have not turned over a single cent of interest to the bondholders for the last 6 or 7 years. They have even failed to pay the taxes, notwithstanding the fact that they have collected tremendous revenues from many of these large and valuable properties.

This provision has the approval of many judges and of many lawyers, and even of Olive G. Ricker, chairman of the standing committee on commercial law and bankruptcy of the American Bar Association, who wrote me on December 21, 1936, that she feels the former bill should have passed to remedy admitted evils.

Mind you, none of the members of these committees has a dollar of its own invested in these properties, yet they are managing and controlling them. When they get through, they will own the properties, and I fear the bondholders will not receive a single dollar of the money they have invested. The President of the United States has endorsed the principle of this bill, and many judges have written me urging that these committees should be controlled somehow, in some way. I have their letters here, but I am not going to take up your time in reading them.

I regret to differ with the gentleman from Tennessee, Mr. CHANDLER, and with the committee in their statement that the bill as reported by them will protect and safeguard the rights of the people and will control the activities of the protective committees.

I fear that they have been imposed upon by the gentlemen representing the various associations composed of receivers, referees, and special masters, the same as they drafted and advocated the passage of amendments 74 and 77B, and where they finally restricted the provision pertaining to fees.

I am, indeed, pleased that the gentlemen who have spoken on the floor of the House, many of them Republicans and others, came to me the last few days and congratulated me and stated that I am entitled to the appreciation of the House, as well as the country, upon the service I have rendered, but I really would prefer your vote for this amendment even to these complimentary remarks, which, indeed, I do appreciate to the bottom of my heart. Otherwise, I feel my work will not have been completed and not appreciated by the House if it should fail to receive your approval.

I realize that I am at a disadvantage as few Members can be prevailed upon to vote for any amendment that is opposed by the committee reporting a bill, but I again repeat that if the gentlemen of that committee had studied and weighed the provisions in my amendment, they would be honor bound to accept it, thus giving the Securities and Exchange Commission additional power.

Personally, I regret that the Commission felt this would be a great burden to them and too great a task and that the administration would criticize them in going too far, but in view of the Nation-wide interest and that States are unable to cope with the situation and in view of the fact that tremendous sums and many properties could be saved by the Government, that it would tend to eliminate many abuses and reestablish confidence in our courts, I urge that this amendment be accepted.

I regret that due to conditions I have been unable to complete the final report of the committee, but I assure the House that it will be done as soon as time will enable me to submit the consummation of this tremendous task.

Before I close I desire once more to thank the members of the select committee, its counsels, and investigators, and the staff who served so loyally during the committee's 2½ years' investigation in my task to bring about the enactment of legislation that would protect these unfortunate bondholders and security holders to prevent in the future these shameful and outrageous practices that in the past has mulcted our most thrifty and representative citizens of their life's savings.

Mr. HOBBS. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, may I direct the attention of the Committee to page 27 of the bill now pending? Beginning with line 16, you will find language which was written by the chairman of our subcommittee in conference with the Securities and Exchange Commission, which is better language, more succinct, and more to the point than the provisions of the amendment which the distinguished chairman of the select committee is now seeking to substitute for the provisions in the bill.

In spite of the fact, which we do not challenge in the least, that some judges may favor what the gentleman from Illinois wants, we submit that it is an abortive attempt to substitute the Securities and Exchange Commission for the United States district judges, and this is not what either the Securities and Exchange Commission or the Committee on the Judiciary recommends to this body. Therefore, we ask you to vote down this amendment. I believe the sanity of this House may be depended upon to vote down this kind of back-door treatment of a bill brought in here in good faith.

May I ask the distinguished gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. O'MALLEY] if I correctly understood him to say that the reason this bill had taken 2½ years to reach the floor was the influence of some moneyed power, directly or indirectly?

Mr. O'MALLEY. I do not think the gentleman quotes me exactly; but, since he has asked me the direct question, I may state that I said it took 2½ years to get this bill to the floor because there were a lot of people who did not want a bill like this passed.

The gentleman knows, if he was present at the hearings, that the representatives of the bankruptcy committee of the American Bar Association were most strenuously opposed to the original Sabath bill and to the bill which followed it. They spent a great deal of railroad fare in coming down here and presenting many arguments, and in filing many fine briefs of a large number of pages, which I assume cost a lot of money. These people were opposed to a bill like this. We had numerous hearings over a period of 2½ years. Some of the lawyers who came down here and opposed the bill have been tied up with these reorganizations and with the protective committees. If the gentleman wants to verify this he can look at the list of witnesses we have had before us and then look down the roster of the bankruptcy committee of the American Bar Association. These are the influences which were opposed to the bill. They advanced many objections to it and asked that the bill be rewritten.

Mr. HOBBS. What I am asking the gentleman is whether or not he meant to intimate that these forces had played upon the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. O'MALLEY. The gentleman knows I would not intimate that. I think the Committee on the Judiciary in its wisdom has brought out a bill which it thinks will solve the problem. I believe the committee has done an excellent job, and I should be the first to praise it.

Mr. HOBBS. I appreciate the gentleman's statement. I did not think the gentleman had such an idea, but I wanted to clarify his former statement so that it might not be misunderstood.

Mr. O'MALLEY. I may say to the gentleman I am sure he will admit that if in certain minor details I do not happen to agree with the committee it is my privilege to offer amendments.

Mr. HOBBS. Of course; and I know the gentleman from Wisconsin is entirely too fair to want to have remain in the mind of any Member of the House such an intimation, which I believe is foreign to his thought.

Mr. O'MALLEY. I am sure the gentleman understands I did not mean to make such an intimation.

Mr. DOCKWEILER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOBBS. Yes, sir.

Mr. DOCKWEILER. Is it possible under the terms of this bill for the Commission to regulate the fees of trustees under the terms of trust indentures, as well as the fees of attorneys, receivers, and others who might be given fees?

Mr. HOBBS. Not at all. The idea of the Securities and Exchange Commission and the idea of all of the proponents of this bill, so far as I know, is that the Securities and Exchange Commission shall act in an advisory capacity to the court having jurisdiction of the pending reorganization, as an investigatorial arm of the court, if you please. This provision is not intended to give the Commission control over the court. It is called in to render its expert service and give its expert advice to the court.

[Here the gavel fell.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SABATH].

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. O'MALLEY. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. O'MALLEY: Page 32, line 17, after the word "subdivision", insert a colon and the following: "Provided, That in no case shall the fees exceed 10 percent of the gross income of the estate during the time for which said fees are claimed."

Mr. O'MALLEY. Mr. Chairman, one of the things that our investigating committee found to be among the greatest evils of this protective-committee racket was the way in which lawyers and financiers and accountants and everybody else connected with these cases reached their hands into the pockets of the bondholders' estate. We provide in this bill that the Securities and Exchange Commission shall pass upon the fees that these people get out of handling the corpse, which is the defunct corporation.

I propose to limit the entire take of all these gentlemen concerned in reorganization proceedings to 10 percent of the gross income of the property during the time these experts and these great legal minds are administering the property.

There is not anyone in this House who should object to putting a limit upon what these fellows that we are trying to control by this bill take away from the bondholders.

I want to point out that a judge in my State refused to allow fees to any intervener in a 77B case who was not able to prove that he had added something to the estate. Of course, this judge was reversed by the court of appeals, a regrettable decision, in my opinion, on the part of the court of appeals. This judge said that no one who intervened in these cases had any right to reach in and take out fees if he could not show he had added something to the estate.

If my amendment is adopted, it will do one simple thing. It will prevent all those participating in the management of this property or participating in a 77B reorganization from being allowed by the Commission any more than 10 percent of the gross income.

Mr. REES of Kansas. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. O'MALLEY. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. REES of Kansas. What would the gentleman do in cases where there is no income?

Mr. O'MALLEY. I will tell the gentleman that from the lawyers I met while a member of the special committee, and from the accountants I met, they never take cases of that kind into court, and so I would not worry about that. I know the bondholders do not worry about it.

Mr. REES of Kansas. The gentleman will concede, I am sure, that there may be quite a large amount of value in an estate, but no income.

Mr. O'MALLEY. Then I would say in those cases—and most of them would be where they could not find a lawyer—the bondholder or some small-town lawyer with a bond of his own on the property would usually take care of them, and such cases usually get into the courts if the courts can do any good.

Mr. COLDEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. O'MALLEY. I yield.

Mr. COLDEN. What is the gentleman going to do about the attorneys and appraisers and receivers of Los Angeles who get $4.75 where the investor gets $1?

Mr. O'MALLEY. I will say to the gentleman from California that is the very reason I have offered my amendment limiting the amount to 10 percent. I do not want to leave it to the Securities and Exchange Commission or anybody else to let these vultures come in with claims greater than that. The Securities and Exchange Commission will have a hard job as it is, and we do not want to add to their work by compelling them to fight with these fellows over fees, which is their principal stake in the racket.

Mr. COLDEN. I may say to the gentleman that I heartily approve of the amendment.

Mr. O'MALLEY. I am pleased that the gentleman approves of the amendment, and I hope I will get more votes on this amendment than I did on the other one.

Mr. DOCKWEILER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

I want to ask the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. CHANDLER] whether he thinks under the terms of this bill there will be produced a reduction in the fees charged by the trustees under trust indentures. I understand that most trust indentures provide that a certain percentage can be charged by them if the estate they have control of goes into receivership, bankruptcy, or the like. Will this bill produce a reduction in the fee that is usually a fixed fee?

Mr. CHANDLER. This bill, in my judgment, will not produce a reduction in that fee. That is a fee which comes out of the amount of money realized by the trustee in the indenture rather than from the estate in reorganization.

The purpose of the gentleman's amendment, as I understand it, is to limit the fees allowed out of the estate in reorganization to a maximum of 10 percent.

Mr. DOCKWEILER. Under the terms of this bill you are not able to touch the regular fee that would be allowed a trustee under a trust indenture for his services under the trust indenture.

Mr. CHANDLER. That is correct.

Mr. DOCKWEILER. That is fixed by contract and the trust indenture.

Mr. CHANDLER. Yes; and in the bill which the Judiciary Committee has reported, the question of indenture trustees is covered, but not in this bill, because this bill deals specifically with two phases of bankruptcy matters.

Mr. O'MALLEY. And the fee of the trustee is covered in the original trust indenture.

Mr. CHANDLER. And the trustee fee in a reorganization proceeding is covered at page 33, paragraph (j), with a maximum of $10,000.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment to the committee amendment offered by the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. O'MALLEY].

The amendment to the committee amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the adoption of the Committee amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. Under the rule, the Committee will rise.

Accordingly the Committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. BUCK, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that Committee had had under consideration the bill H. R. 6963, and that, under House Resolution 300, he reported the same back to the House with an amendment adopted in the Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER. Under the rule, the previous question is ordered. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the amended bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

BONNEVILLE PROJECT

Mr. MANSFIELD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H. R. 7642) to authorize the completion, maintenance, and operation of the Bonneville project for navigation, and for other purposes, with a Senate amendment thereto, disagree to the Senate amendment, and agree to the conference asked.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas asks unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill H. R. 7642, the Bonneville project, with a Senate amendment thereto, disagree to the Senate amendment, and agree to the conference asked by the Senate. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The Chair appointed the following conferees: Mr. MANSFIELD, Mr. GAVAGAN, Mr. DEROUEN, Mr. SEGER, and Mr. CARTER.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

By unanimous consent leave was granted to Mr. SABATH, Mr. DIES, Mr. COLLINS, and Mr. CHURCH to extend their own remarks in the RECORD.

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members have 5 legislative days within which to extend their remarks on the bill H. R. 6963, just passed.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

REVISION OF THE NATIONAL BANKRUPTCY ACT

Mr. GREENWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I call up House Resolution 301, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

House Resolution 301

Resolved, That upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of H. R. 8046, a bill to amend an act entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States", approved July 1, 1898, and acts amendatory thereof and supplementary thereto; and to repeal section 76 thereof and all acts and parts of acts inconsistent therewith. That after general debate, which shall be confined to the bill and continue not to exceed 2 hours, to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on the Judiciary, the bill shall be read for amendment under the 5-minute rule. At the conclusion of the reading of the bill for amendment, the Committee shall rise and report the same to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted, and the previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit, with or without instructions.

Mr. FULLER. Mr. Speaker, before the gentleman from Indiana begins his address will he yield to me?

Mr. GREENWOOD. I yield.

Mr. FULLER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the provision in the rule for 2 hours of debate be changed to 1 hour.

Mr. MICHENER. Is that satisfactory to the gentleman from Tennessee?

Mr. CHANDLER. That is satisfactory.

The SPEAKER. The Chair suggests to the gentleman from Indiana that he offer such an amendment to the rule, if he desires.

Mr. GREENWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. MAPES].

This resolution from the Committee on Rules provides for the consideration of the revision of the Bankruptcy Act, known as the Chandler bill. This is a very important piece of legislation which a subcommittee of the Committee on the Judiciary has spent much time upon, and as to which I express my appreciation and compliment the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. CHANDLER] and others of his subcommittee. It deals with a revision of the bankruptcy law which investigation has shown is very much needed. The last bankruptcy bill was passed in 1898, almost 40 years ago, and there have been so many changes in our economic condition and in many features of the law, that many items in the law are obsolete and need severe amendment. There has been a great deal of corruption and of irregularity in the handling of bankruptcy estates in the Federal courts, and committees have demonstrated that the law should be fundamentally amended.

The matter has been investigated by committees of the American Bar Association, by committees appointed by the Federal courts, and by a subcommittee of the Committee on the Judiciary, with the assistance of the Securities and Exchange Commission, and the bill before us undertakes to submit those amendments which seem to be advisable. The bill itself carries many technical features. I believe it would be to the advantage of the consideration of the bill that very little time be taken upon the rule, so that the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. CHANDLER] and others on the committee may give the information that is desired.

I reserve the remainder of my time.

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DIRKSEN].

Mr. DIRKSEN. Mr. Speaker, there has been a lot of oracular wisdom here this afternoon about an alleged difference between the Chandler bankruptcy bill we are about to consider and the bill which we just passed. It was a beautiful exhibition of statements made upon the basis of hearsay. I heard somebody say that we have learned on reliable authority that the bills are the same, and that the bill just passed was nothing more than an empty testimony to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SABATH]. Others said that they had learned from creditable sources that the bills were not alike, so that I am satisfied that there must be some confusion in the minds of Members as to what these bills are. Well, as the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. O'MALLEY] would say, let us take down the hair and see. The so-called Sabath bill defines a debtor corporation as one with $250,000 of liabilities represented by at least 10 creditor interests. Then you will find that the word "shall" is used all through that bill, and that any documents filed in a bankruptcy court or Federal court must go to the Securities and Exchange Commission because they are made a party in interest. Along with everything else, this bill we just passed gave the Securities and Exchange Commission the power to actually initiate a plan of organization. You will find it on page 24. Now, let us look through this 250 pages of legal literature that we are going to consider right now. Look on the bottom of page 134 and see what it says. It says that "after the hearing, as provided in section 169 or section 170 of this act, and before the approval of any plan, as provided in section 174 of this act, the judge may, if the scheduled indebtedness of the debtor does not exceed $3,000,000, refer to the Securities and Exchange Commission for an advisory opinion."

In other words, if it is under $3,000,000 indebtedness, the judge may submit the matter to the Securities and Exchange Commission. If it is over $3,000,000, the judge shall do so. But what about all those under $3,000,000, who come within the compass of the $250,000 bracket in the bill we just passed? I have tried as hastily as possible to examine all this literature this afternoon that we are going to adopt after 1 hour of debate, and I suppose we ought to accept it on faith, because, after all, it represents a lot of earnest effort on the part of men who are qualified to do this job of revising the bankruptcy law. But I can find nothing there with respect to the power over committee organizations and limitations upon bondholders' committees.

The only reason I am taking this time is to dissipate the idea that grew up here this afternoon that these two bills are identical, when, as a matter of fact, they are not. The gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. CHANDLER] has stated on the floor in response to questioning of mine earlier this afternoon that there were points of difference with respect to fees and otherwise. Now I find this tremendous difference as far as jurisdiction is concerned, and there must be differences with respect to the power of the Commission over bondholders' protective committees; and that ought to be ample answer to a lot of these oracular statements that were made this afternoon about the previous bill being but a gesture.

Mr. LUTHER A. JOHNSON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I yield.

Mr. LUTHER A. JOHNSON. As I understand it, this is a reorganization of the entire bankruptcy law?

Mr. DIRKSEN. Yes.

Mr. LUTHER A. JOHNSON. Is the gentleman sufficiently familiar with the bill to tell us whether or not there is anything done in the bill with reference to the limitation of fees and expenses incurred in the administration of bankrupt estates? My experience as a lawyer has been that the costs of administration and the fees allowed on many of the smaller estates that get into bankruptcy have been so large that they have taken up the entire assets of the estate and nothing is left for distribution.

Mr. DIRKSEN. I am in precisely the same position that the gentleman is. My mind, no matter how agile it may be, is bouncing around these 250 pages of assorted ideas, and I want to say it will take weeks of constant, painstaking study before any Member of this House can go through and see what is in that bill, and we are going to have to accept it on faith from the Judiciary Committee.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Illinois has expired.

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Speaker, I yield the gentleman 1 additional minute.

Mr. FULLER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I yield.

Mr. FULLER. Is it not a fact that the real-estate bond investigation committee bill was introduced almost 2 years prior to this bill, and it was considered by the Judiciary Committee and favorably passed last year, and also this year, before the bill (H. R. 8046) now being considered was introduced?

Mr. DIRKSEN. I think the gentleman is quite right.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman has again expired.

Mr. GREENWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I offer a committee amendment to the resolution.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. GREENWOOD: Page 1, line 11, after the word "exceed", strike out "two" and insert "one."

The committee amendment was agreed to.

Mr. GREENWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the adoption of the resolution.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

APPROPRIATION FOR CONSTRUCTION OF SMALL RESERVOIRS UNDER FEDERAL RECLAMATION LAW—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. GREEVER submitted a conference report and statement on the bill (H. R. 2512) to authorize an appropriation for the construction of small reservoirs under the Federal reclamation law, for printing in the RECORD.

REVISION OF THE NATIONAL BANKRUPTCY ACT

Mr. CHANDLER. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H. R. 8046) to amend an act entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States", approved July 1, 1898, and acts amendatory thereof and supplementary thereto; and to repeal section 76 thereof and all acts and parts of acts inconsistent therewith.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill H. R. 8046, with Mr. BUCK in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the first reading of the bill will be dispensed with.

There was no objection.

Mr. CHANDLER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. HOBBS].

Mr. HOBBS. Mr. Chairman, it is with a great deal of joy and pride that I address the House in the Committee of the Whole this afternoon. For I wish to pay tribute where tribute is due, to render unto Caesar at least one of the things that are Caesar's—a slight word of praise to one of our most beloved Members. I refer to the distinguished gentleman from Tennessee, Hon. WALTER CHANDLER, who has done a piece of work in the short time he has been a Member of this House the like of which has not been seen in this sphere in 40 years. [Applause.]

This is the first attempt at a general, thoroughgoing revision of the bankruptcy law of this Nation since it was first written as a temporary measure in 1898. Not only has this distinguished expert in the field of bankruptcy law given of himself unstintedly for 2½ years to this work, but in addressing himself to the problem he proceeded in the wisest way imaginable. He summoned to his aid the experts of the Nation on the subject of bankruptcy.

For more than 2 years men like James A. McLaughlin, professor of law, Harvard University, and member of the National Bankruptcy Conference; Watson B. Adair, member of the National Bankruptcy Conference, also chairman of the conference committee of the National Association of Referees in Bankruptcy; David Teitelbaum, representing the bankruptcy committee of the Association of the Bar of the City of New York; Reuben G. Hunt, member of the National Bankruptcy Conference; W. Randolph Montgomery, attorney for the National Association of Credit Men; Jacob I. Weinstein, member of the National Bankruptcy Conference; Charles True Adams, referee in bankruptcy, eastern division, northern district of Illinois; Clarence O. Sherrill, president, American Retail Federation; R. P. Shealey, Washington counsel for National Retail Credit Association; Harry Zalkin, attorney at law, New York City; Harold Remington, attorney at law, New York City; Homer J. Livingston; M. R. Sturtevant, chairman, committee on bankruptcy, American Bankers Association; Commissioner William O. Douglas, Securities and Exchange Commission; Aubrey Barbour; C. F. Baldwin, representing the National Association of Credit Men; Valentine J. Nesbit, referee in bankruptcy, Birmingham, Ala.; Charles Banks, member of the National Bankruptcy Conference; Edwin S. S. Sunderland, member, committee on bankruptcy, American Bar Association, and member of the National Bankruptcy Conference; Alfred N. Heuston, representing the bankruptcy committee of the Bar Association of the City of New York; John Gerdes, chairman, committee on bankruptcy and reorganization, Trade and Commerce Bar Association, New York; Irving L. Ernest, New York; Percival E. Jackson, New York; Hon. Arthur H. Kent, Assistant General Counsel, Treasury Department; Martin Riger, associate attorney, Securities and Exchange Commission; Hon. John C. Knox, United States district judge, southern district of New York; have been giving of their best thought to the subject, and expressing it to the subcommittee. Out of this background has grown this bill—a monument to their devoted, self-sacrificing service.

I do not believe that there is one word in this 290-page bill which has not had the scrutiny of some of the very best minds in that field in America. It is an achievement worthy of unusual note when a bill comes in from that sort of source. And those men back of it have given enough time to the subject really to do the job in a most creditable way. It comes here with the unanimous report of the entire Judiciary Committee. There is no dissent!

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. HOBBS. Yes, sir.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. Did these experts have a slant in favor of the debtor, the bankrupt, or in favor of the creditor?

Mr. HOBBS. They had a slant both in favor of the debtor and in favor of the creditor, and diametrically opposed to those vultures who have been hovering around our bankruptcy courts seeking to prey upon both bankrupt and creditor. That has been the pole star which has guided the deliberations of this committee throughout the whole 2½ years of its deliberations. [Applause.]

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOBBS. Of course.

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. Answering the question just propounded by the gentleman from Colorado, if the gentleman will permit me as a member of the subcommittee, I may state that, as the gentleman from Alabama well knows, creditors and debtors both have appeared before the committee. The hearings have been open to all parties interested in the subject of bankruptcy in any way, and there has been no restriction whatsoever, no attempt to curtail testimony. The hearings have been fair in every respect.

Mr. HOBBS. I thank the distinguished gentleman from Nebraska, a valued member of our committee and of the subcommittee on bankruptcy, for that statement, which is absolutely true.

Please let me point out one of the provisions of this admirable bill, which expands the law to cover a long-felt need. It charges the courts with the duty of acting as the fiscal agents to delinquent wage earners who wish to pay their debts in installments. It gives such debtors a stay of proceedings, a living allowance to their families meanwhile, an equitable distribution of the remainder of their earnings to their creditors, and a chance to avoid the stigma of bankruptcy.

Mr. ROMJUE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOBBS. Certainly.

Mr. ROMJUE. I would be very glad if the gentleman would point out the specific instances in which the present law is changed.

Mr. HOBBS. It would be utterly impossible. I assure the gentleman from Missouri, Judge ROMJUE, I would love to do anything I could, but in a bill of this magnitude, within my limited time, it is utterly impossible. I suppose there have been not fewer than 1,000 changes.

This poor man's relief that we have set up in the bill particularly addresses itself to my sense of justice.

There are thousands of wage earners all over this land who desire to pay their honest debts but who cannot. For the first time we have the machinery set up in this bill whereby a court order is issued to stay all creditors' actions against a wage earner. A hearing is had, he sits at a table with his creditors and the judge, and they decide how much he and his family need to live on during the pendency of the settlement, and then in the most friendly way they arrive at how much he can pay into the treasury for the benefit of his creditors, to be distributed week by week. That has been done under a voluntary system that has grown up in Birmingham, Ala., under the blessing of the late Judge Grubb and the directing hand, brain, and heart of Judge Valentine J. Nesbit, where in some 2,000 cases it has worked out and the creditors have gotten dollar for dollar of what was due. In practically all of these cases bankruptcy has been avoided.

Mr. FISH. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that a quorum is not present. This is a monumental bill and the Members should be here during its consideration.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will count. (After counting.) One hundred and six Members are present, a quorum. The gentleman from Alabama will proceed.

Mr. HOBBS. Another feature of this bill which further illustrates the spirit in which the problem has been approached is this: Since 1898 we have run along with a very foolish proviso in our bankruptcy law which stipulated that a bankrupt could not apply for a discharge at the time he filed his petition nor unless he made the application within 11 months.

The result has been, although very few people know it, that about half of those who file petitions in bankruptcy never are discharged from their obligations; and discharge is the only purpose of going into bankruptcy. We have taken the sane and sensible view, wiped out those restrictions, and provided that in his initial petition the bankrupt may apply for his discharge, which will be granted in due and ancient form, in due season. So, throughout this bill you will find instance after intance where expert advice has smoothed the way to justice and paved the paths to peace. We have the honor of presenting for your consideration today the most finished piece of legislative workmanship of modern times.

Mr. HOUSTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOBBS. Gladly.

Mr. HOUSTON. I wish to compliment the chairman of the subcommittee and the chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary for bringing in this bill, and to state that I have received over 100 letters from the State of Kansas, all for this bill, not one against it.

Not one letter have I received against it. It is the first bill of major importance to which I have not heard some objection. My constitutents have long since made up my mind how I should vote on this bill.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. CHANDLER. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman 1 additional minute.

Mr. HOBBS. Mr. Chairman, I want to say in conclusion that I hope this bill has been studied and that the exemplary report of the bill by the committee has been studied, and that the House is ready to put its sanction upon the very splendid work of the distinguished gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. CHANDLER], and all of his estimable colaborers, to whom I believe we owe a sincere vote of thanks, not only for ourselves, but for all debtors and creditors, of every size and description. The gentleman from Tennessee has done a big job well. I hope he may find that the lasting gratitude of this House, this Congress, and of the Nation is his. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. CHANDLER. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 10 minutes.

Mr. Chairman, I am really very much overwhelmed by what my good friend the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. HOBBS] has just stated. It is not deserved, therefore I am not going to pay serious attention to it. Of course, I appreciate his remarks and am appreciative of any statement of that kind. You know, he and I are twins, in that we were born on the same day in the same year, and I am proud to call him brother.

This is not my bill in any sense of the word, but, on the contrary, is the work of the House Judiciary Committee extending over a period of 4 or 5 years. It happens to have my name attached to it because when I came to Congress I introduced a bill to provide for a poor man's bankruptcy proceeding whereby a wage earner could pay his debts without being harassed by garnishments and attachments, similar to the law which the State of Wisconsin has recently passed, and somewhat along the line of that law. When I introduced that bill the chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary gained the impression I was active in the practice of bankruptcy law and assigned me the responsibility of working on this bill. That is how I happen to have the responsibility, and since that time, over a period of two and a half years, I have given some time and attention to the matter, with the active assistance of one of the most efficient committees in the House, the subcommittee on bankruptcy of the Judiciary Committee. It is as fine a body of men as I have ever worked with, just like this Congress.

The subject of bankruptcy is neither a pleasant nor an agreeable one, but this bill represents the discharge of an obligation of Congress, because the Constitution places on Congress the responsibility for passing uniform bankruptcy laws applicable all over the country. The States deprived themselves of the same right when they adopted section 10 of article I of the Federal Constitution providing that no State shall pass any law impairing the obligation of a contract. Bankruptcy is an impairment of such an obligation, and the right of impairment is given exclusively to Congress and, well, the Almighty. The States took from themselves the right to do what Congress can do; therefore you will see this bill is an effort to discharge one of the exclusive functions of the Congress.

This bill is a general revision of the act of 1898, passed nearly 40 years ago. Conditions have changed materially, and I need not tell you that. Many of the conveniences we are accustomed to at the present time were not in existence in 1898. There have been amendments to certain sections of the bankruptcy law at various times, but no substantial ones until the amendments of 1926, and the amendments required by the depression in 1932 and 1933, when the new concept of bankruptcy, that is, reorganization in bankruptcy, was introduced and became a part of the law of bankruptcy by sections 77, 77B, and 80.

Mr. Chairman, we have taken the Bankruptcy Act of 1898, as amended, and have gone through it paragraph by paragraph and have brought it down to date, so to speak, by modernizing its present sections. We did not change the section numbers, because the decisions of the courts refer to the existing sections of the act, and if we changed the section numbers it would encumber the work of the student, the lawyer, and the judge to a very serious extent and upset precedents and judicial construction. While this bill appears voluminous, so far as the number of sections are concerned, as you will see by the report, which is comprehensive, only a few words are changed in certain sections.

For example, we have brought into the bankruptcy court jurisdiction in admiralty proceedings, which never existed before, and which by reason of conflict of decisions has caused a good deal of confusion in the law.

We have taken the definitions in the first two sections and have brought them down to date, and also added new definitions, such as that of "relatives" to determine who are relatives within the provisions of this law. We have also tried to avoid the overlapping of certain acts of bankruptcy, the third and fourth acts of bankruptcy, for example.

We have tried to increase efficiency in the administration of bankruptcy by hastening the conclusion of proceedings, so that a man may be rehabilitated quickly. As the gentleman from Alabama has pointed out, as a fair sample of the work we have tried to do in this bill, we have provided that when a man files a voluntary petition in bankruptcy along with that petition goes an application for discharge from the obligations that he has scheduled in the bankruptcy petition, and, of course, all his debts have to be scheduled in the petition. Heretofore, a man would file a petition for adjudication in bankruptcy and would not be allowed to file an application for discharge for 30 days after adjudication, and then must do so within 12 months. In the meantime he would go off to the outside world, thinking he had cleared himself of his overburdening obligations.

In the course of 12 months, those obligations would rise up and haunt him, and this is particularly disastrous to the poor man. Now we have, as a part of the petition in bankruptcy itself, attached an application for discharge, and unless there is objection and a hearing following objection, the bankrupt is automatically discharged from his debts. This is a progressive step, especially as the whole purpose of bankruptcy is a discharge from the bankrupt's debts. The time has been shortened for meetings of creditors. Provision has been made for filing of schedules and statements of the assets and liabilities of the bankrupt prior to the first meeting. This applies particularly to business concerns where creditors have an interest in determining whether or not it is an entirely honest proceeding, with full disclosures.

We have gone through all of the procedural sections of the act and have tried to improve them and bring them down to date also. We move much faster than those of 1898. We have avoided trying to take sides with any group, any set of people, any association, or any organization desiring to further its own purposes. We have endeavored to protect the estate of the bankrupt against exorbitant fees and compensations. We have provided very strict regulation and control of the hearings to determine the reasonableness of fees which are allowed out of bankrupt estates. We have provided also steps to minimize evasions by bankrupts who do not want to be honest and who do not want to turn over their assets and their property, for the benefit of their creditors, as the law requires every bankrupt to do. A great many people have used the bankruptcy court as a fence to avoid their just obligations. We have tried to make this impossible, but at the same time have tried to protect and give a clean bill of health to the honest bankrupt who is overburdened by his obligations, and particularly to those whom this depression has overburdened, in order that we may give them a new, a fresh, and a clean start in life.

Not all the sections of the Bankruptcy Act have been changed. There are some sections which remain as they were, but those which have been changed have had to be rewritten in full, and this has added to the length of the bill. There are approximately 79 sections of the Bankruptcy Act. A few of these have been declared unconstitutional, but in general, this is about the number. In working out this new conception of bankruptcy known as reorganization in bankruptcy, we adopted the expansive system of numbering, which has been in effect in Congress for a number of years but has not been called into use, as I understand it, since the present Federal code was adopted. The system was put into effect to enable convenient changes and additions to laws with the passage of time. Therefore, after going through the old act section by section, we set about writing the reorganization or composition sections by the new method; that is, the section which is known as the section on corporate reorganization has been written so as to be in short sentences and simplified so that any person may take the chapter and read it instead of having to go through a quadratic equation in algebra in finding 1a2, 2a3, 3b1, and problems of that kind. We have tried to make the new law so plain that anyone can read and understand it.

Section 77B is the new chapter X and begins with section no. 101, and goes through section 276. Then we skip section numbers and go to section 301, and there we take up chapter XI, individual arrangements. Then we go another 100 sections and take up real-property arrangements. Then we begin the wage-earner proceeding at section 601.

There is not a single part of this work of rearranging the affairs of corporations and individuals that does not have particular requirements to meet each situation. The purpose is that those who seek the benefits of the charters, under proper hearings and consideration, may retain their property, readjust their obligations, and continue in business without entire loss of capital. The public has an interest in saving a valuable business and those employed in it.

This is a long bill and, of course, a great deal of work had to be done on it. It is something which Congress has to do, something which possibly should have been done a number of years ago. The Congress has tried ever since 1929 to complete study of this subject and has carried on extensive investigations and hearings to try to bring the law down to date. We are simply meeting the obligation of the Congress to provide efficient, fair, honest, and up-to-date bankruptcy statutes for those who are entitled to their benefits.

Mr. ROMJUE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CHANDLER. I yield to the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. ROMJUE. Under the present law, once the bankrupt has begun the procedure, after the lapse of a certain length of time he may file his application for discharge?

Mr. CHANDLER. The gentleman is correct.

Mr. ROMJUE. As I understand the gentleman's explanation, the procedure now, which I think is quite an improvement, is that the bankrupt makes his request for a discharge at the same time he puts in his application?

Mr. CHANDLER. That is correct.

Mr. ROMJUE. Now, this is automatic——

Mr. CHANDLER. Yes.

Mr. ROMJUE. But how much time must elapse before action can be taken?

Mr. CHANDLER. Action can be taken promptly unless there is objection.

Mr. Chairman, the bill is not as radical as some would have it, nor as conservative as others would wish. It is a composite, and deals with the subject from every viewpoint—the court and its administrative officers, the bankrupt, the creditor, the debtor, the public, and the economist. The House Judiciary Committee has written the report so that each section is explained, each change pointed out, and each new provision covered, and we earnestly hope and believe that the bill will meet the approval of the House.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. MICHENER. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 5 minutes.

Mr. Chairman, I am not going to take any time explaining this bill. It is technical and no superficial explanation will be very helpful. The gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. CHANDLER] has stated the objectives and it would take several hours to discuss all of the bill's provisions. However, I do want to call the attention of the House to the committee report. This report is a valuable document, and I suggest that Members get copies of the report and the bill and send to attorneys practicing bankruptcy law in your districts. In my time in Congress—and I think I have been tolerably diligent—I believe I have never seen accompany a bill a report so complete in every detail. The report will not be readily understood by those not familiar with the bankruptcy law, but one having any knowledge of the bankruptcy law will appreciate it.

The bankruptcy law is entirely different today from what it has been. A new concept of bankruptcy has been accepted during the last 4 or 5 years. The constitutional powers have been liberalized. In fact, permanent insolvency is not an essential before the protecting check of the bankruptcy court is available to the harassed debtor. The theory now is to conserve rather than liquidate the estate, give the debtor a chance to work out his financial difficulties and not destroy his business. No longer is it necessary to seek a discharge from one's debts, but a compromise can be worked out that is more advantageous to all concerned. Today bankruptcy under the law and under the holdings of the Supreme Court may mean composition. It means that which it did not mean at all a few years ago. It means that when financial evil days come upon one he may seek the aid of the bankruptcy court of the United States, and by this method may keep his creditors at bay until he has had time to regain his financial equilibrium. Possibly he may remain in possession of his property until his creditors are brought to a realization of the fact that perhaps there is more in it financially for them and that it is better for the bankrupt and for the country if the bankrupt is permitted to continue in his business and the creditors compromise their claims. This is what bankruptcy is today.

Mr. MASSINGALE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MICHENER. Yes.

Mr. MASSINGALE. I am just a little interested in what happens under the new provision of the law to the owner of the estate where bankruptcy proceedings have been begun in this respect. When you undertake to carry on the business of an individual, as you do corporate business in bankruptcy, does the individual himself manage it or do you turn it over to some trustee or conservator, or how do you take care of it?

Mr. MICHENER. It is taken care of by proper officers under the direction of the court. That was a very controversial question in the committee, and I believe that the bill provides the best solution.

I hope this bill will pass. I hope it will pass unanimously and at once, because it is a bill that should not be amended on the floor. No technical measure should be. This bill has the unanimous support of every member of the committee. Of course, the bill is a composite, and necessarily represents some honest compromises. There is not a dissenting idea, as I take it, about the passage of the bill—something that very seldom happens—and as suggested by the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. CHANDLER], this is the fruition and the work of not only days and months, but of several years of honest toil by those honestly interested in a good bankruptcy law, that is, not only those in Congress but out of Congress as well. The only group who was not officially represented and did not officially sanction the bill was the bankrupt himself, and I believe the Judiciary Committee has taken very good care of that particular individual.

I want to join in complimenting our subcommittee chairman. He is entirely too modest. To the worker belongs the credit. This is the Chandler bill. That gentleman knows every word in the bill and he knows its relation to the rest of the bill. I have been pleased to cooperate. Work of this nature is not spectacular, yet it is most important. Writing a formula for the reorganization of industry in times of distress is a fundamental task. [Applause.]

Mr. CHANDLER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WALTER].

Mr. WALTER. Mr. Chairman, during the course of the discussion of the last bill, as well as the present one, mention was made of the quashing of indictments against officials connected with the Philadelphia Co. for the Guaranteeing of Mortgages.

I do not know whether or not it was intended to reflect on the honesty, ability, or the integrity of the United States attorney or the representative of the Department of Justice who recommended to the court that the cases should be nolle prossed, but I wish to state that I think the nolle prossing of these cases was a great exhibition of courage. It was not an easy thing for these men to subject themselves to the sort of criticism they must have known their action would bring not only from certain Members of Congress but from the people who suffered losses as the result of the failure of the Philadelphia Co. for the Guaranteeing of Mortgages.

Recently the Philadelphia Record, editorially, commented upon the nolle prossing of these cases. I do not believe anywhere in America there is a more liberal newspaper than the Philadelphia Record, and I do not believe there is another newspaper in the United States that has been more zealous in its efforts to safeguard the interests of the common people and lead any fight for decency in Government and its institutions, and when that great newspaper comments, as it did, upon this nolle prossing, I think the criticism that came here today is entirely unwarranted.

For one I wish to take this opportunity of commending the courageous Assistant Attorney General, the Honorable Brien McMahon, and the United States attorney for the eastern district of Pennsylvania, the Honorable J. Cullen Ganey, in seeing that justice was done to the citizens who were indicted for purely technical violations of the laws committed in an endeavor to keep the company going during the chaotic period through which we were passing. They are not persecutors. They, indeed, are representatives of all of the people and are entitled to a great deal of credit. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. If no further time is desired to be used, the Clerk will read the bill for amendment.

The Clerk proceeded to read the bill.

Mr. HOBBS. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the further reading of the bill be dispensed with.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object, may I ask the gentleman a question? Although I have endeavored to familiarize myself with the bill, unfortunately I have been so engrossed in other work, as the gentleman knows, that I have been unable to find the provision relative to the restriction of fees in the present Bankruptcy Act. The present Bankruptcy Act restricts the fees in all bankruptcy proceedings. Has any change been made in that respect?

Mr. HOBBS. No change whatever.

Mr. SABATH. Those restrictions remain?

Mr. HOBBS. The same restrictions; yes.

Mr. SABATH. And do they apply also to the new provisions of the bill that have been added to the old act?

Mr. HOBBS. Yes.

Mr. SABATH. The provision would apply to all of them?

Mr. HOBBS. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. If there are no amendments, under the rule, the Committee rises.

Accordingly the Committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the Chair, Mr. BUCK, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that Committee had had under consideration the bill H. R. 8046, and pursuant to House Resolution 301, he reported the bill back to the House.

The SPEAKER. Under the rule the previous question was ordered. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mrs. NORTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD by printing therein an address delivered by me over the National Broadcasting system.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. MICHENER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. VOORHIS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

COMPENSATION OF CUSTODIAL SERVICE, POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 7415) to authorize payment of compensation to head charwomen, charwomen, and charmen of the custodial service of the Post Office Department, included in the Connery amendment to the Treasury and Post Office appropriation act (H. R. 4720) for the next fiscal year, and for other purposes, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That authorization be granted the Fourth Assistant Postmaster General to compensate all head charwomen, charwomen, and charmen of the custodial service of the Post Office Department $60 each in 12 consecutive monthly payments in addition to their regular hourly compensation for the next fiscal year, which sum has been included in the Connery amendment to the Treasury and Post Office appropriation act (H. R. 4720) and approved by both Houses.

This act shall apply to all head charwomen, charwomen, and charmen who have been regular employees of the custodial service of the Post Office Department since July 1, 1936.

With the following committee amendment:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

"That notwithstanding any provision of the Classification Act of March 4, 1923, as amended, the rate of pay for charmen and charwomen in the custodial service of the Post Office Department shall be 55 cents per hour, and the rate of pay for head charmen and head charwomen shall be 60 cents per hour, effective upon the passage of this act."

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to; and the bill, as amended, was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

The title was amended to read: "A bill to increase the rates of pay for charmen and charwomen in the custodial service of the Post Office Department."

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. CHANDLER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members have 5 legislative days in which to extend their own remarks on the bill H. R. 8046, passed this afternoon.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

INVESTIGATION OF JURISDICTION, PROCEDURE, ETC., OF UNITED STATES COURTS

Mr. HOBBS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of House Resolution 287, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

House Resolution 287

Resolved, That the Committee on the Judiciary, as a whole or by subcommittee, is authorized and directed to investigate the organization and operation of, and the administration of justice in, the courts of the United States inferior to the Supreme Court; the jurisdiction, both as to territory and subject matter; the procedure; rules of practice; and costs.

The committee shall report to the House during the present Congress the results of its investigation, together with such recommendations for legislation as it may deem advisable.

For the purposes of this resolution, the committee or any subcommittee thereof is authorized (1) to sit and act during the present Congress, at such times and places within the United States as it may deem necessary, whether or not the House is sitting, has recessed, or has adjourned; (2) to hold such hearings, to require the attendance of such witnesses, and the production of such books, papers, and documents, and to take such testimony as it may deem necessary; (3) to issue subpenas under the signature of the chairman of the committee, or any member designated by him which shall be served by any person designated by such chairman or member; and (4) to administer oaths to the witnesses, respectively, by the chairman or any member of any committee acting hereunder.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object. I did not understand the gentleman's request.

Mr. CHURCH. Mr. Speaker, I object. Let us know what this is.

Mr. HOBBS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman reserve his objection?

Mr. CHURCH. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the objection.

Mr. HOBBS. Mr. Speaker, this resolution is one that grew out of the routine work of our Committee on the Judiciary. It authorizes the investigation of the organization and operation of, and the administration of justice in, the courts of the United States inferior to the Supreme Court—the jurisdiction, procedure, rules, and costs. It speaks for itself. Many petitions have been filed with the Committee on the Judiciary for investigations which we do not care to make as a pointed thrust at any one man. There is a widespread dissatisfaction with the cost systems of the various Federal courts. Some of them are excessively high, and it is thought that a thoroughgoing survey of the cost structure employed in various sections of the United States might be very beneficial in the administration of justice. Again, it is thought that a survey of the territorial jurisdiction of the several courts might be made with great profit, laying the predicate for a more convenient and equitable division of the work.

This has nothing whatsoever to do with anything that is controversial in the minds of our committee. We have a rule from the Committee on Rules under which we might have brought this up this afternoon, but we thought it a matter so noncontroversial that there would be no objection. Therefore we asked unanimous consent for its consideration.

Mr. CHURCH. Mr. Speaker, still reserving the right to object, this is a matter concerning our courts. That is a matter that has been very vitally discussed lately. I am going to object so that we can study the matter more fully and know what is in the resolution brought in so suddenly. It certainly should not be considered this late in the day, with so few Members here, under a unanimous-consent request.

Mr. MICHENER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield for a moment?

Mr. HOBBS. Certainly.

Mr. MICHENER. I think that possibly the statement of the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. HOBBS] might be just a little difficult to understand. If it is the purpose of this bill to do what the gentleman says it is, namely, to investigate a judge without pointing the finger at him directly, then I am opposed to it, because I am not in favor of setting up any permanent "smelling" committee to go around investigating the conduct of judges and the judges not know about it. If that is the purpose, then I am absolutely opposed to it.

If the purpose of the bill is to make a study as to what changes in procedure are necessary, as suggested in the latter part of the gentleman's argument, then I may favor it; but, of course, I did not know it was coming up, although I am a member of the committee, and I am wonderfully surprised if we are embarking upon a policy of setting up a permanent investigating committee in the Judiciary Committee, which will necessarily be required to be furnished with money—and, if it is not in this resolution, it will be followed with a request for an appropriation—to carry on the work of this "smelling" committee, if that is what it is.

I want to study procedure. I want to get at these things, but if we are going to impeach a judge, if we are going to judge his acts and what he is doing, I think we should point the finger at him, and I think we should call the attention of the country to it, and I think we should investigate it, but I do not think we should have any investigators or men of that type out in the country going from place to place, investigating a judge, and he not knowing anything about it and no one else knowing anything about it except some disgruntled litigant, and the investigation controlled and limited only by the good judgment and discretion of the Judiciary Committee, which committee's judgment is always good and which committee's discretion is always wise, but some time there may be a committee where they do not use proper discretion.

Mr. HOBBS. In answer to the gentleman's contention I would like to state that I did not know it was coming up this way myself until a few minutes ago. I thought it would come up in the regular way under the rule, but in answer to the gentleman's objection I will say that I think the Judiciary Committee of this House may be safely trusted to interpret this resolution in the safe and sane way the House wishes it to be interpreted. In regard to the money that may be appropriated, I wish to say that the conservation of money is one of the most prideful facts in the record of the Judiciary Committee. Out of eight resolutions, I think, authorizing that committee to make investigations during the chairmanship of the present incumbent, the Honorable HATTON W. SUMNERS, $35,000 has been appropriated to that committee carte blanche, and only $18,000 has been expended. Over $16,000 has been left in the Treasury. I think that is worthy of mention to the House in this connection.

Mr. SNELL. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. Is it the purpose of the gentleman from Illinois to object?

Mr. CHURCH. Yes, Mr. Speaker; it is.

Mr. HOOK. Mr. Speaker, the regular order.

The SPEAKER. The regular order has been demanded. Is there objection?

Mr. CHURCH. Mr. Speaker, I object.

UNITED STATES CONSTITUTION SESQUICENTENNIAL COMMISSION

Mr. KELLER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the resolution (H. J. Res. 363) to authorize an additional appropriation to further the work of the United States Constitutional Sesquicentennial Commission, with Senate amendments, disagree to the Senate amendments, and ask for a conference.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none, and appoints the following conferees: Mr. KELLER, Mr. SECREST, and Mr. TREADWAY.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 5 minutes, but not on the Jefferson Memorial at St. Louis.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will state that, under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. MCFARLANE] is entitled to be recognized for 30 minutes. Unless the gentleman from Texas yields for that purpose, the Chair does not feel he should entertain the request of the gentleman from Kansas at this time.

The gentleman from Texas [Mr. MCFARLANE] is recognized for 30 minutes.

RADIO MONOPOLY MUST BE CURBED

Mr. MCFARLANE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks and include certain excerpts.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

Mr. MCFARLANE. Mr. Speaker, on July 19 I appeared on this floor and condemned a situation which had all the earmarks of a conspiracy on the part of the Columbia Broadcasting System and the officials of the New York Stock Exchange to swindle the investing public. Before delivering that speech I addressed an inquiry to the Securities and Exchange Commission, asking whether the present law was adequate to protect the public or whether additional legislation was necessary. Their reply is indeed significant. This letter is as follows:

As your letter implies, this Commission has no power to deny an application for registration of securities on a national securities exchange when such application contains a full and accurate statement of the information called for by the appropriate registration form and when the exchange upon which registration is sought has certified to the Commission that the issue has been approved by the exchange for listing and registration.

In this particular case I may say that the application was filed with the Commission on June 7, 1937, and that certification by the New York Stock Exchange was received by the Commission on July 2, 1937. Under section 12 of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, as amended, registration becomes effective 30 days after receipt by the Commission of the exchange's certification—unless the Commission in particular cases acts to shorten this period—so that in normal course the registration may be expected to become effective on August 1, 1937.

The foregoing will perhaps answer your specific inquiry as to the nature and extent of this Commission's powers with respect to applications for registration of securities on national securities exchanges. The broader question presented by your letter, as to whether the mechanics established by the Securities Exchange Act for the protection of the investing public are adequate to their purpose, is less easy to answer. Certainly the basic theory of the registration requirements of the act is that publicity of itself is a great purifier. No more apt statement of this view can be made than that of the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce in its report on the Securities Exchange Act of 1934:

"No investor, no speculator, can safely buy and sell securities upon the exchanges without having an intelligent basis for forming his judgment as to the value of the securities he buys or sells. The idea of a free and open public market is built upon the theory that competing judgments of buyers and sellers as to the fair price of a security brings about a situation where the market price reflects as nearly as possible a just price. Just as artificial manipulation tends to upset the true function of an open market, so the hiding and secreting of important information obstruct the operation of the markets as indexes of real value. There cannot be honest markets without honest publicity. Manipulation and dishonest practices of the market place thrive upon mystery and secrecy. The disclosure of information materially important to investors may not instantaneously be reflected in market value, but despite the intricacies of security values truth does find relatively quick acceptance on the market. That is why in many cases it is so carefully guarded (H. Rept. No. 1383, 73d Cong., 2d sess., p. 11)."

This letter is signed by the Assistant General Counsel.

WHY DID LEHMAN KNIFE ROOSEVELT?

You will recall that immediately following favorable action on the part of the officials of the New York Stock Exchange to list this Columbia Broadcasting System stock, Governor Herbert Lehman, of New York, supposedly a close friend of President Roosevelt's, without the slightest warning, issued a bitter denunciation of the attempt to liberalize Federal court procedure. It may be significant to learn, as printed in the Washington Merry-Go-Round, July 26, 1937, that—

Behind Governor Lehman's blast against the Supreme Court bill was his wife, the former Edith Altschul.

Mrs. Lehman is the sister of Frank Altschul, member of Lazard Freres, international bankers, and chairman of the listing committee of the New York Stock Exchange. Partly because of the influence of her brother, she always has been cool toward the New Deal.

Those who entered into this apparent conspiracy to loot the public by unloading upon the investor securities in this company at a valuation in excess of more than $50,000,000, apparently have received sufficient assurance from those in control of affairs at Washington, that since January 2, 1937, or about the time that our late colleague, Billy Connery, presented a resolution for an investigation, they have advanced the value of the securities of the Columbia Broadcasting Co., as shown by supposed market values, from $42,616,700 in January 1937 to $52,140,100 on July 27, 1937. The figures which I have quoted herein have been furnished by the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Several Members of the House, following my address of July 19, seemed unable to believe that this radio monopoly, which is wholly dependent upon its holding of broadcasting licenses issued by the Government for earnings, had invested, as I stated, less than $1,600,000 in cash and had paid in dividends, since 1931, almost eight millions of dollars.

However, the S. E. C., in a letter of July 27, 1937, states that the actual cash investments in this company, since its creation, was $1,540,000.

SABOTAGING THE NEW DEAL PROGRAM

The public press indicates that Congress is about to adjourn. When we return in January we will then possibly be asked to lock the door after the horse thief has emptied the barn.

It appears that the public is about to be looted again. What is Congress going to do about it?

CONCENTRATION OF WEALTH

On Tuesday, June 15, my colleague from Texas, Mr. PATMAN, in a very fine and carefully prepared speech traced the concentration and control of wealth into the hands of a few banks. Not only is the wealth of the Nation controlled by a handful of individuals situated in Wall Street, but the very molding and controlling of the public mind also resides in this citadel of wealth and under their control.

R. C. A. CONTROL A WALL STREET DIRECTORY

An analysis of the board of directors of the Radio Corporation of America bears witness to the correctness of the remarks of my colleague from Texas, Mr. PATMAN.

Gen. James G. Harbord is a Morgan representative on the board of the Radio Corporation of America and is also a director of the Morgan-controlled Bankers Trust Co. Newton D. Baker is legal adviser to many of the Morgan-controlled utility companies. Cornelius Bliss is a member of the firm of Bliss, Fabyan Co., a Wall Street firm, and is also a director of the Morgan Bankers Trust Co. The elder Bliss was for many years treasurer of the Republican National Committee. Arthur E. Braun, of Pittsburgh, is president of the Mellon Farmers Depositors National Bank, one of whose directors is A. M. Robertson, chairman of the Westinghouse Co.

Bertram Cutler is listed in Poor's Register of Directors as being connected with John D. Rockefeller interests. Edwin Harden, the brother-in-law of Frank Vanderlip, is a member of Weeks & Harden, a Wall Street firm. Dewitt Millhauser is a partner in Speyer & Co., underwriters of utility issues. Frederick Strauss represents J. W. Seligman & Co., a Wall Street firm. James R. Sheffield is a corporation lawyer, a former president of the Union League Club and the National Republican Club. As a former Ambassador to Mexico he used his political connections with the Hoover-Coolidge State Department to get concessions for R. C. A. in South America.

C. B. S. CONTROL DITTO

Although the control of the Columbia Broadcasting System is supposedly a Paley family affair, the bankers are not without influence.

When the Columbia network was purchased back from the Paramount Picture Co., the representatives of the financiers who put up the money for this purchase were added to the board. In return for the cash which the bankers put up they received approximately 50 percent of the Columbia Broadcasting System's class A stock. These banking interests were Brown Bros., Harriman & Co., W. E. Hutton & Co., and Lehman Bros. The members of the board of directors who represent these bankers are Prescott S. Bush, partner in Brown Bros.; Joseph A. M. Iglehart, partner in Hutton & Co.; and Dorsey Richardson, of Lehman Bros.

WAS RADIO TRUST EVER DISSOLVED?

At this point I should like to say something about the Radio Trust formed by R. C. A., General Electric, Westinghouse, A. T. & T., et al., and which was supposedly dissolved by the Government in the notorious consent decree of 1932.

As early as 1930, 2 years before the decree and during the Government's suit against the Radio Trust, a Member of this body and now a member of the Federal Trade Commission, recognized and spotted what now gives the appearance of the beginning of the "Hoover sell-out" in this decree.

Permit me to read to you from a speech by the Honorable Ewin L. Davis, made here on June 19, 1930:

> However, a strange and disappointing feature of this suit is that the petition does not clearly cover the Radio Trust monopoly in the communication field, and furthermore, two companies whose contracts and conduct clearly aline them with this powerful Radio Trust, and who were specifically charged by the Federal Trade Commission with being members of this monopoly, are conspicuous by their absence, as defendants.
>
> One of these members of the Radio Trust is the United Fruit Co., with assets of about $250,000,000. The United Fruit Co. also has a virtual monopoly of the banana business in this country and in Europe. It has powerful influence in Washington. It operates a fleet of ships, primarily for the transportation of its bananas; many of these ships are operated under foreign flags and with alien crews.
> This company desired some valuable ocean-mail contracts, and with the aid of two other hybrid shipping companies and of the Postmaster General, who eagerly rushed to their rescue, succeeded in having chloroformed the bill which very properly provided that no ocean-mail contract should be awarded to any company operating foreign-flag ships in competition with American-flag ships, after such bill had been unanimously reported by the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries, a resolution for its consideration had been unanimously reported by the Committee on Rules, and it had passed the House without a dissenting voice or vote. While this bill was still pending in the Senate committee, the United Fruit Co. succeeded in inducing the Postmaster General to award it three valuable mail contracts amounting in the aggregate to about $9,000,000. This unseemly haste notwithstanding the fact that performance under two of said contracts was not commenced for about 3 years, for the very good reason that the United Fruit Co. does not now have adequate American ships to perform the service.
> Great is the Radio Trust! Great is the banana monopoly! The other member of the Radio Trust not included among the defendants in this suit is the International Telephone & Telegraph Co., with assets of $389,914,333, which has an agreement to buy the Radio Trust foreign communication services worth about $15,000,000, for $100,000,000 worth of stock in said International Telephone & Telegraph Co., if and when Congress can be induced to so far forget the public interest as to repeal section 17 of the Radio Act of 1927, which prohibits such a monopoly. The Radio Trust has for more than a year been disseminating false propaganda and exerting strenuous efforts to effect the repeal of said section, but has made no appreciable impression upon the Members of Congress.
> Not only are these two companies omitted from the defendants in the Government suit, but likewise the communication subsidiaries of the Radio Corporation of America, particularly R. C. A. Communications, Inc., and the Radio Marine Corporation.
>
> No explanation has been offered as to why these members of the Radio Trust were omitted. Surely the Department of Justice does not wish to safeguard this monopoly against the very salutary provisions of section 13 in the Radio Act of 1927, which directs that the licensing authority shall refuse a radio license for broadcasting, commercial communication, or other purposes, to any corporation which has been adjudged guilty by a Federal court of unlawfully monopolizing or attempting unlawfully to monopolize radio communication, directly or indirectly, through the control of the manufacture or sale of radio apparatus, through exclusive traffic arrangements, or by any other means, or to have been using unfair methods of competition. This provision of the radio law is self-enforcing. However, immunity from its provisions continues so long as the violator of the law is not adjudged guilty, notwithstanding the fact that the members of the Radio Trust are daily and flagrantly violating the laws. These omitted companies hold licenses for the use of hundreds of most valuable wave lengths in the field of both domestic and international communication.
> Furthermore, it is admitted that the Radio Corporation of America and its communication subsidiaries have an absolute monopoly in international radio service between this and foreign countries. David Sarnoff, vice president and general manager of the Radio Corporation of America, testified before the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries "that the international radio service is a natural monopoly and should be." Owen D. Young, the leading figure in the Radio Trust, has several times given utterance to similar sentiments.

Before the consent decree, R. C. A., who, under the illegal cross-licensing agreement with A. T. & T. et al., controlled the patents to radio-equipment manufacture, began to issue licenses to others—probably with the idea of convincing the Government and the public that they were not such a bad trust. But, after the consent decree, I have learned of no licenses for radio-set manufacture that were given by R. C. A.

THE PUBLIC PAYS

When the Government seemed to be pressing suit against the Radio Trust, the cost of radio sets dropped to $10 and below. This permitted millions of homes to enjoy the benefits of radio, and millions of people were able to listen to the issues of the day aired over the wave lengths. A new note in democracy was being struck. However, just as soon as the Hoover administration and the Radio Trust entered into the now infamous consent decree the price of radios began to rise again until now $30 and up is the price for a decent radio.

PHILCO RADIO SUIT INTERESTING READING

Not content with their monopolistic control and the 5 percent on gross revenue they take from all licenses they began to terrorize even those who had licenses to compete with them. The case of Philco Radio & Television Co., which filed a suit against the R. C. A., charging espionage and other terroristic practices to R. C. A., is eloquent testimony.

PATENT RACKETEERING

Other independents, if they desired to compete, were forced to run the gamut of patent-infringement suits brought by R. C. A. To fight a case of this sort costs a great deal of money. The adjudication of a patent through the Supreme Court sometimes costs over $100,000. Such a cost is prohibitive to most independents. His choice is due in one of two directions: Either he fights and the cost of litigation plus threats to his customers drive him out of business; or, he wisely goes out of business upon the receipt of a threat of an infringement suit. In either case, the independent gives up the ghost. Such is the power of the patent racketeering of the Radio Trust.

THE SPIDER VERSUS THE OCTUPUS

It is interesting to find that the R. C. A. monopoly has lived up to the practices of other monopolies of the past. The records of the investigation conducted by the Federal Communications Commission into the telephone monopoly disclosed the fact that R. C. A. prepared suit showing violation of the antitrust laws on the part of the Bell Telephone monopoly and while the papers were prepared for presentation to a Federal court, they were never sent there. This bill of complaint, copy of which I have in my hand, was filed with the Bell Telephone monopoly and as a result of such findings it is my understanding that the monopoly then possessed by the Bell Telephone Co. was divided into two parts with R. C. A. sharing the spoils.

This bill of complaint which I hold in my hand is a photostatic copy of the complaint on file in the investigation made by the Federal Communications Commission of the telephone industry, and it shows to just what extent the monopoly exists, as admitted by the monopolists themselves. I wish I had time to read to this House the provisions of this suit prepared by R. C. A. against the A. T. & T., but filed only with A. T. & T., and not in court. This complaint, setting up and alleging the monopoly that exists in the sound motion-picture industry which existed in 1933 when this suit was prepared and which monopoly exists today. Now, bear in mind that the only thing this sandbagging suit was prepared for was this: This suit was prepared to be filed only in case the A. T. & T. and their subsidiaries did not divide the swag in sound motion-picture industry field in the United States. The A. T. & T. came in, and rather than have their monopoly exposed to the public, divided the swag, but where was and is the Department of Justice? Why has not the Department of Justice filed suit to protect the public against this antitrust law violation?

Let me quote from this photostatic copy of the complaint filed by R. C. A. against A. T. & T. and their subsidiaries, and the different sound motion-picture corporations. After setting forth the jurisdiction that the suit is brought under the act to protect trade and commerce against unlawful restraints and monopolies, known as the Clayton and Sherman Antitrust Acts and naming the nine different motion-picture corporations who principally control the production and distribution and exhibition of motion pictures in America, and describing how A. T. & T. and their subsidiaries and licensees, through cross-licenses and patent pooling, have set up their controlled radio and telephone and the reproduction of sound pictures and all loudspeaking equipment, they then in part allege:

Prior to December 1926 Telephone and Western, in violation of sections 1 and 2 of the Sherman Act, combined and conspired together to monopolize and to restrain the interstate trade and commerce in the production, the sale or lease, and the installation of recording and reproducing equipments in the manner hereinafter set forth, and said combination and conspiracy have continued to this date.

The principal purposes and objects of said conspiracy were to secure for the primary defendants a monopoly of said trade and commerce; to protect the said defendants in the enjoyment of the profits resulting from such monopoly; and to prevent and to restrain others than the said defendants, and especially to restrain Radio and its affiliated companies, from engaging in said trade and commerce in competition with the defendants, although Radio and its affiliated companies, in addition to having rights under their own patents, were and are fully licensed, royalty free, under the patents of the Telephone group with respect to such recording and reproducing equipments.

To accomplish their purposes the primary defendants took advantage of the conditions existing in the motion-picture industry in 1927 and 1928 to secure a monopoly of such trade and commerce before Radio and its affiliated companies were in a position effectively to enter the field. In order to effect, to strengthen, and to continue this illegal monopoly, the primary defendants secured the execution of long-term, exclusive-dealing, and tying contracts with the principal producing, distributing, and exhibiting companies in the industry, and thus prevented the potential competition of Radio from becoming actual and substantial competition by means of such tying clauses, discriminatory provisions, and restrictions on the right of lessees of Electrical Research Products, Inc. (E. R. P. I.), equipments to deal with others, and especially with Radio and its affiliates.

The primary defendants substantially have accomplished their purpose to monopolize and to restrain the aforesaid trade and commerce and they still illegally monopolize and restrain the aforesaid trade and commerce, and threaten to continue to do so, to the irreparable and continuing injury and damage to the plaintiff, primarily by and as the result of the following and other illegal acts, arrangements, and contracts:

1. The organization of E. R. P. I. by Telephone and Western to act as their agency and instrumentality in acquiring and in maintaining a substantial monopoly of the trade and commerce in recording and reproducing equipments.

2. The destruction of the exclusive rights of Vitaphone under its contract with Western so as to enable E. R. P. I. to enter into the contracts with all the secondary defendants and with other producers, distributors, and exhibitors of sound pictures.

3. The execution of tying and exclusive dealing contracts between E. R. P. I. and the secondary defendants and others whereby E. R. P. I. secured a monopoly for a long term of years of at least 80 percent in value of the business of supplying recording equipments to motion-picture producers.

4. The execution of tying and exclusive-dealing contracts between E. R. P. I. and the secondary defendants and other producers and exhibitors whereby E. R. P. I. secured for a long term of years a monopoly of the business of furnishing reproducing equipments to at least 85 percent of the key theaters in the United States, and a monopoly of approximately 75 percent in value of the entire business of furnishing such equipments.

5. The use of E. R. P. I. of a standard form of installation contract for reproducing equipment which contains recitals and restrictive provisions having the purpose, tendency, and effect of preventing exhibitors from using sound records not produced by Western recording equipments.

All as is described more fully hereinafter.

For 25 pages of pleadings the petition carefully sets forth how E. R. P. I., a wholly owned subsidiary of A. T. & T., was able through their airtight contracts to completely monopolize all sound motion picture and sound-recording loudspeaking equipment, and so forth, for the Nation. The petition states:

As to the 2,000 key motion-picture theaters in the United States, the numbers, percentages, and seating capacities of such theaters equipped, respectively, (1) with E. R. P. I.'s reproducing equipment, (2) with plaintiff's reproducing equipment, and (3) with reproducing equipment of others than the plaintiff or E. R. P. I.:

Key motion-picture theaters

	Number	Percentage	Seating capacity
Theaters equipped with E. R. P. I. reproducing equipment	1,664	85.2	2,397,960
Theaters equipped with R. C. A. reproducing equipment	196	7.5	323,859
Theaters equipped with other than R. C. A. or E. R. P. I. equipment	138	7.3	164,030

The above described substantial monopoly of Western and E. R. P. I. of the trade and commerce which consists of the manufacture, of the sale or lease and of the installation of reproducing equipment in the key motion picture theaters in the United States, as described above, was acquired by the R. C. A. as the result of the exclusive dealing and tying provisions inserted by E. R. P. I. in its recording license agreements with the motion picture concerns, and other producers.

Rather than permit R. C. A. to file this petition in the Federal District Court for the Southern District of New York where the complaint was prepared to be filed, the A. T. & T. and their subsidiaries, Western Electric and the Electrical Research Products, Inc., Metro-Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc., Fox Film Corporation, Universal Pictures Corporation, First National Pictures, Inc., Educational Pictures, Inc., Eastern Service Studios, Inc., United Artists Corporation, Columbia Pictures Corporation, and Charles D. Hilles and Eugene W. Leake, as trustees of Paramount Publix Corporation, formerly known as Paramount Famous Lasky Corporation, preferred to admit what the facts clearly show, that an absolute monopoly did exist and they preferred to divide the swag between themselves rather than permit the suit to be filed in court, which naturally would force the Department of Justice to intervene at least under the guise of protecting the public from such monopolistic practices.

As this is a public document and presuming the Department of Justice is interested in investigations being conducted by governmental agencies, I wonder why the leading officials of the Hoover administration seemingly have so much influence with the Department of Justice under this administration that no action has been taken in this case. I note that the principal attorney for R. C. A. in this blackjacking against the public interests is William J. Donovan, who I understand was the head of the antitrust administration during the Hoover administration, and associated with him are several legal lights, most of whom I believe will be found advocating the principles of the Hoover administration rather than those of the New Deal administration. As this petition contains some 27 pages of printed matter, I will not burden the RECORD with it, but I am sending a copy of the petition to the Department of Justice and asking why, if a monopoly existed when possessed by the Bell Telephone octopus, did the monopoly pass out of existence when the spoils were shared with the R. C. A. spider?

Is it not passing strange why the Department of Justice, bound to be familiar with this suit which was filed to divide the swag between these two monopolistic groups, refuses to protect the innocent investing public and to file suit on this and other known existing monopolies in the communications field that is taking such handsome profits from the consuming public? It is up to them to answer this question. Why has the Department of Justice failed to file suit and enforce the antitrust laws?

COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION ON SIT-DOWN STRIKE

It must be recalled at this point that the Federal Communications Act of 1934 provides that a company which engages in antitrust practices as they relate to radio-apparatus manufacture may have their broadcasting licenses denied. The act provides as follows:

APPLICATION OF ANTITRUST LAWS

SEC. 313. All laws of the United States relating to unlawful restraints and monopolies and to combinations, contracts, or agreements in restraint of trade are hereby declared to be applicable to the manufacture and sale of and to trade in radio apparatus and devices entering into or affecting interstate or foreign commerce and to interstate or foreign radio communications. Whenever in any suit, action, or proceeding, civil or criminal, brought under the provisions of any of said laws or in any proceedings brought to enforce or to review findings and orders of the Federal Trade Commission or other governmental agency in respect to any matters as to which said Commission or other governmental agency is by law authorized to act, a licensee shall be found guilty of the violation of the provisions of such laws or any of them, the court, in addition to the penalties imposed by said laws, may adjudge, order, and/or decree that the license of such licensee shall, as of the date of the decree or judgment becomes finally effective or as of such other date as the said decree shall fix, be revoked and that all rights under such license shall thereupon cease: Provided, however, That such licensee shall have the same right of appeal or review as is provided by law in respect of other decrees and judgments of said court.

COMMISSION TRIED AND FOUND WANTING

The Federal Radio Act of 1927 included even a more drastic provision, making it mandatory upon the old Federal Radio Commission to deny licenses when an apparatus monopoly was established. In the supposed dissolution of the Radio Trust by the Consent Decree in 1932, it was proven that R. C. A. possessed such a monopoly. There is evidence to show that despite the consent decree, this monopoly still persists in violation of the antitrust laws. Yet testimony before the House Appropriations Committee shows that broadcasting licenses of R. C. A. are renewed every 6 months without ever having the question of the apparatus monopoly or public interest raised. I sincerely believe that the issue of reexamining the effects of the consent decree is resting squarely on the shoulders of Congress. Shall we face the issue or evade it as has been the custom in the past?

The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. WIGGLESWORTH], who, as a member of the appropriations committee, has given much time and consideration to this subject, has spoken several times favoring the immediate clearing up of this communications monopoly. His work in the committee bringing out some of the existing known facts, I am sure has the hearty approval of the Congress. Several other Members have spoken, pointing out the great need of an investigation.

Mr. WIGGLESWORTH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McFARLANE. I yield.

Mr. WIGGLESWORTH. Does the gentleman know any reason in the world why the so-called Connery resolution providing for an investigation into this entire field should not be reported out by the Rules Committee of the House? It has been there since January, I think.

Mr. McFARLANE. In answer to the gentleman's inquiry, I may say that I do not know of any reason why it has not been acted upon. Apparently different members of the Rules Committee with whom I have talked are all highly in favor of it, yet we get no action, action which I believe the gentleman from Massachusetts and other Members of the House will agree is necessary if we are going to run this octopus out into the open and be able to frame proper legislation to correct the known existing evils.

Mr. WIGGLESWORTH. I agree with the gentleman that action is essential, and that it is essential now, if we are to accomplish anything before the horse gets out of the stable. A number of Members on this side of the aisle, as the gentleman knows, have been interested in a thoroughgoing investigation for some time. For over a year and a half I have personally urged upon the Members of the House the importance of such an investigation. I hope the gentleman from Texas will succeed in prevailing upon the committee to report the resolution now.

Mr. VOORHIS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McFARLANE. Yes; I yield.

Mr. VOORHIS. Does not the gentleman feel that perhaps the root of this whole matter is to be found in the fact that these corporations have been able to call a certain radio channel their own; that, as a matter of fact, if there is any natural resource that ought to belong to the people it is the air, and that we are gradually building up here a vested interest in the ownership of channels of communication through the years? Would not the gentleman favor some tax measure which would levy a good stiff franchise tax and take the water out of the situation so that the only advantage would be a temporary license, or a license running for a certain period of time? Would not this prevent the building up of a vested interest in these channels?

Mr. McFARLANE. Answering the gentleman, I may say that there has been tax legislation pending before the Ways and Means Committee since the early part of this year, but we have been unable to get any action on it. This would require the radio industry, which is the only public utility operating in interstate commerce in the United States today that does not at least pay the cost of its supervision, to pay a suitable tax; but this bill, like the others which should have been brought to the floor of the House, never has been considered by this committee and still lies buried there.

Mr. LEAVY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McFARLANE. Yes; I yield.

Mr. LEAVY. The gentleman's remarks indicate that he has given much thought and study to this question, and he is making a strong case. I am wondering if he has covered the further abuse that is generally recognized of large, metropolitan newspapers of the country acquiring radio stations and then hooking in with the great radio chains and thus controlling channels of news through radio as well as through the press?

Mr. McFARLANE. If the gentleman will read my remarks of July 19, he will see that I dwelt upon that very question; that I pointed out that some 200 of the large daily newspapers of this country own the largest radio stations in America, and through this method of radio broadcasting and sound motion-picture equipment and through the press, through that tie-up, they absolutely control and mold public opinion in this country today; and this is why Congress is having such a terrific fight to get any worth-while legislation enacted for the benefit of the people. [Applause.]

Mr. WEARIN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McFARLANE. Yes; I yield.

Mr. WEARIN. That tendency on the part of the newspapers coupled with the operation of the present chain does constitute a serious threat in the way of a monopoly to influence public opinion, does it not?

Mr. McFARLANE. There is no doubt about it.

Mr. WEARIN. I am sure the gentleman is familiar with the fact that I have a bill now pending before the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce to prevent a continuation of this monopoly.

Mr. McFARLANE. I know the gentleman has had such a bill pending for some time, but he does not seem to be able to get action on that any more than the rest of us are on these other bills. We cannot, apparently, get these bills out of these committees which would be of such tremendous benefit of the people. And this communications monopoly is becoming more powerful all the time. Until now many Members dare not speak their sentiments against it, lest they be opposed by it for reelection.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. May I ask the gentleman a question?

Mr. McFARLANE. I yield to the gentleman from Colorado.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. The gentleman has found out that the big newspapers control the radio. I want to ask him if he has dug in deep enough to find out who controls the big newspapers of the country?

Mr. McFARLANE. The same crowd that controls almost everything that is worth while—the banking interests of Wall Street.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. The fact is that the big newspapers of the country are nothing but the loud speakers on the cash registers of big business?

Mr. McFARLANE. The gentleman is correct.

THE R. C. A. SPIDER

But does the grasping of the monopoly stop there? Let me quote the following from the Hollywood Reporter of July 1937:

R. C. A. NOW BELIEVED AIMING TO CONTROL COMMUNICATIONS

WASHINGTON.—There is a well-authenticated report that the Department of Justice is now willing to withdraw its objections to a merger of Western Union and Postal Telegraph. In inside circles this is seen as an indication that R. C. A. is moving to control the entire communications field.

The ultimate battle, of course, will come over the control of commercial television. In view of President Roosevelt's determination for a unified communications system, it is possible that if the big wire companies merge, R. C. A. might let the merged outfit have the communications business and devote itself to the amusement field and broader television activities. However, this possibility is not credited by those in the know.

They believe that R. C. A. will make every effort to control both Western Union and Postal in an effort to broaden its telegraph business, and that the fight will then be between R. C. A. and A. T. & T. for full control of both communications and television.

It is not thought possible that if the wire companies do merge, the new company would be able to protect itself against the threat of radio competition by acquiring R. C. A., the supremacy of R. C. A. being seen as much more logical. In any event, it is believed that the merger would make commercial television much more imminent.

R. C. A.'S STOCKHOLDERS' $220,000,000 GIFT FOR WHAT?

There is an interesting sidelight to the relation between R. C. A., G. E., and Westinghouse, but nevertheless important, and bears mentioning here.

When General Electric, Westinghouse, and R. C. A. were busy dividing up the radio field amongst themselves a very peculiar transaction took place. In return for certain stock and physical assets given to R. C. A. and which R. C. A. itself valued at $42,864,812 plus the exclusive manufacturing rights and the royalties to radio device field, General Electric and Westinghouse received 6,580,375 shares of R. C. A. stock, the market value of which was $263,215,000. In other words, R. C. A. paid $220,350,147.50 for the exclusive rights in the radio-apparatus field, and gave the control of R. C. A. to G. E. and Westinghouse. The facts are borne out in an unchallenged affidavit on file in the Federal court. It is difficult to believe that they were worth that much. It is far easier to imagine the innocent investing public who owned R. C. A. stock, through no choice of their own, made a gift of these hundreds of millions of dollars to Westinghouse and General Electric. And from the message I read to you earlier from S. E. C. the law is unable to cope with this manifest racketeering.

FACTS UNCHALLENGED

Stock jobbing and looting of concerns on the part of majority holders is well illustrated in excerpts from an unchallenged affidavit found in the files of the R. C. A. case:

On or about January 1, 1930, the market value of 6,580,375 shares of Radio stock was approximately $263,215,000, the market price being about $40 per share.

In the actions and motions made before Judge Knox, reference to which is made in the petition, Otto S. Schairer, a vice president of Radio, made an affidavit therein verified December 2, 1932, in which he purports to set forth the considerations and the value thereof which were received by Radio from General Electric and Westinghouse for this block of 6,580,375 shares. He places a value upon every consideration except the exclusive right to manufacture, the right to retain 100 percent of certain royalties, and goodwill and the transfer of personnel.

His figures summarized are as follows:

Release from an obligation of a subsidiary of Radio	$32,000,000.00
Depreciated value of plants, machinery and equipment of the manufacture of radio apparatus, etc.	5,025,167.50
Stock of R. C. A. Photophone Co., Inc.	3,600,000.00
Stock of National Broadcasting Co., Inc.	1,651,685.00
Stock of General Motors Radio Corporation	588,000.00
	42,864,852.50
Subtracting from the value of the stock, which was	263,215,000.00
The sum of	42,864,852.50
Leaves a balance of	220,350,147.50

* * * * * * *

The value of these manufacturing rights of approximately $220,000,000 is arrived at from Otto S. Schairer's own affidavit, based of course upon the value of the stock in the open market at the time of the issuance and transfer. * * *

If the defendants would have this court believe that the transaction in January 1930 was honest and clean and Radio was getting dollar for dollar, then these exclusive manufacturing rights must have had an approximate value of $220,000,000.

I will go a step further. Even the amount of $42,864,852.50, which represents according to Mr. Schairer the aggregate amount of the other considerations that were received by Radio in January 1930, may be a fictitious amount. * * *

Under agreement "M", which was dated as of January 1, 1930, said choses in action and physical properties making a total of $42,864,852.50 were transferred to Radio through the medium of two subsidiaries known as General Electric Co., Inc., and Westinghouse Radio Co., Inc.

As a condition for the transfer it was provided that these properties be taken over by Radio subject to the payment of all the liabilities and obligations of these two subsidiary companies.

Those liabilities have never been disclosed so far as I have been able to ascertain. These other liabilities might have been very substantial, in which event they might partly or wholly cancel the $42,864,852.50 which is the valuation of the choses in action and physical properties fixed by Mr. Schairer.

In such event the actual value of the exclusive right to manufacture under the patents would be even greater than the approximate $220,000,000; and the practical result would be that the only real thing of value which was given for this enormous block of stock was the exclusive right to manufacture under the patents.

Let these defendants explain to this court now on what theory they have consented to permit General Electric and Westinghouse to retain this block of stock which had a value of approximately $220,000,000, or more, when the exclusive right to manufacture has been taken away from Radio * * *.

At this point I want to ask that the committee now investigating tax evasions and tax loopholes investigate this gift of $220,000,000 to Westinghouse and General Electric and learn just what taxes were paid on this $220,000,000. I also ask that they report their findings to this body.

The people of the United States have paid $2,262,375 last year to regulate the communications industry. In all other kinds of industries operating under Government franchise the cost of their regulation is placed on the industry. Why, then, should the taxpayers continue to keep up the cost of the Federal Communications Commission? I think it is now time for Congress to shift this burden from the shoulders of the taxpayer on to the communications industry, which operates under Government franchise for which they pay nothing.

I cannot repeat too often the query, "What does Congress intend to do?"

FOURTEEN POINTS BUT NO PEACE TREATY

July 19 I addressed the House, outlining the evils and monopoly existing in the radio industry and the lack of authority to protect the public in the communication and securities and exchange law. At that time I charged the following:

First. It was demonstrated that radio censorship and dictatorship exists, not by the Government or any Federal agency, but by the vested interests and the radio monopoly.

Second. That radio and motion pictures, the main means of controlling and molding public opinion, are in the hands of the Telephone and Radio Trust with television about to be added.

The Natural Resources Committee pointed out that television may become a wonderful boon or if misused and misregulated a horrible monster. To permit the present Communications Commission, as it has in the past regulated radio, or rather misregulated, is a thing that Congress must prevent, and one way we can do it is by cleaning up the radio cesspool.

I should like to insert in the RECORD an editorial on television appearing in the Washington Herald of Sunday, August 1:

THE MAGICAL EYE

You can build a television set today out of things on sale at the 5- and 10-cent store.

That's the somewhat ecstatic way in which electrical engineers talk to make it understood that visual broadcasting is ready for citizens' appreciation.

Indeed, the National Resources Board in its recent report on technological trends, stated:

"Color television is already a laboratory accomplishment. It, too, may become practical before long. Developments have been started in three-dimensional sight and sound.

"And if we consider past progress in this field, is it too much to expect that a future generation of Americans will be able to sit at their firesides and see reproduced before them in actual colors and in three dimensions, both visually and acoustically, scenes which are being instantaneously transmitted from the interior of some forest, accompanied with all the fragrant odors of nature, and eventually the addition of a vicarious, tactual sensation?"

Well, having experienced the wonders of our age so far, who are we to shrink from the idea of bringing far-away sights, smells, and the feeling of distant objects to the fireside by radio?

Rather it becomes our era to think who is going to pay for all this magic and how.

What the exurberant electricians mean when they talk about "five and dime" television is that most of the instruments that make up a television receiving set are "in the public domain", or not patentable. They are expensive, however, and so far only three companies in the United States are jockeying to put them on the market.

But once they are available, who is going to distribute the programs? Broadcasting by radio waves so far appears impracticable, as 30 miles is the present limit of distance from a station that a radio televised program can be picked up.

The American Telephone & Telegraph Co. has a device, however, known as a coaxial cable, which will allow television programs to be sent right into homes just like telephone calls. This could be done today.

A movie, for instance, could be "piped" to your living room by television, you would be saved the trouble of driving downtown, parking, and all that. The movie houses would go dark, but you should worry.

But there are added factors. Movies cost anywhere from $350,000 to $2,000,000 each. Suppose Mutiny on the Bounty had been played all over America on a single night, just as W. C. Fields and Charlie McCarthy do now? Obviously, it wouldn't have stayed on the air a week, and new movies would have been necessary for the next night. But no commercial sponsor could afford a Mutiny on the Bounty to advertise his coffee, even if people would stand for such a thing.

Perhaps the practical way to get television into the homes now is to lease sets just as telephones are leased, and let customers buy their service as they want it. That calls for a lot of governmental regulation and guidance, to avoid either big organizations like A. T. & T., or a sinister outfit like a political party on dictatorship bent, from getting control of a dynamic propaganda weapon.

How would you like to have your television?

It's up to Congress to start making a public analysis and a public policy, before television falls in with bad company of any kind, for the problem is of today.

Third. That the public was apparently in the process of being fleeced by stock racketeering in radio securities.

Fourth. Specific evidence was presented to show that the S. E. C. is helpless to cope with the present Columbia Broadcasting System's stock-issue registration and distribution, which has the appearance of fleecing an innocent investing public; neither can it cope with the issuance of securities by R. C. A., which controls all of the stock of N. B. C.

Fifth. That the trafficking in radio frequencies, for which broadcasting companies pay the Government nothing, has proven a flourishing racket.

Sixth. That the F. C. C. was on the verge of giving two frequencies allotted to the Navy to the Columbia Broadcasting System. A situation which has all the appearances of another Teapot Dome.

Seventh. That the F. C. C. officials have admitted the present existence of the radio monopoly and its racketeering practices and are either unwilling or unable to protect the public and enforce the law. And this monopoly costs the Government $2,262,375 annually to maintain the Federal Communications Commission to grant free licenses to this monopoly to enable this monopoly to take from the public through advertising over $140,000,000 annually, with no regulation of the advertising rates to be charged.

Eighth. That unfair competition prevails whereby privileged individuals, with unsual political connections, are enriched by millions of dollars through the continued holding of so-called experimental licenses.

Ninth. That the consent decree of 1932 contains elements so suspicious that they fairly shout for complete exposure.

Tenth. That two governmental agencies, the F. C. C. and the F. T. C., specifically instructed to protect the public against monopoly and monopolists, are either unable or unwilling to enforce the law.

Eleventh. That the Radio Trust has a complete monopoly of the 40 cleared channels.

Twelfth. That 93 percent of all the broadcast power is in the hands of this monopoly.

Thirteenth. That radio control of newspapers is a widespread evil.

Fourteenth. That the illegal monopoly conditions existing before the consent decree of 1932 were not changed by that decree and still flourish.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. McFARLANE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 5 additional minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

Mr. LUDLOW. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, my colleague from Indiana has a very important matter on which he desires to speak; that is, the wages and hours clause. Would the gentleman be content with 3 additional minutes?

Mr. McFARLANE. That will be satisfactory. I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 3 additional minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

Mr. McFARLANE. There is resting in the Rules Committee the resolution presented by the late and beloved Billy Connery to investigate this cesspool. What is the Rules Committee waiting for? Are they waiting for the Radio Trust to put the F. C. C. and the S. E. C. on wheels and roll them off into their own back yard?

Congress will soon adjourn, and this special investigating committee should properly be put to work during the recess of Congress investigating this whole communications mess to the end that remedial legislation be promptly offered early next session to clean up this whole Department. A bill by the gentleman from New York [Mr. BOYLAN], H. R. 6440, has been pending before the Ways and Means Committee since April 15, 1937, to require the communications industry to, at least, pay the necessary expenses for operating and maintaining this Commission. This monopolistic public utility is the only such existing utility in the Nation not paying for the costs of its own regulation. The radio monopoly is the only public utility not having some regulatory commission to properly regulate its rates. From every standpoint the existing practices now knowingly being permitted in open violation of our antitrust laws cry out for the immediate action of Congress to either insist upon law enforcement or to impeach the Government officials who refuse to do their duty and enforce the law. [Applause.]

SELECT COMMITTEE ON GOVERNMENT REORGANIZATION

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Select Committee on Government Reorganization may have until midnight tonight to file a report.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, when is it the intention of the chairman of that committee to bring this matter up for consideration?

Mr. COCHRAN. I may say to the gentleman that is a matter for the Speaker and the majority leader to decide, and I cannot answer the question. I express the hope it will be called up before the week is out.

Mr. TABER. It will not be called up tomorrow?

Mr. COCHRAN. I do not think it will be, as far as I know.

Mr. RAYBURN. It will not be called up tomorrow.

Mr. TABER. What about Thursday?

Mr. RAYBURN. I doubt whether it will be called up Thursday. I do not think it will come up before Friday or Saturday.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

There was no objection.

CONFERENCE REPORT ON H. R. 7051

Mr. MANSFIELD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the conferees may have until midnight tonight to file a conference report and statement on the bill H. R. 7051, the rivers and harbors bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. O'CONNOR of Montana. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for one-half minute.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. GRISWOLD] yield for that purpose?

Mr. GRISWOLD. I do not.

Mr. O'CONNOR of Montana. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks, supplementing the remarks I made a few days ago in the House and also supplementing the remarks made by the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. WEARIN] this morning.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Montana?

There was no objection.

WAGE AND HOUR LAW

The SPEAKER. Under a special order previously made, the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. GRISWOLD] is recognized for 30 minutes.

Mr. GRISWOLD. Mr. Speaker, I come before you as a member of the Labor Committee, as one who believes in the principle of a minimum wage established by law, to discuss this bill not with a view of asking your support of it or with a view of suggesting your opposition, but with the intent of giving you facts concerning the bill. I myself shall support the bill with certain amendments; because I shall do so is not even a remote reason for any other Member to do so. If you have no better reason for voting for this bill than the fact that some other Member is doing so or that William Green, of the A. F. of L., or any other person, no matter how high his office or great his name, asks you to vote for it, you are, in my opinion, committing an unpardonable crime both against American labor and American industry.

I want to call your attention to the fact that William Green by no means voices the wishes of all labor in his advocacy of this bill. Nor does the Association of Manufacturers or National Chamber of Commerce speak for all of industry in their opposition to the bill. As a matter of fact, when Mr. Green speaks, even though he speaks for his whole membership, he speaks for only a very small percentage of labor. Such a small percentage as to be almost negligible. And 90 percent of that small percentage of his members is excluded from the operation of this act. So, as a matter of fact, Mr. Green can only speak officially for about one-half of 1 percent of the labor that is affected by this act. Ninety-nine and one-half percent of the total labor affected by this act Mr. Green has no official connection with as the president of the A. F. of L. and has no more authority to speak for them than have you or I or any other citizen. He is interested in them beyond a doubt. He wishes them to prosper and be content. I presume he hopes they will some day come into his organization and contribute to its upkeep and support of its officers. I, too, hope they may unionize. I believe the A. F. of L. is a good thing, but I do not believe its president has any more right to speak or to be accepted as speaking for those outside its membersh'p than any other citizen has, and even in the A. F. of L. the executive heads of many of the member organizations are actively opposed to this bill.

The same thing can be said of the National Manufacturers Association and the United States Chamber of Commerce. There are actually thousands of independent businessmen in the United States whom neither of those organizations represent and who would repudiate those organizations for their opposition to this bill if they were members. In fact, I hazard the guess that the percentage of businessmen of the United States for which the manufacturers association and chamber of commerce speak officially is even smaller than the percentage of labor for which Mr. Green speaks.

"It isn't hard to tell the truth if you only know what the truth is." You should know the truth about this bill. You, as Members of the House, should have in your possession as many of the facts as you can get—the good features and the bad, and weigh them in the scales of thought and reason before you determine your vote. I warn you that there are gentlemen here who are going to a political Gethsemane when they vote on this bill. There are gentlemen who will be politically crucified no matter which way they vote. I have some friends here whom I like and respect. Good, conscientious legislators who are going to vote for this measure and sink into political oblivion. I know men who are just as good and just as conscientious who are going to vote against it and suffer defeat as a consequence.

We have, in this wage-and-hour bill, gone into the legislative laboratory and have taken from the shelf a little of the knowledge of wages, a little of the knowledge of hours, less of the knowledge of business competition, slightly less of the knowledge of plant management, a teaspoonful of the machine age, a couple of drops of freight rates, a great amount of hope, and an insignificant portion of faith and mixed them all together and bottled them into the high explosive in this bill. Congress has mixed it hastily and we can know the old adage will hold true that "what is done in haste can be regretted at leisure."

There is a great need for regulation of wages and hours in this Nation if our present industrial competitive system is to survive. My colleague from Texas, Judge SUMNERS, has on numerous occasions sounded the need for action on the floor of this House when he has stated the results of the machine age whereby we continually increase the man-units of production while reducing the man-units of consumption. He has called upon us to decide whether we shall have 1 man operating a machine that does the work of 10 with 9 men on the industrial scrap heap or whether we are going to so regulate hours as to continue to use all 10 men in productivity so that all 10 men will have financial ability to consume. We must either keep men on private pay rolls or we must keep them on governmental charity, as we have been doing for the past 4 or 5 years. There is no middle ground.

Back of this legislation in its inception was the theory that welfare or profits of a private business should not destroy the welfare and livelihood of human beings as a whole. That under a just economic order we could not continue to deprive human beings of a decent standard of living. That Congress should determine the amount of the wage that was so harmful to individuals and general welfare as to be oppressive and make it a criminal offense for any private employer to pay that oppressive wage. The original intent was to establish a floor and say to the employer: "When you go below this floor you go into the cellar and we will not permit an employer of labor to descend into that cellar." The original intent was to fix a ceiling for hours and say to the employer of labor: "Thus far you can go, beyond it you cannot pass." This theory and this intent were both laudable and commendable and because of that I shall support the principle involved in this bill.

I realize that in my home town in Indiana today approximately one-sixth of the native white families receive some income, either in cash or in kind, from relief or W. P. A., and that 50 percent of the native white families in that town received an income below $1,152 last year. That in Atlanta, Ga., 30 percent of the white families had less than $1,250 a year. That means that many of those families had very much less than $1,250 per year—in many instances, only a few hundred dollars per year.

We need legislation to cure this evil, but we do not want legislation that will raise the standards of living for the low paid either a very little or not at all, and which will at the same time reduce or destroy entirely the income of the laborers more fortunate now.

We have no adequate information on which to base a wage and hour bill at this time. Mr. Lubin, of the Department of Labor, the only man who testified before our joint committee who could give us any statistics, stated to us "that it is impossible to distinguish workers that are engaged in intrastate commerce and those engaged in interstate commerce." The bill is presumed to affect only those in interstate commerce, and no one knows how many there are. No one has any figures on which to base even a guess, and of those in interstate commerce we have exempted all who work 40 hours or less a week or receive 40 cents or more per hour. The bill exempts all railroad men who we are positive are engaged in interstate commerce; all employees engaged in motor transportation under the act of 1935; all executive, administrative, and professional people. We have exempted seamen, those employed in the canning industry, all employees engaged in agriculture, employees of cooperative dairy plants but not of privately owned plants, persons employed in connection with ginning, compressing, and storing of cotton or of processing of cottonseed, those employed in the processing of beet, cane, and maple sugar. We have also exempted outside salesmen. Those who are left and engaged in interstate commerce will come under the provisions of the act.

While we exempt cotton and the processes of its handling in compresses and cottonseed mills we do not exempt tobacco and these employed in its processing or handling after it ripens. We do not exempt lumber, which in many localities is a seasonable occupation. We do not exempt plants privately owned engaged in the production of butterfat and other animal fats produced by the American farmer which are in keen competition with the vegetable oils produced from cottonseed. We do not exempt those engaged in the production of fertilizer which is a product 90 percent of which is sold and shipped during 9 weeks of the year. There is no logical explanation for the fact that we should exempt one nonperishable, such as cottonseed, merely because it is partially seasonable and at the same time failing to exempt other nonperishables which are also seasonable, such as fertilizer, lumber, and tobacco or other perishable products such as animal and butterfats. It is very evident that the pressure from the cotton-producing groups was much greater and better organized than the pressure from the tobacco, lumber, and animal-fat-producing groups.

We place under the penalties of the bill local retail establishments, exempting outside salesmen of local retail establishments only. We make the act apply to the man or woman who sells you a pound of butter, suit of clothes or necktie across the counter but we exempt from the act the man who knocks at the door of your home and says: "I am the Fuller Brush man" or the team of girls who make your town selling magazines on the pretense of sending them through college. This is a situation in this bill to which the Members of this House should give serious consideration, so they may be able to answer questions of the taxpaying people at home as to why the local retailing clerk who lives in your own community should be made to meet the requirements of this act while at the same time you make the sky the limit both as to wages and hours to the itinerant salesman who comes into your community to compete with your local retailers.

I have been asked whether the positions under this act will be civil service or patronage. I am explaining that feature simply because I have been questioned so many times about it. Under section 3, page 9 of the act the President, by and with the advice of the Senate, shall appoint a Labor Standards Board composed of five members and every other appointee under that Board, bar none, must be subject to the civil-service laws and their salaries must be fixed in accordance with the Classification Act of 1923. Even the Secretary of that Board and the private secretaries of the members of that Board under the bill as reported by the House, must comply in every particular in their appointments with the civil-service rules and regulations and would have to come off of an eligible list established by the Commission. The Senate bill does not provide for these civil-service requirements.

Under section 8 of the bill, if in your State a concern is producing or selling an article that is wholly intrastate and the product does not leave your local community, and a firm in a neighboring State makes the same article in compliance with an order of the Board, that firm in the neighboring State may file a complaint with the Board against your local firm and the Board, because your local firm in its operation of purely intrastate local business, interferes with the business the firm in the neighboring State is doing in your local community, the Board can make an order requiring your local firm to act in accordance with the orders of the Board. It shall be unlawful for any person to employ any employees in that purely local business in violation of any term or provision of the order of the Labor Standards Board. This section gives the firm in interstate commerce a right to dictate the terms under which your local firm can operate, but does not allow your local firm any right to be heard or protest against the firm in interstate commerce.

Under part 4 of the act the board may create differentials not only as between territories and localities, but between individual plants in the same occupation, and under the powers of the board it can even discriminate between classes of employers, employees, or employment. And if it exercised its powers wrongly it could make one industry or one industrialist within an industry the favored child of fortune while wrecking and destroying another industrialist or individual plant engaged in the same identical business.

The board must under the bill, in declaring a minimum wage, consider "such considerations as would be relevant in a court in a suit for value of services rendered where services are rendered at the request of an employer without contract as to the amount of wage to be paid." Under any order of the board this would be a question of fact which could be only determined by a court and subject to a review by a court under well-established rules of evidence. This, combined with the fact that the cost of living must also be considered by the board, makes it probable that the board would be forced to fix in those localities where labor is now the cheapest and the most underprivileged a wage little, if any, above the present wage, while fixing a high rate in those communities that already have the higher rate of wage, giving an undue advantage and unfair competition to those employers who now work their labor under sweatshop conditions and allow them to sell their goods with governmental approval in the very localities where the high rate of wage is now paid. House amendment to the Senate bill makes it necessary that the board shall also consider the relative cost of transportation of goods from points of production to the consuming markets. This makes it necessary for the board of five men to go into a thorough, extensive, and complete study of freight rates. Today it costs more to ship pottery from the pottery plants in Kokomo, Ind., to the city of Chicago than it costs to ship pottery from Asiatic countries to the city of Chicago. This is without considering that the powers of the board might conflict with the powers of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The board cannot declare hours of less than 40 per week, but there is no limit to which the board may not go in granting exceptions and declaring maximum weekly hours above 40 hours. Under the House bill the board is required to fix hours and wages on the basis of conditions in separate and segregated communities. Should the board in a community where unskilled labor is plentiful and cheap, with the cost of living low, fix an hourly rate of 30 cents and weekly hours of 48, while at the same time fixing an hourly rate at 40 cents and an hour maximum of 40 hours per week in a community where wages are now higher, it is easy to see the vast increase in the cost of production in the community that is now the least oppressive to labor while the competitive advantage goes to the community where labor is now oppressed and underprivileged. Under such a system the oppressed labor is not materially benefited in either earning capacity or weekly hours, while the industry and labor in the fair section of the country is destroyed by the unfavorable competition. This legislation contains geographical differentials in its worst and most vicious form and penalizes those sections of the Nation and those communities that now have a decent standard of living while rewarding the sections that are now notoriously unfair to labor.

We prohibit under this act the transportation of goods in interstate commerce which were manufactured in this country with the employment of child labor, but we admit to interstate commerce competitive goods manufactured in foreign countries under sweatshop child-labor conditions.

While under State labor compensation laws and most Federal acts we exempt the small employer, there is no exemption under this act for any employer no matter if he has only one employee, both himself and employee are subject to the act, and if the employee is on the employer's premises, working or not working, with or without the consent of the employer, at an hour not covered by his employment such presence on the premises, unless he is paid time and one-half, shall be prima-facie evidence of a violation of the act.

The little-business man, the small independent merchant and plant owner on the main streets of America, is an unremembered man in this legislation. No high-power, acute-pressure lobbyist represented him or organized propaganda in his behalf. His voice was not heard, largely because he does not know what the legislation is attempting to do to him. Congress has not heard him, but his voice will be loud when the blow strikes.

The act goes to great length to establish an advisory committee, the representation on the committee of an equal number from labor and industry as well as from the public, the employment of clerical assistance by the committee, and unlimited compensation for the personnel. The details for the work of the committee and the expense involved would lead one to believe that the committee was a thing of importance and authority to protect the public from a dictatorial attitude on the part of the board; but on page 29, line 19, the act reads:

> The board may reject in whole or in part the recommendations of an advisory committee.

The act provides that in any suit instituted by the board, criminal or civil, against a transgressor of this law the board shall have a right to institute its complaint in the United States district court; but if the citizen of your community who feels that the board has made an improper order desires to institute suit against the board and make the board a party defendant or asks for a hearing in the courts or a review of the order of the board, he shall not be permitted to file his suit in the United States district court. He must be taken far away from his home to file his suit and can only file it in the United States circuit court of appeals of a circuit in which he resides.

While the cost of filing in the United States Circuit court of appeals and the difficulties to be surmounted by your local citizen who feels himself aggrieved would be much greater than filing it in the district court he is forced to go to the additional expense, time, and difficulties while the act specifically provides that no costs shall be assessed against the board in any proceedings in the act brought by or against the board in any court. The board need have no worry about costs and may hail a citizen into court on the slightest pretext. The citizen, as was demonstated in the Schechter case, even though right and upheld by the court makes himself a bankrupt in getting justice because it costs him a fortune to try his case and the taxpayer pays the bill of the board in the board's unjust persecution.

The Secretary of Labor in testifying before the joint committee stated that this bill had vast ramifications. Careful reading of the bill will, I think, convince anyone that its ramifications are so vast that it would be impossible for any man to follow them to their final conclusions. The great liberal, Justice Cardozo, said of the N. R. A.: "This is a delegation run riot." If the N. R. A. was a delegation of power running riot then under the labor standards board we have a delegation of power running far more riotious. Mr. Donald Richberg has stated that it was the administrative features that destroyed the N. R. A. At its height the N. R. A. had thousands of applications for exceptions before it. A board of five men being neither omnipotent or omniscient cannot possibly handle the vast proposition of controlling wages and hours in all industries of the United States fairly, justly, and reasonably because that board of five men cannot possibly know how much it will hurt in one instance or benefit in another. If Congress has the power to delegate this authority to fix wages and hours to a board of five men then Congress itself has the authority to fix minimum wages and maximum hours that will apply to all people in all industries alike. If a wage below 40 cents an hour is oppressive in the case of one man it is oppressive in the case of all men. It is the duty of Congress to find what wage is oppressive and to enact legislation making it a criminal offense to pay that wage or any lesser wage.

Congress should fix a floor for wages and a ceiling for hours on its own responsibility. Write the act on our book of Criminal Laws and make those who violate it criminals as are the violators of other criminal laws.

My sincere hope is that the House, when the bill comes on the floor, will amend it so as to make it just and workable—a proper law to accomplish the desired results.

Mr. PETTENGILL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GRISWOLD. I yield to the gentleman from Indiana.

Mr. PETTENGILL. What happened to the Wheeler-Johnson child-labor amendment adopted in the Senate? Why was that stricken out?

Mr. GRISWOLD. If the gentleman asks me why it was stricken out, I am perhaps like the five members of the board who are going to handle all industry; I am neither omniscient nor omnipotent, and I cannot tell the gentleman why, but the House committee inserted another amendment there, and I should, perhaps, answer the gentleman in this way. There are several amendments that should be considered together in that respect. For one thing, they talk about minors and women, and yet they do not define at any place in the bill what constitutes a minor.

Under this act, as I understand it, we prohibit anything that is produced by child labor to enter into any interstate commerce in this country, but at the same time we allow everything produced by child labor in foreign countries to enter into interstate commerce in this country.

Mr. PETTENGILL. I am personally very much in favor of the philosophy of the Johnson-Wheeler amendment and would like to know why that philosophy of prison-made goods, with respect to protecting a State, could not apply to all substandard labor conditions anywhere in the Union, and thus make a very simple bill out of it, which I would be very glad to support if it were done along that line. I would like to know what is the general objection to reaching a solution of this problem along the philosophy of the Johnson-Wheeler amendment.

Mr. GRISWOLD. The only way that I could answer the gentleman would be to say that two people, one from a governmental department and one not connected with a governmental department, appeared very, very late in the consideratiion of this bill before the committee, and that they probably had something to do with the change.

Mr. O'MALLEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GRISWOLD. Yes.

Mr. O'MALLEY. Just how many exceptions are there now in the House version of the wage and hour bill, approximately? How many classes of workers in industry are excepted?

Mr. GRISWOLD. Directly and indirectly I would say 25 or 30.

Mr. O'MALLEY. Does not the gentleman think a better name for the bill would be a bill of exceptions?

Mr. GRISWOLD. It might be apropos.

Mr. O'MALLEY. Does the gentleman recall that at any time during the last campaign any Democratic speaker, any Democratic candidate in the course of his remarks in favor of the wage and hour bill told various classes in the audience that they would be excepted from its provisions?

Mr. GRISWOLD. I do not.

Mr. O'MALLEY. Does the gentleman recall of anything in the last campaign in which the voters were told that we were going to pass a wage and hour bill and that some of them were to be excepted from it?

Mr. GRISWOLD. I do not recall that, but there were a lot of things in the last campaign that I missed. Mr. Speaker, before I forget, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GRISWOLD. Yes.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Does the gentleman feel that the so-called graveyard-shift provision, which I was so anxious to have placed in the bill, does protect the women from working the graveyard hours from 12 o'clock midnight to 6 o'clock in the morning? We have such a provision in Massachusetts today.

Mr. GRISWOLD. My understanding of the so-called graveyard-shift amendment is this: It will positively prevent the employment of women and minors between the hours of midnight and 6 a. m. I have not gone into this thoroughly enough to determine what relation it will have to the laws affecting women now in force in the several States.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. I do not believe any Members will be very likely to go back to their districts and tell the women of their districts that they were willing to have women work from 12 o'clock midnight until 6 o'clock in the morning. I believe that provision will stay in the bill. Under this provision also, a man who works from 12 o'clock midnight to 6 o'clock in the morning is to be paid time and a half. This will tend to give more employment in Massachusetts and will be helpful.

Mr. GRISWOLD. I say this to the gentlewoman from Massachusetts: I think there are two conflicts in principle in the bill. One is the House amendment which provides that there shall be no discrimination as to sex. The other is the graveyard-shift amendment, which provides that you must discriminate because of sex. I do not know how to reconcile those two.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. They will have to be amended. One more question. I understand the gentleman feels this board of five will act as a board of Hitlers to regulate how people shall work and where and when, and so forth, but without danger of punishment. It can regulate wages down to the lowest level.

Mr. GRISWOLD. Mr. Speaker, I like to give everyone the benefit of the doubt. I feel the bill is going to pass with the board in it, and I hope that this board will be possessed of all knowledge and be divinely just.

Mr. PETTENGILL. And brave and courageous.

Mr. GRISWOLD. Courageous and above reproach. If they are that, then we need have no fears about what will happen under their jurisdiction of the bill.

Mr. LUDLOW. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GRISWOLD. I yield.

Mr. LUDLOW. My colleague is a lawyer and a good one and he knows all about the subject matter that is covered by this bill.

Mr. GRISWOLD. The gentleman flatters me. I do not pretend to know all the ramifications of the bill. I am only trying to bring before the House a few things I do know.

Mr. LUDLOW. I am stating what I believe to be the fact, and I am coming to him for enlightenment. I yield to no one in the earnestness of my desire to help the underpaid and the underprivileged people of this country. I believe in well-considered wage and hour legislation. I have tried to study this bill and I find some provisions in it that appear to be very peculiar. For instance, on page 30, line 9, I find that the labor standards board may send out its investigators to conduct investigations and determine whether any person has violated or, mark these words, or is "about to violate" any provision of this proposed act or any labor standard order. My question is this: Does the gentleman believe that any person should be put through the ordeal of an onerous investigation and submit himself to a gruelling inquisition with the prospect of court prosecution on a mere suspicion by somebody that he is going to do something wrong? [Laughter.]

Mr. GRISWOLD. I think the gentleman is right in his conclusion that under the wording of this bill they could send out investigators on mere suspicion, because I think the bill reads that way. I want to call his attention to another thing: That whether it be on mere suspicion or whether they have facts or whether they are merely investigating to determine the number of his employees, under this bill all his correspondence and all his books are open to inspection, and there is no provision in the bill that makes that information confidential.

Mr. LUDLOW. Will the gentleman tolerate me for two or three more questions?

Mr. GRISWOLD. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. LUDLOW. On page 33, lines 18 to 22, we find that the mere presence of any employee at the place of employment at any other hours than those stated in the schedule applying to him shall be deemed prima-facie evidence of a violation of such order. Suppose an employee forgot his dinner bucket and went back to get it? [Laughter.]

Mr. GRISWOLD. I discussed that. I think under the act he would, prima facie, be guilty of a violation of the act, unless the employer was paying him time and a half. The bill I know did not have such an intent but whether it intended it or not it does make a prima-facie case against the employer. It is one of the many instances in this bill of the certain results of too hasty consideration.

Mr. LUDLOW. I now come to my final question. I think it is an important question because I believe that nine-tenths of the opposition of this legislation is against the board that is created by the act. Could not Congress, in the exercise of its constitutional powers, write a law that would provide maximum hours and minimum wages with suitable differentials as to geographical sections and occupations? Why is it necessary to have a governmental board at all?

Mr. GRISWOLD. Personally, I think that Congress has the right, not only the right, but the duty and responsibility to handle this thing itself. I think if there is a wage that is so oppressive that an American laborer cannot live under it, that is below a decent standard of living, it is the duty of Congress to see what that oppressive wage is, state it in the law, and make the man who violates that law and who goes into the cellar below this floor that Congress fixes, a criminal just the same as any other criminal.

Mr. LUDLOW. Is it not obvious that if Congress could delegate powers it certainly has those powers itself?

Mr. GRISWOLD. I yield to the gentleman from Kansas.

Mr. LAMBERTSON. I served on the Labor Committee with the gentleman for 8 years, and we agreed pretty generally. Two things I cannot understand about the gentleman and his speech, but first of all, a letter that we all received today from William Green says that "it is reasonably acceptable and fairly satisfactory to labor." That tells me that he is not for it. He qualifies his support of it by saying it is reasonably acceptable. William Green does not say things that way when he is for things, does he? [Laughter.] After our 8 years on the Labor Committee together, does William Green speak that way when he is in favor of something? I want your judgment.

Mr. GRISWOLD. I will answer the gentleman this way: I think he was considerably more emphatic when he wanted the committee to adjourn 24 hours.

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Yes. John Lewis said before the hearings that he positively wanted section 5 out. That is the section dealing with the board. He would not commit himself to the bill unless section 5 went out. That is in there now. We know John Lewis is not for it. We know William Green is not for it at heart. But there is one person that makes William Green say this little thing about it. But what I cannot understand about you is that you are against every part of the bill and you voted to report it out of committee and you are going to vote for it in the House. I was against it in the committee and I am going to vote against it on the floor. I am just exactly like you. [Laughter.]

Mr. GRISWOLD. If the gentleman would qualify that a little. [Laughter.] He may recall that I voted to report it out of committee, making the statement that I reserved the right to oppose the bill or any parts of it on the floor, although it is not my intention to oppose the principle of the bill on the floor. I favor some parts of this bill. I favor the general idea of a floor for wages and a ceiling for hours. I favor the prohibition of child labor in industry. I am sorry that this bill does not go far enough in that respect. I am sorry that we say to the world in this bill that we oppose child labor for our own children but will gladly accept in interstate commerce goods produced by the labor of children in other nations—foreign children that are worked under conditions so much worse than ours that even our sweatshop conditions are paradise in comparison. I think this legislation started with good intent. Somewhere along the course of its travels it fell into unfriendly hands—a beautiful thing was warped and twisted and made into a monstrosity. I hope the House will operate on it—try to restore its beauty and usefulness. That is why I am talking now.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GRISWOLD. I yield.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. Has the gentleman any hope of amending it on the floor, of striking out the wage differential, for instance?

Mr. GRISWOLD. I have not much hope of materially amending the bill on the floor. The House is in a temper to adjourn. It will accept, in my opinion, legislation that it would give more consideration to were it earlier in the session. I shall present amendments. Others will present amendments. Some will be adopted.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. But the gentleman expects to get a rule to bring the bill to the floor.

Mr. GRISWOLD. I do not know; I am not a member of the Committee on Rules. I feel that the Rules Committee will act conscientiously and do as they think best. I presume they will grant a rule. Whatever action they take will be agreeable to me. They are all excellent and able gentlemen.

Mr. HILL of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GRISWOLD. I yield.

Mr. HILL of Oklahoma. I conceive by the statement that the gentleman has made, although I have not studied the bill, that there will be a great array of inspectors and investigators sent all over the country to look into every man's business. I am wondering if we could not fix up the bill so that they would all come under civil service.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. LUDLOW. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman's time be extended 5 minutes.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will state to the gentleman from Indiana that there is still pending another special order.

Mr. LUDLOW. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw the request. I had overlooked the fact that there is another special order.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. DORSEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and include therein an address I delivered at Independence Hall in Philadelphia on August 7.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. O'CONNELL of Montana. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and to include therein a speech made by a former Member of the House, Mr. Marcantonio, of New York.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Montana?

There was no objection.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

The SPEAKER. Under a special order heretofore made, the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. HOBBS] is recognized for 10 minutes.

Mr. HOBBS. Mr. Speaker, this morning there appeared in the Washington Post an article which seems to me to be unworthy of a great columnist. In his column "Politics and People", Mr. Franklyn Waltman damns the opponents of the so-called antilynching bill, now pending in the Senate, and claims virtues for the bill which it does not even pretend to possess.

He says:

> But, guilty or innocent, every person in this country is entitled to his day in court and to be protected from bloodthirsty, frenzied mobs.

All of which sounds well, unless the bills have been read. There is no word in these bills about protection. They deal exclusively with punishment.

Of course this is true. Lynching may be as swift as an automobile or a bullet. How could far-distant Federal authorities possibly be expected to protect against mob violence? The answer is, they are not. Does Mr. Waltman use that ultra-vires sob stuff because he lacks legitimate arguments and fears that his abuse of those who disagree with him may not be as moving as he desires?

Again I find myself differing from Mr. Waltman as to the inspiration of this proposed legislation. He says it was "inspired by a sense of decency and morality." If this were all of the truth, why are there dozens of identical bills introduced every year? If the high and holy purpose which burns in my breast has already been embodied in a dozen bills now pending, why should I introduce another bill in exactly the same language? The question answers itself.

I should not and would not. But if I want political credit back home, and such a bill is popular there, why, of course, I might.

Not for a second do I question that the desire to stop lynching is decent and moral. It is, and 99 percent of the people in the United States are insisting that it be stopped. That is one of the reasons why it is being stopped. But I say most positively that, in my judgment, the inspiration of antilynching bills is seasoned liberally with the pepper of politics.

To punish a county in Alabama for the killing of one man by several is statesmanship. But there must be no danger of punishing a county in New York when a group of gangsters kills one of their gang or another gang, charged with crime, to prevent his trial for fear that he might talk too much. So the bill pending in the Senate provides:

Provided, however, That lynching shall not be deemed to include violence occurring between members of groups of lawbreakers such as are commonly designated as gangsters or racketeers, nor violence occurring during the course of picketing or boycotting or any incident in connection with any labor dispute as that term is defined and used in the act of March 23, 1932 (47 Stat. 70).

It is not my purpose to enter into any extended discussion of the antilynching bills. I tried to express myself on that subject last spring when the Gavagan bill was being debated in this House. You heard me then.

My main criticism of Mr. Waltman's article is of his statement—

The decent men and women of the South want such legislation, as demonstrated by the attitude of the southern press, by the action of southern organizations, and by the recent Gallup poll, which showed that 65 percent of the sentiment in the South, compared to 70 percent the Nation over, favored a Federal antilynching bill.

I called him up by telephone this morning about that. He said he did not mean it the way it sounds. I accept his statement at full face value. But I cannot refrain from giving this public expression to my resentment at such a careless use of words by an expert, nor can I permit to go unchallenged the intimation, as false as it was unintended, that those men and women of the South who are against such legislation are not "the decent men and women" of that section.

GENERAL FARM LEGISLATION

Mr. O'CONNOR of Montana. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 2 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Montana?

There was no objection.

Mr. O'CONNOR of Montana. Mr. Speaker, the reason I am taking a moment of the time of the House this afternoon is because the United States Department of Agriculture has issued its estimate of the crops of the United States as of August 1 this year; and I make these remarks supplemental to the remarks I made the other day concerning crop insurance, and supplemental to the remarks of the distinguished gentleman from Iowa [Mr. WEARIN] this morning, showing the necessity for some legislation at this session of Congress for the benefit of the farmers of the United States.

Since the New Deal began, the weather has been abnormal and both critics and proponents of farm legislation have said that the situation will be different when there is a return to normal weather. The critics have grudgingly conceded that the farm programs of this administration have been of some help during the abnormal weather of the last few years, but they say that as soon as we have normal weather again we can throw out the farm programs and go back to the good old days.

The proponents of farm legislation, of whom I am proud to count myself as one, look at this situation from another viewpoint. We realize, far better than the critics, that New Deal farm legislation has been the salvation of millions of our farmers. But we realize that the return to normal conditions will be just the time when farmers must have adequate Government aid to meet the surplus situation which normal conditions will bring.

For 4 years we have talked about normal conditions returning. I say that we are now back to normal. I hold in my hand the general crop report of the United States Crop Reporting Board, issued Tuesday and a copy of the cotton report issued yesterday, Monday. We all know what a bombshell the cotton report was, with its estimate of 15,593,000 bales. This is just a taste of what lies ahead for all of our farmers. The general crop report shows that a serious situation is facing our corn and feed-grain farmers as well as our cotton farmers. The crop report estimates 2,658,748,000 bushels of corn, as compared with 1,529,327,000 bushels last year and a 5-year average for 1928–32 of 2,554,772,000 bushels. Our wheat crop this year is now estimated at 890,419,000 bushels, the highest since 1931. This compares with a crop last year of 626,461,000 bushels and a 5-year average of 864,532,000 bushels. Our rye crop is now estimated at 51,869,000 bushels, more than double the crop of 25,000,000 bushels last year. The barley crop is estimated at 227,398,000 bushels, as compared with 147,452,000 bushels last year. Oats at 1,130,628,000 bushels compared with 789,100,000 bushels last year and a 5-year average of 1,215,102,000 bushels.

The last 6 weeks have given us dramatic proof of what can happen to farmers' prices in this country when things are nearly normal. Take oats for instance. I have here the average weekly cash price of No. 3 White oats at Chicago for the last 6 weeks. For the week ending July 3 these prices averaged 51 cents a bushel. Three weeks later the average dropped to 38 cents a bushel, and last week this decline continued on down to 30 cents a bushel. Remember that these are Chicago prices. Prices to farmers, of course, are even lower as there are freight differentials which must be taken into consideration.

Corn farmers also realize what getting back to normal means. The closing prices of corn futures at Chicago on Monday tell this story in a way that every farmer can understand all too well. On that day September corn futures at Chicago closed at $1.03 a bushel. That is what the market figured corn was worth under abnormal conditions before this year's crop comes to market. But look at December futures, which show what the speculators think corn is worth under nearly normal conditions when this year's crop will be on the market. December corn futures closed Monday at Chicago at 68 cents a bushel. In other words, the difference between the abnormal conditions and the normal conditions that many critics of farm legislation want means just 35 cents a bushel to corn farmers.

Yes, we are getting back to nearly normal. The weather has come back to a much more normal situation and growing conditions this year are much better in most of the country than they have been in the last few years.

In my State of Montana, I regret to state that many of our farmers were in practically the only area of the entire country where drought struck again this year. But even the farmers in my State of Montana can read the signs in the crop reports and in the falling prices of corn and cotton. They are close to the Canadian border and they realize that their Canadian neighbors have shared the drought disaster with them. In fact, they realize that Canadian drought has been a most important factor in holding up the price of this year's wheat crop. They realize full well that an end of drought in Canada and normal crops in the United States will mean the same downward trend in their wheat prices next year as is occurring in corn, cotton, oats, and other prices this year.

Many point to the possibilities of wheat exports this year as lessening any need for early farm legislation for wheat. I grant that there is an opportunity to export a considerable quantity of wheat this year. But I ask you why this is so. Once more we need only look across the Canadian border to find the answer. A small Canadian crop means that the principal wheat exporter of the world becomes a minor factor this year. But are we going to depend on Canadian crop failures year after year for protection against falling prices of wheat? What are we going to do when Canada gets back to normal? What are we going to do when the crop reports on wheat show prospective surpluses such as is the case in corn and cotton this year?

I have already spoken in this Chamber on the question of this Congress enacting adequate farm legislation to meet the problem of normal conditions as well as abnormal conditions. My convictions on that point remain unchanged. I know that the farmers in my State of Montana want protection against the hazards of normal weather and I believe that we in this session must move as far as possible toward enacting legislation that will give our farmers such protection. The Agriculture Committee of the House has given this problem much consideration, and I have only the highest praise for the committee and its chairman, Mr. JONES, for what has been done up to now. I know, too, that I speak the sentiment of the farmers of Montana when I say that the action of the committee in reporting favorably the crop-insurance bill will prove one of its most popular moves.

But the cotton and crop reports have created a new crisis for agriculture; a crisis which this session of Congress must do something about. We must face the problem of nearly normal yields, normal weather, and only a fair export trade. I do not say that we must enact final legislation now, but we must decide where we are going, and we must make provision for swift passage of legislation in advance of next year's crop so that our farmers may know where they stand. This administration has a mandate from agriculture that must not be ignored.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. CHURCH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks in the Appendix of the RECORD and to include therein a certain letter and parts of certain agreements and court proceedings heretofore referred to by me in the real-estate bondholders' discussion.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

Mr. TEIGAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and to include therein an address made by me in Washington recently advocating the franchise for the citizens of the District of Columbia.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. COFFEE of Washington. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks and to include therein a copy of an address made by myself.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Washington?

There was no objection.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted as follows:

To Mr. LANZETTA, for 1 day, on account of attendance at a funeral.

To Mr. CROWTHER (at the request of Mr. SNELL), for 4 days, on account of illness.

COURT REFORM AND JUDICIAL PROCEDURE

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on the Judiciary may have until midnight tonight to file a conference report and statement on the bill (H. R. 2260) to provide for appearance on behalf of and appeal by the United States in certain cases in which the constitutionality of acts of Congress is involved.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 5 minutes.

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, it has been a very long day. We do not have a very heavy program for tomorrow; and if the gentleman will make his request to address the House tomorrow after the business of the day has been disposed of, I shall not object. Mr. Speaker, I object to the gentleman proceeding at this time.

The SPEAKER. Objection is heard.

SENATE BILLS REFERRED

Bills of the Senate of the following titles were taken from the Speaker's table and under the rule referred as follows:

I further announce that the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. BRIDGES] is necessarily detained from the Senate.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Eighty-four Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

LOW-COST HOUSING

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, during the debate on the so-called slum-clearance housing bill, I inserted in the RECORD a table which set forth the cost of housing projects of the Public Works Administration Housing Division. The head of that division, Mr. Gray, states that the table was not in all respects accurate, and asks me to insert in the RECORD a table which is accurate, and which sets forth the cost more definitely than the table which I used during my speech and which I had inserted in the RECORD. In order that no injustice may be done the Public Works Administration Housing Division, I ask that Mr. Gray's letter, and the table annexed to it, may be printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The letter and table are as follows:

FEDERAL EMERGENCY ADMINISTRATION OF PUBLIC WORKS,
Washington, D. C., August 10, 1937.

Hon. DAVID I. WALSH,
United States Senate.

MY DEAR SENATOR: My attention has been called to the publication in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD for Thursday, August 5, on page 8288, of a table intended to show the cost of nine Public Works Administration Housing Division slum-clearance and low-rent housing projects as compared to certain other projects financed by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and the Federal Housing Administration. This table was printed in the RECORD at your request.

I was impressed throughout the housing bill debate on the Senate floor by your sincere interest to have all the facts in connection with this measure presented in the RECORD. On several occasions you specifically made reference to your wish that the RECORD carry full information about this bill.

I am sure that it was your desire to present accurate facts and figures in this connection. However, the table of costs to which I have referred is so glaringly inaccurate, insofar as the P. W. A. Housing Division figures are concerned, that I am writing you to present the correct information. I do not know the source of your information, but it obviously is not a reliable one. Even the heading of the table, "Cost per room of buildings actually constructed", is misleading, because the table includes one of our projects in Detroit on which work on the buildings has only been started within the last 2 months, and therefore does not qualify as being "actually constructed."

I am enclosing herewith a corrected table showing the actual figures for the projects published in the RECORD. The figures in the third column, "Price per room (building only)", are based on actual contracts and commitments to date. Whereas for Boston your table shows 3,912 rooms, a building cost of $6,124,751, and a price per room of $1,566, the actual figures are 3,860 rooms with a building cost of $5,441,704 and a price per room of $1,410.

The table shows a price per room in Chicago of $1,746. The actual cost is $1,463. The table shows a price per room in Miami of $1,112, whereas the actual costs were $958. In Birmingham the table showed a price per room of $1,318, whereas the actual cost is $1,101. For Enid is shown a room cost of $1,711, whereas the proper figure is $1,306. In Omaha the table gives a figure of $1,530 and the correct figure is $1,280. In Detroit you show $1,643, whereas the contract price is $1,335.

Incidentally, the table shows Knickerbocker Village, in New York, as being financed by private capital "under Federal Housing Administration." Knickerbocker Village was financed not by F. H. A. but by the R. F. C. before F. H. A. came into existence.

Should you desire to obtain other information about P. W. A. housing projects, you may rest assured that our records are always open for your inspection and we will be glad to furnish any information you desire. Naturally the Housing Division is in a position to supply more accurate information about its projects than any other agency.

Inasmuch as someone has taken advantage of your desire to have this question thoroughly aired and understood and has supplied you with misleading data, I wonder if you would not like to have the enclosed table with correct figures printed in the RECORD.

Sincerely yours,

H. A. GRAY,
Director of Housing
(For the Administrator).

PETITIONS AND MEMORIAL

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the following concurrent memorial of the Legislature of the State of Arizona, which was referred to the Committee on Finance:

Concurrent memorial requesting additional buildings and equipment for the Veterans' Administration Facility at Tucson

To the Congress of the United States and the Veterans' Administration:

Your memorialist respectfully represents:

Because of the unsurpassed climatic advantages of its location, the Veterans' Administration Facility at Tucson is operated primarily for the treatment of tuberculosis. The capacity and resources of the institution are constantly taxed to the limit in the hospitalization of tuberculars.

It is a fact, however, well established by competent medical authority and the testimony of thousands of patients who have experienced its benefits, that the climate of southern Arizona possesses equal therapeutic value in the treatment of arthritis, neuritis, asthma, bronchitis, sinusitis, and various other diseases.

During the past year, because of the lack of adequate accommodations for their treatment, approximately 500 cases of these special types were denied hospitalization.

It is believed that every disabled veteran should have the benefit of the most favorable climatic conditions and the most effective therapeutic aids indicated for his particular type of disease to enable him to regain his health.

Wherefore your memorialist, the Senate of the State of Arizona (the house of representatives concurring), urgently recommends:

1. That the Veterans' Administration include in its budget requests an item for the construction of additional buildings at Tucson to take care of at least 200 general medical patients; that an adequate number of single rooms be provided in each ward; that each building be equipped with the most efficient dry air cooling system; and that ample facilities be provided to take care of the increased bed capacity at the hospital, including accommodations for the necessary personnel.

2. That the Congress of the United States give effect to this recommendation by the enactment of appropriate legislation.

Mr. LODGE presented petitions of sundry citizens of the State of Massachusetts, praying for the enactment of legislation to abolish the Federal Reserve System as at present constituted, and also praying that Congress exercise its constitutional right to coin money and regulate the value thereof, which were referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

Mr. WALSH presented resolutions adopted by the Western Massachusetts Federation of Mayors and Selectmen, at Northampton, Mass, favoring the prompt adoption and ratification, without amendment, of the Connecticut River Interstate Flood Control Compact, which were ordered to lie on the table.

PARITY PRICES FOR COTTON

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. President, I present for publication in the RECORD, and appropriate reference, as part of my remarks a resolution adopted at a farmers' meeting at Amarillo, Tex., on July 28, 1937; a resolution adopted at a farmers' meeting at Waco, Tex., on July 29, 1937, and a resolution adopted at a farmers' meeting at Lufkin, Tex., on July 30, 1937, all relating to the necessity of obtaining parity prices for cotton.

The resolutions presented by Mr. SHEPPARD were referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Resolution passed at farmers' meeting, Amarillo, Tex., July 28, 1937

Panhandle farmers appreciate beyond measure the great advantage to agriculture of the Triple A. Although adopted as an emergency measure, with amendments it could no doubt have been made more perfect as a permanent program. It was extremely unfortunate that the Supreme Court declared it unconstitutional. The Soil Conservation Act has furnished a splendid substitute and must be maintained at all hazards for the purpose of conserving soil fertility, but the soil-conservation program must be supplemented with additional legislation if stability is to be attained and parity prices for basic farm crops maintained.

We favor a program to provide an ever-normal granary as a matter of public interest. We insist it not be done at the expense of the producer.

Parity prices in years of normal supply must be provided for if agriculture is to absorb its share of the rising costs of industry and labor.

In years of abnormally large production direct control of surpluses must be available and a permanent system of commodity loans be put into effect as a price stabilizer.

We, therefore, favor and endorse the principles of the farmers' bill now pending in the Congress and urge upon the administration and the Congress that legislation of this type be passed at the present session of the Congress.

W. M. DECK, President.
WALTER A. GILLESPIE, Secretary.

Resolution passed at farmers' meeting, Waco, Tex., July 29, 1937

We, the farmers of the great Cotton Belt of Texas, in mass meeting assembled, do hereby adopt the following resolution:

We favored and cooperated in the original A. A. A. and the farmers of this country were dealt a severe blow when this was invalidated by the Supreme Court.

The Soil Conservation Act has justified itself and must be maintained. To conserve the soil fertility is essential, but this alone will not solve the problem and assure the farmers a fair and reasonable income.

To insure equal opportunity with other groups the farmer must receive parity prices for his products.

Production must be adjusted in line with normal domestic and export demand.

In years of overproduction positive control of surpluses must be provided, together with commodity loans at reasonable levels.

We therefore favor the farmers' bill—H. R. 7577—now before Congress, as embodying the above principles and strongly urge its enactment by Congress at this session as protection against the recurrence of disastrously low prices for farm products.

GEORGE CLARK,
McClennan County, Chairman.
B. F. CHAPMAN,
Bell County, Secretary.

Resolution passed at farmers' meeting, Lufkin, Tex., July 30, 1937

Resolved, That we, the farmers of east and southeast Texas, speaking in behalf of the farmers of more than 33 important cotton counties in Texas, note from the press with bitter disappointment that the Congress may adjourn prior to adoption of House bill No. 7577, the 1937 A. A. A. bill, also known as the ever-normal granary law. This bill meets the approval of the President, the Secretary of Agriculture, and the overwhelming majority of our farmers. It is the first proposal as compared to prices farmers are required to pay.

Industry, through the protective tariff, has for more than 100 years, enjoyed a thinly disguised subsidy, and this proposed law will bring to farmers governmental benefits to equalize this long-continued discrimination and in a measure correct this inequality. A parity price for cotton now is 17 cents and not 11.5 cents, the prevailing price. The increase in farm tenancy will be checked by fair prices for farm products.

The existing soil-conservation law is not effective to either prevent an unmarketable crop surplus or to maintain a fair price for cotton. The price of cotton has recently declined nearly 3 cents, already bringing a $70,000,000 loss to farmers, and is still falling. Should Congress adjourn with no farm bill to sustain the price of cotton, our farmers will incur untold loss and misfortune. No Texas Member of Congress can have a more important mission than to act now on this farm bill, and failure to act may be little short of dereliction of duty.

We, therefore, bring to the attention of our officials the seriousness of the present situation and imperative necessity for immediate action, and call upon all Texas Members of Congress to vigorously work for this bill and urge that they resist every suggestion to adjourn Congress until favorable action is had.

That there be forwarded to each Texas Member of Congress a copy of this resolution and that copies be sent to Franklin D. Roosevelt, President of the United States; Henry A. Wallace, Secretary of Agriculture; Senators ALBEN W. BARKLEY and J. H. BANKHEAD; MARVIN H. JONES, chairman, House Agricultural Committee; and ELLISON D. SMITH, chairman, Senate Agricultural Committee.

EDWIN HAWES, JR.,
Chairman, Wharton County.
OTHO MORRIS,
Secretary, Rusk County.

PLAN FOR DEVELOPMENT OF ALASKA

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH submitted the following concurrent resolution (S. Con. Res. 20), which was referred to the Committee on Territories and Insular Affairs, as follows:

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That the President is requested to prepare or cause to be prepared by the present departments and agencies of the Government, and within the regular appropriations of such departments and agencies heretofore made for the fiscal year 1938, and to report to the Congress within 30 days after commencement of the second session of the Seventy-fifth Congress, a comprehensive plan to be carried out over a period of approximately 10 years, for the development of the resources of the Territory of Alaska, and the expansion and development of the facilities of commerce between the United States and Alaska, and within the Territory. The plan so prepared and reported to Congress may, in the discretion of the President, embrace a statement of such works and facilities to be established in Alaska as may be desirable for national defense.

PAYMENT OF MILEAGE TO CERTAIN SENATE CLERKS

Mr. BONE (for himself and Mr. STEIWER) submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 175), which was referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate:

Resolved, That for each regular and special session of Congress the Secretary of the Senate is authorized and directed to pay, out of the contingent fund of the Senate, to one clerk and to one assistant clerk to each Senator and each standing committee of the Senate, mileage at the rate of 10 cents per mile for one round trip based upon the most direct route of travel by railroad between Washington, D. C., and the place, within the State of the Senator or the chairman of the standing committee by whom such clerk or assistant clerk is employed, in which is located the official residence or office of such Senator or chairman. Such payments shall be made on vouchers certified, as to the performance of the travel and incurring of expense therefor, by the respective Senators and chairmen of committees employing such clerks and assistant clerks and approved by the chairman of the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate. Such vouchers may be submitted subsequent to the performance of the travel or any part thereof.

THE DEMOCRATIC PARTY, INDIVIDUAL INITIATIVE, AND PRIVATE ENTERPRISE—ADDRESS BY SENATOR SHEPPARD

[Mr. CONNALLY asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an address on the subject of The Democratic Party, Individual Initiative, and Private Enterprise, delivered by Senator SHEPPARD at the Democratic harmony dinner given in honor of the senior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY] on Aug. 10, 1937, which appears in the Appendix.]

ADDRESS BY HON. JAMES A. FARLEY AT OCONOMOWOC, WIS.

[Mr. MINTON asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an address delivered by Hon. James A. Farley, Postmaster General, at the dedication of the new Federal building, Oconomowoc, Wis., on July 27, 1937, which appears in the Appendix.]

PEACE IN THE EAST—LETTER BY MAJ. GEN. WILLIAM C. RIVERS

[Mr. NYE asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD a letter from Maj. Gen. William C. Rivers, U. S. Army, retired, on the subject of Peace in the East, printed in the New York Times of the issue of Sunday, June 20, 1937, which appears in the Appendix.]

CONDITIONS AFFECTING POULTRY PRODUCERS

[Mr. WALSH asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD correspondence between Senators from the New England States and the Department of Agriculture with respect to feed supply and other matters of interest to poultry producers, which appears in the Appendix.]

PRODUCTION AND USE OF HELIUM GAS

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 1567) to amend the act entitled "An act to amend the act entitled 'An act authorizing the conservation, production, and exploitation of helium gas, a mineral resource pertaining to the national defense, and to the development of commercial aeronautics, and for other purposes.'"

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. LOGAN] to the amendment reported by the committee.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Mr. President, just before the Senate recessed last evening I had finished a brief statement giving the history of the bill which is now before the Senate. This morning I should like to take up the bill section by section, because there are not only many questions which I am sure will be asked but because there are real controversial points in regard to governmental policy in this bill.

The first section provides, in part, that the Secretary of the Interior, through the Bureau of Mines, in order to conserve, produce, and sell helium gas, may acquire lands, interests therein, or options thereon. Stipulation is made that any acquisition by purchase of properties developed or constructed for helium production by private parties prior to the passage of this measure shall be at a price or prices recommended to be fair and reasonable by a board of three appraisers, the members of which board shall be selected as follows: One by the Secretary of the Interior, one by the owner of the properties sought to be acquired, and one by the two appraisers so selected.

This provision refers primarily to the acquisition by the Government of the major private property which is now in existence. If the policy of this bill becomes the policy of the Government, the acquisition of this property will virtually make the production and control and the sale of helium a Government monopoly.

There is at this time one private helium company in the United States, which company has its headquarters at Louisville, Ky., and which owns helium properties in Kansas and Colorado. When the committee had before it the proposal to give the Government the power to sell helium, it gave careful consideration to the rights and interests of this private company, which has been in the helium business since 1927. Unquestionably, the granting to the Government of the power to sell helium would result in putting out of business the one private producer of helium in this country. The committee was confronted with the problem of seeking an equitable solution of this situation. The private company indicated its willingness to sell its helium properties to the Government. It is believed that inasmuch as the Government already has a virtual monopoly of helium, due to helium resources acquired between 1927 and 1933, the monopoly should be made complete especially in view of the proposed change in policy to permit the Government to sell helium. In accordance with the provision already noted relating to the acquisition by purchase of properties developed or constructed for helium production by private parties prior to the enactment of this measure, the acquisition by purchase of this private helium company now in existence would be at a price recommended to be fair and reasonable by a board of three appraisers, one of whom, as I have said, would be designated by the Secretary of the Interior, one by the owner of the property, and one by the two appraisers so named. Under another provision of section 1 it is provided in effect that the Government shall not sell helium until this property has been acquired.

Mr. President, in the friendly negotiations between the Department of the Interior and the owners of this company fear on the part of the company immediately arose as to what would happen to them if the bill should become a law and the Government were given the right to sell helium. It was felt that under such circumstances the private helium concern would be put out of business, because the competition would be greater than the private concern could possibly withstand. As a result a provision was inserted in the bill, and it is at this juncture that I suggest the Senate give consideration to the amendment offered by the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. LOGAN], which would change that part of the bill found on page 8, beginning in line 13 and ending in line 19.

Mr. McGILL. Mr. President before the Senator takes his seat may I submit an inquiry with reference to subdivision (a), page 7? Is subdivision (a) the existing law?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Subdivision (a) is not in keeping with the words of the existing law, but the spirit is the same.

Mr. McGILL. Will the Senator explain what changes are made? I was of the opinion that subdivision (a) is existing law, but that subdivisions (b) and (c) contain some changes from the existing law. I should like to be advised by the Senator from Utah what the changes are.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. The law which exists today provides for the leasing of helium; but that law does not contemplate a governmental monopoly. The proposed law would provide for the sale of helium and it would also give to the Government a virtual monopoly of helium. Those are the differences stated in a few words.

Mr. McGILL. The provision giving the Government the right to acquire the helium properties is the substantial difference from existing law?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. The right granted in the original law to acquire is still retained, but under the theory of the bill now before the Senate it would be almost incumbent upon the Bureau of Mines to attempt to acquire all helium properties that may be in existence in the United States. The provisions of the bill, if enacted into law, would make that possible.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. LOGAN] to the amendment of the committee in the nature of a substitute, which will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. In the amendment of the committee it is proposed, on page 8, beginning in line 3, to strike out:

> Any acquisition by purchase of properties developed or constructed for helium production by private parties prior to the passage of this amendatory act shall be at a price or prices recommended to be fair and reasonable by a board of three appraisers, the members of which shall be selected as follows: One by the Secretary of the Interior, one by the owner of the properties sought to be acquired, and one by the two appraisers so selected: Provided, That as to any such properties not acquired within 6 months from date of this act, the Secretary of the Interior shall proceed by condemnation to acquire such properties; and prior to the acquisition thereof the Federal Government shall not sell helium as authorized under section 3 (b) of this act, so long as helium may be procured for medical, scientific, or commercial use, including inflation of passenger-carrying airships, at reasonable prices from the operators of such developed or constructed properties.

And to insert the following:

> The Secretary of the Interior is hereby directed, if possible under the terms hereof, to acquire by purchase all properties developed or constructed by private parties prior to the passage of this act for helium production, such purchase to be at a price or prices recommended to be fair and reasonable by at least two of a board of three appraisers, the members of which shall be selected as follows: One by the Secretary of the Interior, one by the owner of the properties sought to be acquired, and one by the two appraisers so selected. The Secretary of the Interior is authorized to incur obligations and enter into agreements for the purchase of such properties, and every such agreement shall be deemed a contractual obligation of the Government for the payment of the cost thereof, such payment to be made from any appropriations hereafter made for such purpose. Prior to the date of execution of an agreement or agreements for the purchase of such properties, the Government shall not sell helium as authorized in section 3 (b) of this act: Provided, That the foregoing restriction upon the sale of helium by the Government shall be inoperative in the event that (1) the owner of any such properties shall refuse or neglect to appoint an appraiser within 30 days after approval of this amendatory act, or (2) the owner of any such properties having so appointed an appraiser shall refuse or neglect to execute an agreement or agreements for the sale thereof, at a price recommended by at least two members of the board of appraisers, within 30 days after said appraisers shall have recommended such price.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, with reference to the amendment offered by the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. LOGAN] I desire to offer an amendment, on page 8, line 9, to strike out the words "one by the owners of the property sought to be acquired" and insert "one by the Secretary of the Treasury." I do not like the idea of the owners of the property sitting upon a board to fix and determine the price of the property which the Government is to buy. Therefore I think we should make up the board from other sources than from among the property owners themselves. Accordingly I move to strike out the "one by the owners of the property sought to be acquired" and insert "one by the Secretary of the Treasury"; so that it would read:

> One by the Secretary of the Interior, one by the Secretary of the Treasury, and one by the two appraisers so selected.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Idaho to the amendment offered by the Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. LOGAN. Mr. President, the Senator from Idaho has offered an amendment to the amendment offered by the Senator from Kentucky, as I understand.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The parliamentary status is that the committee reported a substitute for the original bill. The Senator from Kentucky offered an amendment to that substitute. The Senator from Idaho now offers an amendment to the amendment offered by the Senator from Kentucky. The question is on the adoption of the amendment offered by the Senator from Idaho to the amendment of the Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. LOGAN. If I understood correctly, the Senator from Idaho is suggesting that the board to appraise the property shall be composed of three members, one to be appointed by the Secretary of the Interior, one by the Secretary of the Treasury, and another by the two appraisers so selected. I see no objection to the amendment.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the amendment of the Senator from Idaho to the amendment of the Senator from Kentucky is agreed to.

Without objection, the amendment of the Senator from Kentucky, as amended, is agreed to.

Without objection, the substitute reported by the committee, as amended——

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, just a moment. I desire to offer a further amendment. On page 12, line 9, after the word "exportation" and the period, I move to insert the following:

> The National Munitions Control Board shall report on January 1 of each year all sales of helium made to foreign governments or to the citizens of foreign governments, giving the amount sold and to whom sold.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Mr. President, I believe the spirit of that amendment is already in the bill, though probably not in the exact words suggested by the Senator from Idaho. There is a provision in the bill that the National Munitions Control Board shall make a report annually.

Mr. BORAH. I want the bill to provide specifically for a report upon sales to foreign governments and to citizens of foreign governments.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. There is no objection at all to the amendment of the Senator from Idaho, because it is in keeping with both the spirit of the bill and what we thought were the words of the bill.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, will the Senator from Idaho yield?

Mr. BORAH. Certainly.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I suggest to the Senator from Idaho a modification of his amendment so as to provide that a report shall be made once every 6 months, on January 1 and July 1 of each year, in order that we may have current or nearly current information as to the amount of the stocks of helium which are being accumulated.

Mr. BORAH. I accept the suggestion of the Senator from Wisconsin.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Mr. President, again I say there is no objection either to the wording suggested by the Senator from Idaho or the wording suggested by the Senator from Wisconsin. I think those very provisions are made in the act of May 1, 1937, and, through the operation of that act, Congress would be given a report, not only as to helium but as to anything else produced under like conditions. To make it just as sure with reference to helium, I shall be happy to adopt the suggestion of the Senator from Idaho.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Idaho has modified his amendment. The amendment, as modified, will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. On page 12, line 9, after the word "exportation" and the period, it is proposed to insert:

> The National Munitions Control Board shall report, on January 1 and July 1 of each year, all sales of helium made to foreign governments or to the citizens of foreign governments, giving the amount sold and to whom sold.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Idaho, as modified, to the amendment of the committee in the nature of a substitute.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. LODGE addressed the Chair.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Has the Senator from Utah concluded? If so, the Senator from Massachusetts desires recognition.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. If the Senator from Massachusetts is going to speak in regard to the first section of the bill, which has to do with the creation of the Government monopoly, I think this is the best time for him to do so.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, I prefer to let the Senator from Utah make his statement and explanation, and then I shall make mine.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, will the Senator from Utah yield?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Utah yield to the Senator from New York for a question?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. I yield.

Mr. COPELAND. I have a very strong urge in my heart this morning to make a speech. When will it interfere least with the Senator from Utah for me to do so? I shall speak probably 15 or 20 minutes.

The VICE PRESIDENT. If the Senator from Utah yields to the Senator from New York, the Chair will recognize the Senator from Utah after the conclusion of the remarks of the Senator from New York.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. I have no objection to listening to the speech of the Senator from New York under those conditions; and I yield for that purpose.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Utah yields the floor, and the Senator from New York is recognized.

PARTITION OF PALESTINE

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, on July 2 I called the attention of the Senate to a rumor that Palestine was to be partitioned by the British, in contravention of our treaty and the treaty obligation resting upon Great Britain to consult us regarding any action in Palestine. Since that time the Royal High Commission has reported to the Parliament, and the Parliament has taken up with the League of Nations the question of the further partitioning of the Holy Land.

I again call the attention of the Senate to the fact that on the 3d of December 1924 a treaty was signed between the United States and Great Britain. This recited all the terms of the mandate worked out by the League of Nations, making the United States a party to that agreement. I wish that fact to be borne in mind by the Senate, because I can foresee a distressing international episode which may require some serious thought on the part of the American people and of the American Congress.

This morning I find in the press an article by Rabbi Myer Berlin, an outstanding Jew, president of one of the Jewish world organizations. It is in the form of a dispatch from Zurich, Switzerland, calling attention to the split in Palestine. The writer of the article states that this partitioning would be needless if England did its duty. With that statement I am in the fullest accord.

Last year, about a year ago now, the Senator from Vermont [Mr. AUSTIN], the then Senator from Delaware, Mr. Hastings, and I went on an unofficial mission to Palestine. We were there during the Arab-Jewish War. Wherever we traveled throughout Palestine we found dugouts and sandbags and barbed-wire entanglements. There was all the appearance of war, and there actually was war. We heard the explosion of bombs and rifle shots daily, and we saw the victims of the various atrocities in the hospitals of Palestine.

Mr. President, to me the pending proposal of the British Government is outrageous. It was only a few years ago that England induced the League of Nations to agree to the transfer to the Arabs of the territory east of the Jordan, leaving the territory west of the Jordan—the old Palestine, with Jerusalem as its head city, of course—to be the national home of the Jews. The territory west of the Jordan is a small country, about the size of Vermont or New Hampshire. It was expected that there should be permitted to immigrate to that country thousands and thousands and even millions of Jews who are now oppressed in the various parts of the world.

Under this new plan of partitioning the Jews will be given a little strip at the north of Palestine, including, as I read it—a very doubtful inclusion at that—the harbor of Haifa, which is the finest harbor in the Near East, built by Jewish money. It leaves to the Jews the northern part of Palestine, from Haifa across to the Sea of Galilee; and the Valley of Sharon, running down the west coast as far as Tel Aviv. Tel Aviv is a modern Jewish city of 175,000, which immediately adjoins ancient Joppa.

The British reserve to themselves a corridor running across from Joppa, along the line of the railroad and of the highway to Jerusalem, and including Jerusalem and Bethlehem. Then all the territory south of that corridor, and all the rest of Palestine, is to be turned over to the Arabs and added to the Trans-Jordania section.

At best, the amount of territory in Palestine was limited in area. Our unofficial commission reached the conclusion that it might be capable of maintaining a population of 5,000,000. But the proposed area, the little bit of a territory, smaller than the tiny but important State of Delaware, which is to be left to the Jews, is insufficient to maintain any considerable Jewish population.

Mr. President, there is in session at Zurich, Switzerland, the World Zionist Congress. In that Congress is Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, president of the Zionist organization of America. I read in the New York Times of Monday the ardent plea of Rabbi Wise that there may be found a way to thwart the British plan to divide Palestine; and I find here this language:

> Britain may decree partition, and the Jews may have to bow; * * * but there could be one thing worse than partition by Britain, and that is assent by the Jewish people.

Then he went on to declare that the Royal Commission's argument was that partition was necessary because of the Arab-Jewish deadlock; and then Dr. Wise said:

> To affirm the deadlock and to act upon that deadlock by the creation of two independent states grows out of Britain's unwarranted assumption that there is bound to be warfare between Jew and Arab in Palestine without regard to the fact that the assumption is one of the surest ways of evoking conflict.
> What after all, is supposed to be the chief object of partition? Peace between Jew and Arab. There could be no surer way of postponing and averting Jewish peace with the Arabs than to create a tiny Jewish state in which Arabs will almost equal the Jews in number, and next to it have a purely Arab state.

I am in the fullest accord with that statement. I can see no reason why the British, if they had the heart to do it, and the spirit to do it, and the will to do it, might not quiet the uprisings and the insurrections in Palestine. Responsible for the outrages, I suppose there are not a thousand bandits, perhaps not more than 500 of them. I said the other day that a thousand New York policemen could put down the uprising in 2 weeks, and I believe it. Unfortunately, there has been no apparent disposition and no visible effort on the part of the British to do justice to the people living in Palestine.

In this world congress going on in Zurich there are two factions—the faction taking the view of Rabbi Wise that the Jews should stand out against the British proposal, and another faction of Jews who are fearful that if they do not accept this proposal of the British they will lose all their rights in Palestine.

In short, there is no disagreement among the Jews in that conference, as I understand, and no difference among the Jews of the world that Britain should do its duty in Palestine. I am here as a competent witness, I am sure, to the fact that Britain has not done her duty there.

I should not venture to speak of these things in the Senate except for the fact that we have the treaty to which I have referred. There is a clause in that treaty, article 7, which I shall quote. Bear in mind, if I may repeat, that this treaty contains all the language of the mandate, which on order of the high command, the war council, after the war, directed the League of Nations to prepare. Great Britain was determined upon as the mandatory, and has been attempting, or pretending to attempt, to carry out the terms of the mandate as written by the League of Nations. Of course, we are not in the League, but afterward, in 1924, we did enter into a treaty where the identical language of the mandate is recited, and article VII provides:

> Nothing contained in the present convention shall be affected by any modification which may be made in the terms of the mandate as recited above unless such modification shall have been assented to by the United States.

We have not assented to any modification of the mandate. But apparently regardless of the fact that we have a part in determining what shall be done in Palestine, Great Britain has absolutely disregarded the United States.

Mr. President, I said the other day that I have no desire to have the United States go to war with Britain over this matter, but I do feel that the attention of Britain should be called to our views. I shall present a series of resolutions which I shall ask to have referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Before I present the resolutions, I wish to speak of another thing. There are certain countries where the Jews are having a terrible time. Probably they are having more trouble in Poland than anywhere else, but in Poland, in Germany, in Rumania, and in other countries they are having such distress as is comparable with the worst of the troubles the Jews have had during 2,000 years of distress.

I do not say this upon my own authority, but I am told—and I am speaking of it here in order that my words may have wings to reach those who are in authority—that there is a distinct animosity against the Jews upon the part of many of our consuls in the countries I have mentioned. In the granting of visas for travel to the United States the Jew is discriminated against in those offices. I speak of that, as I say, not upon my own authority, but upon information and belief, in order that the State Department may have the knowledge that someone is complaining about the treatment accorded the Jews who might come in under the quotas.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. COPELAND. I yield.

Mr. CLARK. Is the Senator informed whether those consuls are natives of the United States, or are they natives of the countries to which they are assigned? What I am getting at is this: It seems to me that what the Senator has just outlined, if it be substantiated by an investigation of the facts, is a subject which calls for the most serious investigation and most stringent action at the earliest possible date.

Mr. COPELAND. I wish to say, in reply to what the Senator has said, that through my lifetime I have traveled this world pretty generally, as has the Senator from Missouri. I have observed many United States consuls, native-born Americans, most of them, located in foreign posts, who have been there so long that they have forgotten there is a United States so far as their hearts and spirits go. If I had my way, I would bring back to the United States at least once in 3 years every consul located abroad, in order that he might live here 3 or 4 months and absorb some of the old American spirit. But that, perhaps, is aside from the question.

Mr. President, I feel very earnestly about this matter. I have taken an interest in the Jewish question through many years. Where I was born there were no Jews. I never saw a Jew until I went to college, and then I went to New York, where live one-seventh of all the Jews in the world. They attracted my interest. I know their sentiment about this matter. I know how deeply they feel.

In view of the unanimous passage through the Congress of the Balfour declaration years ago, and the existence of the treaty between Britain and the United States, we cannot disregard, we have no right to disregard, the rights of Jews in the Holy Land. I think they should be aided in their desire to go there. There is room for four or five million of them. Under the mandate they are permitted to buy lands, and public lands which are not required by the Government itself should be turned over to them, according to the terms of the mandate. But there has been discouragement of immigration. At one time actually an end was made of immigration of Jews, and no encouragement on the part of the British is given to the Jews to go to Palestine from various countries. Millions of dollars of American money and contributions from other sections of the world have gone to the erection of fine buildings, fine hospitals, fine schools, the great harbor I have mentioned, one of the finest hydroelectric power plants in the world, all built with Jewish money. In view of the rights they possess, it is incumbent upon the Congress of the United States, in my judgment, to express to them some degree of sympathy in their plight.

Mr. President, I submit a resolution and ask to have it read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the clerk will read the resolution.

The legislative clerk read the resolution (S. Res. 174), as follows:

> Whereas the Zionist World Congress is now in session in Zurich, Switzerland, discussing the pros and cons of the British proposal to perform a surgical operation upon Palestine, partitioning the territory into three parts, leaving to the Jews territory not in excess of one-quarter the area west of the Jordan; and
>
> Whereas there is a difference of opinion in the Zionist Congress as to what attitude it should take, Rabbi Wise opposing the partitioning and some of the other delegates expressing an inclination to accept the proposal for fear that otherwise the Jews may hazard all their privileges in Palestine; and
>
> Whereas the United States entered into a treaty with His Britannic Majesty on December 3, 1924, a treaty defining the obligations of the two Governments as regards the establishment of a Jewish national home in Palestine; and
>
> Whereas article VII of that convention recites that no modification may be made in the terms of the mandate without the consent of the United States; and
>
> Whereas the Senate has learned of the proposal of the British, in contravention of the existing terms of the mandate, to partition the Holy Land, giving the Jews a very limited territory: Therefore be it
> Resolved, That the State Department be requested to transmit to the Senate such information as it may possess, and which it may properly give, regarding the present situation in Palestine. It is desired to know what steps are being taken by our Government to protect our interests under the treaty with Great Britain, and vigorously to represent to the mandatory, the British Sovereign, our anxiety over the situation, with a forthright indication of our unwillingness to accept any modification of the mandate without the knowledge and consent of the Government of the United States.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, this is a matter so serious, and is so much entitled to study, that I am not going to presume to ask that the resolution be considered and adopted immediately. It deserves the study of the Committee on Foreign Relations. I know that the able chairman of that committee, now presiding over the Senate, will see that it is given attention, and I ask that we may have an early report from the committee. Certainly the Senate has a right to learn from the State Department what steps are being taken by our Government to protect our interests under the treaty to which I have referred. We have a right also to demand that the State Department shall vigorously protest to the mandatory that we are anxious about this matter. We should in some manner make clear that the United States Senate is not going to sit idly by, that it intends at least to express its sentiment regarding the effort on the part of Britain to make a scrap of paper of a solemn treaty.

Mr. President, I think I shall not add more at the moment. I thank the Senator from Utah for his courtesy in yielding to me, and I now yield the floor.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The resolution submitted by the Senator from New York will be referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, the Senator from New York [Mr. COPELAND] has been discussing certain phases of the Palestine question, a question in which many Americans are interested. I have given some attention to the situation in Palestine and have been interested in the working out of the Balfour declaration. I visited Palestine a number of years ago in order that I might ascertain the situation existing there, and whether the Balfour declaration was being carried out in good faith by Great Britain. If I may be pardoned a personal allusion, I will say that I had the honor to be consulted by the President of the United States, Woodrow Wilson, when the Balfour declaration was being formulated. I am betraying no secret when I say that President Wilson was interested in the establishment in Palestine of a Jewish Home, and in the protection of Jews who were in Palestine, and those who would seek homes there in the future.

The Balfour declaration was devised for the purpose not only of protecting the Jews who were then in Palestine, but also for the purpose of forming a Jewish home to which the Jews who were being cruelly treated in a number of countries in the world, might find an abiding place.

I visited all parts of Palestine, including those parts inhabited by Arabs, whose members were approximately 600,000. They had made but little progress in hundreds of years and many were living in squalor and in ignorance. Thousands of Jews who have gone to Palestine during the preceding quarter of a century had, by their thrift and energy, converted waste and barren lands into fruitful fields. They had built homes and cities and developed important industries, which had given employment not only to the Jews but to many Arabs.

There was room in Palestine, including, of course, Trans-Jordania, for several million inhabitants. There was room for more than a million Jews, and they by their efforts and the contributions which would be made by members of their race, and by Christians in the United States and Europe expected to build up a great state, in which Jews and Arabs would enjoy peace and prosperity.

Mr. President, I found when I was there no bitterness between the Arabs and the Jews, except in rare instances, and that was fomented, I regret to say, not by Jews or by Arabs but by some other elements which I shall not indicate at the present time.

Mr. President, a number of years ago an organization was formed in Washington called the Pro-Palestine Foundation of America. I was honored by being made president of that organization. One of its members, then Vice President of the United States, the Honorable Charles C. Curtis, deceased, was elected vice president. The able Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE] was a member of that organization. There were many others—Senators, Congressmen, and public-spirited men, all Christians—who were members of the organization.

It seemed to me a few days ago, when I learned of the purpose of the British Government to dishonor the pledges which had been made and to violate the obligation which had been entered into under the Balfour declaration, that a protest should be made against that course. I conferred with members of the organization referred to, and joined in preparing a statement in the nature of a protest, which was cabled to London, to be considered just before the British Parliament acted upon the report of their commission, which had contained a recommendation, based upon faulty evidence and upon imperfect understanding of the facts, that Palestine be divided into three parts. One small part was to be allocated to the Jews, the remainder to be given to the Arabs.

The plan of the British commission seems to me so unjust that I believe that Christians in the United States and elsewhere were not only justified but the situation warranted their condemnation of the commission's report. The statement was cabled to London and, as I am advised, was brought to the attention of members of the British Government. I do not mean to say that the cabled protest deterred the Parliament of Great Britain from adopting the report made by the commission. At any rate, the report was not adopted, and the whole matter was referred to the League of Nations, and a committee of that body is now considering this entire question.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Utah yield to the Senator from Idaho?

Mr. KING. I yield.

Mr. BORAH. I do not understand what it was that had been referred to the League of Nations.

Mr. KING. The report made by the British commission.

Mr. BORAH. As to the division of Palestine?

Mr. KING. Yes; as to the division of Palestine.

Mr. BORAH. And is it understood that the decision of the League of Nations will be controlling?

Mr. KING. As to that I make no comment; but at any rate, if the Senator will pardon me, I will say that the opposition to the report in the Parliament was so great that the expectation of the Government that they would secure the adoption of the report immediately was not realized, and action upon it was deferred.

Mr. BORAH. I cannot understand why they sent it to the League of Nations.

Mr. KING. For the reason, if I may say so, that Great Britain has a mandate under the League of Nations and under the treaty, and for that reason, I presume, it was conceived to be proper that the League of Nations should pass upon the question before Great Britain adopted a policy that was in contravention of the obligations and provisions of the mandate under which Great Britain had control over Palestine.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. KING. I yield.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, the Royal High Commission was in session in London while we were in Palestine, and appeared in Palistine as we left. I wondered whether that was a mere coincidence. We were not welcome in Palestine, so far as the British were concerned. The Senator from Vermont [Mr. AUSTIN] will testify that it took some strong, vigorous language for us to be permitted to make the inspection of the Jewish colonies and to make other trips through Palestine. We insisted that we had certain rights there, and the officials finally acceded to our wishes.

When this Royal High Commission reported in favor of the partitioning, and the report was presented to Parliament, the Liberal members of the Parliament were very critical of the proposal. Then it was agreed, as the Senator from Utah [Mr. KING] has said, that the matter should be referred to the League of Nations. I am glad the British realize that their hold upon Palestine and the mandatory power itself are dependent upon the action of the League.

Mr. BORAH. And what the League does is dependent upon the action of Great Britain.

Mr. COPELAND. Yes; that is true. That is the unfortunate part about it. So far as I am concerned, I am most resentful of the situation.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I desire to invite the attention of the Senate, because it states the situation, to the statement cabled to London a few days ago, and before action was had upon the report of the high commission.

PROPALESTINE FEDERATION OF AMERICA APPEAL TO CHRISTIANS OF ALL DENOMINATIONS IN THE UNITED STATES

In 1917 the United States entered the World War in association with the Allied Powers, and gave of their blood and treasure in aid of the common cause.

It is not too much to say that because of the help of the United States the cause of the Allies and associated powers was triumphant. Subjugated peoples were liberated and restored to national independence. Treaties safeguarding the political integrity of smaller nations were promulgated and ratified, and historical wrongs were rectified.

An outstanding act of historical justice was the Balfour declaration through which Great Britain pledged herself to restore the holy land to the scattered children of Israel. The Palestine mandate sealed this pledge. It was ratified by 52 nations and received the unanimous endorsement of both Houses of the American Congress—

I may say, in parenthesis, that the Congress of the United States was cognizant of the Balfour declaration and expressed by their votes approval of its terms.

A special treaty, in which the Palestine mandate was incorporated verbatim, was concluded between the United States and Great Britain in 1924 by which the American Government became a party to this sacred trust.

To our profound regret the mandatory power—

Which is Great Britain—

is now about to embark upon a new course, which means the cancelation of all the pledges solemnly given to the Jewish people and to the world, as set forth in the mandate for Palestine. Great Britain purposes to partition the Holy Land and to surrender two-thirds of the country to a group of Arab feudal lords on the pretense that Arabs and Jews cannot live peacefully together.

This pretense is not borne out by the facts.

Jews and Arabs have lived, and could continue to live, in Palestine side by side in peace and harmony, enjoying the benefits of helpful cooperation if let alone. The disturbances in Palestine since 1921 were artificially engendered by outside influences, for which the British administration of Palestine is chiefly responsible, as attested by the report of three United States Senators who visited the Holy Land in 1936.

Moreover, from the beginning of its administration the mandatory power broke its pledge and violated its trust. In 1922 it arbitrarily tore off the sparsely settled territory east of the Jordan River and proclaimed it an independent Arab province, to which no Jews were to be admitted. This indefensible act reduced by three-fifths the area available for Jewish settlement. In addition, Great Britain restricted Jewish immigration to the rest of Palestine, but placed no restriction upon Arab immigration. The Arab population was allowed to materially increase thus adversely affecting the development of Palestine as a Jewish national home, to which the British Government had solemnly pledged itself.

The "political surgery" now proposed by the British Cabinet would be the climax of a series of what many have regarded as flagrant violations of an international trust.

To excuse this betrayal of the Jewish hope, Great Britain endorses the false assertion that Palestine is an "Arab land." History refutes this contention. Palestine belonged not to the Arabs but to the Jewish people. Less than one-twentieth of the Arab race dwell in Palestine.

Most of the Arab people have achieved national independence and now live under their own rulers which hold sway over an area of a million and a half square miles.

In proportion to their population the Arabs possess more territory than any other people on the face of the earth, whereas the Jews have not possessed since Palestine was taken from them at the time of the dispersion any territory over which they could exercise political sovereignty.

In the brief period that has elapsed since the ratification of the mandate for Palestine, Jews from all over the world have poured both their treasure and manpower into the Holy Land and transformed its barren regions into a flourishing garden. They have demonstrated their faith in Great Britain's solemn pledge and in the guarantees offered by the nations of the world, by making great sacrifices to rebuild Palestine. They have lavished their treasure and devotion upon the promised land, firmly believing that the hour of their long awaited redemption had struck; that God's promise for Zion's restoration was about to be fulfilled.

Now the British Government declares to the Jewish people and the world that four-fifths of Palestine must belong to the Arabs, a large number of whom the British brought into the country. The Palestine mandate seems to be regarded by them as another scrap of paper, and is deliberately torn into shreds in defiance of the solemn obligation assumed before the civilized world.

It was an American President—Woodrow Wilson—who cooperated in the framing of the Balfour declaration. The United States made it possible for Great Britain to receive the trusteeship over Palestine. Can it be that America will remain indifferent to the ultimate fate of that mandate in the drafting of which it had a considerable share? Not only is it America's privilege but in part her responsibility to exert her influence to prevent the proposed violation of an international covenant.

The proposed invalidation of the Palestine mandate is a grave infringement of international law. It is also a cruel act of persecution against a people to whom universal Christendom owes a long overdue debt of gratitude.

This is an opportunity for Christians to make amends for wrongs, perpetrated against the Jewish people since pagan Rome despoiled their country and forced them into nearly 2,000 years of exile.

Our appeal therefore is made to American Christians of all denominations to whom the integrity of the Holy Land is sacred, to all who believe in justice and in the sanctity of international covenants, to join in requesting of our Government such action as will prevent this tragic and disastrous calamity. Great Britain should understand that America cannot assent to a unilateral abrogation of the Palestine mandate in violation of a solemn pledge given by her to help restore Palestine to the Jewish people.

That document was signed, "Pro-Palestine Federation of America", and by myself and other members of the organization.

ADDITIONAL APPROPRIATION FOR UNITED STATES CONSTITUTION SESQUICENTENNIAL COMMISSION

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the action of the House of Representatives disagreeing to the amendments of the Senate to the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 363) to authorize an additional appropriation to further the work of the United States Constitution Sesquicentennial Commission, and requesting a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon.

Mr. ASHURST. I move that the Senate insist upon its amendments, agree to the request of the House for a conference, and that the Chair appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The motion was agreed to; and the President pro tempore appointed Mr. VAN NUYS, Mr. BURKE, and Mr. BORAH conferees on the part of the Senate.

LOANS ON 1937 COTTON CROPS

Mr. CONNALLY and Mr. THOMAS of Utah addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Utah.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, the Senator from Texas merely wishes the floor to address the Senate for a few minutes.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. I yield for that purpose, with the understanding that I will have the floor after the Senator from Texas concludes.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will try to recognize the Senator from Utah after the Senator from Texas shall have concluded.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, I send to the clerk's desk a joint resolution and ask that it be read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection the clerk will read as requested.

The joint resolution (S. J. Res. 205) providing for benefit payments to cotton producers with respect to cotton produced in 1937 was read the first time by its title and the second time at length, as follows:

Resolved etc., That notwithstanding the provisions of section 32 of the act entitled "An act to amend the Agricultural Adjustment Act, and for other purposes", approved August 24, 1935, as amended, the Secretary of Agriculture is authorized and directed to use any funds available under such section 32 for the payment of benefits to cotton producers with respect to cotton produced by them in 1937. All such payments shall be made on the basis of 2½ cents a pound of ⅞-inch Middling cotton, and applications for such payments shall be made under such rules and regulations as the Secretary of Agriculture shall prescribe.

SEC. 2. There are hereby authorized to be appropriated such additional sums as may be necessary to carry out the purposes of section 1 of this act.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, I am not asking for immediate consideration of the joint resolution, but I should like to have it referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the resolution will be referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, the situation in the cotton industry has reached a very critical state. I do not wish to interfere with the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, which I understand is already considering a bill which will probably be reported today or tomorrow, with the hope of enactment at this session, but I do want the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry to consider the idea embraced in the joint resolution in connection with the bill which it is now considering.

Mr. President, in 1935, during the existence of the 12-cent loan provision on cotton there was an effort made to extend the loan for another year. At that time, however, we agreed upon a plan, which was put into operation, whereby the grower was permitted to sell his cotton on the open market and the Government would then pay him a benefit up to 12 cents. The result was very helpful, because that plan moved the cotton out of the country, whereas the loan was accumulating the cotton, the surplus was becoming larger and larger in the domestic market, and foreign producers of cotton were getting the benefit of the world market.

I wish to call the attention of Senators to the Agricultural Adjustment Act as amended in 1935. I offered and secured the adoption of an amendment, which is now section 32 of that act, which provides, as follows:

SEC. 32. There is hereby appropriated for each fiscal year beginning with the fiscal year ending June 30, 1936, an amount equal to 30 percent of the gross receipts from duties collected under the customs laws during the period January 1 to December 31, both inclusive, preceding the beginning of each such fiscal year. Such sums shall be maintained in a separate fund and shall be used by the Secretary of Agriculture only to (1) encourage the exportation of agricultural commodities and products thereof by the payment of benefits in connection with the exportation thereof or of indemnities for losses incurred in connection with such exportation or by payments to producers in connection with the production of that part of any agricultural commodity required for domestic consumption; (2) encourage the domestic consumption of such commodities or products by diverting them, by the payment of benefits or indemnities or by other means, from the normal channels of trade and commerce.

Clause (3) has been amended, so I shall not read it at this time.

Mr. President, cotton is the greatest export commodity produced in America. The cotton industry is one that cannot be considered simply from a domestic standpoint. We must export cotton. Cotton cannot receive any benefits from a protective tariff. For years it has been the theory of some of us in the cotton section that, since the cotton producer could not secure any tariff benefits on his product, but in the meantime had to pay tariff benefits to all other industries in the country, a sizable portion of the income from tariff duties should be paid to the cotton farmer so as to compensate him somewhat for the burden which he has been bearing all these years for the benefit of protected industry. It is the old idea of the agricultural debenture which twice passed the Senate in 1929, but was defeated in the House of Representatives.

It was with that idea in mind that the Senator from Texas secured the adoption of what is now section 32 of the Agricultural Adjustment Act. Last year 30 percent of the customs duties amounted to $125,000,000. Out of that sum the Secretary of Agriculture has allocated $20,000,000 to some other agricultural commodities for the purpose of paying them benefits and otherwise aiding the producers of those commodities. There is now in the hands of the Secretary of Agriculture $105,000,000 which could be employed and utilized for the payment of benefits on cotton to encourage its exportation.

I am concerned not simply with getting a fair price for the producers of cotton but in getting the cotton into the channels of foreign commerce so as to discourage competition from foreign cotton producers. If we bottle up all the domestic cotton here at home and foreigners can command the world market, it will hurt not only the cotton producers but the export trade of the United States and every great industry in the United States from whom the cotton producers of the Nation purchase manufactured goods.

The resolution would authorize and direct the Secretary of Agriculture to use the fund prescribed in section 32 of the Agricultural Adjustment Act to pay to cotton producers 2½ cents per pound on 1937 cotton, basis ⅞-inch Middling.

I understand the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry have been considering and expect to report a bill either today or tomorrow. I do not know what the terms of the measure may be, but I hope the committee in considering the bill has recognized the fundamental idea embodied in the resolution, a policy which has already received the approval of Congress. It is a part of the statutory law. It is the policy of Congress under section 32 of the Agricultural Adjustment Act, which is now in force and which is being administered by the Secretary of Agriculture. There will be no necessity, probably, to make loans if the resolution should be adopted, because the producer could sell his cotton on the market, receive the benefit payment, and the situation would be solved until such time as the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry may report a comprehensive measure.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. CONNALLY. I yield.

Mr. HUGHES. As I understand, the Senator said the substance of his resolution is already in the law?

Mr. CONNALLY. I say the policy is in section 32 of the Agricuditural Adjustment Act of 1935.

Mr. HUGHES. Then, why need the Senator embrace it in the resolution?

Mr. CONNALLY. I am trying to get some action under it. I am proposing to direct the Secretary of Agriculture to do something.

Mr. President, I wish to emphasize again the importance to all America of this great export commodity—cotton—and how important it is to America to keep the export balance in the form of raw cotton, which we ship all over the world. If the present market is allowed to go to the distressing figure which is threatened, not only will cotton producers in the South be prostrate but it will have a tremendous effect in retarding the rising tide of prosperity which we hope is going to continue here in the United States.

I commend to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, and I commend to Senators now present in the Chamber, the idea of embodying that kind of policy in any bill which the committee may present and in any measure which the Senate may consider.

Mr. ELLENDER. Mr. President, will the Senator from Texas yield?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Texas yield to the Senator from Louisiana?

Mr. CONNALLY. I yield.

Mr. ELLENDER. What is the present status of the 30-percent export fund to which the Senator referred?

Mr. CONNALLY. Does the Senator refer to the 30 percent of the income from tariff duties?

Mr. ELLENDER. Would it not be necessary for Congress to pass a bill appropriating the amount?

Mr. CONNALLY. No. The Secretary of Agriculture has $105,000,000 now available, and my resolution would authorize such additional appropriations as may be required.

Mr. ELLENDER. In addition to the 30 percent?

Mr. CONNALLY. Yes. Whatever the Secretary of Agriculture may say he needs, we can then appropriate.

Mr. ELLENDER. I understood that sometime ago the Secretary returned to the Treasury, $20,000,000 out of this 30-percent export fund.

Mr. CONNALLY. That was from receipts of a former year.

Mr. ELLENDER. Was not that sum originally made available by way of appropriation?

Mr. CONNALLY. No; it was done under section 32, which is a yearly appropriation. I talked with the office of the Secretary of Agriculture this morning and was told that the portion of last year's customs receipts available under the Agricultural Adjustment Act amounted to $125,000,000; that he had allocated $20,000,000 of that sum for the payments under the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act, leaving $105,000,000 now in his hands, available for the purpose covered by my resolution. Out of this $105,000,000 the Secretary plans to expend $40,000,000 for dairy products, fruits, and so forth, leaving $65,000,000 unallotted. If that amount should be exhausted we would have to appropriate sufficient money to make up the required sum.

Mr. ELLENDER. What period of time was necessary to raise the sum of $125,000,000?

Mr. CONNALLY. One year.

Mr. ELLENDER. What became of the moneys collected during prior years?

Mr. CONNALLY. They were utilized for benefit payments to agriculture. I do not know whether they were all used or whether a part of the fund reverted to the Treasury.

Mr. ELLENDER. Then it is the conception of the Senator from Texas that the Secretary of Agriculture, without further action by or order from Congress, can use as much as $105,000,000 from said fund in order to relieve the cotton situation?

Mr. CONNALLY. It probably would require action such as is proposed in my resolution. My resolution not only authorizes, but directs him to do so. We are trying to stimulate the Secretary to meet the critical situation which faces the greatest agricultural export commodity in the United States and which vitally affects the trade and commerce and industry of all the people of the United States.

Mr. ELLENDER. The Congress must take action without further delay in order to relieve the cotton farmers of the South. My fear is that the Secretary of Agriculture will not have sufficient funds available from the 30 percent export appropriation referred to by the Senator from Texas. I am informed that of the $105,000,000 now in hand, $40,000,000 has been earmarked for payments on all commodities which do not participate in the soil-conservation program, such as dairy products, fruits, eggs, and so forth. This leaves $65,000,000 which has not been earmarked, but which I am informed must be made available to meet the demands from rice, tobacco, peanuts, and other crops which are being hard hit at the present time. Aside from the question of fund shortage from that source, there are so many other commodities dependent on said fund that it might be difficult to have the Congress change the law. I believe the safest way to proceed is to provide for a direct appropriation. I am in hopes that the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, that is now considering the matter, will report a bill that will protect the cotton farmers from disaster.

The question presented is a very vexing one. A safe way to proceed and one that would probably be looked upon with favor by the Congress is to provide for loans to farmers at a given minimum per bale of 500 pounds and then make subsidy payments available to all of the farmers who comply with such control legislation as may be submitted to and passed by the Congress at its next session. As far as I am personally concerned I am more than willing to remain in Washington until the problem is actually solved. I repeat, Mr. President, the cotton farmers need help now and every effort of the Congress should be put forth to provide immediate and adequate relief.

IMPROVEMENT OF RIVERS AND HARBORS—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. COPELAND submitted the following report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 7051) authorizing the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 1, 2, 3, 4, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, and 52, and agree to the same.

That the Senate recede from its amendment numbered 5.

The committee of conference recommends the transfer of amendment numbered 47 to page 23, after line 10; and the transfer of amendment numbered 48 to page 23, after line 24.

ROYAL S. COPELAND,
MORRIS SHEPPARD,
CHAS. L. MCNARY,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

J. J. MANSFIELD,

The report was agreed to.

PRODUCTION AND USE OF HELIUM GAS

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 1567) to amend the act entitled "An act to amend the act entitled 'An act authorizing the conservation, production, and exploitation of helium gas, a mineral resource pertaining to the national defense, and to the development of commercial aeronautics, and for other purposes.'"

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Mr. President, the second section of the bill under consideration is the one which authorizes the Bureau of Mines to carry on its functions in the control, production, and purification of helium. The section is practically consistent with the present law.

Before I pass on to section 3 I should emphasize the fact that in section 1 there is provision for the creation of a monopoly, and that if the bill becomes a law the Government will have established a monopoly in the control, production and sale of helium.

Section 3, in part, authorizes the Army and Navy and other agencies of the Federal Government to requisition helium from the Bureau of Mines and to make payments therefor from any applicable appropriations by advancing or repaying to and for the use of the Bureau proportionate shares of the expenses incident to the administration, operation, and maintenance of the Government's helium plants and properties. The point there is that the aim of the Government is to see that its helium properties are self-supporting; and, of course, when the Government uses helium, the helium-controlled property will be given credit for the helium which the Government uses.

It is in this section that the change in the law occurs, providing for the sale of helium. Under present law—the act of March 3, 1925, as amended—any surplus helium produced by the Government may, until needed for Government use, be leased to American citizens or American corporations under regulations approved by the President.

Apparently the purpose of providing in existing law that surplus helium could only be leased was to make any helium in the possession of commercial users available to the United States Government in time of need. There is in the present law, then, the spirit of monopoly in case the Government needs the products of the privately controlled helium producers. The Department of the Interior advises that leasing a commodity that is dissipated in use, such as helium, presents questions of interpretation; and in this sentence is the key to the reason for the first helium bill that was presented to Congress and put on the calendar. It was because the old leasing provisions simply did not work.

When helium was leased and used, it was discovered that much of it was dissipated—so much, in fact, that in a voyage across the Atlantic it is estimated that 5 percent of the helium would be dissipated into the air. In order that the Government might enjoy the privilege of allowing the use of its surplus helium, it is provided in the pending bill that this helium shall be sold under regulations instead of leased.

Section 3 further provides that any helium not needed for Government use may be produced and sold, upon payment in advance, in quantities and under regulations approved by the President, for the following uses: Medical, scientific, and commercial, including inflation of passenger-carrying airships. This section, therefore, is an important section and deals with the new provision in the bill.

It is stated in the text of the bill, as proposed to be amended, that such sales of helium shall be at reasonable prices, established by regulations approved by the President, based upon the cost of acquiring, developing, maintaining, and operating the Government properties used for such helium production. In order to bring about these results, so that helium production will be self-sustaining, a helium-production fund is provided for in the bill and is also found in section 3.

Section 3 also deals with the safeguards on the exportation of helium. The Senate Military Affairs Committee is unanimous in the belief that helium should not be exported for military purposes. That fact probably should be emphasized many times, because, judging from the questions which were asked yesterday, that is the thing which is upon the minds of most of the Senators.

Mr. LEWIS rose.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. I yield to the Senator from Illinois.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, I do not desire to interrupt the Senator. I was interested at this point to hear the able Senator as he moved along on that phase of the subject, as I am one of those who interrupted him yesterday in connection with that particular branch of the discussion. I merely pause to hear the Senator through, not to interrupt him.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. While the Senator from Illinois is a signer of the minority report on the bill, I am sure he is in complete agreement with the statement that the Senate Military Affairs Committee is unanimous in the belief that helium should not be exported for military purposes. There can be no disagreement on that subject, I take it.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, if I may be pardoned, that has been the particular feature of my own objection to this measure, and I am sure it is the particular feature which is of concern to the able Senator from Vermont [Mr. AUSTIN] and the able junior Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE]. We indulge the fear that by allowing helium to be passed over to a foreign government on the theory of humanity, or serving commercial uses, we shall have no power to guard against their transferring it to any other government that might wish to use it for war purposes. Thus, it was a matter of caution on my own part, and I am sure on the part of others in the minority, to prevent such helium being used for war purposes, not only by opponents of America but by those who might use it as against some country that is friendly to America.

As the able Senator from Utah correctly says, there is a general belief on the part of the whole committee that something may be done to avoid that. It is because of the fear of inability to avoid it that the minority report is filed.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. That is true, Mr. President.

The Senate Military Affairs Committee is unanimous in the belief that helium should not be exported for military purposes. That statement I repeat. A majority of the committee, however, does recommend making helium available to persons and corporations of even other countries of the world for medical, scientific, and commercial purposes.

In view of its conviction that helium should not be exported for military purposes, the subcommittee to which this proposed legislation was referred, the committee itself, and the executive departments concerned, devoted long and careful study to the working out of adequate, detailed, and very positive safeguards relative to the exportation of helium. In fact, Mr. President, we believe that every conceivable safeguard has been provided in the bill.

Section 4 of this measure provides, in the first place, that no helium at all may be exported from the United States, or from its Territories and possessions, without a license obtained from the Secretary of State authorizing the exportation. The section sets forth two methods of obtaining a license to export helium. First, no helium gas shall be exported from the United States, or from its Territories and possessions, until after application has been made to the Secretary of State, and a license authorizing the exportation has been obtained from him on the joint recommendation of all the members of the National Munitions Control Board and the Secretary of the Interior. The National Munitions Control Board is composed of the Secretaries of State, Treasury, War, Navy, and Commerce. The Secretary of State is chairman of the board. And here, Mr. President, it will be proper for me to explain the fact that in section 4 we have what is assumed, I think, by everyone to be a rather complex method of control.

The committee itself, I think, for the most part was perfectly happy to allow the exportation of helium after license had been granted by the Secretary of State under regulations approved by the President of the United States; but to emphasize the fact that we attempted to be so careful in this matter that in no possible way could any helium be used for war purposes in a foreign land, we went to the extreme of writing into the bill the following provision:

SEC. 4. No helium gas shall be exported from the United States, or from its Territories and possessions, until after application has been made to the Secretary of State and a license authorizing said exportation has been obtained from him on the joint recommendation of all the members of the National Munitions Control Board and the Secretary of the Interior.

That means, Mr. President, that the heads of six departments of the Government, under the direction of the President, will have to give approval for the exportation. This, I again emphasize, came about as the result of a desire on the part of the committee to see to it that no helium could possibly be used for war purposes in foreign lands.

There is a second way in which helium may be exported. Under regulations governing exportation of helium approved by the National Munitions Control Board and the Secretary of the Interior, export shipments of quantities of helium that are not of military importance as defined in said regulations, and which do not exceed a maximum to be specified therein, may be made under license granted by the Secretary of State without such specific recommendation of the members of the National Munitions Control Board and the Secretary of the Interior. It is to be noted that in exporting even small quantities of helium exportation can take place only under regulations approved by the National Munitions Control Board and the Secretary of the Interior and not until after a license has been obtained from the Secretary of State.

Furthermore, it is specifically stated in section 4 that regulations governing the exportation of helium, which are to be drafted by the National Munitions Control Board and the Secretary of the Interior, shall not permit accumulations of helium in quantities of military importance in any foreign country. That would probably answer in a satisfactory way the question which the Senator from Illinois has brought up. They shall not permit the exportation of helium to countries named in proclamations of the President issued pursuant to section 1 (a) or (c) of the Neutrality Act of May 1, 1937, while such proclamations are in effect, and such regulations shall require exporters to submit a sworn statement to the Secretary of State showing the quantity, destination, consignee, and intended use of each proposed exportation.

I may add, Mr. President, that the amendment offered by the Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH], as modified by the amendment of the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE], and accepted, puts even a tighter restriction upon this matter by providing for a report every 6 months to the Congress of the United States.

Section 4 need not be explained more than to say that it carries a penalty provision.

Thus, I think it may be maintained, and properly maintained, that as a result of the hearings, as a result of the discussion in the committee, as a result of the desire on the part of the heads of many of the departments, and of the President himself, especially after the Hindenburg disaster, to make our helium available for medical, for scientific, and for commercial purposes, not only to the citizens of the United States but to the citizens of the world, we have framed a bill which will so provide, a bill protected by every safeguard which the committee could muster in the administration of the control of this great and important commodity.

Mr. LODGE obtained the floor.

Mr. AUSTIN. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Byrd	Glass	Lodge
Andrews	Byrnes	Green	Logan
Ashurst	Capper	Guffey	Lonergan

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, I again announce the absence of the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BAILEY], the Senator from Ohio [Mr. DONAHEY], and the Senator from Iowa [Mr. HERRING], who are necessarily detained on official business. The junior Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] expects to be present in the Senate this afternoon.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ELLENDER in the chair). Eighty-four Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, as one of the very junior Members of this body, I dislike to detain Senators, but I feel that as one who was a member of the subcommittee which investigated this matter it is encumbent upon me to convey my views briefly to the Senate.

The bill before us raises three major questions. The first question is, Do we want to create a Government monopoly in the production of helium? The second question is, Do we want to make helium gas available to foreigners in this year, 1937? The third question is, Do we want to abdicate our own authority here in the Congress, so far as the disposition of this asset is concerned, by turning it over to the executive branch of the Government? I shall address myself to those three questions in that order.

Helium is a gas which is lighter than air and which is noninflammable. The supply is not inexhaustible.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, did the Senator say that the sources of the supply were not exhaustible?

Mr. LODGE. No; that they are not inexhaustible. In fact, there is fear that if too many holes are punched in the rock where helium is found the helium will disappear more rapidly.

The uses to which the gas is put are for the inflation of lighter-than-air craft, and, experimentally, in recent years, for the treatment of respiratory diseases.

Helium is found in useful quantities only in the United States, so far as we know, and it occurs in the States of Texas, Utah, Colorado, and Kansas, to my knowledge, and perhaps in a few other States in the western section of the country.

The bill gives the Government the power to acquire all of the helium resources which exist. By virtue of that fact it shuts out the people of Texas, Kansas, Colorado, and Utah. If the time should ever arrive when this gas could be profitably used in various kinds of scientific work, and this bill has been enacted into law, all the great sources of supply will be the property of the Government instead of being open to the citizens of the respective States for their own development.

Of course, if we are to allow the Government to sell helium from its own plant in the open market, in the way the bill provides, then naturally we must acquire the private agencies which exist, because the Government can sell much cheaper than a private agency can. For this reason the bill provides for the purchase of the Girdler Corporation, of Louisville, Ky., which I believe is the only private corporation engaged in the production of helium, and the bill provides that an unspecified amount of the taxpayers' money shall be used for that purpose.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LODGE. I yield.

Mr. CONNALLY. Is it not true also that the Government cannot purchase the helium alone, because it is found in a natural gas, which requires treatment in order to convert it into helium? The Government under this bill would probably purchase many gas wells and oil wells and other properties not solely devoted to the production of helium.

Mr. LODGE. The Senator from Texas is correct. Moreover, it was brought out before the committee that in the illuminating-gas plants in those Western States at the present time the helium is taken out of the gas and allowed to be dissipated, because it cannot be used for illuminating purposes, which bears out the Senator's point that helium is found mixed in with other substances.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LODGE. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. That does not apply to the particular property which is involved, which was mentioned by the Senator.

Mr. LODGE. No; that is true.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. LODGE. I yield.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Does this bill provide for an unlimited liability, or has an estimate been made as to the expense that is being incurred?

Mr. LODGE. I know of no estimate at all; and the power conferred in this bill provides for the purchase of all sources of production as they may occur.

Mr. VANDENBERG. What is the limit of expense to which such purchase may go?

Mr. LODGE. I have no idea whatever as to the expense that may ultimately be involved to the taxpayers of the United States.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LODGE. I yield.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. I will answer that question. I think we have a pretty good idea of about how much it will cost the people of the United States from the experience we have already had with helium. The production of helium has been practically a self-sustaining enterprise, when considered from the standpoint of buying and selling, and it is understood by all the experts that if helium production becomes a Government monopoly not only will enough money be made from the sale of the product to take care of the purchase of any new helium deposits, so far as the Government is concerned, but that all the money required will come entirely from the monopoly itself.

Mr. LODGE. I thank the Senator from Utah for that observation. Of course, to my way of thinking that is only true up to the point that we have a market for helium, and that state of affairs will depend on to what extent helium is used. But my contention is that it is not necessary for the Government to take this step. If it were an indispensable necessity, or if an emergency were confronting us, I might feel differently; but I do not believe that it is necessary for the Bureau of Mines and for the Government to enlarge itself to this extent and take on these added expenses and these added responsibilities. I think the Members of the minority feel that it is the proper thing for the Federal Government to supply the needs of Federal agencies; but we see no particular advantage, in fact, we see a great many drawbacks, in putting the Government still further into this monopolistic activity.

I should like now to take up the second question, and that is, Do we want to export this gas in this year 1937? In the first place, I may say that if we shall pass this bill we will be deciding that we actually do want to export the gas. The bill confers the right to the departmental committee to grant licenses for export, and in a memorandum which was transmitted to the Committee on Military Affairs by the President of the United States, with his recommendation in favor of the bill, it was stated—and I quote:

It is the duty of the United States—

According to this memorandum—

as a good neighbor—

To make this helium available to foreigners for the sake of—and I quote again—promoting international good will.

Apparently it is our duty to make available this unique natural asset in order to promote international good will. To me the reasoning there is difficult to follow. This gas has definite military value. When we make it available to a country we confer an advantage upon that country. I cannot understand the reasoning by which the conclusion is reached that by conferring this advantage on a country we promote good will. We certainly do not promote good will among the people who do not like that country, and I believe among many citizens within that country our act would be construed as a sign of weakness rather than as a sign of good will.

I should like to ask, what country in history which has been possessed of a unique natural asset of this kind, has ever parted with it in this way? Of course, if we were a country that owed a large debt to other foreign countries we might possibly get rid of some of this gas in payment of the debt. But, as I understand, that is not the position of the United States.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LODGE. I yield.

Mr. LEWIS. Since the able junior Senator from Massachusetts has made some allusion to disposition of the property of America in accordance with the suggestion from some official Cabinet source, or otherwise, that it would promote good neighbor association to turn this very valuable property over to a foreign nation, I will ask the able Senator, Is it understood that with respect to the nations who owe us vast sums of money, who will never pay a dollar of the principal nor pay a cent of the interest, nor even acknowledge the debt, but hold us up to scorn as those who are attempting to hold them up—are we the good neighbors who are being referred to, and is it to them that we are to transfer this gift?

Mr. LODGE. I cannot answer the Senator because I did not write this memorandum. But that is the conclusion to which the average reader would be impelled.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LODGE. I yield.

Mr. CLARK. Is this gas inexhaustible or is it expendible? In other words, when the gas is sold does it continue to remain in existence, or is it expendible? Do those who use it have to come back for further supplies of it?

Mr. LODGE. My understanding is that, like all gases, some of it is lost as it is used, and the more helium is produced, the more holes that are punched in the geologic structure at Amarillo, Tex., where most of it is located, of course, the greater the chance of escape and waste. So on the basis of the use to which the gas has been put in recent years we have a supply that will last us a very long time. But, of course, we do not know what other uses it may be put to. Therefore the more we produce it the greater is the chance of wastage.

Mr. CLARK. Is it not a fact that we do not have an inexhaustible supply, according to the present discoveries and estimates, and that at some time in the more or less future or more or less distant future, the control of that supply of helium might be of inestimable advantage and value to the United States as a nation, and that in so much as we now sell it, or lease it, or give it away, we are diminishing the possibility or probability of having the control of a very great supply of an extremely important gas which may be of supreme importance, both to the commercial welfare of this country and to its national defense at some future time?

Mr. LODGE. I think the Senator is entirely correct.

I should now like to discuss for a minute the military value of helium. It is perfectly true, as the chairman of the subcommittee said, that the committee was unanimous in believing that there should be no export of this gas for military purposes, and it is perfectly true that the committee was unanimous in not desiring to export this gas so that it can in any way be used against the United States. And it is perfectly true that those aspirations are written into this bill, but I do not believe that the machinery is written into the bill to make sure that those objectives will be attained. I do not see how we can guarantee that this gas will not some time be used against the United States.

It is also correct that the executive departments of the Government are willing to have this authority and this responsibility placed upon them; but, of course, as we say in the newspaper business, that is not news. If a Government department wants more authority there is nothing strange about that. But it would be strange, indeed, if the Government departments wanted to have less authority. We all understand that it is in the nature of things for the executive branch or the executive departments to be willing to take on more authority all the time.

To come now to the question of the military value of this gas. The significant thing about it is that it does not burn. It is quite true that it does not have quite so much buoyancy, it does not have quite so much lifting power, as hydrogen does. On the other hand in the case of a hydrogen-filled dirigible, if incendiary bullets are shot through it, that is the end of it. In the case of a helium-built dirigible, if incendiary bullets are shot through it it can still keep on going.

Dr. Hugo Eckener, who, I suppose, is the greatest authority on lighter-than-air navigation in the world, appeared before the committee and was asked to express himself on the question of the military feasibility of commercial dirigibles. He made a very interesting reply, which I wish the Senate would consider carefully. He said that in Europe the military significance of commercial dirigibles was of a minor nature for two reasons. The first reason, he said, is because no one in Europe has any helium. To me that is a conclusive proof of that great expert's opinion on the value of helium. The second reason as to why they were not effective military instruments in Europe is because in Europe the territory is so congested, they have so many military airplanes, that such a large target could easily be intercepted.

Then Dr. Eckener was asked his opinion as to the military feasibility of commercial airships so far as the United States was concerned, and here is what he said, in part:

> I could very well imagine that in view of the geographical location of the United States, which is not surrounded by countries that have military airplanes and where you have open coast lines and wide oceans dividing you from the next country, that such ships could be possibly effectively used as instruments of scouting.

In other words, we have it straight from the mouth of the greatest living authority on the subject that dirigibles have definite military significance to a transoceanic power such as the United States.

I have tried to establish, in view of the memorandum sent by the President, that the right to export helium will definitely be used. I have tried to establish the fact that helium has a definite military value, as I think is attested by the statement of Dr. Eckener. I now wish to call the attention of the Senate to the fact that we ought to be consistent in our general attitude on the export of articles that are of military value.

We have taken a position in the Neutrality Act. We know that our constituents are filled with horror at the thought that American materials and American goods might be used in foreign conflicts. We do not want to be told that American materials are used in a military sense in Spain or in China or wherever there happens to be any outbreak. Why make this situation any more complicated? Why make this gas available at this very dangerous time in world history when we might, in view of our neutrality legislation, have to stop its export, and thereby create just one more source of friction?

The members of the minority believe that helium gas should be made available everywhere in the world for medical purposes. We want to see this gas used to preserve human life, but not to destroy it. We do not want it ever to be said that, due to the action of Congress, this gas was instrumental in helping some foreign power that was hostile to the American people. We believe that the use of lighter-than-air navigation should be developed. We do not take a narrow, nationalistic view. We believe that there are the brains and the skill and the courage in this country to develop it. We believe that we can engage foreign assistance, if it is necessary; and we believe, furthermore, that if it is the considered judgment of the American people, if it is the considered judgment of the Congress, that helium gas should be made available for other than medical purposes, the way to do it is to pass an act through the Congress.

There is not enough activity in the sale and disposition of helium to make it necessary for us to delegate this power. A bill can be introduced in the Congress, and passed, if we want to, to make so many thousand cubic feet of this gas available to some foreign corporation or person. I am frank to say that I would vote against it; but that, to my mind, is the proper method of approaching the subject.

That concludes the observations which we of the minority have to make.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Massachusetts yield to the Senator from Idaho?

Mr. LODGE. I yield.

Mr. BORAH. The Senator has made a most excellent and illuminating statement on this subject. I wish to ask, is it true that Dr. Eckener came to this country to secure the permission of the Government to purchase helium here?

Mr. LODGE. That is my understanding.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Mr. President, if I may interrupt——

Mr. LODGE. I yield.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. That surely cannot be the only reason why Dr. Eckener came to this country. I do not know why he came, but there had been a tremendous explosion on the Hindenburg and that ship had been burned and destroyed. He was called over here to inspect the wreck, to assist in ascertaining the causes of the disaster, and to report upon it. The movement for the use of helium for what might be called world-wide purposes and in a humanitarian way came after that explosion.

Dr. Eckener came in such haste that I remember his telling the late Senator Robinson, when he met him, that he did not have time to get an extra suit or an extra change of underwear. I am sure that if he was coming upon a mission merely for the purpose of asking our Government to sell to him or to his corporation helium he would have come a little bit more at his ease.

Mr. BORAH. I did not indicate by my question, I think, that Dr. Eckener came solely for that purpose, but that certainly was one of the subjects which he discussed when he was here.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. President, will the Senator from Massachusetts permit me a word?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Massachusetts yield to the Senator from Texas?

Mr. LODGE. I yield.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Dr. Eckener did not come before the Senate committee on his own suggestion. The Senate committee invited him, through one of his associates, to testify, in order to obtain the benefit of his great knowledge concerning helium in its relation to lighter-than-air travel.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I am not indicating that I thought there was any impropriety in Dr. Eckener's conduct when he was here. I do not think, though, that there is any doubt in the mind of anyone as to what was in his mind with reference to securing helium from this country.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. There can be no doubt that the testimony of Dr. Eckener before the committee was positive that, so far as he was concerned, he believed—these are my words, not his—that the United States owed it to the world to allow the use of helium. There is no doubt about that idea.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, I hear a great deal about what the United States owes to the world. I do not hear as much as I should like to hear about what some of the other nations of the world owe to the United States.

I want to emphasize, in conclusion, that this bill is not opposed because of any narrow, nationalistic view. We want to see the development of the art; we are strongly in favor of using this gas for the constructive purpose of saving human life; we do not want to see another Hindenburg disaster; but we also have got to think of the national defense of the United States. It is true that the Hindenburg disaster was a horrible one, and we want to avert any such catastrophes in the future, if we possibly can, but, in my State and the State of every other Senator, there are millions of people to whom lighter-than-air navigation will probably never be a reality. There are millions of people who cannot afford to go to Europe on a boat let alone to go to Europe on dirigibles. We have got to think of their safety, and we have got to think of their welfare. My belief is that this is a question that Congress should decide for itself. We in Congress are the trustee for a priceless natural asset and we should conserve this God-given substance for the benefit of the American people.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, the junior Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE] has stated very ably the views of those who signed the minority report on this bill. I cannot omit this oportunity to reassert a fundamental principle which I think cannot be repeated too often in these days of attempted revolution of the American system of government.

I think that this bill has political implications and has the same tendency to corrupt our political structure as we have seen in several other great measures that have already passed the Senate and which undertook to turn over to the Government at Washington valuable rights, magnificent properties, that theretofore did not belong to the National Government, and which, by their Constitution, the people undertook to protect and to keep unto themselves and unto their own sole disposal.

I am no more in favor of turning over by this bill to the Federal Government this great natural resource of several of our separate States than I am in favor of turning over to the Federal Government the resources of water or power in New England, as we are so gently invited to do by certain measures now lying on the table in this Chamber. I do not suppose we can stop this trend, but we can stand up and let the people understand that we realize the direction of the trend.

This is not merely a bill to create a monopoly; it is a bill to absorb a natural monopoly that belongs to the several States and which the Federal Government has no right to take. I doubt the authority of Congress to absorb this natural asset of the several States; and I have no doubt whatever of the economic fallacy of the Federal Government going into business and undertaking to take over the whole and entire control of the manufacture and disposal of a very important new product whose usefulness has not as yet been fully developed.

Mr. President, I am opposed to this sort of seizure of the rights and properties of the people of this country.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the vote by which the amendment of the Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH] to the amendment of the junior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. LOGAN] be reconsidered. I have talked with the Senator from Idaho about it, and he has no objection to a reconsideration of the vote. The Senator from Idaho just stepped out of the Chamber.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Kentucky?

Mr. AUSTIN. Is it a request for unanimous consent?

Mr. BARKLEY. Yes; I have talked with the Senator from Idaho, and he has no objection to a reconsideration of the vote whereby the amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Kentucky that the vote on the amendment referred to by him be reconsidered? The Chair hears none, and the vote is reconsidered.

Mr. BORAH entered the Chamber.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I may say to the Senator from Idaho, who has just entered the Chamber, that I had just asked and obtained unanimous consent to reconsider the vote by which the amendment which he offered to the amendment of the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. LOGAN] was agreed to.

I wish to say in that connection that it already has been stated, and it is incontrovertible, that there is only one private concern in the United States engaged in the production of helium. Whether there will ever be others, no one can tell. There has not been, and there is not now, any production by any private organization except the one corporation which happens to be located in the city of Louisville, Ky., with property in Kansas and possibly in one or two other States.

The efforts of this corporation to develop helium make a long story. The Government went into the business of developing helium. When the private corporation was organized it sold its products to the Army and the Navy. Gradually that market was taken away from the private concern, and then the Government began to sell its surplus helium product to private organizations, the result being that the market was completely taken away from the private corporation because the Government sold its helium at a price cheaper than that for which the private corporation could afford to sell, for the reason that in estimating the price the Government took no account of overhead expenses. It simply charged for the actual cost of production plus a few incidental expenses, and did not take into consideration the overhead cost which every private corporation has to consider in fixing its price.

It has been felt by the Bureau of Mines, the Interior Department, and other departments for some time that because of the peculiar nature of this substance it ought to be a Government monopoly. I think no one would feel that the Government, after having encouraged the private corporation to go into the business, ought then to take its market away and leave it completely stranded and helpless, without a market, without any opportunity to dispose of its property to other private corporations that might be engaged in the same business, because there are none.

For that reason the amendment was inserted in the bill authorizing the Government to buy the property of this private concern and make the production of helium a real Government monopoly. In fixing the price of the property the same rule was applied in the amendment that is ordinarily applied in matters of this kind. Where there is a desire of one party to sell and of another to purchase, one side names an arbitrator and the other side names another arbitrator, and the two thus chosen pick a third arbitrator. That is the rule almost universally practiced among private corporations and private parties and institutions when they cannot agree upon a price among themselves.

There is no question of disagreement here involved. The seller has no desire to fix the price. The purchaser has no desire arbitrarily to fix the price. But with a representative of each on the board of appraisers, the two representatives to select the third, they all feel that a fair estimate of the value of the property could be reached.

Therefore it seemed to me the amendment of the Senator from Idaho, which would take out of the equation entirely the owners of the property and leave them out of any consideration, and put the fixing of the price in the hands of the Interior Department and the Treasury Department, the two of them to select a third, is so one-sided as to be unfair to the owners of the property.

There could be no unfairness in the result where each side should choose a representative, the two representatives thus chosen to pick a third. If the Government, which wishes to be the purchaser, is to decide who the appraisers are to be, it seems easy to understand that while theoretically the Government would want to be fair in a matter of this kind, the Government in the capacity of a private purchaser ought not to ask that it alone be allowed to name the appraisers who are to fix the value of the property.

For that reason I hope the Senator from Idaho will not insist upon his amendment, but will allow the language to remain as it originally was in the amendment of the Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BARKLEY. Certainly.

Mr. LODGE. I fully agree with the Senator from Kentucky that if the Government is going to embark on the policy outlined in the bill it is a matter of simple justice to reimburse the private corporation in Louisville, Ky. There is no disagreement on that point; but Mr. Howington, of the Girdler Corporation, when he appeared before the committee, made this statement:

> All we are objecting to now is to any change from this status under which we have been operating for 10 years.

In other words, he would be satisfied if we did not make all these changes in policy, and if we do make this change in policy of course we have to reimburse the Girdler Corporation.

Mr. BARKLEY. I did not hear the testimony of Mr. Howington, and it is difficult to understand from the reading of one sentence just what he was discussing. What he has contended all along is that if the Government would lead the commercial market for helium to his organization or any other private organization, then he would have no complaint to make. But after taking the Army market and the Navy market away from this corporation, the Government began to sell to commercial users of helium. The Government contracted with the Goodyear Corporation, of Akron, Ohio, for the sale of a million cubic feet of helium, which market was taken away from the Girdler Corporation. The Government has undertaken now to invade the market for the use of helium for medical purposes, which, of course, is not very large, but to that extent takes it away from the Girdler Corporation. In other words, the Government, because it produces a surplus of helium, has not been satisfied to sell it to its own departments which use helium but wants to sell it to every private user of helium and, therefore, drive this company out of business and out of the market. I do not think anyone would contend the Government ought to do that. In order that it may purchase the property, a fair machinery has been set up under the terms of the bill to fix the price of it.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I suppose we all agree, under all the circumstances, that the company should be fairly treated. I dislike very much to have a portion of the board, the business of which is to fix the value of the property, made up in part of the owners of the property.

Mr. BARKLEY. Is that any more objectionable than to have the prospective purchaser of the property have a monopoly of saying what it is worth?

Mr. BORAH. If the prospective purchaser were purchasing for private interests, of course that would be entirely objectionable; but the appraisers are supposed to represent the Government, and in representing the Government it is not to be supposed that they would have any desire to be unfair to the corporation.

Mr. BARKLEY. That is a theory in which we all indulge, but when the Government is to be the purchaser not only for its own governmental purchases, but in order that it may embark on the commercial sale of helium, I think we ought to put the Government in the status in which every private individual would be placed who might want to buy the property.

Mr. BORAH. May I ask some member of the committee whether there was any indication as to the possible value of the property which is involved?

Mr. BARKLEY. I may answer that question only in part. Nobody knows the value of the property. The Girdler Corporation has invested something like $750,000 in the property. I am satisfied the appraisers would fix some such figure as the value. What the appraisal would be I do not know, but I am satisfied it would not be exorbitant, and it would not be unfair to the Government to provide the method set up in the bill.

Mr. BORAH. I have suggested that the appraisers be appointed by the district court of the district in which the property may be located.

Mr. BARKLEY. The corporation has its residence in one State and its property is in another, or in two or three other States. The Senator would not believe that there ought to be a multiplicity of appraisers in the different States to fix the value of the property as a whole, would he? Whatever method is adopted, or whoever are to be appointed appraisers and by whatever method, one set of appraisers ought to be allowed to fix the value of the property as a whole.

Mr. BORAH. I quite agree with that. I am perfectly willing to have the district court at Louisville, where the headquarters of the corporation are, name the appraisers for the entire property. If the property is scattered about here and there, I would not desire to have appraisers set up in each locality, but I do urge that if the owners are not satisfied to eliminate themselves as a part of the board of appraisers, then we ought to provide for a board of appraisers which would be beyond criticism either from the standpoint of the public or the private interests. It seems to me we can find an impartial person to appoint the appraisers by designating the judge of the district court. I ask the Senator from Kentucky if he is not willing to accept the district court as the appointing power?

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I am frank to say to the Senator that I think the judge of the District Court for the Western District of Kentucky would appoint fair and impartial appraisers. I should prefer to leave the language in the bill as it is, so that both sides will be represented, and they themselves may select the third appraiser.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, we are putting no limitation upon the amount of money which may be paid for this property. We who are supposed to represent the taxpayers of the country are turning this matter over without any control over it hereafter. Whatever amount may be agreed upon we must stand ready to pay.

It does seem to me that we ought to have, as nearly as practicable, an impartial board to pass upon this matter. Bear in mind that the party in interest does not have to take the amount of the award if he does not want to; and the Government never can get his property until they either buy it or condemn it under the principle of public use. So the party in interest is always safe. There is no way to compel him to accept the board's appraisal; and I feel that we ought to have a wholly impartial tribunal.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield there, I will say that, of course, what he says is true. At the same time, it is true that Congress must appropriate the money to pay for the property, whatever price is fixed. No authority is granted to pay out the money except when Congress appropriates it; so we have that curb over the amount that might be fixed.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Mr. President, I think we are making the problem a little bit larger than it is. There is in the testimony both an outside and an inside figure, and there is also testimony on the part of the Bureau of Mines that the valuations on either side are not very far apart. For example, the representatives of the Girdler Co. testified that they had an investment of around three-quarters of a million dollars. In a communication which came to the committee, it was suggested that $600,000 might be all the money needed to obtain a monopoly so far as this property is concerned. Therefore, any appraiser of course would take into consideration the testimony that is before him under the possible limit which has been stated both by persons who indirectly spoke for the purchaser and by persons who indirectly spoke for the seller. There is a margin there of merely $15,000.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I do not understand that the value of property is fixed in any sense whatever by reason of the amount which has been put into its development. That may be an item in the question of damages, but it is only an item. That is what I suspect will take place, and I can only submit this matter to the Senate. We do not know what other properties we shall want to take control of and purchase in the course of time; and I certainly think that in the beginning of this matter we ought to establish a proper principle with reference to the board which shall pass upon that for which we have to pay.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. TRUMAN in the chair). The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH] to the amendment offered by the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. LOGAN].

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I ask to have the amendment stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment to the amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. The first amendment offered by Mr. BORAH was, on page 2 of the amendment offered by Mr. LOGAN, in line 2, to strike out the words "owner of the properties sought to be acquired" and insert the words "Secretary of the Treasury."

Mr. KING. Is that an amendment to the bill?

Mr. BORAH. That is an amendment to the amendment of the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. LOGAN]. May we have the amendment itself stated?

Mr. BARKLEY. In the bill it appears on page 8, line 9.

Mr. KING. That is what I was trying to ascertain.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, if I may be permitted, I find in the report filed with the bill this paragraph:

> As there is only one commercial producer of helium in the United States, and helium cannot be secured from that source at a cost which will make it available for commercial airships and medical use, it is believed the Government would be justified in securing a monopoly of this resource. Recently before the House Committee on Military Affairs the Girdler Corporation, the only private producer, offered to sell its helium properties for approximately $600,000. Although this price is believed to be exorbitant, it is thought that the properties can be purchased at a reasonable figure.

I do not see why the Senators interested in this matter are not willing to have appraisers appointed by the district court.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, the amendment which is pending is the amendment offered by the Senator from Idaho to eliminate the owners from any consideration in the selection of appraisers and have the Secretary of the Treasury perform that function. I hope that amendment will be rejected.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH] to the amendment offered by the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. LOGAN].

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I was called from the Chamber in connection with a public matter pending before the District of Columbia Committee, and am not familiar with the amendment or with the status of the bill at this time. If the plan proposed is that a board shall be appointed to fix the value of the property in question so that the owner of the property may be compelled, by coercive means or otherwise, to accept their appraisement, I am opposed to it.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. KING. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. On yesterday my colleague the junior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. LOGAN] offered an amendment to the bill setting up a board of three appraisers to fix the value of the property involved.

Mr. KING. A property or all property?

Mr. BARKLEY. A property—a property owned by the Girdler Corporation, of the State of Kentucky, which owns helium deposits in Kansas and elsewhere. It provided that there should be three appraisers, one appointed by the Secretary of the Interior, one by the owner of the property, and the two then would be authorized to select a third.

Mr. KING. Suppose the owner refuses to accede to that formula.

Mr. BARKLEY. The owner will not refuse to accede to that formula—I can guarantee that to the Senator—because there is really no controversy between the owner of the property and the Government as to procedure. They have been conferring about this matter, and they understand one another. There is no arbitrary desire on either part. The amendment offered by the Senator from Idaho eliminates the owner from any right to name one of the appraisers and authorizes the Secretary of the Interior to name one and the Secretary of the Treasury to name another, and the two of them to name a third, which eliminates the owner of the property from any right to have any voice in the appraisement. That is the point now before the Senate.

I am sure the Senator from Utah, with his sense of fairness, will realize that where a situation like that exists the Government ought not to expect the owner of the property to be weaned altogether away from any right to have a voice in naming those who are to fix the value of his property. The Government does not have to accept the award, nor does he; but that is the piece of machinery we propose to set up by which to arrive at the value of the property.

Mr. KING. The Government of the United States, under some of the policies which are being pursued, some of which are wise and some of which are very unwise—and I have in mind particularly, in connection with the word "unwise", the action of the Resettlement Administration—is entering many of the States, Alaska, and Puerto Rico—I am not sure whether or not it has yet reached the North Pole—and acquiring property of all kinds and engaging in almost every form of industrial activity. It seems that the appetite of the Federal Government to acquire property and to engage in business and industrial activities is unappeasable, and its desire to enter into every field occupied by private endeavor cannot be restrained.

I am not satisfied that it is wise for the Government to engage in the business of mining for helium and to set up plants for its production. The progress of the mining development of the United States is the result of the enterprise, courage, and faith of individuals in themselves and in the future. The development of the gold and silver mines, and the mines which have produced hundreds of millions, if not billions, of metallic wealth, from the precious metals down to those that are regarded as base metals, have been the result of the individual effort, the genius, and the courage of the American people. If the Government of the United States desires property, let it negotiate with the owners; and if the negotiations do not eventuate in an agreement, and the Government must have the property for public uses, it should enter court and exercise the right of eminent domain.

I do not like these boards with quasi-judicial power, these boards authorized to engage in all forms of business activity. I do not like the plan of having the Federal Government set up a board here for the purpose of determining the value of the property. It seems to me that we are establishing a precedent which will return to plague the Government, if not individuals.

If this property which is desired cannot be purchased from the owner at the price which the Government is willing to pay, then let the Government go into court and bring the necessary suit and let a jury pass upon the value of the property. This is not the only case and a precedent is to be established that will influence future action upon the part of the Government. In view of this fact, it seems to me that we ought to scrutinize this measure with a great deal of care, and that we ought not to give our approval of this policy in the light of the thousands of pieces of property of all kinds, both real and personal, which are being acquired by the United States. I am opposed to the amendment offered by the Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Mr. President, in answer to some of the remarks made by my colleague, I think I should at least say one word about the appraisal. We must remember that the Government is already in the helium business and that the Government and its agents probably understand more about the production and the purification of helium than does anyone else.

The Government owns certain materials useful for the recovery of helium. It has machinery; it has buildings. Therefore, the persons who will know the value of this machinery in these buildings, and also the value of the helium resources themselves, must of necessity be those persons who are related to and are carrying on the governmental work at the present time.

The proceeding provided would not be an ordinary condemnation proceeding. The Government knows exactly what it is doing. It understands the extent of the production of helium by the private corporation because that has been carried on more or less under governmental control during the course of some years. The Government virtually has a monopoly today. Therefore, to imagine that the Government should not have a place in making the appraisal, and that the persons who are the only competitors of the Government in the business should not have recognition, seems to me unreasonable at this time. There is one particular property to be bought, the Government knows exactly what that property is, and knows almost exactly what it is worth.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I shall not oppose the Senator's desire to have the amendment which I have offered rejected.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH] to the amendment offered by the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. LOGAN].

The amendment to the amendment was rejected.

Mr. BORAH. I now offer another amendment, on page 2 of the amendment, line 1, after the word "follows" and the colon, to strike out the words "One by the Secretary of the Interior, one by the owner of the properties sought to be acquired, and one by the two appraisers so selected" and to insert in lieu thereof the words "The judge of the United States district court of the district in which the main office of the corporation is located shall appoint three appraisers."

On this amendment I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Chief Clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. TOWNSEND (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Tennessee [Mr. MCKELLAR], which I transfer to the senior Senator from North Dakota [Mr. FRAZIER], and vote "yea."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. AUSTIN. I wish to announce the following general pairs:

The Senator from Vermont [Mr. GIBSON] with the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. DUFFY]; and

The Senator from Minnesota [Mr. SHIPSTEAD] with the Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS].

Mr. MCNARY (after having voted in the affirmative). I am advised that I have a pair with the senior Senator from Mississippi [Mr. HARRISON]. I transfer that pair to the junior Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. BRIDGES], and permit my vote to stand.

Mr. MINTON. I announce that the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. DUFFY] and the Senator from Georgia [Mr. RUSSELL] are absent in the performance of official duty as members of the committee appointed to attend the dedication of the battle monuments in France.

The Senator from Florida [Mr. ANDREWS], the senior Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BAILEY], the Senator from Ohio [Mr. DONAHEY], the junior Senator from Iowa [Mr. HERRING], the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. HOLT], the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. MALONEY], and the Senator from Montana [Mr. WHEELER], are necessarily detained from the Senate.

I further announce that the junior Senator from Tennessee [Mr. BERRY], the junior Senator from Mississippi [Mr. BILBO], the senior Senator from South Dakota [Mr. BULOW], the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. GERRY], the senior Senator from Iowa [Mr. GILLETTE], the Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS], the junior Senator from Louisiana [Mr. ELLENDER], the senior Senator from Mississippi [Mr. HARRISON], the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. HATCH], the junior Senator from South Dakota [Mr. HITCHCOCK], the junior Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. LEE], the Senator from Illinois [Mr. LEWIS], the Senator from Kansas [Mr. MCGILL], the senior Senator from Tennessee [Mr. MCKELLAR], the senior Senator from Louisiana [Mr. OVERTON], the Senator from Idaho [Mr. POPE], the junior Senator from North Carolina [Mr. REYNOLDS], the Senator from Washington [Mr. SCHWELLENBACH], the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. SMITH], the senior Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. THOMAS], the Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS], and the Senator from Indiana [Mr. VAN NUYS], are absent attending important committee meetings.

The result was announced—yeas 27, nays 29, as follows:

YEAS—27

Austin	Clark	King	Steiwer
Borah	Copeland	La Follette	Townsend
Brown, Mich.	Davis	Lodge	Vandenberg

So, Mr. BORAH's amendment to Mr. LOGAN's amendment was rejected.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Mr. President, I wish to ask what the parliamentary situation is. Is the amendment offered by the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. LOGAN] now to be voted upon as originally offered, without amendment?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment offered by the Senator from Kentucky is about to be voted on.

The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Kentucky to the committee amendment on page 8, lines 3 to 19.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, on page 11, beginning at line 16, I move to strike out the words "on the joint recommendation of all the members of the National Munitions Control Board and the Secretary of the Interior", and to insert language in lieu thereof, so that the sentence will read:

No helium gas shall be exported from the United States, or from its Territories and possessions, until after application has been made to the Secretary of State and a license authorizing said exportation has been obtained from him and approved by the President.

Then the remainder of the section will read as it formerely read. In other words, I propose to eliminate the National Munitions Control Board, and leave the matter of exportation entirely to the Secretary of State, under the regulations which the Secretary of State shall make, subject to the approval of the President. I would rather trust the Secretary of State with the question of protecting helium exportations.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BORAH. I yield.

Mr. WALSH. I think the Senator's amendment is the present law. Therefore, it is very proper that the President should have the deciding authority in a matter of this kind.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BORAH. I yield.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. If the Senator from Idaho had heard my explanation of the reasons for the wording which we find in the bill and which he now proposes to amend, I think he would know that, so far as I am concerned and so far as the other members of the committee are concerned, we should have no objection to the amendment the Senator from Idaho proposes. Those rather clumsy arrangements came about as the result of our trying to be doubly careful about the exportation of helium for war purposes.

I see no reason why we should not accept the amendment of the Senator from Idaho.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH] to the committee amendment.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BONE. Mr. President, I send to the desk an amendment to the pending bill. My amendment is the language of Senate bill 2603 without the enacting clause, and I ask that the amendment be printed at this point in my remarks. I am not going to read all of it, because I think every Member of the Senate is advised of its contents. I content myself with saying that Senate bill 2603 is the bill introduced by me, by the Senator from Missouri [Mr. CLARK], the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. NYE], the Senator from Idaho [Mr. POPE], and the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. FRAZIER] on June 8, 1937, to provide for Government ownership and operation of shipbuilding facilities and plants for the manufacture of Army and Navy ordnance and all other war materials.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the amendment of the Senator from Washington to the committee amendment will be printed in the RECORD without being read.

Mr. BONE's amendment to the committee amendment was to insert at the end of the committee amendment the following:

That the Secretary of War is authorized, empowered, and directed forthwith to construct, or acquire by purchase or by condemnation, such plants, factories, and facilities, in addition to the arsenals and other such facilities now belonging to the United States, as may be necessary for manufacturing and producing war munitions and supplies sufficient to meet all of the requirements of the United States Army, including the following munitions of war:

Propellants and explosives of all kinds used by the United States Army; and such production shall also include the requirements of the United States Navy for such propellants and explosives.

Shells and projectiles, and explosives therefor, used by artillery of the United States Army.

All classes of artillery used by the United States Army.

Gases employed in war operations.

Tanks.

Rifles, machine guns, and small arms of all kinds, for manual and mechanical operations, employed by the military forces of the United States, and ammunition therefor; and such production shall also include the requirements of the United States Navy for such war materials.

And thereafter to operate such producing and manufacturing facilities and produce and manufacture therein the above-described war materials as herein provided.

SEC. 2. The Secretary of the Navy is authorized, empowered, and directed forthwith to construct, or acquire by purchase or condemnation, and thereafter to operate, additional facilities (including necessary lands) to expand existing Government navy yards, armor-plate plants, naval arsenals, naval gun factories, and shipbuilding plants and facilities, so that such Government navy yards, plants, and facilities, including those now owned by the United States, shall thereafter be capable of doing all naval construction and repair work on any and all vessels of war of all types and categories required by the Army and Navy of the United States, including naval auxiliaries and Army transports, and their main engines, ordnance, and armament, and producing gun forgings, armor plates, and projectiles for all classes of guns and ordnance used on such vessels: Provided, however, That the provisions of this act shall not apply to vessels contracts for which have heretofore been let to private parties, but in all other respects this act shall apply to affect all activities and operations contemplated in the Naval Appropriation Act of June 3, 1936, and subsequent appropriations: Provided further, That structural steel for such ships, and raw materials from which castings and forgings are made, fabricated materials such as sheet-metal rods, bars, and tubing out of which parts are made, and appurtenances such as chronometers, may be purchased in the open market under provisions prescribed in existing statutes, until such time as the Secretary of the Navy shall elect to produce such equipment and materials in the Government plants referred to in this section.

SEC. 3. The Secretary of the Navy and the Secretary of War shall have power to acquire any property or property rights, including any and all patent rights, necessary to carry out the provisions of this act, by purchase or by the exercise of the right of eminent domain, and to institute condemnation proceedings therefor in the same manner as is provided by law for the condemnation of real estate.

SEC. 4. The Secretary of War and the Secretary of the Navy are hereby authorized, empowered, and directed forthwith to manufacture all gages, jigs, dies, and fixtures necessary in the production of the munitions of war referred to in this act, and to provide adequate supplies of such gages, jigs, dies, and fixtures for use in the event of war by any agency designated by the President of the United States, if in his judgment the then existing facilities for the Government production of munitions of war are insufficient to meet the emergency demands for such munitions.

SEC. 5. It is hereby declared to be the policy of the Congress, as expressed in this act, to make the Government of the United States as nearly as possible self-sufficient in national defense, in time of war as well as in time of peace, by requiring Government manufacture and production of the munitions and instrumentalities of national defense described and referred to in this act.

Nothing in this act shall be construed to require the Secretary of War and the Secretary of the Navy to acquire sources of raw materials and plants or factories to process the raw materials which the Secretary of War and the Secretary of the Navy are required to manufacture into combat instrumentalities and munitions of war, but such raw materials may be purchased in the open market under competitive bids therefor, as prescribed in existing statutes. The purpose of this act is to reserve to the United States the exclusive privilege and function of fabricating and manufacturing such raw materials into the actual combat munitions and instrumentalities of war which are described in sections 1 and 2 of this act, and to perform such work of fabricating and manufacturing in its own plants, factories, navy yards, and arsenals.

SEC. 6. Said Secretaries are authorized to appoint and fix the compensation of such supervisors, designers, chemists, naval architects, and other experts as may be necessary for carrying out all of the provisions of this act, without regard to the provisions of other laws applicable to the employment, classification, and compensation of officers and employees of the United States, and they may, subject to the civil-service laws, appoint such other officers and employees as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this act, and to fix their salaries in accordance with the Classification Act of 1923, as amended.

The said Secretaries may, in the name of the United States, defend or bring suits at law or in equity, as they may find necessary or desirable in carrying out the purposes of this act, and they shall be represented in all such litigation by the Attorney General of the United States or his representatives.

SEC. 7. There is hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $ to carry out the provisions of this act, $ of said sum to be expended by the Secretary of War and $ of such sum to be expended by the Secretary of the Navy.

SEC. 8. All acts and parts of acts in conflict with any of the terms and provisions of this act are hereby repealed.

Mr. BONE. Mr. President, while I am impelled to tender this bill as an amendment, I do not want to interfere with the prompt disposition of the pending bill. However, I think this an opportune time to discuss some of the problems we are now confronting with relation to national defense, because that has been suggested very aggressively and emphatically in the arguments on the helium bill.

A few days ago Mr. William Dodd, American Ambassador to Germany, came back to this country and prophesied that the world was heading directly into another great international conflict, the effect of which would be to destroy civilization itself.

Mr. Dodd is not the only one who is emphasizing that particular viewpoint, because a great many very thoughtful persons know and realize that for the first time in human history all the major nations of the world have suffered major economic dislocations, that their economic, social, and political structures have crashed, presenting a picture without parallel in history, so that, Members of the Senate, the thing we are facing today is menacing and alarming.

It is startling and terrifying. The crash that Ambassador Dodd suggests is not outside the realm of possibility, but on the contrary, it looms ominously in sight; and unless those who are guiding the destinies of other nations, and literally holding those nations in the hollow of their hands, are mighty careful, we may find our present-day civilization literally submerged in an ocean of blood, and all the things that are worth while going down and out.

Let us now examine for a moment what this mad arms race is costing the world, because that is what I want to refer to in connection with this amendment to nationalize the business of taking care of national defense.

A short time ago I ran across an editorial in one of the big western newspapers—a very conservative newspaper, by the way, so when I am quoting the editorial I am not quoting an alarmist, or anyone who has any sinister or ulterior motives in discussing questions of national defense. In this editorial it is pointed out by an expert quoted by the newspaper that the total arms expenditures in the world rose from $5,000,000,000 in 1934 to $11,000,000,000 in 1936.

In the latter year the expenditures of Russia were estimated at $3,000,000,000. Those of Germany were estimated at $2,600,000,000. Those of our own United States were estimated at $1,000,000,000.

Let me say parenthetically that that $1,000,000,000 does not reflect the cost of war. That is only our present-day cost of preparation. That is our present-day cost of defense operations. It has no relation whatever to pensions and the other charges that war has placed upon our social structure.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. TYDINGS in the chair). Does the Senator from Washington yield to the Senator from Missouri?

Mr. BONE. I yield.

Mr. CLARK. Is it not a fact that in the present session of Congress, in the military and naval appropriation bills, we have authorized expenditures in preparation for war very much above a billion dollars?

Mr. BONE. I think that is correct.

Mr. CLARK. We have authorized directly the expenditure of several hundred million dollars above a billion dollars, to say nothing about the indirect appropriations and indirect authorizations for war purposes contained in other bills.

Mr. BONE. I think that is true.

Mr. CLARK. So, the figure the Senator has quoted is an extremely conservative one, to say the least.

Mr. BONE. Yes. I want to emphasize the fact that this is an understatement rather than an overstatement.

The expenditures of Great Britain last year for armaments amounted to $847,000,000, and those of Italy amounted to $871,000,000—nations that are either too proud to pay their war debts or do not care whether or not they ever pay them.

In other words, the expenditures of Russia in 1936 were almost as great as the total world expenditures for armaments and war in 1913, the year before the World War broke out, and the world was fairly well prepared for war then, as the casualty lists of the World War indicate. The expenditures of Russia in 1936 were three-fifths of what world expenditures had been as recently as 1934. Italy is today spending 52.7 percent of her 1936–37 budget for armaments. German probably spends 50 percent of her budget, and Japan something over 46 percent of her's for armament purposes. The British percentage is 20 and that of France nearly 30.

Mr. President, what are we getting for all of this money? A few days ago I was talking to a very prominent naval officer in connection with the building program in which we are now engaged. He stated to me that as late as from 1932 to 1933 the bid price received on a destroyer of around 1,500 or 1,600 tons was three and a half million dollars. Bids received recently for the same type of boat run around $7,000,000, or 100-percent increase in the cost of these vessels in its national-defense program in that one isolated field. How long do you think, Mr. President, we are going to be able to stand that sort of cost? Imagine what a godsend that is going to be for private shipbuilders when the big merchant-marine program gets under way. Private builders could not demand a better opportunity to put their trucks up against the back door of the Treasury. They could even lay a pipe line in and put suction pumps in it in order to get the money out expeditiously and as befits a noble program of that kind.

The other day the Department called for bids on a couple of big battleships. This ought to thrill the taxpayers. Let me call their prayerful attention to the fact that the other day private shipbuilders submitted some bids on two proposed 35,000-ton battleships and those bids were $12,000,000 apiece more than the bids of our own navy yard.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BONE. I am glad to yield.

Mr. CLARK. I am familiar with the figures which the Senator has just been quoting, which show that the bids from the navy yard were some $12,000,000 less than the lowest bid of private shipbuilding companies, which I think was the New York Shipbuilding Co. I believe that the bid to which the Senator refers is $37,000,000 from a navy yard. This is based on a newspaper report as to the bids. Is not that correct?

Mr. BONE. I think that is correct.

Mr. CLARK. At any rate, it was approximately that.

Mr. BONE. Yes; it was approximately that.

Mr. CLARK. Today I called the Navy Department, and I am advised that the estimates for actual construction of the North Carolina at the New York Navy Yard was $34,425,000, and for the Washington, to be constructed in the Philadelphia Navy Yard, $34,132,000. Therefore, instead of being under by approximately $12,000,000, as shown in the newspaper report referred to by the Senator, according to the figures of the navy yards, for actual construction the navy yard estimates will be about $15,000,000 under the lowest bids of private shipbuilders.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I do not understand the Senator's amendment. Is it proposed to the pending helium bill?

Mr. BONE. Of course, the Senator is at a disadvantage because I merely asked to have it printed. It is Senate bill 2603, and is a bill to require the production of munitions of war and warships in Government plants and yards.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BONE. I yield.

Mr. CLARK. It seems to me that this bill, which was introduced by the Senator from Washington and the two Senators from North Dakota and myself, is apropos as an amendment to the pending bill, because this is a bill for the establishment of a Government monopoly for purposes of national defense, and the bill which the Senator from Washington is now offering as an amendment is also a bill for the establishment of a Government monopoly in another and at least as important a field of national defense, namely, the field of naval construction. In other words, it seems to be entirely apropos to the question of the establishment of Government monopolies for national defense.

Mr. BORAH. Do I understand that the Senator from Utah is opposed to the amendment of the Senator from Washington?

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. The Senator from Utah feels that this amendment is so important in itself that he is sure the Senator from Washington would dislike to see it attached to an unimportant bill, such as the helium bill, at this time. Therefore, the Senator from Utah is going to suggest that the amendment be voted down.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. LEWIS in the chair). Does the Senator from Washington yield to the Senator from Missouri?

Mr. BONE. I yield.

Mr. CLARK. I do not wish to interrupt the speech of the Senator from Washington, but if he will permit me to finish the presentation of the comparative figures on which I was engaged——

Mr. BONE. I am happy to do so.

Mr. CLARK. In connection with the discrepancy of some $15,000,000 between the actual cost in Government navy yards and the lowest bids of private shipbuilding companies for the proposed new battleships, it seems to me that it might be very interesting to have a comparison with the cost of a battleship constructed within a comparatively brief period. I refer to the battleship California, which was finished in 1921, I believe, in a time of relatively exceedingly high construction costs both for material and labor, and which is comparable size to the battleships now being constructed. The battleship California was constructed at the Mare Island Navy Yard and finished, I believe, in 1921; it had a tonnage of 32,600 as against a tonnage of 35,000 for the present battleships, and, as I have said, was built at a time of very high labor and construction costs; and yet the California was constructed for $15,406,638, less than 50 percent of even the very much diminished cost estimated by the navy yards at the present time, and less than 33 percent of the lowest bid received from private shipbuilding companies at this time.

Mr. BONE. Mr. President, an interesting aspect of this problem is presented when it is realized that the figures of thirty-four or thirty-six million dollars bid by the navy yards and the twelve to fifteen million dollars' differential in the private-yard bid are only for the hull and machinery. The American people have no conception of what this tremendous increase in costs means to them. When a three-and-a-half-million-dollar destroyer of 4 or 5 years ago is translated into a seven-or-eight-million-dollar destroyer now, national defense is going to cost so much that, before we are through with it, it will fairly make us shiver. What justification is there for a hundred-percent increase in the cost of ships? If there is justification for it, what is the merchant-marine program going to cost? What is the whole program of national defense going to cost this country if we are to have all the new ships we want and need?

Let me give one more illustration. It was demonstrated very clearly, and the figures were not challenged by our Navy Department, that for $24,000,000 our Government navy yards can be expanded and provided with new welding, cutting, and modern machinery, yards, ways, and slips to do every bit of the building contemplated by our present naval-expansion program. That amount is merely the increased cost on two ships under private bids. What is going to happen when the program gets in full swing and that great increase in cost is clamped down on all the vessels we are going to build in our naval program? A fraction of what we would save would expand our navy yards so that we could do all of our own naval work and we would not be at the mercy of private shipbuilders.

Mr. NYE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Washington yield to the Senator from North Dakota?

Mr. BONE. I am happy to yield.

Mr. NYE. I should like to make an inquiry of the Senator from Missouri, who has made a statement as to comparative costs for like ships. May I ask him in what year was the building of the battleships, to which he referred, undertaken? Was it 1926?

Mr. CLARK. No; it was back in 1921. As I recall, the California was constructed in 1921, which was a period, as the Senator will recall, of extremely high building costs, and it was constructed for $15,400,000, in round figures, less than a third of the lowest bid which we received this year for battleships of comparable size from private shipbuilding companies, and less than half the lowest bid which we received from Government navy yards.

Mr. NYE. Are actual shipbuilding costs higher today than they were at that particular time?

Mr. CLARK. I understand they are not.

Mr. NYE. That is my understanding, as well.

Mr. CLARK. I have not the actual statistics, but the understanding among the best sources of information to which I have been able to refer is that costs were higher in 1921 than they are today, so far as wages and materials are concerned. We have been going through a struggle for the last 3 or 4 years to get wages and material costs back to where they were in 1921.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Will the Senator from Washington allow the Chair to ask the Senator from Missouri a question for information?

Mr. BONE. Certainly.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Missouri made a statement as to the estimates for the construction of ships from private sources and figures from the yards of the Government, but the Senator from Missouri did not conclude what the Chair should like to know from him. To which was the bid finally given?

Mr. CLARK. I do not know that the bids have been awarded as yet, but I understand it has been decided to award the contracts in the case of the California to the New York Navy Yard and in the case of the battleship Washington to the Philadelphia Navy Yard.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair thanks both Senators.

Mr. BONE. Spokesmen for private shipbuilding concerns have been to Washington protesting that the Government is seriously considering the building of the two new battleships in Government yards. I think the majestic world may well stand aghast at such an exhibition of nerve. Money is hard to get and we have been compelled to pour out vast sums for relief. It is brazen effrontery for private ship interests to come here and suggest in these times that we give them $12,000,000 to $15,000,000 more for building a vessel than we could build it for in our own yards.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President——

Mr. BONE. I yield to the Senator from Missouri.

Mr. CLARK. Is not that the same gang that admitted spending $268,000 in one session of Congress a few years ago for the purpose of providing a subsidy for them?

Mr. BONE. That is the crowd which came down here with plenty of money, as the Senator from Missouri has said. Their spokesman openly said they spent a quarter of a million dollars to drive a so-called Merchant Marine Act through Congress.

Mr. NYE. Mr. President, will the Senator from Washington yield?

Mr. BONE. I yield.

Mr. NYE. I should like to have the Senator give expression to his thought as to what the situation would be respecting the quoting of prices for the construction of ships for the United States Government if our Government did not possess navy yards of its own.

Mr. BONE. I think we could get a correct answer out of every Member of the Senate. Where would we be if we did not have our navy yards? We would be like the traditional tomcat in Tartarus, without teeth or toenails, to claw its way out. If we did not have our navy yards at all and if we could not get our work done there, the bids would soar heavenward at a dizzy rate. There is only one answer to make to that crowd, and that is to say to them, "Gentlemen, give us the right prices or you do not get any work." The Government does not tax its people merely to subsidize private shipbuilders, and this is specially true of such a vital and important thing as national defense, where every dollar ought to count and produce a dollar's worth of increased national safety.

Let us be realistic about this and not walk away from it without giving it serious attention. Recently Dr. Gallup took a poll in America, and I am sure Senators who are familiar with his methods will admit that they have been proven to be fairly accurate. The poll discloses that 82 percent of the people of this country want to nationalize the business of preparing for national defense and for war.

The bill which I have offered as an amendment does not call for the ownership of the sources of raw material. In very well chosen language it simply provides that the Federal Government shall have a monopoly in one restricted field. It is well, in my judgment, to keep it in that field—that the Government shall have a monopoly in fabricating war munitions in final form for actual combat purposes. In other words, the one function of translating material into the final form for actual-combat purposes shall be a Government function and monopoly, and it ought to be.

There is no higher purpose that animates Americans than to defend America, and this high purpose must not be translated into a financial football for men who blithely bid $15,000,000 more for the construction of one battleship than the Government can build it for.

Mr. LOGAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BONE. I am very happy to yield.

Mr. LOGAN. I have much sympathy for the Senator's bill, and I think at a proper time I should support it. But does not the Senator think that trying to hitch his bill, which he is now discussing, onto the tail of the helium bill is very much like trying to hitch the State of Texas onto the tail of the State of Rhode Island?

Mr. BONE. The Senator presents an interesting question.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, will the Senator yield again?

Mr. BONE. I gladly yield to the Senator from Missouri.

Mr. CLARK. The Senator has been referring to the difference in cost in the efforts of the United States to manufacture its own munitions, and their purchase from private shipbuilding companies and other purveyors of munitions. Does not the Senator think some of the tremendous difference in cost might be accounted for as was disclosed before the Munitions Committee, when the head of one of the shipbuilding companies, during the 2 years the United States was engaged in war, was shown to have been paid in bonuses alone, to say nothing of the salary which he received, more than $3,000,000 which entered into the contracts executed by the Government with those companies of which this gentleman was head, while the heads of the United States navy yards and other governmental agencies received no such salaries and no bonuses whatever?

Mr. BONE. The Senator from Missouri is absolutely correct. He will recall, as other members of the Munitions Committee will recall, the very peculiar way in which the accounting systems were handled by the shipbuilding companies during wartimes, in which all sorts of operating overhead expenses were included, in a fashion that even made the hair of the case-hardened members of that committee stand quivering on end.

Mr. CLARK. Does the Senator recall the testimony as to the cost of certain ship construction by the New York Shipbuilding Co. and other shipbuilding companies during the period of the war on the cost-plus basis, when they actually figured into the cost on which they expected the Government of the United States to reimburse them, the expenses of their representatives in soliciting commercial business in China and Japan, and also included Christmas presents and contributions, wines, liquor, and cigars, and moneys expended on testing trips, and other similar items which not only entered into the construction costs but on which they collected bonuses from the United States because of the expenditure of money for those purposes?

Mr. BONE. I think, if the real truth were known about certain financial operations during the last war and how this Government was rooked in the sacred name of patriotism, we would have a housecleaning the like of which the Government has never seen since it became a Republic.

This is the first time in my experience in the Senate that I have singled out books for comment, but I wish every person in the United States interested in the subject of war would read a little book called War Madness, by Steve Raushenbush, published in Washington and sold for 25 cents, by the National Home Library Foundation. It will give the average citizen, without the expenditure of very much money, a comprehensive pen picture of some of the rackets turned up by the investigations of the Munitions Committee of this body.

When we realize that the saving on two ships, if built by the Government, is almost enough to pay the cost of a battleship a few years ago, we can realize how bold are the demands of private builders.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BONE. Certainly.

Mr. WALSH. Does the amendment proposed by the Senator restrict to actual war-period times the exercise of the powers granted to the Secretary of War and the Secretary of the Navy?

Mr. BONE. No. It is an attempt to make the Government self-sufficient in time of peace as well as in time of war.

Mr. WALSH. So the amendment, if it is adopted, would give authority to exercise these powers at once?

Mr. BONE. That is correct. Of course, Congress would have to appropriate the necessary money.

Mr. WALSH. Can the Senator state what amount of money it would cost to give this authority to take over the private munitions mentioned in his amendment?

Mr. BONE. I do not have on my desk the studies which were made and the break-down of the figures prepared for us by experts from one of the governmental departments who made a very exhaustive study, but it is my recollection about $40,000,000 would do the whole job for both the Army and Navy. The Government owns a great many institutions now. It is largely a matter of expanding them.

Mr. WALSH. Did the Senator, and the other Senators associated with him in promoting the amendment, give consideration to limiting to actual wartime periods the powers set forth in the amendment?

Mr. BONE. If we attempted to do that, we simply would have idle equipment instead of having it doing this work. It seems to me there would not be any legitimate purpose served by building equipment and letting it lie idle.

Mr. WALSH. The amendment proposes to construct or to give power to the Secretary of War and the Secretary of the Navy to take over certain munition plants now privately owned and privately operated.

Mr. BONE. That is correct.

Mr. WALSH. And the amendment authorizes such appropriations as may be necessary, the money to be provided by Congress.

Mr. BONE. That is correct. Of course, when the Senator says "take them over", that is a rather broad term. The language is to the effect—

That the Secretary of War is authorized, empowered, and directed forthwith to construct, or acquire by purchase or by condemnation, such plants, factories, and facilities, in addition to the arsenals and other such facilities now belonging to the United States, as may be necessary—

To accomplish the purpose of the bill.

Mr. WALSH. It is intended, of course, that the Secretaries shall exercise this power at once after the passage of the bill?

Mr. BONE. Yes; that is correct.

Mr. WALSH. It is not optional with him whether or not he shall take over these plants. It is a mandate of the Congress to have the War Department and the Navy Department get control of all private munitions factories?

Mr. BONE. That is correct; to take over and perform the function of building actual munitions of war in their final form for combat purposes.

Mr. WALSH. I thank the Senator.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, if the Senator from Washington will permit me to interrupt him, as I understand the purpose of the amendment—and I think the Senator from Washington will agree with me—it does not authorize the Secretary of War or the Secretary of the Navy to go out and seize private property. It simply authorizes the two Secretaries, unless they can acquire by purchase the facilities necessary for the manufacture of munitions of the United States, then to construct, in the name of the United States and under the ownership of the United States, facilities sufficient to accomplish the purpose.

Mr. WALSH. But the principle behind the amendment is that it is in the public interest for the War Department and the Navy Department to take over private munitions operations.

Mr. CLARK. The principle behind the amendment is that the United States would be very much better off if it were itself to construct and have under its ownership the facilities necessary to construct such munitions as we may need rather than to be at the mercy of private contractors.

Mr. BONE. Of course, I do the Senator from Massachusetts the honor to assume and to know that he would not think that any Senator or group of Senators would sponsor a measure calling for the confiscation of private property, for obviously it could not be done, and no Member of Congress would ever think of attempting such a thing.

Mr. WALSH. I did not intend to convey that idea. I simply wanted to know if the powers granted in the measure become operative on its enactment and not at a future date.

Mr. BONE. The measure is intended to become operative upon its enactment. Of course, the money necessary to carry it our naturally would have to be carried in the budgets of the departments involved.

Mr. WALSH. Would the result be that there would be no private corporations or individuals engaged in the manufacture of munitions?

Mr. BONE. If the Senator has not a copy of the bill before him, let me call his attention to section 4, because in the preparation of the bill we realized that in the event of a great emergency like war it probably would be necessary to expand the existing agencies which the Government owned and would procure under the bill.

Section 4 provides that—

The Secretary of War and the Secretary of the Navy are hereby authorized, empowered, and directed forthwith to manufacture all gages, jigs, dies, and fixtures necessary in the production of the munitions of war referred to in this act, and to provide adequate supplies of such gages, jigs, dies, and fixtures for use in the event of war by any agency designated by the President of the United States, if in his judgment the then existing facilities for the Government production of munitions of war are insufficient to meet the emergency demands for such munitions.

The Senator knows, and I think every one knows who is familiar with it, that one of the great problems in wartime is to have a plentiful supply of gages, jigs, dies, and fixtures. They are the mechanical gadgets by which manufacturing plants are able to turn themselves into munitions plants for the manufacture of rifle barrels and things of that kind; and it is intended under the bill that the Government shall have an enormous supply of those things, so that in the event of an emergency it can step into any factory and equip it in 24 hours.

We do not want, however, to find ourselves in the position we were in when the Du Ponts told us they would build a powder factory upon their own terms and then later come down here and tell us that we would have become a German province if it had not been for them. I imagine we all understand that the two or three million American boys in France had a little something to do with our not becoming a German province, but the Du Ponts apparently do not accept that version of the matter.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Washington yield to the Senator from Missouri?

Mr. BONE. I yield.

Mr. CLARK. The provision as to jigs and dies, to which the Senator has referred, which is contained in this bill, and also contained in the National Defense Act, but which for some inexplicable reason has never been availed of by the War Department, would also prevent such a situation as occurred in action during the World War, when the United States was in possession of what was admittedly very much the best military rifle in the world—namely, the Springfield—but was compelled to arm its troops with a very inferior rifle, admitted by every military authority to be very inferior—namely, the British Enfield—because the Remington plant and some of the other private arms plants were jigged and died up for the manufacture of the British Enfield, and the arsenals which manufactured the Springfield were not equipped with extra jigs and dies to manufacture the very superior Springfield rifle.

Mr. BONE. That accounts for the presence in the bill of the provision which would permit the Government of the United States to translate a private manufacturing plant into a real munitions factory on very short notice.

Now, Mr. President, I desire to conclude.

We are all familiar with the easy descent into the realms of high finance that went on before the World War, when our banking firms in New York lent England and France a vast amount of money which was never paid. That debt to the banks was ultimately translated into Liberty bonds, which we are now paying so graciously—I hope, anyway, that we are doing it graciously—and we have heard discussed on this floor times without number the question of war debts, and what a tragedy they have been to the American people. Now, however, we are going back into the same dubious field of financial activity. Down the primrose path of dalliance with this kind of outrage and infamy go the American bankers. China is in trouble. Finance Minister Kung, of China, is over in London arranging a $10,000,000 loan, with American cooperation. How sweet it is for us to cooperate in a war loan. If we continue on that course, our boys may some time be called on to collect these loans. Some banker will come down here and howl that he cannot get back his money, and wave flags and demand that we collect the money that he loaned.

The Washington Times of the 5th of August announced that American financial interests will participate in this loan. Is not that lovely? Our bankers are participating in a loan for war purposes on foreign soil. I thought we had been fed up with that kind of business, Mr. President. I thought that all these little white headstones in France might continue to have grim significance and be and remain a pathetic warning against participation in further follies.

I sometimes wonder how far international financial manipulators would sell us down the river and threaten our civilization by their operations. Here comes Mr. Dodd back from abroad, saying that another World War will destroy our civilization. Why in the world should we mess around and stick our financial finger into these world-war pies? It is time we put a clamp on the breed of American citizens whose activities—pernicious activities, if you please—may so disturb our international relationships that they might, by some horrible mischance, lead us into war, and again we will hear the beat of drums and the tread of feet and the roll of caissons through the streets, and our boys will go out to die.

America and its civilization are worth preserving. It is our own country, preserved by the blood of our best and by the agony of thousands and hundreds of thousands of people who yielded up their all to preserve it and make it clean and fine for us who followed. I do not want to see men in financial circles jeopardize this civilization of ours merely because they can make some money out of war. We cannot afford to juggle with our priceless heritage as though it were a worthless bauble.

Mr. President, I hope this amendment will be adopted.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Mr. President, I trust the amendment will be voted down.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, in response to an inquiry from the present occupant of the chair [Mr. LEWIS] a few moments ago, I stated an opinion as to the award of contracts for the construction of battleships which was based on rumor rather than on official information, which, of course, I have not. I have official information, however, as to the estimates for the construction of the two battleships, being in the case of the battleship North Carolina by the New York Navy Yard the sum of $34,425,000 and in the case of the battleship Washington the estimate by the Philadelphia Navy Yard of $34,132,000.

In response to the question of the Chair, I stated that my information was that those navy yards would receive the work. Of course, that statement was based entirely on information as to the fact that their bids were from $12,000,000 to $15,000,000 lower than the nearest private bid. The awards have not as yet been made; and I understand, as does the Senator from Washington, that delegations of private shipbuilders, backed by delegations of Members of the House of Representatives and Members of this body, have very strongly urged that the contract for constructing at least one of those battleships be awarded to some one of the private shipbuilding yards, whose bids are from $12,000,000 to $15,000,000 over the bids of the navy yards. So the actual award is a question which still remains to be determined.

Mr. BONE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. CLARK. I yield to the Senator from Washington.

Mr. BONE. I have before me a story carried in the New York Times of August 5—I think it is very reliable—quoting the Navy Department, or at least referring to the bids opened in the Navy Department on that date for the construction of 1,600-ton destroyers; and the bids ran from $5,075,000 to $8,529,000. The low bid of a year ago on the same type of boat was $4,125,000. Here is a bid twice that much; and the destroyers are of approximately the same types as those on which the Navy Department had bids of $3,500,000 along in 1932 and 1933.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, I have some other figures which I desire to include in the RECORD.

In 1932, the Bethlehem shipbuilding yards were awarded the work of building the cruiser Quincy on a bid of $8,196,000. In the following year, 1933, at a time not of rising but of falling costs both for labor and for construction, the work of building exactly the same type of cruiser, the Vincennes, was awarded to the same company, the Bethlehem Co., on a low bid of $11,720,000, as well as the work of building the Savannah on a bid of $11,677,000. In other words, at a time when both labor and construction costs were falling rather than rising—and I call attention to the fact that this was in 1933, before the passage of the N. R. A., so that the N. R. A. increase in labor construction costs could not have entered into the bids—there was an increase in the bid on the same type of cruiser, from approximately the same bidders, of three and a half million dollars, nearly 50 percent of the construction cost of the 1932 cruisers.

In the same year, 1933, the New York Shipbuilding Co. received the work on the Nashville on a bid of $11,677,000, an identical bid with that on which the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Co. received the work on the Savannah.

The Brooklyn, which was constructed in the same year by the New York Navy Yard, was built at a cost of $11,660,000.

So, Mr. President, it appears that in 1932 and 1933 there was an inexplicable increase in construction costs, in the matter of cruisers of that type, of 40 percent. I say inexplicable; I should explain that that applies only to the surface, because there has been a rather complete explanation put into the records of the hearings of the Munitions Committee of that increase in cruiser cost, which sheds very great illumination on the present method of bidding for the construction of naval vessels by the private shipbuilding companies of the United States. On August 1, 1933, our late colleague, the Senator from Florida, Mr. Trammell, then the chairman of the Committee on Naval Affairs of the Senate, addressed to the President the following letter:

DEAR MR. PRESIDENT: I have been quite interested in analyzing the bids opened by the Navy Department on July 26, 1933, which were submitted by the shipbuilders on naval construction. I believe a thorough study of the matter should be made.

It is my information that—

On September 16, 1931, Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation bid for one 1,500-ton destroyer $2,728,500.

On July 26, 1933, Bethlehem Shipbuilding Co. bid for an identical destroyer $2,670,000, or a decrease in price of $58,500.

On December 14, 1932, Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation bid for one 8-inch gun (heavy) 10,000-ton cruiser, $8,196,000.

On July 26, 1933, Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation bid for the same cruiser $11,720,000, or an increase in price of $3,524,000.

There appear to have been but four bidders on cruisers and eight on destroyers. Gulf Industries, Inc., of Pensacola, Fla., appears to have submitted bids on the destroyers.

It is my information that, in addition to the facts outlined above, it was known in advance which of the four concerns bidding on the cruisers would be low on each of the several items, and it appears to have been known in advance that the position of each of the said shipbuilders would be protected by bids submitted by the remaining shipbuilders, for instance:

Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation, $11,720,000.

New York Shipbuilding Co., $12,100,000.

Newport News Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co., $13,800,000.

United Dry Docks, Inc., $14,800,000.

The bid of the New York Shipbuilding Corporation on the two light cruisers was protected by the other three bidders as follows:

New York Shipbuilding, $11,657,000; Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation, $12,780,000; Newport News Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co., $13,900,000; United Dry Docks, Inc., no bid.

This is the chairman of the Naval Affairs Committee of the Senate, our late colleague, speaking, with his vast knowledge on the subject:

I am unable to justify in my own opinion the increase in cruiser cost as indicated by the 1932 and 1933 bids, particularly when those bids are compared with the destroyer bids of 1931 and 1933. I am convinced that the cruiser bids should be rejected.

Mr. President, in addition to this letter from the chairman of the Naval Affairs Committee of the Senate, there was evidence in the same record by disinterested witnesses of highest integrity, one of whom, Mr. John P. Frey, head of the Metal Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor, a man known to many members of the Senate, testified that in his presence in his office several weeks before the opening of the bids before the making of the awards on the 1933 cruisers a man sat down and wrote out on a piece of paper which of the big three shipbuilding companies would get which cruisers and which parts of the building program and the approximate price at which they would get them.

It was explained that that was simply by reason of the process set out in Senator Trammell's letter, that the representatives of this big-three shipbuilding combine would get together and decide among themselves which company was to build which vessel, and at what price they desired the bid to be made, and then the other two of the conspirators would make collusive and protective bids, so that in each case it was absolutely certain that the member of the big-three shipbuilding combine which had been decided on in advance would get the award. It later appeared in evidence that precisely the same process had gone on among the so-called little three in the building of destroyers, submarines, and types of vessels of a smaller kind.

Mr. President, this represents a disgraceful condition in this country, to say nothing of the waste and extravagance involved in allowing these purveyors of munitions to plunder the people of the United States, and the illustrations we have used today with regard to shipbuilding might be extended to the other fields, to the manufacturers of other kinds of munitions of war.

It seems to me there is no more important question to be before the Congress, in view of the tremendous and costly mounting expenditures in preparation for another war, than the consideration of this question. The Senator from Utah very naturally, being in charge of the bill, says that the bill embodied in the amendment of the Senator from Washington ought not to be tacked on to the pending bill. The difficulty with his argument is that under the peculiar system we have in the Congress, by which the committees of the Senate and the House of Representatives having to do with military and naval questions are in the closest contact with the War Department and the Navy Department, the only way in which the Congress will ever be able to pass upon such an important question as this is by having it tacked on to some other bill, because we will never get a bill for the nationalization of the manufacture of munitions out of the Committee on Military Affairs or the Committee on Naval Affairs. I do not in any way reflect on the Senators who make up those committees when I make that remark.

Mr. President, to me it seems that there could not be a bill before the Senate to which the amendment of the Senator from Washington could be more germane than the pending bill, because it is a bill which proceeds upon the theory of nationalization of a great national resource, for purposes of national defense, primarily. That is the only way it got into the Military Affairs Committee in the first place.

The bill embodied in the amendment of the Senator from Washington proceeds upon the theory of the nationalization of several industries, several activities, for purposes of national defense, and it seems to me that there never will be in this body a bill to which that could be more germane than the pending bill, and I believe the time is none too soon to proceed to the consideration of this very important subject.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I support the position taken by my colleague in opposition to placing upon the bill under consideration the very important measure which has been tendered by the very able Senator from Washington [Mr. BONE].

A number of years ago I was a member of the Naval Affairs Committee, and during my service upon that committee I gave considerable attention to the questions that were involved. We had before us at that time, when I was a member of the committee, a bill which called for approximately $1,375,000,000 for the construction of battle cruisers and battleships. As soon as we took up that bill for consideration—and I may say that I opposed it—Japan, fearing that we had some military spirit, and contemplating some invasion of the Orient, or for some other reason, became active, and projected a plan for the construction of six battle cruisers, some of which were as large as, and two or three of them larger than, those which were contemplated under the plan under consideration; all of which emphasized the fact that any gesture upon our part, or any promise to enlarge our Navy or to increase our military expenditures, leads other nations to change their policies and increase their appropriations for military purposes.

Mr. President, it is a great mistake to say that the way to peace is preparation for war. When one nation says, "We must build in order to meet the building of another nation", that nation increases its naval activity, and that inspires other nations to increase their military appropriations, and we have a cycle of increasing preparations for war.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. KING. I yield.

Mr. CLARK. The Senator is not suggesting, is he, that the measure proposed by the Senator from Washington [Mr. BONE] is calculated to increase either appropriations or expenditures for preparation for war? On the contrary, does not the Senator believe that nationalization of the munitions industry would have directly the contrary effect, by removing the incentive of munitions manufacturers and shipbuilders to spend hundreds of thousands of dollars in employing such scoundrels as this man Shearer to break up peace negotiations and in actively working against the establishment of governmental munitions factories?

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I make no comment upon the remarks made by the able Senator from Washington [Mr. BONE] or my delightful friend from Missouri [Mr. CLARK] as to the advantages of nationalization of the instrumentalities for war. I have not been persuaded—and I made a considerable investigation during 1917, 1918, 1919, and 1920—as to the advantages of the nationalization of these industries as against private ownership; and I was not satisfied, taking all of the factors into consideration, such as the increased wages that might be paid and the disadvantages which arise in many ways, that it would be cheaper in the long run for the Government to own all of the activities which are needed in preparation for war as against private enterprise operating them. There is much to be said upon both sides.

Mr. President, if the United States spent several hundred millions of dollars, which I think it would be compelled to spend in order to build the plants necessary for the construction of battleships and battle cruisers, I do not think that would tend to diminish the appropriations by other nations or tend to pour oil, so to speak, upon the troubled waters. I have always taken the position that if we spent for peace a modicum of what we spend for war and war preparations, the paths of peace would be trodden by more people than follow those paths today. But every appropriation that we make leads to other appropriations.

As I stated when the bill to which I first referred was under consideration, one of the leaders of the Diet in Japan was interrogated as to the expenditures which the United States Government contemplated, and he said that, in view of the large appropriations which were contemplated by the United States, Japan would be compelled to increase her appropriations for building battleships and battle cruisers, and she did so. I am glad to state, Mr. President, that the movement in the United States which tended to excite other nations resulted in the administration then in power, the Harding administration, calling an international conference for the purpose of bringing about a reduction in armaments. While that conference did not accomplish all that was hoped for it, in my opinion, much good did result from it. It did arrest our program which called for the expenditure of nearly $1,500,000,000, and it did arrest the building programs of Japan and other nations for battleships and battle cruisers; and to that degree it saved, in my opinion, many billions of dollars to our Nation and to other nations throughout the world.

Mr. President, it is not now my purpose, however, to discuss that situation. I rose merely for the purpose of indicating that it seems to me that the amendment offered by the Senator from Washington ought not to be attached to the measure now under consideration by the Senate.

Mr. BONE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. KING. I yield.

Mr. BONE. The Senator understands that our purpose in offering this amendment—my purpose, at least—is to try to secure for my Government a dollar's worth of defense for a dollar spent instead of getting 75 cents' worth of defense for a dollar.

Mr. KING. I agree with the Senator; and if we could save, not 25 cents but 50 cents or 75 cents, I should be very happy to endorse that policy. I am not satisfied that the United States can build battleships and all the munitions of war cheaper than private industry can; but I should welcome the appointment by the President of the United States, or by the Congress of the United States, of a commission to make a searching investigation into all the questions involved in the proposition to have the United States nationalize all munitions factories. I think much information might be obtained which would be useful to Congress in determining this important question.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I express the hope that we may dispose of the pending amendment and dispose of the bill. Quite a full program for the afternoon has been tentatively arranged. We have gotten nowhere with it. I hope we may shortly dispose of the pending amendment and the bill.

Mr. THOMAS of Utah. Mr. President, I repeat that the amendment is worthy of real consideration. Therefore, I hope it will be voted down as an amendment to the pending bill.

Mr. MOORE. Mr. President, I desire to say only that if the Government undertakes to build its ships, the Government should take over the shipyards. In New Jersey, in one shipyard 10,000 men are employed. They are not necessarily all employed in working on Government ships, but most of the time they are employed in working on Government ships. A delegation representing those men came to Washington last week to present their position. When the Government takes over the building of a ship, the men who have made their life's work that of shipbuilding, men who have bought little homes and have their homes and their families there, cannot work in the Government shipyard because they are over age. The Government may establish shipyards and may build its own ships, but the Government does not use in building its ships these men who have given their lives to building ships. If the policy proposed should be carried out, all of the men to whom I refer would have to go on relief.

Mr. President, if this policy were adopted, another question would have to be considered. The Government has no ways on which to build ships. The expenditure of millions of dollars will be required to build ways. When it is all figured out, a greater expense will be involved in having the Government carry out this work than is involved in having the private shipbuilding companies do the work.

I do not believe in giving the shipbuilding companies anything they should not have. I do not believe they should be awarded contracts when their bids are too high. I believe they should be made to come down to what the Government says is a fair price in bidding for the building of ships. I do not believe, however, in throwing 10,000 men out of work. Shipbuilding yards are located in other States also. I do not care if the Government puts them all out of business, but let us put them all out of business honestly. Let us take the shipyards and use them ourselves.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Washington [Mr. BONE] to the amendment of the committee.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The absence of a quorum being suggested, let the roll be called.

The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Connally	La Follette	Pope
Andrews	Copeland	Lewis	Radcliffe
Austin	Davis	Lodge	Reynolds
Barkley	Ellender	Logan	Schwartz
Berry	Frazier	Lonergan	Schwellenbach
Bilbo	George	McCarran	Sheppard
Black	Gerry	McGill	Smathers
Bone	Green	McKellar	Steiwer
Borah	Guffey	McNary	Thomas, Utah
Brown, Mich.	Hale	Maloney	Townsend
Brown, N. H.	Harrison	Minton	Vandenberg
Bulow	Hatch	Moore	Wagner
Capper	Hitchcock	Neely	Walsh
Caraway	Johnson, Calif.	Nye	White
Chavez	Johnson, Colo.	Pepper
Clark	King	Pittman

The VICE PRESIDENT. Sixty-two Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Washington [Mr. BONE] to the amendment reported by the committee.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, it had been my intention, and that of the Senator from Washington and other Senators interested in the amendment which he offered, to request a record vote upon the amendment, not with the idea that the amendment would be successful at this time but with the idea of developing the sentiment regarding it. However, we have been assured by the able and distinguished Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. WALSH], chairman of the Committee on Naval Affairs, that he is very much interested in the facts adduced and the arguments advanced in support of the bill which the Senator from Washington has offered as an amendment, and that he will give us a hearing on the measure early in the next session of the Congress. In view of that suggestion of the Senator from Massachusetts, I do not feel that it is necessary to have a record vote at this time on the amendment.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, I wish to say to the able Senator from Missouri that I feel very strongly that a bill of this kind, advocated by five of the outstanding Senators of this body, should be given careful study and consideration by a standing committee of the Senate. I have an open mind on the question. I have not been able to study it. I realize its importance. It may have considerable merit. I assure the Senator that at the beginning of the next session of Congress I shall see that the Committee on Naval Affairs gives extensive hearings, so that we may be informed of the advantages and disadvantages which might accrue by the enactment of the proposed legislation.

Mr. CLARK. I thank the Senator, and with that statement I do not feel that it is necessary to delay the Senate by a record vote at this time.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Washington [Mr. BONE] to the amendment reported by the committee.

The amendment to the amendment was rejected.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment reported by the committee, as amended.

The amendment, as amended, was agreed to.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question now is on the engrossment of the amendment.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the passage of the bill.

Mr. McNARY. On that I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Chief Clerk called the roll.

Mr. KING. I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Ohio [Mr. BULKLEY] and therefore withhold my vote.

Mr. BARKLEY. I am advised that if present and voting, the Senator from Montana [Mr. MURRAY] would vote "yea."

Mr. HALE (after having voted in the negative). I transfer my general pair with the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BYRNES] to the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. BRIDGES] and allow my vote to stand. I am advised that if present the Senator from South Carolina would vote "yea", and the Senator from New Hampshire would vote "nay."

Mr. LEWIS. I announce that the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. DUFFY] and the Senator from Georgia [Mr. RUSSELL] are absent in the performance of official duty as members of the committee appointed to attend the dedication of the battle monuments in France.

The Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BAILEY] is absent from the Senate because of illness.

The senior Senator from Ohio [Mr. BULKLEY], the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. BURKE], the junior Senator from Virginia [Mr. BYRD], the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. LEE], the Senator from California [Mr. MCADOO], the junior Senator from Montana [Mr. MURRAY], the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. O'MAHONEY], and the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. OVERTON] are detained by departmental business.

I further announce that the junior Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BYRNES], the Senator from Illinois [Mr. DIETERICH], the senior Senator from Iowa [Mr. GILLETTE], the senior Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS], the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. LUNDEEN], the senior Senator from South Carolina [Mr. SMITH], and the Senator from Missouri [Mr. TRUMAN] are detained in important committee meetings.

The junior Senator from Ohio [Mr. DONAHEY], the junior Senator from Iowa [Mr. HERRING], the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. HOLT], the Senator from Delaware [Mr. HUGHES], the Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS], the Senator from Indiana [Mr. VAN NUYS], and the senior Senator from Montana [Mr. WHEELER] are necessarily detained from the Senate.

The Senator from Delaware [Mr. HUGHES] is paired with the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. SMITH] on this question. If present and voting, the Senator from Delaware would vote "yea", and the Senator from South Carolina would vote "nay."

Mr. AUSTIN. I announce that the junior Senator from Vermont [Mr. GIBSON] has a general pair with the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. DUFFY].

I also desire to announce the general pair of the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. SHIPSTEAD] with the Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS].

The result was announced—yeas 37, nays 26, as follows:

YEAS—37

Adams	Bulow	Logan	Reynolds
Andrews	Chavez	Lonergan	Schwartz
Ashurst	Ellender	Maloney	Schwellenbach

So the bill (S. 1567) was passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill authorizing the conservation, production, exploitation, and sale of helium gas, a mineral resource pertaining to the national defense and to the development of commercial aeronautics, authorizing the acquisition, by purchase or otherwise, by the United States of properties for the production of helium gas, and for other purposes."

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives by Mr. Chaffee, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House had passed without amendment the following bills of the Senate:

S. 2520. An act declaring Bayou Savage, also styled Bayou Chantilly, in the city of New Orleans, La., a nonnavigable stream; and

S. 2639. An act to authorize the Secretary of War to lease the Fort Schuyler Military Reservation, N. Y.

The message also announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 2260) to provide for appearance on behalf of and appeal by the United States in certain cases in which the constitutionality of acts of Congress is involved.

The message further announced that the House had passed a bill (H. R. 8046) to amend an act entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States", approved July 1, 1898, and acts amendatory thereof and supplementary thereto; and to repeal section 76 thereof and all acts and parts of acts inconsistent therewith, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

HOUSE BILLS REFERRED

The following bills were severally read twice by their titles and referred as indicated below:

H. R. 7415. An act to increase the rates of pay for charmen and charwomen in the custodial service of the Post Office Department; to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads;

H. R. 7950. An act to amend the District of Columbia Alcoholic Beverage Control Act; to the Committee on the District of Columbia;

H. R. 6963. An act to amend an act entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States", approved July 1, 1898, and acts amendatory thereof and supplementary thereto; and to repeal section 76 thereof and all acts and parts of acts inconsistent therewith; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

PREVENTION OF AND PUNISHMENT FOR LYNCHING

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Calendar No. 814, the bill (H. R. 1507) to assure to persons within the jurisdiction of every State the equal protection of the laws and to punish the crime of lynching.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from New York.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I merely wish to state that in an effort to arrange a tentative program for today, preliminary to taking up the sugar bill tomorrow, it had been understood that the Senator from Utah [Mr. KING] would be recognized to call up the District of Columbia airport bill, the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. WALSH] to take up a Navy housing bill, and the Senator from Texas [Mr. SHEPPARD] to take up an Army housing bill today. We have spent more time on the helium bill than was contemplated. It was understood the Senator from Utah [Mr. KING] would be recognized to call up the airport bill when the helium bill was disposed of.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Kentucky will permit the present occupant of the chair to state that he had been so informed by the Senator from Kentucky. When the helium bill was passed and the title was amended, the Chair looked around and tried to find either one of the Senators referred to standing. None was standing, but the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] was on his feet and demanding recognition. That is the reason why the Chair could not recognize any other Senator.

Mr. BARKLEY. The Senator from Kentucky is not in any way blaming the Vice President for the situation.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair wants not only the Senator from Kentucky but the entire membership of the Senate to understand that it is the duty of the Chair, as he understands it in this body, differing from what it is in the other body, to recognize the Senator who is addressing the Chair. When three Senators are on their feet demanding recognition, the Chair has the privilege of choosing the one to recognize; but when only one Senator is standing and demanding recognition, the Chair has no choice. When the present occupant of the chair was the presiding officer of another body, he could recognize a member in his seat and ask him to stand up. [Laughter.]

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, I regard this bill as one of the very important bills of the session. I do not want to disarrange any program, but I shall not yield on this proposal. I am entitled, as a Senator of the United States, to recognition. I am entitled to make the motion. The bill has been on the calendar since early in the session. It was reported by the Judiciary Committee. Other bills which have been reported out later than this one have received prior consideration. I am entitled to its consideration at this time. All I am asking is that the Senate vote on my motion. Senators are familiar with the bill, and I shall be content with whatever the Senate may decide. If my motion is defeated, very well; I shall accede to the judgment of the Senate. I do not believe a bill of this importance, affecting orderly and civilized society, ought to be set aside.

I should be permitted to make the motion at a time when it is known there will be an opportunity for its consideration.

Mr. CONNALLY and Mr. BARKLEY addressed the Chair.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from New York yield; and if so, to whom?

Mr. WAGNER. All I ask is that I may have a vote upon the motion which I have made. Surely, no one will object to that.

I yield first to the Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. BARKLEY. Did the Senator from New York, a few days ago, when this matter was offered as an amendment on another bill, understand that I undertook at that time to assure the Senator that, so far as I was concerned, he would be afforded an opportunity to make the motion which he has now made, but that, in view of the legislative situation, it was desirable that it be made at a time when it would not inject itself ahead of other measures which were of an emergent nature, there being no emergent nature attached to the particular bill now under discussion? If the Senator did so understand me to say that, did he in any way doubt that I would carry out my word in the matter?

Mr. WAGNER. I have not any doubt the Senator will carry out his word except that I have a duty to perform to the people affected by the proposed legislation, especially when the overwhelming sentiment of the United States is in favor of the bill. I would be derelict in my duty as one of the sponsors of the bill if I permitted it to be postponed to a time when no consideration could be given to it because the end of the session was at hand and Senators desired to get away.

Mr. BARKLEY. I desire to clarify the situation. So far as I am concerned, I have not any objection to the bill being taken up when it can be considered on its merits and free from entanglement with other proposed legislation or the legislative program. I have no desire to delay consideration of the measure. We all understand it is a controversial bill. No one knows how long it may take to consider it and bring it to a vote. The whole program of the session may be involved.

I simply wanted to say, in view of the situation, that it seems a little—I shall not say unfair, because I would not impute unfairness to the Senator, but it is unfortunate at this particular juncture that an exceedingly controversial matter should be brought forward now. Every assurance has been given the Senator that the bill will be considered. So far as I am concerned, I have no desire to delay it for a moment beyond the course that bills usually take when they come in on the calendar under the conditions surrounding the legislative program.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WAGNER. I yield.

Mr. CLARK. Does not the Senator think, with reference to the remarks of the Senator from Kentucky as to whether this is an emergency measure, that the fact that during the time the bill has been pending in the Congress at this session several extremely shocking lynchings have taken place in the United States while the Congress was waiting for other legislation to be reported, should have a bearing on the consideration of the bill at this time?

Mr. WAGNER. I so regard it. It has been on the calendar of the Senate for several months.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair may suggest that if the bill is made the unfinished business, then if it is agreeable to the Senate it could be laid aside temporarily for the consideration of other measures.

Mr. WAGNER. I should object to doing that. I am simply moving now that the bill be taken up for consideration by the Senate.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from New York yield to the Senator from Oregon?

Mr. WAGNER. I yield for a question.

Mr. McNARY. I shall try to fashion my observation in the form of a question; but I rise to say that I am in hearty accord with the observations of the Vice President. The Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] was first on his feet. I desire to state further that it is too bad when programs go awry; but they are based only on custom and practice, and have no sanction in the rules.

I shall object to any effort to withdraw the motion. It can be done only by unanimous consent.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from New York yield to the Senator from Idaho?

Mr. BORAH. I desire to propound a parliamentary inquiry.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator will state it.

Mr. BORAH. Is not the motion to take up the bill debatable?

The VICE PRESIDENT. It is.

Mr. BORAH. Then when the Senator from New York concludes, I desire to debate it.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, will the Senator from New York yield?

Mr. WAGNER. I yield.

Mr. CONNALLY. I desire to ask the Senator from New York a very plain question.

I am sure the Senator from New York does not wish to disrupt the regular legislative program of the administration. He is aware, is he not, of certain important measures, such as the sugar-control bill, the bill plugging up the loopholes in the income-tax and other laws, and a very great number of other important measures which this session of Congress ought to enact?

The Senate and the Congress have been very kind to the Senator from New York in the passage of a number of his legislative measures at this session; and to use what I hope is not an offensive term, it seems to me it is very ungracious on the part of the Senator from New York now to insist that this program be disrupted and held up in a seemingly mad contest between the two Senators from New York as to which one can speak oftener and more loudly on this bill.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, will my colleague yield?

Mr. WAGNER. Yes.

Mr. COPELAND. I read in the newspapers this morning—that is all I know about what is going on—that we are going to be here until the 21st of August; so we might just as well take up this bill now and deal with it.

I hope my colleague will not yield.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, I think this is an important piece of legislation, and I am sure a reasonable discussion of it should not take more than 2 or 3 days. Then we can take up these other matters, but at the present time I shall insist upon my motion, and when the time comes to vote I shall ask that there be a roll call upon it.

Mr. BARKLEY. I move that the Senate adjourn.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. NEELY in the chair). The Senator will state it.

Mr. CLARK. The motion made by the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] is displaced, is it not, if the motion made by the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY] to adjourn shall prevail?

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, I make the point of order that a motion to adjourn is not debatable.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. CONNALLY. I make the point of order, Mr. President, that a motion to adjourn is not open to debate.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, I rise to make a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Missouri [Mr. CLARK] has made a point of order, which he will proceed to state, and until he has concluded his statement other Senators will please take their seats.

Mr. CLARK. I desire to make a parliamentary inquiry to this effect: If a motion to adjourn should now be carried, it would automatically operate to displace the motion heretofore made by the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] to take up the antilynching bill, would it not?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It would.

Mr. CLARK. If a motion to recess should be made and carried, it would not displace the pending business?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It would not.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. CONNALLY. I make the point of order, Mr. President, that debate is not allowable on the motion to adjourn.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, may I make a parliamentary inquiry?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from New York will state the parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. WAGNER. If the Senate now should vote to adjourn, would not that have the effect of dissolving the motion I made a few moments ago?

The VICE PRESIDENT. It would.

Mr. WAGNER. And may I ask the Chair if I am correct in assuming that if that motion should be defeated, and a motion should be made to recess and should prevail, my motion would carry over?

The VICE PRESIDENT. That is correct.

Mr. WAGNER. I raise the question of no quorum.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will call the roll.

Mr. CONNALLY. I make the point of order that action on the motion to adjourn does not require a quorum.

Mr. CLARK. I ask for the yeas and nays on the motion to adjourn.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair did not understand the parliamentary situation. Has a motion been made to adjourn?

Mr. BARKLEY. Yes.

The VICE PRESIDENT. A quorum is not required to act upon that motion.

Mr. WAGNER. I ask for the yeas and nays on the motion to adjourn.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. DAVIS (after having voted in the negative). I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. LOGAN]. Not knowing how he would vote, I transfer my pair to the junior Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. BRIDGES] and permit my vote to stand.

Mr. BYRNES (after having voted in the affirmative). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Maine [Mr. HALE]. I transfer that pair to the junior Senator from Georgia [Mr. RUSSELL] and let my vote stand.

Mr. AUSTIN. I desire to announce that the Senator from Vermont [Mr. GIBSON] has a general pair with the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. DUFFY]; and the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. SHIPSTEAD] has a general pair with the Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS].

Mr. BARKLEY. The Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. WALSH] is unavoidably detained. If present, he would vote "nay."

Mr. LEWIS. I desire to announce that the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BAILEY] is detained because of illness.

The Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. DUFFY] and the Senator from Georgia [Mr. RUSSELL] are absent on official business connected with the duties of the Battle Monuments Commission in France.

The following-named Senators are necessarily detained:

The Senator from Washington [Mr. BONE], the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. BURKE], the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. CHAVEZ], the Senator from Ohio [Mr. DONAHEY], the Senator from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE], the Senator from Iowa [Mr. GILLETTE], the Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS], the Senator from Iowa [Mr. HERRING], the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. HOLT], the Senator from Delaware [Mr. HUGHES], the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. LOGAN], the Senator from California [Mr. MCADOO], the Senator from Montana [Mr. MURRAY], the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. OVERTON], the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. SMITH], the Senator from Missouri [Mr. TRUMAN], the Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS] and the Senator from Montana [Mr. WHEELER].

The result was announced—yeas 27, nays 35, as follows:

YEAS—27

Adams	Brown, Mich.	Hatch	Radcliffe
Andrews	Byrd	Johnson, Colo.	Reynolds
Austin	Byrnes	King	Schwartz
Barkley	Caraway	McCarran	Sheppard
Bilbo	Connally	McKellar	Thomas, Utah

So the Senate refused to adjourn.

RECESS

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator will state it.

Mr. McNARY. Is a motion to take a recess debatable?

The VICE PRESIDENT. It is not.

Mr. McNARY. I move that the Senate take a recess until 12 o'clock noon tomorrow.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, is the motion debatable?

The VICE PRESIDENT. It is not.

The question is on the motion of the Senator from Oregon that the Senate take a recess until 12 o'clock noon tomorrow.

Mr. McNARY and Mr. BARKLEY demanded the yeas and nays, and they were ordered.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DAVIS (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. LOGAN]. I transfer that pair to the junior Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. BRIDGES], and will vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. BARKLEY (when Mr. WALSH's name was called). The Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. WALSH] is unavoidably detained. If present, he would have voted "yea" on this motion.

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. AUSTIN. I desire to announce the following pairs on this question:

The Senator from Vermont [Mr. GIBSON] with the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. DUFFY]; and

The Senator from Minnesota [Mr. SHIPSTEAD] with the Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS].

I also desire to announce that the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. BRIDGES] is necessarily absent. If present, he would have voted "yea" on this question.

The Senator from Maine [Mr. WHITE], the Senators from North Dakota [Mr. FRAZIER and Mr. NYE], and the Senator from Oregon [Mr. STEIWER] are unavoidably absent on official business.

The result was announced—yeas 36, nays 23, as follows:

YEAS—36

Ashurst	Copeland	Lewis	Pope
Austin	Davis	Lodge	Radcliffe
Berry	Dieterich	Lonergan	Schwellenbach
Brown, Mich.	Gerry	McGill	Smathers
Brown, N. H.	Guffey	McNary	Thomas, Utah

So Mr. McNARY's motion was agreed to; and (at 5 o'clock and 44 minutes p. m.) the Senate took a recess until tomorrow, Thursday, August 12, 1937, at 12 o'clock meridian.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 11, 1937

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Blessed be Thou, O Lord, our Father, by whose mercy we are permitted to greet the blessings of another day; at the altar of prayer accept our tribute of praise. Open our hearts to see the splendor of Thy law; make us seekers, examples, and lovers of Thy truth. Hide not Thy face from Thy servants, but bless them with the peace, purity, and joy of the Lord. O give us all visions and hours in the sacred things of God. Graciously be with all churches with their priesthood, with all schools with their teachers. Let Thy spirit work mightily in them that the things fair and perfect shall become possible. The Lord God be with the youth of our land. As parents may we be in haste to give them the best that we have and to do for them the best that we know. Heavenly Father, be Thou the center and the theme of our affections. In the holy name of Jesus. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Frazier, its legislative clerk, announced that the Senate had passed, with an amendment, in which the concurrence of the House is requested, a joint resolution of the House of the following title:

H. J. Res. 406. Joint resolution to establish the General Anthony Wayne Memorial Commission to formulate plans for the construction of a permanent memorial to the memory of Gen. Anthony Wayne.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed bills and a joint resolution of the following titles, in which the concurrence of the House is requested:

S. 1261. An act to amend the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended, and for other purposes;

S. 2583. An act to provide for the acquisition of certain lands for and the addition thereof to the Tahoe National Forest, in the State of Nevada, and the acquisition of certain other lands for the completion of the acquisition of the remaining lands within the limits of the Great Smoky Mountains National Park, in east Tennessee;

S. 2670. An act to provide that the United States shall aid the States in wildlife-restoration projects, and for other purposes; and

S. J. Res. 191. Joint resolution to protect foreign diplomatic and consular officers and the buildings and premises occupied by them in the District of Columbia.

The message also announced that the Senate agrees to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 2260), entitled "An act to provide for appearance on behalf of and appeal by the United States in certain cases in which the constitutionality of acts of Congress is involved."

The message also announced that the Senate insists upon its amendments to the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 363) entitled "Joint resolution to authorize an additional appropriation to further the work of the United States Constitution Sesquicentennial Commission", disagreed to by the House; agrees to the conference asked by the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and appoints Mr. VAN NUYS, Mr. BURKE, and Mr. BORAH to be the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The message also announced that the Senate agrees to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 7051) entitled "An act authorizing the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes."

THE NATIONAL HOUSING BILL

Mr. DEMUTH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that I may address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. DEMUTH. Mr. Speaker and Members of the Congress, because of the fact that I have had much experience as a construction engineer, builder, real-estate operator, as an appraiser for the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, as an appraiser for the State Banking Department of Pennsylvania, Division of Closed Building and Loans, and as property assessor for the city of Pittsburgh, it naturally follows that I have certain ideas and opinions which should be of value to this Congress in trying to correct the evils existing today in housing. Slums, to a great extent, may be eliminated by legislation and proper cooperation on the part of municipalities and the individuals occupying the living quarters.

If a building is structurally sound and has proper sanitary arrangements and conditions as pertain to light and ventilation are adequate, then the quarters are healthful for human beings to occupy. The occupants of a quarters may make them insanitary, and I wish to point out the very important part played in the healthful condition of a building is that of cleanliness on the part of the occupant. In other words, the use of soap and water and a little energy, known as elbow grease, will render any quarters sanitary and livable, and the lack of their use will contaminate a dwelling and also may result in the contamination of an entire apartment building or tenement. As you all know, vermin, bugs, and disease are most readily carried through a building housing many families. It should be further pointed out that a family occupying an individual home, the living conditions affect only that particular dwelling.

One weakness of the Wagner-Steagall bill, in my estimation, is that it is discriminatory in that it endeavors to supply money at a 3-percent interest rate and also free taxes to the occupants of the buildings they propose to erect. You will agree that no tenants will be accepted who do not have steady employment at sufficient wages to pay the proposed rent, however low it may be. On the other hand, the owner of a house whose mortgage is held by the Home Owners' Loan Corporation or private agency pays 5- or 6-percent interest and taxes on the land as well as on the building, even though the owner of the said home may have no work or his income may be lower than those who will occupy the proposed buildings.

Secondly, the bill encourages and fosters land monopoly, because it will no doubt authorize payment of high ground rent—that is, interest on the excessive value of the land—and will encourage the ownership of land in the hands of a few and the exploitation of the many. It must be noted that land values, while created by the public, are claimed by the individual. You thereby act as collecting agent for this illicit ground rent.

Thirdly, the cost of the project when the present buildings are demolished becomes excessively high, because the cost of the demolished buildings are added to the cost of the land. But in addition to that, from the experience gained through other building projects recently completed by the Government, the cost ran as high as $1 a cubic foot, whereas the Home Owners' Loan Corporation in the State of Pennsylvania had a rule whereby in no instance was a home to be appraised more than 25 cents a cubic foot. Your bill should provide that the cost of no building shall be more than 45 cents a cubic foot, which is the cost of the very finest apartment buildings built by private industries.

I wish now to call your attention to the type of tenement owners. From my experience, they can generally be put in a certain category. They buy buildings which are very old and run down, and also shacks. They do not possess pride of ownership. They never make repairs and "milk" the property without maintaining it in a state of repair or in sanitary condition. These same people will go into court and pay exorbitant witness fees in order to obtain two or three times the value of these delapidated tenements, which in turn must be added to the ground value and carried by the United States Government or the renters of the proposed project. Due to their nature, you will find the owners of these properties most unjust, unreasonable, and unethical to deal with in arriving at a fair price for their properties which are to be cleared. In the city of Pittsburgh we have condemned and razed many buildings which were structurally unsound. I feel it should be mandatory for local governments to condemn all buildings that are unsound or insanitary. All money paid for the destruction of unsound and insanitary buildings will be taken from the amount that will be spent to reemploy working men in the building industry to whom this bill intends to give work. The amount paid for these slums should not exceed 10 cents per cubic foot.

In practically every city throughout the United States excepting New York, there are sufficient vacant lots to supply more than enough new homes to take care of any housing shortage which exists or may exist within the next 10 years.

I introduced H. R. 7691, known as the Urban Housing Security Act of 1937. The purpose of this bill is to encourage home ownership and make it secure; for the reduction of unemployment and the stimulation of business activities; to reestablish economic independency and prevent the evils of tenancy as now prevails in farm and urban communities; to promote health, to improve housing, social conditions, and the general welfare; and for other purposes.

I wish to point out that there exists in urban and rural communities throughout the United States, deplorable conditions in housing due to the exploitation and abuse of our citizens' natural desire to possess homes in which to house their families. These conditions are due to high interest rates and injurious taxation to a great extent, caused by the delegation of the authority to thousands of private agencies to create and destroy our medium of exchange which is necessary and so vital to trade and domestic commerce.

These conditions are inimical to the general welfare of the Nation on account of demoralizing the morale of our citizens by (a) the exploitation of their natural instincts and virtues; (b) discouraging home ownership; (c) speeding up the ownership of land into the hands of a few at the expense of the many; (d) fluctuating and manipulating the amount of currency and causing artificial scarcities, with the result that home ownership is impossible of continued possession, thus impairing moral, domestic, and peaceful relationship and destroying industrial and agricultural productivity.

The exploitation of our citizens' virtues and natural instincts by the failure to correct these evils has resulted in, among other things, an acute dwelling shortage; the stagnation of employment; land and dwelling monopoly; the paralysis of the Nation's business; the disturbance of domestic tranquillity; and other injurious effects upon the general welfare of the Nation.

The citizens and private industry are able to remedy this condition provided suitable legislation is passed to correct the immoral, unstable, and ruinous practices. Private industry and initiative properly controlled and fairly protected through the enterprise of our citizens was and is now able to provide and retain continued possession of their own homes under reasonable conditions.

Under the bill, the Federal Housing Administration is given the right to make loans for the construction of individual dwellings. The mortgages shall bear an interest of 3 percent per annum on the amount of the loan and shall be further amortized annually by an amount equal to 1 percent of the original mortgage. The loan can be made in an amount up to 80 percent of the appraised value of the land and proposed building. It also provides that the Federal Housing Administration may make a character loan up to $300 to enable the applicant to purchase a lot to initiate this program.

The bill also provides that the value of the lot shall not exceed $1,100 nor $35 per foot front, including paving; and the value of no dwelling constructed under the term of the act shall exceed $5,000. The annual income of the applicant shall be at least four times the annual charge. By annual charge is meant a sum of all annual interest and amortization charges, fire insurance, and taxes on the lot.

In order that the local government may participate in the benefits they must agree to waive all county, State, municipal, or any other tax on the improvements. This waiver of taxation on the improvements shall be for a period of not less than 40 years. The home owner would continue to pay the taxes on the lot, so therefore, the local taxing communities would not lose any revenue now being collected from the land.

This bill will be of great benefit to the citizens of the country and stop the tendency toward the ownership of land in the hands of a few, which may result in the danger of returning to land feudalism as still prevails, to an extent, in many European countries.

It will be possible for the citizen to own his own lot and dwelling at a charge smaller than is possible under any tenancy housing program. At the same time it established the very desirable condition of individual sovereignty over one's own home and a better and more independent citizenry.

Under this plan the average fixed charges on a home costing $4,000 on an $800 lot, including taxes, amortization of the mortgage, and fire insurance, would be $15 per month. In order to start it would require only $660 cash or the equity of that amount in a lot.

This reduction in the cost of home-ownership will force drastic reductions in rent and the slums will be razed by their owners due to the change in conditions. [Applause.]

NATIONAL CORN-SHUCKING CONTEST

Mr. NELSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that I may address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

There was no objection.

Mr. NELSON. Mr. Speaker, in the heart of Missouri, on Thursday, November 4, there will be held the national corn-shucking contest. To some of my colleagues from nearby Maryland or Virginia I might explain that in my State we shuck corn instead of oysters. And those of you from Minnesota will understand if I tell you that this is the same task which you refer to as "picking" corn. To many others it is "husking" or "gathering", but to us it is "shucking." Yes; and in Missouri, the term "barrel" is often used instead of "bushel."

My object in asking permission to address the House is to extend to you, in the name of participating agricultural publications, the city of Marshall, the county of Saline, and farm, city, and commercial organizations, and the great State of Missouri, a hearty invitation to attend this greatest of all farm athletic events. There are, I believe, fewer than 10 cases where sports events have drawn as many as 100,000 people. The records, as I recall, are held by the Memorial Day auto races at Indianapolis, which one year drew 130,000. Incidentally, in 1924, when a candidate for President of the United States spoke on a Cooper County, Mo., farm the crowd was estimated at 70,000.

As to Saline County, which in a single year has produced 6,360,000 bushels of corn, and where the 1937 corn-shucking contest will be held, it is one of Missouri's greatest corn, wheat, apple, bluegrass, and livestock counties, located in the central part of the State, and surrounded by other counties of outstanding excellence. To get to the national corn-husking grounds one may fly, and find a modern flying field. Missouri's great road system radiates to this spot, in which folks from any bordering State may drive almost in a beeline over concrete. Rail connections and bus lines get one there with a minimum of changes. There is direct train service from St. Louis and Kansas City. Lastly, if your boat draws no more than 9 feet of water, you can come up the Missouri River to the town of Miami, and I am assured that when you dock you will find transportation to take you to the contest field. Air, land, or water, the road is clear and open.

Represented in the shucking contest this year will be the nine Corn Belt States of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska, South Dakota, Minnesota, and Iowa. From each State will come two shuckers, a champion and runner-up. These men will have won in their State contests, and to qualify for the State contests each will have been a county champion. It is a long, hard fight to the top.

Among my colleagues here are some who have shucked corn. You know what it is to get out before daylight, do the chores, harness the horses, and finish breakfast just as it becomes light enough to see. Then to the barn, the hitching up of the team, and the rattle of the wagon as the spirited team on the nippy morning goes at a trot to the cornfield. You recall how the shucker jumps out, hands perhaps a bit numb and body chilly. Adjusting his peg or hook, he sails into the job, taking two rows at a time, and makes the ears fly. He has good control, hitting the bang board with never a glance at it. I might explain that the bang board is a stack of sideboards, sometimes 3 to 5 feet high, placed on the far side of the wagon box. It is against this that the ears hit and fall back into the wagon.

How much does a champion shucker shuck? The contest runs for 80 minutes. It is the most gruelling and exhaustive sport of any at the present time. Back in the days of 50 to 75 rounds in a prize ring it may have required as much stamina to stay the contest through. But it is more exhausting than football or any other sport of the present time. The shucker has no time out, except on his own. He may have water, but on his own time. He runs his own interference. He makes all his own tackles. He has a referee constantly behind him. What ears he throws over the wagon or misses are picked up by gleaners, and for each pound of corn missed he is penalized 3 pounds. He is allowed 5 ounces of shucks to 100 pounds of corn, but all in excess of this brings a penalty for "dirty shucking."

The world record for shucking is 42.5 bushels in 80 minutes. It was made 2 years ago by Elmer Carlson, a young Iowa farmer in an Indiana cornfield. To make such a record Carlson had to shuck ears at the rate of better than 40 a minute. That is about as fast as a city man thinks he could shuck corn. It is faster than most of us could throw it in the wagon, for 80 minutes, if the corn were already shucked. It is seldom, in good corn, that a State champion shucks less than 30 bushels—six barrels, or a full wagon-load—in the 80 minutes.

All State champions have their followers on contest day, some with hundreds of boosters, or even bands. Between the "lands" for each shucker are a number of rows that have been shucked and leveled down to permit the crowds to watch their favorites. As many as 5,000 persons have lined one of these "lands" to watch their man pass and to cheer him on.

So important has the national shucking contest become that one of our largest broadcasting systems has a tower on the contest field and reports the "game", and for the last several years has been giving radio listeners an "ear by ear" account of the contest, with the tattoo of the ears of corn against the bangboard plainly audible. Many stations which take the baseball world series have been carrying the broadcast of agriculture's "world series" of the cornfield. If another name is wanted for it, call it the bangboard derby, but for attendance it eclipses any derby.

The contest is not a money-making affair. There are no admission charges. The late Will Rogers, though, commenting on a similar event held in Missouri a decade ago, wrote:

I see where they are having a national shucking contest out in Missouri. If those farmers had enough sense to build a stadium and charge $2.50 admission, we'd never hear any more about farm relief.

Another fact about these cornfield contests is a source of satisfaction. Farmers may differ in habits of thinking, in ways of running their farms, and on how a farm bill should be written, as those of us on the House Agriculture Committee know. However, deeply ingrained in their natures is one characteristic which has played an important part in our Nation's stability. A friend who has attended practically all of the 13 national contests tells me that of the 750,000 persons who have attended, he has known of no disorder.

Of late weeks we have been hearing much about which State grows the tallest corn. One of Missouri's sister States even sings about the distinction, while the Washington Post of today pictures on the front page a stalk of Virginia corn measuring more than 16 feet. I make no boasts, but will tell you that Missouri's corn is plenty tall. It meets the ideal measure as suggested when Douglas, in asking Lincoln how long a man's legs ought to be, was told, "Long enough to reach from his body to the ground." The business of a stalk is not to serve as a lightning rod but as a support for ears of corn so placed as to be within reach of the husker. Instead of wanting so much height of stalk, our farmers are striving for more and better ears, trying to get nature to see that effort put into grain is more profitable. We prefer 14-inch ears to 18-foot stalks.

Aided by sufficient rains, Missouri's corn prospects this year are the finest we have had in a long time. The heavy ears, borne down by their own weight, point not toward the stars, but to the dark, deep, rich soil from which they spring. This means not only that prosperity is returning by way of full cribs, but it means that we will present this fall a cornfield for the national shucking contest that will, in golf terms, be one of the swankiest courses over which a shuck-ripping son of the soil has ever played.

Again I wish to repeat that "you all"—that's good Missouri, if you please—have an invitation to the fourteenth national corn-shucking contest. It will give you a glimpse of how the idea of a young Iowa editor, now Secretary of Agriculture, has grown. Just as fishermen often tell of how the biggest one got away but have no proof, corn shuckers often told of cribbing 150 bushels a day. It has been done, but proof was desirable. Henry A. Wallace thereupon started the shucking contests, and other States joined until now the competition covers the Corn Belt.

Come to this corn-shucking contest. You are assured a genuine Missouri welcome. Come to Missouri, a central Mississippi Valley State far enough south for hospitality and far enough north for hustle. Incidentally, I hope that in seeing this contest all will have a better appreciation of the task of garnering this Nation's greatest crop, this year estimated at more than 2,500,000,000 bushels, the crop that is the forerunner of the country's choicest pork chops, and which is necessary to prepare for consumption the luscious steaks which are supposed to be served up here in the East. It means dairy feed for herds throughout the Nation, poultry feeds used from California to Maine; hominy and breakfast food, cornmeal in which to roll souse or Missouri catfish for frying; starch for shirts and pudding, and not least of all, "Missouri meerschaums", the pipes of peace.

Yes, a bounteous corn crop means prosperity for our entire Nation. True, the huge task of garnering this crop means weary hours of work. But there is a more pleasant side to it as well, many pleasant sides, one of which is this sports event which will start when President Roosevelt, on the forenoon of November 4, will, through the cooperation of a telegraph company, press the key which will fire the opening gun in a Saline County, Mo., cornfield. [Applause.]

J. A. TIPPIT ET AL.

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to file a supplemental report on the bill (H. R. 6087) to amend an act entitled "An act authorizing the Court of Claims to hear, consider, adjudicate, and enter judgment upon the claims against the United States of J. A. Tippit, L. P. Hudson, Chester Howe, J. E. Arnold, Joseph W. Gillette, J. S. Bounds, W. N. Vernon, T. B. Sullivan, J. H. Neill, David C. McCallib, J. J. Beckham, and John Toles."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma?

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. DIRKSEN asked and was given permission to extend his own remarks in the RECORD.

Mr. LUTHER A. JOHNSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD, giving the reasons for immediate action to stabilize the price of cotton, and to include therein a table of statistics from the Department of Agriculture showing the effect of the loans made in 1933, 1934, and 1935.

Mr. DIES. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, will this table show that at 10 cents a pound the American cotton farmer will be getting less than he did under President Hoover?

Mr. LUTHER A. JOHNSON. The table will show a complete analysis of what the prices were during 1933 to this time.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein a statement from the president of the New England Council on the question of flood control.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

HARMONY DINNER

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, may I call the attention of the Members of the House of Representatives to an article in this morning's Post concerning the harmony dinner given last night, and the large picture accompanying the article? [Applause.] Do not take all my time by applause. [Laughter and applause.]

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Pennsylvania has expired.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, surely the Chair will not permit that applause to be taken out of my time. It was so precious and the party evidently by the looks of the set-up of the tables was or must have been hilarious.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will recognize the gentleman for an additional half minute.

Mr. RICH. I thank the Speaker.

May I call attention to the fact that the President of the United States was not present at the harmony dinner although he was invited, at least I cannot see him in the picture. May I further call attention to the statement by Senator COPELAND that—

> The President himself does more in 5 minutes to destroy party harmony than can be reestablished in a generation by Jefferson Island picnics and peace dinners.

O Mr. Speaker, the harmony dinner by the looks of this picture I hold in my hand from this morning's Post, certainly would cause anyone to drown their sorrows, and after the dinner when all became quiet and peaceful, the Democrats in the Senate and the new dealers of the Senate could return to their abodes with full stomachs and light hearts.

[Here the gavel fell.]

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. FISH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD by including a letter written by me.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

(Mr. SABATH asked and was given permission to extend his own remarks in the RECORD.)

FORT SCHUYLER MILITARY RESERVATION, N. Y.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table for immediate consideration the bill (S. 2639) to authorize the Secretary of War to lease the Fort Schuyler Military Reservation, N. Y.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

Mr. FISH. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, is the gentleman going to discuss the measure?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. This is for the New York State Merchant Marine Academy. The bill was drafted by the War Department. It passed the Senate unanimously and was unanimously reported out by the House committee. There are some very expensive improvements now being made by the State of New York on this reservation. It is desired to extend the lease for a longer period.

Mr. FISH. As I understood the reading of the bill, this is an authorization to lease certain Government property?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Yes; the State of New York already has such a lease. This bill gives it the privilege of leasing the reservation for an additional period of time.

Mr. FISH. The point I want to make sure of is, does the leasing of Government property require an act of Congress?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Not unless the lease is for over 5 years. Property can be leased for 5 years.

The State of New York is now making extensive improvements at Fort Schuyler. For that reason they would like a new lease for a longer period than 5 years.

Mr. FISH. Evidently, from a reading of the bill, the leasing of Government property requires an act of Congress.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Yes; if it is for a longer period than 5 years.

Mr. FISH. Now, I want to know whether that applies to the leasing of American battleships and destroyers to Brazil.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. I do not know anything about the leasing of battleships and destroyers, but I do know that the War Department has the power now to lease War Department property for 5 years only.

Mr. FISH. Does the gentleman know whether the Navy Department has the same right and whether battleships can be leased to foreign nations?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. I could not tell the gentleman about that.

Mr. McFARLANE. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, can the gentleman explain the bill and tell us how much money is involved in the expenditures for improvements?

Mr. FITZPATRICK. There is a report from the House Military Affairs Committee explaining the bill, and I may state to the gentleman that not a cent is involved insofar as the United States Government is concerned. The New York State Merchant Marine Academy is in there now and is making the improvements. It will not cost the Government a cent. The War Department drew up this bill.

Mr. McFARLANE. The gentleman has just stated that the bill is necessary because of the extensive improvements they expect to make.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. The State of New York is making them and not the United States Government.

Mr. McFARLANE. So the Federal Government will not be out any money whatever.

Mr. FITZPATRICK. Not one cent.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York [Mr. FITZPATRICK]?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized to lease to the State of New York, for nautical education purposes in the interests of national defense, the Fort Schuyler Military Reservation, N. Y., or portions thereof, for such term or terms, and upon such conditions as the Secretary of War may deem advisable, and he may authorize the State of New York incident to making the premises suitable for occupancy to change the contour of the land, alter or demolish existing buildings and other structures, erect new buildings and structures, construct roads and other utilities, and landscape the reservation: Provided, That all alterations, construction, and improvements made shall become the property of the United States: Provided further, That the consideration for said lease or leases shall be the repair and maintenance of the property by the State of New York in accordance with the terms of the lease, and such lease or leases shall reserve to the United States of America the right to resume possession and occupy said premises or any portion thereof whenever in the judgment of the Secretary of War an emergency exists that requires the use and appropriation of the same for the public defense.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

A similar House bill was laid on the table.

COURT REFORM AND JUDICIAL PROCEDURE

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I call up the conference report on the bill (H. R. 2260) to provide for the appearance on behalf of and appeal by the United States in certain cases in which the constitutionality of acts of Congress is involved, and, Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the statement may be read in lieu of the report.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

The Clerk proceeded to read the statement.

The conference report and statement are as follows:

CONFERENCE REPORT

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 2260) to provide for appearance on behalf of and appeal by the United States in certain cases in which the constitutionality of Acts of Congress is involved, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate to the text of the bill and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the amendment of the Senate to the text of the bill, insert the following:

"That whenever the constitutionality of any Act of Congress affecting the public interest is drawn in question in any court of the United States in any suit or proceeding to which the United States, or any agency thereof, or any officer or employee thereof, as such officer or employee, is not a party, the court having jurisdiction of the suit or proceeding shall certify such fact to the Attorney General. In any such case the court shall permit the United States to intervene and become a party for presentation of evidence (if evidence is otherwise receivable in such suit or proceeding) and argument upon the question of the constitutionality of such Act. In any such suit or proceeding the United States shall, subject to the applicable provisions of law, have all the rights of a party and the liabilities of a party as to court costs to the extent necessary for a proper presentation of the facts and law relating to the constitutionality of such Act.

"SEC. 2. In any suit or proceeding in any court of the United States to which the United States, or any agency thereof, or any officer or employee thereof, as such officer or employee, is a party, or in which the United States has intervened and become a party, and in which the decision is against the constitutionality of any Act of Congress, an appeal may be taken directly to the Supreme Court of the United States by the United States or any other party to such suit or proceeding upon application therefor or notice thereof within thirty days after the entry of a final or interlocutory judgment, decree, or order; and in the event that any such appeal is taken, any appeal or cross-appeal by any party to the suit or proceeding taken previously, or taken within sixty days after notice of an appeal under this section, shall also be or be treated as taken directly to the Supreme Court of the United States. In the event that an appeal is taken under this section, the record shall be made up and the case docketed in the Supreme Court of the United States within sixty days from the time such appeal is allowed, under such rules as may be prescribed by the proper courts. Appeals under this section shall be heard by the Supreme Court of the United States at the earliest possible time and shall take precedence over all other matters not of a like character. This section shall not be construed to be in derogation of any right of direct appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States under existing provisions of law.

"SEC. 3. No interlocutory or permanent injunction suspending or restraining the enforcement, operation, or execution of, or setting aside, in whole or in part, any Act of Congress upon the ground that such Act or any part thereof is repugnant to the Constitution of the United States shall be issued or granted by any district court of the United States, or by any judge thereof, or by any circuit judge acting as district judge, unless the application for the same shall be presented to a circuit or district judge, and shall be heard and determined by three judges, of whom at least one shall be a circuit judge. When any such application is presented to a judge, he shall immediately request the senior circuit judge (or in his absence, the presiding circuit judge) of the circuit in which such district court is located to designate two other judges to participate in hearing and determining such application. It shall be the duty of the senior circuit judge or the presiding circuit judge, as the case may be, to designate immediately two other judges from such circuit for such purpose, and it shall be the duty of the judges so designated to participate in such hearing and determination. Such application shall not be heard or determined before at least five days' notice of the hearing has been given to the Attorney General and to such other persons as may be defendants in the suit: Provided, That if of opinion that irreparable loss or damage would result to the petitioner unless a temporary restraining order is granted, the judge to whom the application is made may grant such temporary restraining order at any time before the hearing and determination of the application, but such temporary restraining order shall remain in force only until such hearing and determination upon notice as aforesaid, and such temporary restraining order shall contain a specific finding, based upon evidence submitted to the court making the order and identified by reference thereto, that such irreparable loss or damage would result to the petitioner and specifying the nature of the loss or damage. The said court may, at the time of hearing such application, upon a like finding, continue the temporary stay or suspension, in whole or in part, until decision upon the application. The hearing upon any such application for an interlocutory or permanent injunction shall be given precedence and shall be in every way expedited and be assigned for a hearing at the earliest practicable day. An appeal may be taken directly to the Supreme Court of the United States upon application therefor or notice thereof within thirty days after the entry of the order, decree, or judgment granting or denying, after notice and hearing, an interlocutory or permanent injunction in such case. In the event that an appeal is taken under this section, the record shall be made up and the case docketed in the Supreme Court of the United States within sixty days from the time such appeal is allowed, under such rules as may be prescribed by the proper courts. Appeals under this section shall be heard by the Supreme Court of the United States at the earliest possible time and shall take precedence over all other matters not of a like character. This section shall not be construed to be in derogation of any right of direct appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States under existing provisions of law.

"SEC. 4. Section 13 of the Judicial Code, as amended (U. S. C., 1934 edition, title 28, sec. 17), is hereby amended to read as follows:

"'SEC. 13. Whenever any district judge by reason of any disability or absence from his district or the accumulation or urgency of business is unable to perform speedily the work of his district, the senior circuit judge of that circuit, or, in his absence, the circuit justice thereof, shall designate and assign any district judge of any district court within the same judicial circuit to act as district judge in such district and to discharge all the judicial duties of a judge thereof for such time as the business of the said district court may require. Whenever it is found impracticable to designate and assign another district judge within the same judicial circuit as above provided and a certificate of the needs of any such district is presented by said senior circuit judge or said circuit justice to the Chief Justice of the United States, he, or in his absence the senior associate justice, shall designate and assign a district judge of an adjoining judicial circuit if practicable, or if not practicable, then of any judicial circuit, to perform the duties of district judge and hold a district court in any such district as above provided: Provided, however, That before any such designation or assignment is made the senior circuit judge of the circuit from which the designated or assigned judge is to be taken shall consent thereto. All designations and assignments made hereunder shall be filed in the office of the clerk and entered on the minutes of both the court from and to which a judge is designated and assigned, as well as on the minutes of the Supreme Court of the United States, to the clerk of which both of such other clerks shall immediately report the fact and period of assignment.'

"SEC. 5. As used in this Act, the term 'court of the United States' means the courts of record of Alaska, Hawaii, and Puerto Rico, the United States Customs Court, the United States Court of Customs and Patent Appeals, the Court of Claims, any district court of the United States, any circuit court of appeals, and the Supreme Court of the United States; the term 'district court of the United States' includes the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia; the term 'circuit court of appeals' includes the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia; the term 'circuit' includes the District of Columbia; the term 'senior circuit judge' includes the Chief Justice of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia; and the term 'judge' includes justice."

And the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate to the title of the bill, and agree to the same.

STATEMENT

The managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the bill (H. R. 2260) to provide for appearance on behalf of and appeal by the United States in certain cases in which the constitutionality of acts of Congress is involved, submit the following statement in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon by the conferees and recommended in the accompanying conference report.

The bill, as it passed the House, provided that whenever the constitutionality of an act of Congress is drawn in question in any suit in a Federal court to which the United States is not a party, if the court is of the opinion that a substantial ground exists for such question, the court must certify that fact to the Attorney General, and afford an opportunity for the Attorney General, or counsel designated by him, to appear and present evidence, if required, and argument on behalf of the United States. The Attorney General is given the same rights as a party to the extent necessary for a proper presentation of the facts and law relating to the constitutionality of the statute. In the event the determination of the lower court is adverse to the constitutionality of the statute, the Attorney General is given the same right of review in the appellate courts as if the United States were a party to the suit; and this right is given him whether or not he appeared in the lower court.

The Senate amended the House bill by striking out all after the enacting clause and inserting in lieu thereof an amendment consisting of six sections.

Sections 1, 2, and 6 of the Senate amendment are a substitute for the provisions of the House bill. Sections 3, 4, and 5 of the Senate amendment are new matter not contained in the House bill.

Section 1 of the Senate amendment required that whenever the constitutionality of any act of Congress is drawn in question and neither the United States nor any agency, officer, or employee thereof is a party, the court shall certify that fact to the Attorney General, and permit the United States to intervene as a party for the presentation of evidence and of law relating to the constitutionality of the act in question upon a showing of actual or probable legal interest.

The House bill required a certificate to the Attorney General only in case the court is of the opinion that a substantial ground exists for questioning the constitutionality of the statute. The Senate bill required certification in all cases involving constitutionality, but permitted intervention only upon a showing of actual or probable legal interest. The conference report provides for certification whenever the constitutionality of any act of Congress affecting the public interest is drawn in question and omits the language requiring a showing of legal interest.

Section 2 of the Senate amendment provided for a direct appeal by the United States to the Supreme Court where the decision is against the constitutionality of any act where the United States or any agency, officer or employee thereof is a party or has intervened as a party upon application for or notice of such an appeal within 30 days after the entry of any final or interlocutory judgment, decree or order, and required the docketing of the case in the Supreme Court within 60 days after the allowance of the appeal, and further provided for expediting the case in the Supreme Court. The House bill provided for an appeal by the United States whether or not it had become a party to the proceedings in the district court, and also provided for direct appeal to the Supreme Court in the discretion of the Attorney General. The House managers agreed to the Senate amendment.

The House managers adopted the definitions contained in section 6 of the Senate amendment, which amplified the definitions contained in the House bill.

Section 3 of the Senate amendment is new matter, to which the House managers agreed with modifications. It forbids the issuance of any interlocutory or permanent injunction suspending or restraining the enforcement, operation, or execution of, in whole or in part, any act of Congress upon constitutional grounds except upon the determination of a three-judge court at least one member of which shall be a circuit judge.

As modified by agreement of the conferees, the section requires an expeditious hearing by the three-judge court upon the application for either interlocutory or final injunction and requires at least 5 days' notice of any application for an interlocutory injunction. A single judge to whom the application for an interlocutory injunction is presented is permitted to issue a temporary restraining order upon a proper showing of irreparable damage pending the hearing and determination of the application for the interlocutory injunction before the three-judge court. The section provides for an expeditious appeal directly to the Supreme Court from any order, decree, or judgment granting or denying an interlocutory or permanent injunction.

This section prohibits the issuance of any injunction to suspend or restrain the execution of acts of Congress, except by a court composed of three judges, and applies to all interlocutory and final injunctions hereafter issued whether the suits in which they are issued be now pending in the district courts or hereafter instituted.

Section 4 of the Senate amendment amends section 13 of the Judicial Code which provides for the assignment of judges for service outside their own districts under certain circumstances. One amendment is designed to make mandatory the present discretionary duty of the senior circuit judge, or in his absence the circuit justice, to assign a district judge for service in another district court of the circuit in which the judge, by reason of absence, disability, or the accumulation or urgency of business, is unable speedily to perform the work of his district. Similar changes are made regarding the duty of the Chief Justice of the United States to assign judges for service outside their own circuits. All assignments under this section are required to be spread upon the minutes of the Supreme Court as well as upon the minutes of the courts from and to which a judge is assigned. The House managers agreed to these amendments.

Section 5 of the Senate amendment provided that whenever any judge is designated and assigned to duty outside of his district or circuit his subsistence allowance shall be $10 per diem. This amendment was stricken out by the conferees.

Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. FISH (interrupting the reading of the statement). Mr. Speaker, a point of order.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. FISH. Mr. Speaker, this is a very important matter and I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York makes a point of order there is not a quorum present. The Chair will count. [After counting.] One hundred and eighty-three Members are present, not a quorum.

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I move a call of the House.

A call of the House was ordered.

The Clerk called the roll, when the following Members failed to answer to their names:

[Roll No. 140]

Allen, Del.	Eaton	Kelly, N. Y.	Pfeifer
Allen, La.	Eckert	Kloeb	Scott
Atkinson	Ellenbogen	Knutson	Simpson
Binderup	Ferguson	Kopplemann	Sirovich
Boyer	Fernandez	Kramer	Smith, Maine
Boylan, N. Y.	Flannagan	Kvale	Smith, W. Va.
Brewster	Gasque	Lambeth	Starnes
Buckley, N. Y.	Gilchrist	Lamneck	Sullivan
Bulwinkle	Gray, Ind.	Lemke	Sweeney
Cannon, Wis.	Green	Lucas	Swope
Celler	Harter	McGroarty	Taylor, Colo.
Cravens	Hartley	Maas	Thomas, N. J.

Crowther	Hoffman	Miller	Vinson, Ga.
Culkin	Jacobsen	Mitchell, Ill.	White, Idaho
Drewry, Va.	Johnson, Minn.	O'Neal, Ky.	Wood

The SPEAKER. Three hundred and sixty-six Members have answered to their names, a quorum.

Further proceedings under the call were dispensed with.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and to give a résumé of the effect of the veterans' bill which was passed a few weeks ago.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi?

There was no objection.

COURT REFORM AND JUDICIAL PROCEDURE

The Clerk resumed and concluded the reading of the statement on the conference report.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the House conferees, I shall try to help the House to fully understand the results of the conference. If the Members of the House were giving attention to the reading of the statement of the managers probably most of the things they would like to know have been disclosed by the report. With the indulgence of the House, however, I will make a very brief statement.

The bill as it passed the House, as it passed the Senate, and as agreed to by the conferees undertakes to recognize, and does recognize, that when the constitutionality of an act of Congress is drawn into question the public interest becomes involved in that litigation. It is a public duty which is owed to the court which has the responsibility of passing on the constitutionality of an act of Congress that it be given all the assistance which can be given to aid it in an understanding of the questions involved.

In a definite sense this legislation is novel. Not since the organization of the Government has the Government, as a matter of recognized right, been privileged to go into the courts to represent the public, which is involved.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Yes.

Mr. RANKIN. I am wondering whether under this law the Attorney General would be authorized to intervene in a suit that has already been begun to test the constitutionality of an act of Congress.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I think so.

There are some features that would be interesting to gentlemen as lawyers, and doubtless as laymen, that we have sought to incorporate in this bill. We have sought to combine, supporting the general plan, the right which the Government as a necessary party—and this has been my view, and I think the view of our committee—to appear in a case where the constitutionality of an act passed by the legislative branch of the Government is drawn into question, and then we believe that this legislation, too, will be supported and welcomed by the courts of the country because of the governmental philosophy that underlies the inviting by the courts frequently of a representative of the Government to appear as amicus curiae. The appearance of a public representative to represent the public when the constitutionality of an act of Congress is drawn in question is sensible and necessary. The Government is a proper party. The Government is a necessary party by every test which determines the right of individuals to intervene in lawsuits. This bill recognizes that right, we believe the courts will agree.

Mr. MAY. There is one thing in my mind about the legislation about which I do not know that I have a clear understanding. It is that feature of the legislation which deals with the question of the right of Federal judges to grant injunctions in litigation in which the Government may be interested.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Will the gentleman wait until I come to that?

Mr. MAY. Certainly.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I now yield to the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. RANKIN].

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, that is the question that I wanted to ask the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Then I come to that now, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. MAY. Will the gentleman permit me to finish the question?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Yes.

Mr. MAY. What I wanted to know is this: Under previous legislation, as I understand it, a Federal judge on an ex-parte hearing could grant an injunction, and this bill as reported requires a hearing before three circuit judges before a permanent injunction can be granted. Is that true?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Not exactly true. We have attempted to incorporate in this legislation the arrangement with reference to drawing into issue by injunction the validity of certain acts of States. That is not an exact statement. This is the arrangement: It is provided that the application when it is made to a district judge, or a circuit judge, that fact shall be certified to the presiding judge of the circuit, or in his absence, to the justice next in rank, and upon the receipt of that certificate a three-judge court shall be assembled, one judge of which shall be a member of the circuit court. It is provided that pending the assembling of that court and the opportunity of that court to act upon the application for injunction or temporary restraining order, whatever is the application, the judge to whom the application was made, the single judge, the district or circuit judge, shall have the right to issue a temporary restraining order, effective until these three-judge courts can be assembled, and can pass on the application for restraining order.

Mr. MAY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Yes.

Mr. MAY. Then I understand from that statement that this bill will really expedite the disposition of injunction matters and prevent the delay in Federal litigation on injunction proceedings that has seemed to exist for the past several years.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. That is one of the definite purposes of the bill. It should be stated in this connection, Mr. Speaker, that your committee and the conference committee have sought to expedite the final determination of these constitutional questions by permitting an appeal directly to the Supreme Court from the judgment of the three-judge court.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Yes.

Mr. RANKIN. I want to ask the gentleman some questions with reference to this three-judge court. I understood the gentleman from Texas to say a moment ago that whenever an injunction or restraining order is asked for, testing the constitutionality of a State statute, that this three-judge court would come into being.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. No; the gentleman is in error. This bill does not deal with that. Whenever the question is to test the constitutionality of an act of Congress the three-judge court would come into being, and it is of the same composition as the three-judge court testing certain questions arising with reference to certain State acts.

Mr. RANKIN. Will that also apply to a case now in litigation, where the constitutionality of a Federal statute is being brought into question through an injunction proceeding?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. It is the judgment of the managers on the part of the House, and I think it is clear from the language of the bill, that an application made for injunction with reference to a pending matter would be governed by the provisions of this law.

Mr. VOORHIS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Yes.

Mr. VOORHIS. I want to ask the gentleman a question about section 2. As I understand section 2, in case the trial court decides against the constitutionality of an act of Congress, the Attorney General may then appeal directly to the Supreme Court?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. That is correct.

Mr. VOORHIS. But suppose the judgment of the trial court upholds the act of Congress, is it not then still possible for the private litigant, if delay is to his advantage, to make the same series of appeals through the circuit court and have the same kind of delays and periods of uncertainty we have at the present time? Suppose the decision is favorable to the Government in the original trial court, is it not still possible for the private litigant to appeal through the Circuit Court of Appeals and have the same long-drawn-out suspension of and interference with the carrying out of the act in question as we have now?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. The private litigant, of course, can appeal to the Superme Court. I am having the language looked up, and I hope to answer the question by the language of the bill. It is my impression this bill does not touch that situation. There is provision in this bill for moving judges into congested territory, which is fully explained in the statement of managers just read.

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Yes.

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Will the gentleman permit an observation? I do not think the House cares much about the details of this proposition. They are going to be for whatever you say on this for they have confidence in you. They remember you from a few days back. The thing that is on the minds of the Members of the House today is whether or not the chairman of the Rules Committee has as much courage as you displayed to save the House from a second N. R. A. You saved us from an unsound court policy, and you are just an American, but he is an Irishman.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, I ask that the words of the gentleman from Kansas be taken down. I think they were unjustifiable and in violation of the rules of the House.

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Mr. Speaker, I want to make a correction. I want to say that he is not only an American and that—but I will withdraw the last part. I tried to pay the gentleman a compliment by saying that besides being an American——

Mr. SABATH. The chairman of the Rules Committee does not want any compliments from the gentleman.

The SPEAKER. The Chair understands that the gentleman from Kansas has withdrawn the words to which the gentleman from Illinois objected.

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. Mr. Speaker, that must be under unanimous consent, must it not?

The SPEAKER. That is correct.

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. I reserve the right to object. What was the remark the gentleman made with reference to me?

Mr. LAMBERTSON. The last part of it? This is what I said, and what I meant to say—I will say both of them. What I said was that the gentleman there from Texas [Mr. SUMNERS] was just an American, but you were an Irishman. What I wanted to convey was that besides being an American you had the fighting blood of an Irishman in you to boot. [Laughter.]

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. Further reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, what did the gentleman say further with reference to me?

Mr. LAMBERTSON. I said that the House had confidence in the chairman of the great Judiciary Committee, and no matter what he was for on this court proposal, the House would sustain him, because they admired his wonderful courage of a few days back; and it was on the mind of every Member of the House whether the chairman of the Rules Committee had equal courage to face a second N. R. A. today, as the gentleman from Texas had on the unsound court proposal. That is all I said. All I ever tried to intimate to you was a compliment, because I believe you have got the courage.

The regular order was demanded.

The SPEAKER. The regular order is that the gentleman from New York [Mr. O'CONNOR] is reserving the right to object.

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. Let me tell the gentleman at the outset that I am heartily and enthusiastically in favor of the wage and hour bill. [Applause.]

Further, let me tell the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. LAMBERTSON] in reference to this Celtic origin of mine, of which I am very proud, as I am of every drop of Irish blood that courses through my veins—may I say to the distinguished gentleman from Kansas that long before that great agricultural State of his was admitted to the Union my great-grandfather landed at St. Johns, Newfoundland, in 1804, with his only worldy possessions, two boys, one of them my grandfather. I do not know how long the people of the distinguished gentleman have been in this country, but mine have been here that long, and I am still proud of my Irish extraction. [Applause.]

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. I teach my four boys to be proud of their ancestry and to live up to the high ideals and high standards of that great people, and to emulate the great men and women whom that race contributed to this world, and especially to this country from the days of the Revolution down to the World War and down to this good hour. [Applause.]

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield for a moment?

The SPEAKER. Just a moment. The parliamentary situation is that the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. LAMBERTSON], as the Chair understood him, asked unanimous consent to withdraw the words that seemed to have given offense. Is there objection?

Mr. O'BRIEN of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I object.

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. Mr. Speaker, I object.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman withdrew his reservation of objection?

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. For the moment until somebody else objects, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. ANDERSON of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I object.

Mr. O'BRIEN of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I object.

The SPEAKER. Objection is heard, and the Clerk will report the words that the gentleman from Kansas used. Will the gentleman from Illinois repeat the words to which he has reference?

Mr. SABATH. Where the gentleman referred to the gentleman from New York, chairman of the Rules Committee, as being only an Irishman.

Mr. SNELL. No, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. McLEAN. No.

Mr. SABATH. And that he did not have the courage that is required.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, a point of order.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman still insist that the words be taken down?

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, personally I do not recall the exact words, but at the time they were uttered I thought they were offensive and in violation of the rules; but if the gentleman from New York himself desires that I should withdraw the request, I am willing to accede to his wishes. [Applause.]

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois withdraws his request that the words of the gentleman from Kansas be taken down.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Mr. Speaker, resuming after that slight interruption. [Laughter.]

Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the conference report.

Mr. KELLER. Will the gentleman withhold that?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I withhold that for the moment, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. KELLER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I yield.

Mr. KELLER. I would like to ask a question about section 1 of the bill, with reference to the provision for the United States being made a party to a suit where the question of constitutionality is raised. Under certain conditions set out in the bill the Government may be made a party to a suit where the constitutionality of a given law is involved. Is that correct?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. That is right. It may have itself made a party; it cannot be drawn in.

Mr. KELLER. Could that not also be done at the present time under present law?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. We do not think so.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas moves the previous question.

The question is on ordering the previous question.

The previous question was ordered.

Mr. MICHENER. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. MICHENER. The gentleman from Texas did not move the previous question. The Chair stated that he did.

The SPEAKER. Did not the gentleman from Texas move the previous question?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I have no disposition to cut off inquiries.

The SPEAKER. But the Chair is asking the gentleman if he did not, as a matter of fact, move the previous question?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Yes, I did; but I want to be courteous and make any explanation of the bill that I can.

Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the proceedings whereby the previous question was ordered may be vacated, and that I may be permitted to yield to the gentleman for a question.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

Mr. ANDREWS. I object.

The SPEAKER. The previous question is ordered.

The question is on the adoption of the conference report.

The conference report was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to extend their remarks on this bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

BAYOU SAVAGE, NEW ORLEANS, LA.

Mr. DERROUEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill (S. 2520) declaring Bayou Savage, also styled Bayou Chantilly, in the city of New Orleans, La., a nonnavigable stream.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, will not the gentleman explain the bill and tell us whether it is going to cost the Federal Government anything?

Mr. DERROUEN. It is a very small bill. It will not cost the Federal Government anything at all. It has to do with improvements in the city of New Orleans, where once upon a time that stream was navigable—maybe 100 years ago. Today that stream is not used. Bayou Savage is a minor stream which flows in an easterly direction and empties into Chef Manteur Pass, immediately north of Lake Borgne. The Secretary of War states in his report that no doubt once upon a time it was a navigable stream, but it is not now. Accordingly, Bayou Savage, also styled Bayou Chantilly, in the city of New Orleans, is of immaterial value as a highway of commerce and of travel by water, and it is desired by the city to fill it in and improve the city and the streets.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DERROUEN. I yield.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. What action, if any, has the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce taken on this bill?

Mr. PETTENGILL. The bill comes with the unanimous report of the committee. Through this bill, Congress surrenders its jurisdiction over this particular stream as a navigable stream for the purpose of permitting the city of New Orleans to fill it in and improve certain parts of the city.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. And it comes from the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce with a unanimous report.

Mr. PETTENGILL. The gentleman's statement is correct.

Mr. DERROUEN. It has passed the Senate and now lies on the Speaker's table.

Mr. MCFARLANE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DERROUEN. Yes.

Mr. MCFARLANE. Under this bill, the Federal Government waives its right on a navigable stream. Who gets the benefits that the Federal Government waives?

Mr. DERROUEN. No one but the general mass of the people in the city of New Orleans.

Mr. MCFARLANE. Does this stream go to the city or to some individual?

Mr. DERROUEN. It goes to the city. Because the city has streets and owns the land on both sides.

Mr. MCFARLANE. No individual, then, is benefited by this bill?

Mr. DERROUEN. None at all.

Mr. MCFARLANE. No private individual gets title to any property?

Mr. DERROUEN. No.

Mr. MCFARLANE. To whom will the land belong?

Mr. DERROUEN. To the city for the convenience of the public.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That Bayou Savage, also styled Bayou Chantilly, in the city of New Orleans, La., be, and the same is hereby, declared to be a nonnavigable waterway within the meaning of the Constitution and laws of the United States.

SEC. 2. The right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time and passed, and a motion to reconsider and a similar House bill (H. R. 7348) were laid on the table.

AMENDMENT OF ROBINSON-PATMAN ANTIDISCRIMINATION ACT

Mr. WALTER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H. R. 8148) to amend Public Law No. 692, Seventy-fourth Congress, second session, and for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. For the information of the House the Clerk will read the bill.

The Clerk read the bill as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That nothing in the act approved June 19, 1936 (Public, No. 692, 74th Cong., 2d sess. (known as the Robinson-Patman Antidiscrimination Act)), shall apply to purchases of their supplies for their own use by schools, colleges, universities, public libraries, churches, hospitals, and charitable institutions not operated for profit and supported in whole or in part by public subscriptions.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. MICHENER. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I understand that this is the bill to which the committee gave consideration this morning and that they were unanimously in favor of it.

Mr. WALTER. That is correct; yes.

Mr. MICHENER. All the bill does is to permit hospitals and similar institutions to buy directly from the manufacturer at the manufacturer's price?

Mr. WALTER. And to secure the discount; that is correct. The Federal Trade Commission has taken the position that the Robinson-Patman Act applies to all purchases, whether made by individuals or corporations, or corporations not organized for profit. The purpose of this bill is to enable an institution maintained by public subscriptions in whole or in part to receive discounts for purchases of goods for its own use.

Mr. DITTER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WALTER. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. DITTER. Are other eleemosynary institutions included? I am thinking whether or not the bill is broad enough to include not only the churches themselves but institutions related to and having a part in the activities of the church. I am wondering whether they are included.

Mr. WALTER. It was our intention to include all eleemosynary institutions. If we have not done that, I would be glad to accept an amendment to that effect, but it was the intention at the time the Robinson-Patman bill was discussed originally in our committee to exclude that type of corporation. We felt the provisions of the act did not apply; however, the Federal Trade Commission has taken the position that it does. The author of the bill himself is under the impression the bill did not apply.

Mr. DITTER. I am thinking of homes for the aged or homes for orphans that may have some identification with churches, and whether they would be included within the benefits intended by this bill.

Mr. WALTER. I believe so.

Mr. PETTENGILL. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WALTER. I yield to the gentleman from Indiana.

Mr. PETTENGILL. It seems to me from a reading of the proposed bill it applies only to charitable institutions that are supported in whole or in part by public funds, and would not include a charitable institution that was not supported in any part by public funds.

Mr. WALTER. That is correct.

Mr. PETTENGILL. Why should not a privately endowed hospital that does not derive any part of its support from public funds be equally exempt with a hospital that did derive its support from public funds?

Mr. WALTER. Because ultimately that institution may become a profit corporation as distinguished from a nonprofit corporation.

Mr. PETTENGILL. It seems to me that is unfair to the private charitable institutions of the country that are not operated for pecuniary profit. They should be given the same exemption that this bill gives to an institution that is supported in part by public funds. Unless the bill is subject to amendment, I would feel constrained to object to its consideration at this time.

Mr. WALTER. I trust the gentleman will not object at this late date.

Mr. PETTENGILL. Is the gentleman willing to accept an amendment that would exempt charitable institutions not operated for private profit and are not sustained in part by public funds?

Mr. WALTER. Yes; I think we would accept that amendment.

Mr. PETTENGILL. With that understanding, and the opportunity to suggest an appropriate amendment, I withdraw my objection.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, may I inquire of the gentleman whether this bill will also apply to institutions that are maintained and controlled by municipalities and cities? Many of the institutions that are financed by municipalities and by States might come also under its provisions?

Mr. WALTER. The bill clearly covers that class of institution. All charitable institutions are covered by the provisions of this bill.

Mr. SABATH. Does the gentleman think a county hospital or a city sanitarium wholly financed by a city, county, or State, would come within the provisions of this act?

Mr. WALTER. Yes; I do.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

Mr. McFARLANE. Mr. Speaker, I object.

Mr. WALTER. Will the gentleman withhold his objection a minute?

Mr. McFARLANE. I think you are opening the gate to the point where the bill will be absolutely worthless if we adopt these wide-open amendments. The bill, if amended, will not mean anything; and I would like to see the bill given a chance to be enforced.

Mr. WALTER. For the purpose of preventing the thing the gentleman has suggested, we endeavored to enumerate the type of institutions that were to be included within the purview of the act.

Mr. McFARLANE. May I hear the amendment as the gentleman has drawn it?

Mr. WALTER. The bill as drawn, exempts schools, colleges, universities, public libraries, churches, hospitals, and charitable institutions not operated for profit.

Mr. McFARLANE. May I hear the amendment?

Mr. WALTER. So that the act would not be torn to pieces, we enumerated every class of institution that we felt ought to be exempted.

Mr. McFARLANE. I want to hear the amendment.

Mr. BLAND. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. BLAND. Is this one of the last 6 days of the session of Congress within which consent matters are in order?

The SPEAKER. Not within the knowledge of the Chair.

Mr. LANHAM. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, may I ask the gentleman from Pennsylvania if within the purview of the amendment of the gentleman from Indiana, to which he has agreed, hospitals, such as institutions for crippled children, operated by fraternal organizations, are exempted?

Mr. WALTER. Yes. The amendment offered by the gentleman from Indiana would take care of that class of institution.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

Mr. McFARLANE. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I want to hear this amendment if we can get it prepared.

Mr. PETTENGILL. After the words "charitable institutions", in line 9, I propose to insert, "and other eleemosynary", and I propose further to strike out the last line, the last line reading, "being supported in whole or in part by public subscriptions", so that the effect of the statute if passed will exempt all charitable or eleemosynary institutions not operated for profit, whether supported in whole or in part by public funds or not.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

Mr. McFARLANE. Mr. Speaker, I object, with the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Indiana. I do not object to the bill as originally drawn.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Mr. Speaker, on behalf of my colleague, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WALTER], I ask unanimous consent that his request for the present consideration of the bill may be withdrawn at this time in order to ascertain whether or not satisfactory amendments can be drawn.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

ENLISTED MEN OF THE ARMY

Mr. MAY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table for immediate consideration the bill (S. 2871) for the protection of certain enlisted men of the Army.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, will the gentleman explain the bill?

Mr. MAY. Yes; I shall be pleased to explain the bill to the Members of the House.

Mr. Speaker, the Army appropriation bill for 1938 contains a provision prohibiting the payment of any part of the appropriation to enlisted men in the United States Army who are not citizens. It has been discovered that there are in the United States Army approximately 7,000 enlisted men who have never obtained their citizenship papers. This bill provides an amendment which prohibits the payment of any part of this appropriation to these men until they are reenlisted, and they cannot reenlist until they obtain their citizenship papers.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. SCHULTE. Mr. Speaker, I object.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that in connection with my extension of remarks concerning the bill (H. R. 6384) to liberalize the provisions of existing laws governing service-connected benefits for World War veterans and their dependents, and for other purposes, I may be permitted to insert an analysis of that bill made by Mr. Thomas Kirby, of the Disabled American Veterans.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi?

There was no objection.

UNEMPLOYMENT COMPENSATION

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's desk for immediate consideration the bill (H. R. 8174) to make available to each State which enacted in 1937 an approved unemployment-compensation law a portion of the proceeds from the Federal employers' tax in such State for the year 1936.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That there is hereby authorized to be appropriated for payment to the unemployment fund of each State or Territory which was not certified by the Social Security Board under section 903 of the Social Security Act on December 31, 1936, but which enacted in the year 1937 an unemployment-compensation law approved by the Social Security Board under such section, an amount equal to 90 percent of the proceeds of the tax paid on or before January 31, 1938, with respect to employment in such State or Territory during the calendar year 1936 under title IX of such act. Out of the sums appropriated therefor, the Secretary of the Treasury shall pay such amount, through the Division of Disbursement of the Treasury Department, to each such State unemployment fund. The terms used in this act shall have the same meaning as identical terms in title IX of the Social Security Act.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, and I shall not object, may I state to the distinguished chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means that it would be very apropos, I think, if he would take 3 or 4 minutes to explain this bill. There is no opposition to the bill on our side, as far as I know.

Mr. DOUGHTON. This bill has a unanimous report from the Committee on Ways and Means. The bill was introduced by my colleague on the Committee on Ways and Means, the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. DUNCAN], and I now yield to him to explain the purposes of the bill.

Mr. DUNCAN. Mr. Speaker, the purpose of this bill is to place all the States complying with the unemployment insurance provisions of the Social Security Act on the same basis. The Social Security Act passed in 1935, as you may recall, fixed the date of December 31, 1936, as the limit of the time within which the States might comply with its provisions. Thirty-five States were able to comply with these provisions prior to the expiration date. There were, however, 13 States which were not able to comply with the provisions during that time. The committee found there were good and sufficient reasons why such States could not comply, in that either there were changes in administration which prevented the calling of special sessions of the legislatures or the legislatures were unable to agree upon satisfactory unemployment-insurance laws.

The employers in the States which did not comply with the act were required to pay the unemployment-insurance tax into the Federal Treasury. The employers in the States which did comply paid 90 percent of their tax into a State unemployment fund, and now have the benefit of this fund. The 13 States which did not comply, of course, have received no benefit from the tax, which has gone into the Federal Treasury. This bill seeks simply to authorize the appropriation into the unemployment funds of the various States of 90 percent of the tax paid in 1936 by the employers in these 13 States and 2 Territories and thus places all the States on the same basis. The 13 States have now passed unemployment-insurance laws which have been approved by the Social Security Board.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DUNCAN. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. As I understand, the passage of this bill will do nothing more than put the 13 States on a parity with the 35 States?

Mr. DUNCAN. The gentleman's statement is exactly right.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DUNCAN. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. RICH. When this law was passed and all the States were given until the end of the year to act upon it, the House of Representatives was told that many of the States would not have time to act before the various State legislatures adjourned. Many of the States had to call extra sessions. I know the State of Pennsylvania did so at a cost of hundreds of thousands of dollars. This is only the result of hurried legislation. You have a lot of other legislation coming before the House which you want to hurry through, and you will make a lot of mistakes if you do not take your time. I congratulate the Members on that side of the House for correcting some of the ill-advised legislation they put through in 1936.

Mr. BOILEAU. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DUNCAN. I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. BOILEAU. Has any provision been made to give the employees the benefit of this money which goes into the unemployment fund? In other words, in the States which have enacted unemployment-compensation laws the employees have made their contributions and the employers have made their contributions. In most cases, and I believe perhaps all, the laws require that this reserve fund be built up for a period of 2 years before the individual employee can receive any funds from it.

Mr. DUNCAN. The gentleman is correct.

Mr. BOILEAU. In the States which have not had such a law, and therefore have not built up the reserve fund, the employees cannot start drawing from the fund for 2 years, but still this bill will put the money into the fund and increase the fund in such States, so that at the end of the 2-year period the States which have been derelict, the States which have refused to assume their responsibility, will be better off financially as far as their reserve fund is concerned than the States which have cooperated and have adopted the necessary law. I regret it very much, but I feel that I am constrained to object. I believe this is important enough so that we should give it ample consideration.

Mr. DUNCAN. I think the gentleman should not object.

Mr. BOILEAU. I think this is giving an advantage to those States that did not come into line and cooperate until later on. I do not want to have hasty action taken on this matter, and I do not want to do something by my objection that would be unfair, but my present intention is to object.

Mr. DUNCAN. If the gentleman will reserve his objection, the gentleman will recall that there were 18 or 19 States that complied with this act during the latter part of December 1936. These 13 States that complied in 1937, did so within a few months after a majority of the States had complied in 1936, so there is not any advantage to be given to these States. The States which did not comply lose the interest on the money in that fund, and there will be no benefits to those States.

Mr. BOILEAU. The employees working in the States that have complied have had a part of their money taken out of their salary in order to contribute to this fund, whereas in those States that have not had an act, they have not had any money taken from their salary.

Mr. DUNCAN. The employers in all the States have contributed. The tax began on January 1, 1936, and they have all paid identically the same amount of money.

Mr. BOILEAU. This law has been in operation for a couple of years.

Mr. DUNCAN. Since the 1st of January 1936, when the unemployment insurance fund became effective, and the employers in every State of the Union began paying the tax at that time. The gentleman is thinking of old-age annuities and not of unemployment insurance.

Mr. BOILEAU. Unemployment compensation began January 1, 1936.

Mr. DUNCAN. That is right.

Mr. BOILEAU. So there has been more than 1 year of operation, and in those States that have complied, most of them during the year 1936, they have had a tax upon their employees to contribute to this fund.

Mr. DUNCAN. That was true in every State. It made no difference whether the State had an unemployment fund or not, each one of the employers was required to pay the tax.

Mr. FRED M. VINSON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DUNCAN. I yield to the gentleman from Kentucky.

Mr. FRED M. VINSON. This act was passed in 1935 with a dead line of December 31, 1936, to pass the State laws. That date was fixed in order that it could go into operation in the immediate future. Now, 35 States came in within the period. The point involved in this bill is whether or not the employees in the other 13 States which came in 1937, in whom the gentleman from Wisconsin is very much interested, will have available for them in the unemployment trust fund in the Treasury the moneys that were paid in as taxes in 1936 and 1937.

Mr. BOILEAU. I want to ask the gentleman this question. In the year 1936, in those States in which this unemployment compensation law was in effect, there was a contribution on the part of the employee, was there not?

Mr. FRED M. VINSON. I do not know what the situation is in Wisconsin——

Mr. BOILEAU. In every State that has an unemployment compensation law, has there not been a certain amount of money taken out of the compensation of the individual employee in the year 1936?

Mr. FRED M. VINSON. The point involved is a 90-percent credit by the Federal Government——

Mr. BOILEAU. I understand that.

Mr. FRED M. VINSON. And if we do not pass this bill the employees, in whom the gentleman is interested, will not have that money in the unemployment trust fund to be paid out in benefits.

Mr. BOILEAU. I am interested that the Federal Government keeps faith with all the States and if the employees in your State and my State and all the 35 States involved were forced to take money out of their pockets during the year 1936 to contribute to this fund, in order to get this refund of 90 percent that the employers were paying, and if that was the understanding when we passed the law, then the States that did not cooperate should not now have the advantage of that 90 percent.

Mr. DUNCAN. But it was paid.

Mr. BOILEAU. It was paid into the Federal Treasury, and the gentleman and I knew when we voted for that law that we used that provision to bring compulsion upon the States. You did not want to call it compulsion, but that is what it was, or, at least, it was strong persuasion.

Mr. KELLER. Are you against it?

Mr. BOILEAU. I am of the opinion—and if I am wrong I want to have the matter clarified and I shall not object—but I am of the opinion that in the 35 States where the employees were required to start at scratch, and at the same time they were given credit for the amount the Federal Government paid back, at the same time they had money taken out of their pockets and they matched these funds in order to build up the fund, and now the 13 States that did not come in will start out with a nice big nest egg because they were derelict and refused to cooperate.

Mr. FRED M. VINSON. If the gentleman will yield further, I am not acquainted with the Wisconsin situation, but I call my friend's attention to the fact that the Chairman of the Social Security Board, Dr. Altmeyer, is from his State and, of course, he is interested in the employees in his State, as well as the employees in all the States.

Mr. BOILEAU. I do not care whether he comes from my State or yours, he is a fine man, and the fact that he comes from Wisconsin makes no difference.

Mr. FRED M. VINSON. Does the gentleman think he would want to do an injustice to the employees of his own State, as well as the other States?

Mr. BOILEAU. I am satisfied he will do his utmost to provide a square deal for every man in this country, and I object at the present time, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. BOILEAU] objects.

Mr. BOILEAU. Mr. Speaker, I have been requested by several colleagues to reserve my objection, and I am going to do it.

The SPEAKER. Is it the intention of the gentleman finally to object?

Mr. BOILEAU. I intend to object, Mr. Speaker, unless I can be satisfied that the employees in the various States that will thus be benefited are not getting an advantage over the other States which enacted their laws earlier in order to comply with the Federal law, and which showed proper desire to cooperate and to adopt the social-security legislation.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Wisconsin reserves his objection.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BOILEAU. Yes.

Mr. COCHRAN. The situation is just this: The employees in all the States of the Union were treated alike. In some States, 13, the Governors did not call special sessions of the legislatures.

Mr. BOILEAU. Why did they not? They had the responsibility.

Mr. COCHRAN. For this reason: They were electing new members to the legislatures. We did not want men going out of office to consider such important legislation. The outgoing Governor refused to call a special session.

In Missouri, our new Governor did not take office until January. As soon as the legislature in our State met in January the matter was taken care of. Now, are the employees in our State and in the other 12 States to be penalized simply because the Governors of those States refused to call special sessions of the legislatures? Surely the gentleman sees our situation.

Mr. BOILEAU. That is the point. The employees in the gentleman's State are not penalized because they did not contribute one cent.

Mr. COCHRAN. But they did contribute.

Mr. BOILEAU. They did not do it out of their own salaries. It was the tax for doing business.

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BOILEAU. Yes.

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. The facts in this matter are these: Thirteen States failed to pass the act, as has been stated, within the time which would bring them within the operation of the law. They have since passed State unemployment acts in conjunction with the Federal social security law. The money has been contributed in those States, and the only question involved in this bill is this: Is that money to go into the general fund of the United States Treasury, or is it to go back to the individual States for the benefit of the employees who will get the benefit of that money if it goes back to the States? I am sure the gentleman from Wisconsin will not withhold from the employees in the various States, including my own State of Nebraska, the money which is now in the United States Treasury, and which will be used for the benefit of employees in the 13 States involved in this measure if the gentleman does not object.

Mr. BOILEAU. Something was said a moment ago here about Mr. Altmeyer, of the Social Security Board. Does he recommend this legislation?

Mr. FULLER. Yes.

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. I am informed that he does.

Mr. DOUGHTON. He had no objection to it; none at all.

Mr. BOILEAU. Mr. Speaker, after making a brief statement, I shall withdraw my objection. I serve notice here and now that so long as I am a Member of this House, hereafter no such bill as this will pass by unanimous consent. If hereafter in the course of our legislation, and for the purpose of trying to have uniform laws throughout the United States, the Congress of the United States says that in order for a State to benefit from national legislation it must do a certain thing by a certain time, and thereby coerce States to come within the law that might not otherwise do so, then, as I say, so long as I am a Member no State that does not comply will get the same benefit as other States by unanimous consent. Mr. Speaker, in view of the fact that apparently I stand alone in the House in opposition to this bill and because I do not want to be put in the position of assuming such responsibility, because I have not given it such thought as I should, not realizing it was coming up today, I withdraw my objection.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object in order to say this: I concur heartily with the gentleman from Wisconsin, but it was not the fault of these 13 States as much as it was the fault of the Congress for not giving them time enough to enact this legislation. We should have given them at least 6 months or a year longer so that they could have done this in an orderly procedure. It was our fault and not the fault of the 13 States.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

There was no objection.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider laid on the table.

PROTECTION OF CERTAIN ENLISTED MEN IN THE ARMY

Mr. MAY. Mr. Speaker, I am advised that the gentleman from Indiana desires to withdraw his objection to the consideration of Senate bill 2871, for the protection of certain enlisted men of the Army.

Mr. SCHULTE. Mr. Speaker, I reserve my objection.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the title of the bill.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

Mr. SCHULTE. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. MAY] has just made the statement that there are 7,000 aliens in the United States Army. This bill undertakes to place them on a parity with the other officers and enlisted men who want to retire. The point I am trying to make—and I believe it is to the advantage of the House to gain this information—is that there are 7,000 aliens in the United States Army today. I did not know that, and I do not believe any other Member of this body knows. Does that not place this Nation in an embarrassing position in the event of war? For instance, suppose the 7,000 are concentrated in one camp under an alien officer. Under the gentleman's bill, they seek to place them on a par with former members of the United States Army who are now citizens. Is that right?

Mr. MAY. The gentleman is quite mistaken about that. The bill bars them from being paid a single cent of appropriation for 1938 and requires that they immediately be discharged, and more than 1,000 of them have already been discharged.

Mr. SCHULTE. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MAY. Yes.

Mr. SCHULTE. But is it not a fact that today we have 7,000 aliens in the United States Army, men who are not citizens of this Nation?

Mr. MAY. I have already said to the gentleman that that is the war record on it, and some of them have been in service as long as 29 years. Most of them are volunteers of the World War and have not only rendered heroic service with our armies in France but remained in the service since.

Mr. SCHULTE. I am not questioning their integrity or their loyalty to this Nation, but I am making the point that it is time this Nation recognized the fact that we have in our Army 7,000 aliens. I am not questioning their sincerity of purpose nor their loyalty to this country. We all hope and pray to God that they are loyal, but what an embarrassing position it places us in. Why, any country could send men to the United States, have them join our Army. Then they would be placed in some important position or given or placed in charge of some munitions depot, and when war was declared we would find internal trouble in our armies and dissatisfied soldiers, with disastrous results to our country.

Mr. Speaker, at the request of my good friend from South Carolina, who has studied this matter, I am going to withdraw my objection.

Mr. MAY. There is no question of loyalty or patriotism involved in this measure. It is merely a proposal to make it possible for these honored and faithful soldiers that have already rendered service to their country to be paid for that service.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. MAY]?

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object—and I shall object if the bill is what I think it is—as I understand, it has been brought out very clearly that the bill recites there are 7,000 aliens in the United States Army.

Mr. MAY. No. The bill does not recite that. That is the report from the War Department.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. I mean, that is the fact.

Mr. MAY. And that is an accumulation of enlistments in the United States Army over a period of 30 years. If the gentleman wants to know my attitude about it, I am as bitterly opposed to that as he or any other Member of this House, and I expect to bring in from the Committee on Military Affairs, if I can get it through, a bill that will forever prohibit enlistment in the United States Army originally of any alien, and requiring that those who are hereafter permitted to enlist and found in the Army be discharged without pay.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. What I am trying to get at is this: I am perfectly willing that every soldier, be he alien or what not, if he has been in the Army, should be paid. If this bill provides payment for him regardless of the passage of a law that prevents certain appropriations to go to any alien, I am perfectly willing to let down the bars and pay that man because we have a contractual obligation. I am not willing that these people be continued on the rolls so that eventually a man might serve, as the gentleman says, in the United States Army 29 years and not think enough of the United States Government to become a citizen, and then retire and go out and live the balance of his life as a retired United States soldier and still not be a citizen.

Mr. MAY. Will the gentleman let me answer that?

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Yes; certainly.

Mr. MAY. These men were enlisted in the United States Army on the statement that they did not have to take the oath of allegiance because of the length of time they had been in the country. Most of them were volunteers in the World War. Now, after they were enlisted in the Army they have served from 5 to 29 years. Many of them have married and have families. More than 1,000 of them have been discharged on account of this condition. This bill prohibits the reenlistment of any of them until they have obtained their citizenship papers, and prohibits payment of a dime of money to them unless they do get their citizenship.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. If that is the case, then this bill has a coercive effect in that these people must clear up their citizenship?

Mr. MAY. Yes.

Mr. TOBEY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. I yield.

Mr. TOBEY. Is it not a fact that the first allegiance of all these 7,000 men is some foreign country?

Mr. MAY. The first allegiance was, but they have taken the oath in the Army.

Mr. TOBEY. But not the oath of citizenship.

Mr. MAY. No; but an oath of allegiance required of all enlisted men.

Mr. TOBEY. Therefore they are still aliens and outside the pale of our citizenship?

Mr. MAY. That is right.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Still reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, what does this bill do, if anything, with reference to providing in the future that no alien can be admitted into the Army?

Mr. MAY. It does not say that, but I have just stated to the gentleman that it is the plan of my committee to bring in legislation prohibiting it, and the War Department has assured me that none of them will be permitted to enlist, but that all that are in there will be discharged.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Why not let this bill run along until that is done.

Mr. MAY. There is an emergency condition that affects several hundred men who have already been discharged, who can get no pay, yet who have families to support and have already earned the money.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. In view of the fact that the gentleman has always stood on the floor as one of the able exponents of American protection, I am constrained to withdraw my objection; but I am going to hold the gentleman to his promise that he will bring in that bill.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, it was absolutely impossible for me to hear the explanation of the bill. Will the gentleman tell us what the outstanding provisions of the bill are?

Mr. MAY. I am sorry that the gentleman did not hear, and I regret to have to restate it so many times. The 1938 appropriation act for which we all voted prohibits payment to any alien either in the military or civilian service of the Government of any part of these appropriations. There are men in the Army who have been there from 5 to 29 years, they have families, they have served, yet they are being discharged because of their lack of citizenship as fast as the War Department can get rid of them. This bill undertakes to pay those men for services they have already rendered, and it likewise prohibits payment to anyone who has been discharged until he obtains citizenship.

Mr. SABATH. Yet, many of these men have rendered great, valuable, and gallant service to our country and have fought for our flag.

Mr. MAY. More than 15,000 of them fought in the World War and none has shown any disloyalty.

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. Mr. Speaker, I am compelled to demand the regular order. We have other business to transact this afternoon. This was supposed to take only a minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, I object.

INVESTIGATION OF FEDERAL JUDICIARY

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. Mr. Speaker, I call up House Resolution 287.

The Clerk read as follows:

House Resolution 287

Resolved, That the Committee on the Judiciary, as a whole or by subcommittee, is authorized and directed to investigate the organization and operation of, and the administration of justice in, the courts of the United States inferior to the Supreme Court; the jurisdiction, both as to territory and subject matter; the procedure; rules of practice; and costs.

The committee shall report to the House during the present Congress the results of its investigation, together with such recommendations for legislation as it may deem advisable.

For the purposes of this resolution, the committee or any subcommittee thereof is authorized (1) to sit and act during the present Congress, at such times and places within the United States as it may deem necessary, whether or not the House is sitting, has recessed, or has adjourned; (2) to hold such hearings, to require the attendance of such witnesses, and the production of such books, papers, and documents, and to take such testimony as it may deem necessary; (3) to issue subpenas under the signature of the chairman of the committee, or any member designated by him which shall be served by any person designated by such chairman or member; and (4) to administer oaths to the witnesses, respectively, by the chairman or any member of any committee acting hereunder.

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MARTIN].

Mr. Speaker, this resolution will be explained fully by members of the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Rules Committee may have until midnight tonight to file certain rules.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. Mr. Speaker, I wish to announce that the Rules Committee will meet at 2:30 this afternoon.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. HOBBS].

Mr. HOBBS. Mr. Speaker, this is the resolution which under a unanimous-consent request on yesterday was partially explained, and probably in a very poor and disjointed fashion, so that you did not get the right perspective upon the merits of the resolution. I am going to ask the distinguished chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary if he will explain this resolution to the House in his own inimitable way. [Applause.]

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. Mr. Speaker, I yield the balance of that time to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. SUMNERS].

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I shall be very brief in this explanation.

Mr. Speaker, the Committee on the Judiciary of the House is perhaps, more nearly than any other agency of Government, the agency of visitation with reference to the Federal judiciary. Complaints with reference to the conduct of Federal judges, at least in the first instance, come to that committee. Many informal examinations are made sometimes at the instance of all the parties. Investigations as to needed legislation are made, information is gathered from many sources, but we have no authority, of course, to make any investigation, speaking generally, of a particular sort, a thorough investigation, unless it has that authority from the House. It has no power to summon witnesses, and so forth.

This committee is convinced that there are some fundamental things with reference to the Federal judiciary that ought to be inquired into. We believe, for instance, that there is an improper allocation of business as among the districts of the country. Such questions as to whether or not a judge of the circuit court ought to sit as a district judge; to what degree, if any, judges of the circuit court ought to be permitted to oust a district judge of jurisdiction in a particular matter, and so forth. There are some specific situations, some particular situations, that the committee feels ought to be inquired into.

What I am saying now supplements what has been said frequently here and what has been said in the Senate with reference to the necessity of making some inquiry, some study, of the organization and operation of the Federal judiciary. We feel that a special committee ought to be created with the right to summons witnesses, to administer oaths, to take testimony, and so forth, in order to inquire into the matters which I have mentioned and the other matters which through various channels have reached the attention of the committee and of Members of the House. Now, with that statement which, obviously, I have not attempted to make complete, I yield to any Member who wants to ask me a question.

Mr. BURDICK. Mr. Speaker, would this committee attempt to investigate complaints against individual judges, or would their work be limited to the system of jurisprudence?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I may say to my friend, the gentleman from North Dakota, that in the main they would be limited, I assume, to the system of jurisprudence.

It is possible that situations have developed that the committee would feel in the interest of the general good ought to be particularly inquired into.

Mr. SABATH. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. SABATH. If evidence is presented, or complaints should be made, to the committee that in certain districts cases have been assigned somehow or other to be heard by one judge as against other judges, does not the gentleman think that would be justification to investigate how such things are possible and how it is possible that one judge obtains the assignment to hear some of these cases wherein certain lawyers or interests find themselves on the calendar?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. May I say to my distinguished friend, of course the committee has not been appointed and necessarily has not determined its policy, but I believe it would be safe to say to the gentleman that in any particular situation such as he indicated the committee would possibly investigate the situation for the purpose of ascertaining at least what is being done in order to attempt to bring about remedial legislation.

Mr. HOUSTON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I yield to the gentleman from Kansas.

Mr. HOUSTON. Is not the objective of this proposition to bring in corrective legislation covering certain conditions that may be found to exist all over the country? Would the committee have the power of recommendation for a new Federal judge in any district?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. It would under this resolution.

Mr. HOUSTON. It is almost impossible to get an investigation of a proposition in this House unless a particular committee has a preliminary hearing, and, as the gentleman knows, without the power of subpena, it is impossible to get the evidence you want.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Yes. I stated to the House the committee would be disposed to investigate the allocation of business among the districts and, naturally, would investigate to determine whether or not a particular district might be undermanned.

Mr. HEALEY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. HEALEY. There have been numerous bills introduced in this session and in other sessions by various Members having to do with sessions of the United States court in particular sections of a State or judicial district. It is rather difficult for the committee on cursory examination to satisfy itself whether or not a term of court should be authorized for a particular section or district. If this investigation is made, the committee would be better able to determine how the business in the various districts of the United States should be allocated.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. That is true. The committee hopes to be able, as a result of this investigation, to get some dependable information which will make it possible for it to proceed not so much in the dark, as this committee is now compelled to proceed.

Mr. THURSTON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I yield to the gentleman from Iowa.

Mr. THURSTON. In the rather expeditious proceeding which concluded the bill the gentleman brought in here earlier in the day—H. R. 2260—I was not able to make the inquiry which I think is pertinent not only to that bill but to the subject that is now under consideration. The bill just passed provides that the Department of Justice may intervene where an act of Congress is claimed to be unconstitutional. No reference was made to a greater number of cases wherein a State statute is alleged to be unconstitutional and which ultimately reaches the United States Supreme Court. In other words, the philosophy of the Shreveport case states that excessive production in intrastate commerce or within a State may affect interstate commerce. It seems that is a field involving a legal principle that should be examined so that if a Federal question or policy of the Federal Government enacted into legislation was in question in a case appealed from a State supreme court the Attorney General or the Federal Government should have the right to intervene in a case of this character.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I may say to my friend, he makes a very important and interesting suggestion. We did not consider in the bill referred to situations with reference to litigation coming up from the States.

Mr. THURSTON. It seems to me that subject should be called to the attention of the committee.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. All I can discuss now is the scope of the resolution now pending before us. I could not undertake, of course, to indicate what the committee might determine upon.

Mr. McFARLANE. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. McFARLANE. Would the committee, in its investigation, consider the possibility of legislation to limit the terms of these Federal district judges? We hear a great deal of complaint about the way they are allowing tremendous receivership fees and attorneys' fees and the high-handed manner in which they conduct their courts. I am wondering if the committee will consider bringing these gentlemen back to earth and have them operate on a term basis? The gentleman's committee would look into that matter?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I have to repeat I do not know what the committee will do, but I believe the committee would have the authority to do that under the provisions of this resolution.

Mr. WALTER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. WALTER. In the provisions of the bill agreed upon by the conferees there is a most important one, as I view it; that is, the authority to assign judges in districts where the business has become congested. Under the present law it is possible to do that; however, we find from experience it is not done and has not been done as much as it should have been. Does not the gentleman feel that the committee appointed under this resolution can secure a great deal of valuable information that will enable the Chief Justice to independently determine where the business has become so congested as to require an additional judge temporarily?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I agree that the authority is contained in this resolution to do that very thing. Of course, we will have to have eventually some agency of visitation supervisive and regulative within the judiciary itself. That will have to be worked out sometime.

Mr. PATMAN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. PATMAN. The committee will have the authority, I presume, under this resolution to investigate the alleged misconduct of any judge of an inferior court?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. May I be very candid with the gentleman and say that the committee, in trying to do this fundamental work, hopes it will not have to spend all its time answering complaints by disgruntled litigants with reference to particular judges. Do not get me too far out on that. We have the authority perhaps under the resolution, but we do not want to advertise it too much.

Mr. PETTENGILL. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I yield to the gentleman from Indiana.

Mr. PETTENGILL. I do not intend at this time to go into the merits of some important legislation that has been pending before the gentleman's committee during this session of Congress. I am sure, however, that this has been the most trying session of Congress that the gentleman has ever served in. I am personally unwilling to let the session come to a close without expressing what I think is the sentiment and the sense of an overwhelming majority of this House if not of every Member, and the sentiment of the Nation as well; that is, that we appreciate the patriotism, the coolness, and the exalted courage with which the great chairman of the Judiciary Committee of the House has met the responsibilities of his office during the present session of Congress. That applies also to all of his colleagues on the Judiciary Committee.

May I also say to the gentleman from Texas that his conduct during the present session of Congress has done more to reestablish the dignity and the prestige of this great parliamentary body than has been done by any other Member of this body during my four terms of service in Congress. [Applause.]

Some day, when the gentleman cannot hear them, words such as these will be said in reviewing his distinguished public service. But I prefer to say them now when the gentleman may know, in this inadequate fashion, the regard in which we hold him.

May I say further to the gentleman from Texas that it is plain to me he is tired and worn out by his service during this session; but in the words of the Romans, in the brave days of old, "He has deserved well of the Republic." [Applause.]

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I surely do appreciate what the gentleman has said. I like to hear things like that said about me, just the same as anybody else, but I kind of like to hear them through the crack of the door. It sort of embarrasses me, but I appreciate it just the same.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. I ask for this time to reiterate what the distinguished gentleman from Indiana has stated, and to state further that I think, because of the action of the House Committee on the Judiciary through its distinguished chairman, the people of this country will appreciate greatly this opportunity for the committee to go abroad in the land and bring back to us at the next session of Congress a report on whether there is anything wrong with the judicial system of this country. I am sure the people of the United States will have confidence in whatever report this committee brings back. [Applause.]

Mr. MOSER of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. MOSER of Pennsylvania. The distinguished chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary has mentioned that the committee would be disposed to make certain investigations. Once before on the floor of this House I made some mention of a personal experience. A lawyer representing a contractor who had given a bond for the faithful performance of his duties refused to settle a certain amount on demand. He next appeared for the sureties on the bond. A civil suit was instituted in the district court of the United States. The assistant district attorney having charge of the prosecution of this case passed on. The lawyer became the assistant district attorney. From assistant district attorney he became Federal district judge. Obviously, after he became the assistant district attorney the case was never prosecuted and was never called for trial. Since he has become the district judge the case has never been heard. Would it be within the scope of the power of this committee to investigate the prejudices and the motives of this judge?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I repeat the answer I made a moment ago—that I think the committee has such authority, but I do not want it advertised too much until we can get going; we want to give attention first to fundamental things.

Mr. CASEY of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. CASEY of Massachusetts. Will the question of salaries of the judges come within the scope of the investigation?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. It could do so.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. SABATH. There have been a great many complaints that many cases are removed from the State courts to the Federal courts by certain corporations. This practice has been abused to such an extent that I believe it would be well for the committee to look into it and see whether we should stop the removal of cases from the State courts to the Federal courts in many cases where corporations do not feel they are absolutely safe in States where they are doing business and receiving benefits under the charters issued by such States.

Mr. PETTENGILL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I yield to the gentleman from Indiana.

Mr. PETTENGILL. Would it be within the scope of the investigation to inquire into the old question of having official court reporters for the United States district courts?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I believe so.

Mr. PETTENGILL. This is a matter into which I hope the committee will look, because it is a great inconvenience to litigants to have to bring their personal stenographers to make up a record of the proceedings. It seems to me it is against the dignity of the United States district courts not to have official court reporters.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. If there are no further questions, I am through. I am deeply grateful for the generous attitude of the House toward the members of the Judiciary Committee and toward myself. I thank you. [Applause.]

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. MICHENER].

Mr. MICHENER. Mr. Speaker, this matter was up yesterday. The chairman of our committee has brought out very clearly the points I raised yesterday.

This is an important resolution, in the first place, because it sets a precedent. This is the first time in the history of the Congress, so far as I am able to learn, that a committee has been given authority to investigate such matters as it may see fit, in connection with the judiciary. In other words, I can best illustrate my opposition to this resolution by stating that I am opposed to giving anybody a blank check whether to spend money or investigate without limitations or specific instructions. I am opposed to setting up an investigating committee with a roving commission to go about the country doing what it sees fit, spying upon courts, creating distrust, and intimidating judges. No committee should have such authority, and no committee should covet such power.

This resolution will pass, of course, but I ask you to read the remarks of our chairman in tomorrow's RECORD, with reference to what it is expected this committee will do under the resolution. Surely he has been fair in indicating that absolute discretion is lodged in the committee. My thought is that a resolution of investigation should be specific. No committee should be sent out from the Congress, as some committees have been in recent months from another body, with permission to send out investigators and spies, and with authority to explore any fields desired. Under this resolution such a condition will obtain.

The resolution provides that the committee may investigate six designated matters. First, the organization and the operation of the courts of the United States, which is a laudable thing, a specific thing, and an investigation for which the committee is qualified. Second, to investigate "the administration of justice." This is the clause which the chairman states he does not want to be asked to interpretate. Third, the jurisdiction both of the territory and of the subject matter, another laudable thing, and a thing which the committee should investigate. Fourth, the procedure. This is another thing the committee should investigate. Fifth, the rules of practice, and this, again, is something the committee should investigate. Sixth, the costs, and this is another thing the committee should investigate.

This brings me back to the one thing in the resolution to which I object, and that is that this committee may investigate "the administration of justice" in the Federal courts.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. MICHENER. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. LUCAS. Does not the gentleman believe the question of costs may be involved in the administration of justice?

Mr. MICHENER. Yes, of course; but if that is true, why is the question of costs specified? Perhaps the gentleman, who is a distinguished lawyer, has not read the resolution carefully or does not know what it contemplates. It follows the lines of the usual resolution in specifying the things the committee may do, and then it puts in a catch-all clause, stating that the committee may investigate "the administration of justice."

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MICHENER. I yield.

Mr. LUCAS. What does the gentleman understand, from the discussions that went on in committee before the resolution was presented to the House, as to what that term means?

Mr. MICHENER. This resolution was never discussed in the Committee on the Judiciary. It has never been before the Committee on the Judiciary. This is a resolution from the Rules Committee authorizing the Judiciary Committee to investigate. Sometime ago the matter was discussed by the gentleman from Alabama and the chairman of the committee before the Judiciary Committee with respect to making a general survey of the courts, the practice, jurisdiction, procedure, and so forth. The first time I ever realized what was contemplated was when the gentleman from Alabama on yesterday, on the floor, called this bill up, and at that time indicated that one of the purposes was to investigate the conduct of judges without pointing the finger of suspicion at them; in other words, any Federal judge in the country might be investigated but he would not know he was being investigated and he would have no way to answer. My thought is that if we are going to investigate a Federal judge we should follow the constitutional method and charge that Federal judge openly with what we are investigating him for, and that he should be permitted to be heard and should be given some consideration.

Mr. HOBBS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MICHENER. I yield to my colleague.

Mr. HOBBS. For the purpose of refreshing the gentleman's recollection, does he not recall making substantially the same statement upon the floor of the committee he is now making; and, in addition to that, then using the words "smelling expedition"?

Mr. MICHENER. Yes; of course I did.

Mr. HOBBS. So it was considered in the committee.

Mr. MICHENER. Not this resolution. We never saw this resolution.

Mr. HOBBS. But there was a resolution being considered in our committee.

Mr. MICHENER. Oh, yes; the gentleman from Alabama stated he felt there should be a general survey and we discussed in the committee some weeks ago whether we should ask for an investigation of the judicial system, and it was determined that the only way it could be brought about was to go to the Rules Committee and ask for a regular investigating resolution. I never understood that we were setting up a committee to pass on the qualifications of judges.

The chairman of our committee states that you can trust our committee not to do anything which we should not do. Well, the chairman would not do anything that he does not believe should be done, because he is a splendid man, but he may not be the chairman all the time. We are establishing a precedent that is coming back to plague us. You have heard enough inquiries on the floor here today to realize that if they were all investigated by this committee, the committee would be kept busy for 6 months, and you have not even started.

The real nub of the whole thing, so far as my objection is concerned, is the concise question asked by the gentleman from North Dakota [Mr. BURDICK], when he inquired whether it was to be the purpose of this committee to investigate procedure and so forth in the Federal courts or whether it was to investigate the individual conduct of judges. Now, there may be judges throughout the country whose conduct is under suspicion. If so, I think the matter should be brought out in the open. Secret spies, investigations, and police do not fit in our system of government.

I did call this a "smelling committee" on the floor yesterday, and I say it is beneath the dignity of the Judiciary Committee to accept a commission as a smelling committee when some disgruntled litigant, because he has lost a lawsuit, makes complaint against a judge; and the committee gets dozens of such cases every year. Our splendid chairman can tell you that we receive letters by the score from men and women who complain. Sometimes they are deranged and sometimes they have lost a lawsuit and sometimes they think a judge has not done the right thing.

Now, I do not want to set up a permanent committee for even this session to rush hither and yon to investigate matters of that kind.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I yield the gentleman 5 more minutes.

Mr. MICHENER. We have always said to these complainants, "If you have any proof, bring it to the committee and it will receive consideration", and it does receive consideration. I do not know why we should send a committee to New York or to Chicago or to San Francisco or to New Orleans, or where not, to investigate the Department of Justice and see whether or not the judges who have been commissioned and who are operating under the law of the land are carrying out their duties according to the notions and the fancies of this particular committee.

Mr. CASEY of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MICHENER. Yes.

Mr. CASEY of Massachusetts. The gentleman states that he understands in the phrase "administration of justice" something that amounts to a smelling expedition or suspicion with respect to the particular judges involved. I can comprehend in that phrase other things outside of the gentleman's inference, such as the manner in which jurors are drawn, whether a judge shall have the right to comment upon facts or be confined to law, and I do not think that the investigation of any committee should be limited to something specific, because something may come up that we cannot possibly foresee.

I, for one, am content to let this committee, under the leadership of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. SUMNERS], have that discretion.

Mr. MICHENER. The resolution comprehends the matters to which the gentleman refers without the indefinite power to which I object. I am laboring under no misgivings at all. I know well that this resolution is going to pass. I am not going to ask for a roll call upon it and take up time, but I do want the record. There is a difference in investigating for the purpose of framing legislation and for the purpose of setting up a sort of an inquisition against politically or otherwise unpopular judges. The judiciary should be independent and should not be subject to harassment or threats of investigation by any committee of this sort.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MICHENER. Yes.

Mr. LUCAS. Does the gentleman understand from this resolution that the committee would be able to go to Springfield, Ill., and there subpena a Federal judge and cause said judge to come before it and examine him on the conduct of his office?

Mr. MICHENER. Yes.

Mr. LUCAS. Under the construction of the term "administration of justice"?

Mr. MICHENER. Yes.

Mr. LUCAS. Then I would like to ask the chairman of the committee whether that is contemplated and whether it could be done under this resolution?

Mr. MICHENER. This is a grand jury investigation—a committee sent out to see if it can find something wrong with a judge.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I am afraid I did not catch the gentleman's question.

Mr. LUCAS. Will the gentleman permit me to ask the chairman that question.

Mr. MICHENER. I will put the question to the chairman.

The question is, whether or not, if this committee were set up under the authority given here, it would have authority to subpena in a judge—or anybody it saw fit—in any particular district, and to inquire as to the manner in which justice was being administrated in that jurisdiction. I replied that the committee surely would have this power under this resolution.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I may say this to the gentleman. I do not know what the other members of the committee might think, but I do not believe any committee coming out of the Committee on the Judiciary would go about summoning judges to inquire about how they run their office, but I do believe, if questions of costs were involved, and how trials are conducted and how jurors are drawn were being investigated, I think they would respectfully ask the judge to give them what information he could, and I cannot imagine a judge of the United States court who would not give it.

Mr. MICHENER. Neither can I, but that is not the question. The Judiciary Committee never subpenas judges. We ask them to come in and they come in. The question is whether, under this resolution, there is authority lodged in the committee, by subpena, to call before it any person in the United States to testify in reference to inquiries which the committee may submit concerning the administration of justice in the Federal courts. I feel certain the chairman will admit that is one of the purposes of the resolution.

I appreciate that, if the steam roller is used, an amendment to this resolution is not in order. I hope, however, that those in charge will permit me to offer an amendment and let the House vote on eliminating the provision permitting this itinerate committee to take upon itself the job of supervising the life, morals, and conduct of Federal judges. A free and independent judiciary means that it must not be in constant fear of secret inquisition on the part of the Congress. I thought this question had just been settled in the Senate. The President should not control the judiciary; neither should the Congress.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Michigan has expired.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. DITTER].

Mr. DITTER. Mr. Speaker, I preface my observation by an honest effort without restriction or restraint to pay my sincere compliment to the distinguished chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary. I know he enjoys not only the confidence of the House but the commendation of the country at this time. I think that the proponents of this measure are using the distinguished chairman in order to sell this measure to the House. We all know that if the chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary is back of this resolution, it will be adopted, but I do believe that there are some things in it that he cannot approve wholeheartedly.

I do not go along with my colleague from Michigan [Mr. MICHENER] to the extent of saying that all of the provisions are harmless with the exception of the provision relating to the administration of justice. I am thinking of that phrase "the rules of practice" and I am thinking of the time-honored precedent established in most of the courts that the court should determine its rules with respect to admissions to the bar, without the help or the criticism of this proposed investigating committee. Still I can see where under the wording of the resolution now before us, this roving committee, this inquisitorial body, this sniping, snooping, smelling committee, could go out into the Federal districts and try to be both persuasive and probably mandatory with reference to the rules of admission to the bar of that court. I am wondering whether that is a wise precedent to establish. I am wondering whether or not the lawyers who are Members of the House do not feel a bit jealous of the prerogatives of their own courts with respect to admission and whether they do not resent the inquisitorial powers of the Congress to pass upon the qualifications for admission to the several bars of the United States courts.

I have confidence in the chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary, and I yield to him to say whether or not under the resolution as prepared the condition that I have presented might not prevail. Again, there has been an hysteria, a mania, for this matter of investigating everything. Inquisitorial bodies and investigating bodies armed with the powers of prosecutor, judge, and jury, and cavorting at the expense of the taxpayers, are trying to find out how we live, when we sleep, where we eat, what we wear, what we say, with whom we go out, and everything else under God's blessed sun, so that the most intimate relationships of family life are hardly safe, sacred, or secure any more. People in private and public life are hounded on all sides by this ever-increasing army of gossip-mongering, scandal-spreading investigators, whose chief ambition in life seem to be to pick up as much mud as they can find and throw it at somebody. Tearing down reputations is their well-paid pastime. But the thing that is dangerous here, the serious thing, is that at the present time the courts of the United States in the administration of justice and the probity of judges and the integrity and honesty of men on the bench are being questioned in high circles and in low circles. This is just another method intended to cast suspicion upon and to create doubt in the judicial system of the country. I submit that confidence in the courts is the very foundation stone upon which a self-governing people must build. Destroy that confidence and you invite lawlessness, violence, anarchy, and ultimate despotism.

If there are men on the bench in any Federal district who should be impeached, it is our duty to proceed against them. But, let us do it openly, honestly, courageously, and not resort to a method which cannot command respect because of its stealthy, secretive, and inquisitorial characteristics.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Pennsylvania has expired.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I yield the gentleman 2 additional minutes.

Mr. DITTER. But I am opposed to this preliminary impeachment method, and that is all it amounts to—a preliminary impeachment on the part of a committee of this House, in order to get evidence upon which they can subsequently come in here with their bill of impeachment. If a judge should not be on the bench, then why has not the committee the moral courage and fortitude to come here with its bill of impeachment and lay a foundation on which he can be tried? This is simply another one of the strong-arm methods of which we have already seen too many in the last few years.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman has again expired.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. KNUTSON].

Mr. KNUTSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 5 minutes out of order.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Minnesota?

There was no objection.

Mr. KNUTSON. Mr. Speaker, I read in a morning paper that the administration had its last round-up last evening, when 60 Members of another body, all acting like brothers, all mellow, so the paper says, which I assume means that they were in high spirits, or should I say in good spirits, foregathered at a local hotel for a harmony dinner. To make the occasion appear more harmonious some brilliant mind conceived the idea of liberating two doves of peace that roosted on one of the rafters. [Laughter.] There was a little note of discord sounded. [Laughter.]

One gentleman who happens to be very prominent in the body to which these gentlemen belong, said:

> We must be on our guard against those who profess to lead us and have not been indoctrinated with sound democratic and constitutional principles.

I hope those remarks were not aimed at someone somewhat higher up in the counsels of the party, especially at a time like this when you are straining every nerve to restore harmony, and to heal, yes, to remove the scars of recent battles. The paper, of course, draws the inference that the remark was made at one of the colleagues who is not a member of the party, but who, I understand, has been elevated to the position of leadership within the past 2 weeks.

This speech—

Says the paper—

was accorded some of the heartiest applause of the evening, as the much-torn ranks of the party attempted to find a common ground for reunion.

They had letters from distinguished officials, which my time will not permit me to read.

It would seem to me, Mr. Speaker, that the organist had a very fine sense of fitness when he played The Last Round Up as the opening number of the evening. Now, what is a round-up? A round-up is where they gather up all the mavericks and apply the branding iron on them [laughter] preparatory to shipping them down the river. I daresay that some of those who attended that round-up have the ranch markings——

Mr. MAVERICK. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KNUTSON. I was not referring to the gentleman from Texas. [Laughter.] I was speaking of unbranded Democrats. [Laughter.] I do not know whether they applied the branding iron to the doves or not. I guess they branded everyone else.

Of course, we love to see the other side dwell in harmony, and we will do everything within our power to promote a spirit of harmony among them. [Laughter.] In fact, we would be glad to ship you a crate of doves of peace, branded or otherwise, if it would help to bring about more harmony among you.

Reading further, I see where one speaker said:

It is an honor for an unreconstructed rebel to be called on at a time like this for a speech. I have not always agreed with so-and-so.. I have not always agreed with so-and-so. But I am a Democrat first, last, and always.

[Applause.]

Another distinguished speaker made some remarks which would indicate to me that he is not a little tinged with sound Republican doctrine. [Laughter.]

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Minnesota has expired.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I yield the gentleman 5 additional minutes.

Mr. KNUTSON. But he goes on:

We cannot and must not accept that which is merely called democracy for temporary political success on the basis of destruction of property and infringements of personal liberty.

I would say that that gentleman is a Republican, or at least a Jeffersonian Democrat. These days they are both pretty much alike. [Laughter.]

Mr. HOBBS. Mr. Speaker, I ask that the gentleman's words be taken down. [Laughter.]

Mr. KNUTSON. If the gentleman proposes to ride to fame on my coattails, it is all right with me.

The SPEAKER. Which words does the gentleman ask be taken down?

Mr. KNUTSON. Is the gentleman offended at the eulogy I pay to Thomas Jefferson?

Mr. HOBBS. No. The words I regard as insulting to us Democrats are those by which it was intimated that a Jeffersonian Democrat even faintly resembles a Republican. [Laughter.]

Mr. KNUTSON. I apologize to the Republicans. [Laughter.]

When it was all over, one who had attended the love feast, evidently without profit, strode glumly out of the room, and when a newspaperman asked him if there had been harmony in there he said, "Harmony, hell! and don't quote me." [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. GREENWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. McSWEENEY]

Mr. McSWEENEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to speak out of order on the subject of the Supreme Court.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

(Mr. McSWEENEY asked and was granted permission to revise and extend his remarks in the RECORD.)

Mr. McSWEENEY. Mr. Speaker, I directed a letter to the Chief Justice, which I could not read into the RECORD before, because I had not received an answer from him. I felt it to be unethical and discourteous to use the letter until I had his authorization. From his secretary today I received this word:

SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES,
Washington, D. C., August 10, 1937

Hon. JOHN McSWEENEY,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR MR. McSWEENEY: Chief Justice Hughes telegraphed me today from Jasper Park, Canada, as follows:

"Inform Mr. McSWEENEY that I cannot undertake to discuss the proposal contained in his letter which, as it relates to action by the Court, will be referred to the Court; that, with that understanding, I have no objection to the inclusion of the letter in his speech."

I telephoned the foregoing to your secretary this afternoon.

Very sincerely yours,

W. W. MISCHLER, Secretary.

My letter to the Chief Justice is as follows:

JULY 29, 1937.

The CHIEF JUSTICE OF THE UNITED STATES,
Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR MR. CHIEF JUSTICE: May I respectfully call to your attention a proposition which I feel, if carried into effect, would eliminate one of the controversial points relative to the Court reorganization program suggested by the President?

Both the proponents and the opponents of the Court plan and the citizens of our country in general agree that legislation enacted by the Congress of the United States should not be declared unconstitutional by a bare majority of the membership of the Supreme Court. Is it not entirely within your province as Justices of this Court to establish a rule whereby the members of the Court would not declare an act of the Congress unconstitutional unless at least six of the nine Justices voted it unconstitutional? This change could only be forced upon the Court by a constitutional amendment. However, I can find nothing in the Constitution or among the Federal statutes that would deny the Justices of the Court the right to establish voluntarily this regulation for a 6–3 or even 7–2 vote when the constitutionality of the acts of the Congress is in question.

A mutual respect for the members of the different branches of Government is essential to high efficiency in the operation of Government. Would it not be a mark of courtesy to the able and patriotic Members of the House and Senate, many of whom are distinguished lawyers and judges, for the Justices of the Supreme Court to rule that the vote of a bare majority of the Court was not sufficient to declare unconstitutional laws enacted by the 435 Members of the House of Representatives and the 96 Members of the United States Senate?

I shall be deeply grateful for any consideration which you and your fellow Justices may give to this suggestion.

I beg to have the honor to remain,

Respectfully yours,

JOHN McSWEENEY.

I realize that were this rule adopted by the present membership of the Supreme Court it would not be binding upon future memberships. However, it would undoubtedly become a precedent. The Justices have always tried to resolve any doubts as to the constitutionality of acts of the Congress in favor of their constitutionality. Could this mental resolution not be put in the more concrete form by insisting that at least six of the nine Justices be required to declare these acts unconstitutional?

I have every respect for our Federal courts. The adoption of this rule by the Court would be an expression of respect of the membership of the Supreme Court for the President of the United States and for the Congress. I earnestly hope that the Justices will act favorably upon this proposal.

Mr. GREENWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the resolution.

Mr. MICHENER. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. MICHENER. Will there be any opportunity for amendment? I desire to offer an amendment.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Indian has moved the previous question. If the previous question is ordered an amendment would not be in order. If the previous question should be voted down an amendment would be in order.

Mr. MICHENER. Mr. Speaker, a further parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. MICHENER. Will the gentleman from Indiana yield to permit me to offer an amendment?

Mr. GREENWOOD. No; I do not feel justified to yield for an amendment. I know nothing about the amendment. Mr. Speaker, I demand the regular order.

The SPEAKER. The regular order is, Shall the previous question be ordered?

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

WASHINGTON AIRPORT

Mr. WILCOX. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Military Affairs I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill (H. R. 7985) to promote air commerce by providing for the enlargement of Washington Airport.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman explain the bill?

Mr. WILCOX. Mr. Speaker, I may say to the gentleman from New York and to the Members of the House that the question of eliminating certain hazards at the Washington Airport was presented to the Committee on Military Affairs by reason of the fact that Military Road, owned by the War Department, traverses the main runway of the present airport. A bill was filed by the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. MAY], acting chairman of the Committee on Military Affairs. The committee has reported the bill with a suggested amendment, which is equivalent to a substitute bill.

The substitute which will be offered provides simply that Military Road may be leased to the airport corporation for a period of 25 years for a lump sum of $25,000; that the money to be acquired for the lease will be used to construct a substitute highway for the use of the general public. The committee believes that this removes the principal hazard at the present airport. There is no effort made through this bill to solve the question of whether the Federal Government shall own the airport for Washington, or whether a new airport shall be constructed at Camp Springs or some other place, nor does it attempt to solve the many complicated and perplexing questions involved in determining a permanent policy. This bill simply attempts to remove the principal hazard at the present airport; and I understand from a discussion with interested parties that the principle of the proposed substitute meets all of the objections of the people of Arlington County to the closing of the present road.

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, did the gentleman see in the Post this morning the account of an agreement having been reached between the board of Arlington County and representatives of the airport company whereby it was agreed that the company would pay $25,000 for the construction of an alternate road after Military Road was closed, but went further, the agreement being based upon lease of the lagoon in the boundary channel to the present operators of the Washington-Hoover Airport, to be filled in at their expense?

Mr. WILCOX. This bill proposes a lease by the Department of Agriculture for that part of the property now operated as an experiment station. The Military Affairs Committee, I may say to the gentleman, has no jurisdiction over any part of this subject matter except Military Road. That is the only part of it that we could deal with in this bill, and we have not attempted to solve the problem outside of that one phase. I understand that the Arlington County residents are entirely agreeable to the closing of Military Road and turning it over to the airport corporation provided a $25,000 road is built as a substitute highway for the residents of Arlington County.

Mr. NICHOLS. The bill the gentleman offers only proposes to close Military Road?

Mr. WILCOX. That is right.

Mr. NICHOLS. It does not attempt to deal with the experimental farm or any portion of that, nor the lagoon?

Mr. WILCOX. It does attempt to deal with that portion operated by the Department of Agriculture for an experimental station, to this extent only: It authorizes the Secretary of Agriculture to negotiate a lease upon such terms as he may be able to agree upon.

Mr. NICHOLS. Is that included in the bill?

Mr. WILCOX. That is included in the bill.

Mr. MAVERICK. The lagoon is left out altogether.

Mr. BLAND. Does the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. SMITH] know this bill is coming up for consideration at this time?

Mr. WILCOX. Yes. I discussed it with Mr. SMITH not 10 minutes ago.

Mr. RANDOLPH. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WILCOX. I yield to the gentleman from West Virginia.

Mr. RANDOLPH. The problem of safety at the present Washington Airport, of course, is one that interests the Members of the House. I want to pay a tribute to the Members of the Military Affairs Committee who have for the first time brought before the House something that we can act upon, and something which will go at least a part of the way toward making the present airport safe for all those who use it.

Mr. WILCOX. I thank the gentleman, and I may say in that connection that Military Road traverses the main runway of the airport. Up to this time there has not been a tragedy over there, but tragedy has been narrowly averted on several occasions because the traveling public in their vehicles go straight across this runway. Just a few days ago an accident was narrowly averted when one of the planes in landing scraped the top of a bus that was loaded with passengers. Our idea is to close that road and remove what we think is the principal hazard to the safety of the traveling public.

Mr. TABER. And whatever expense there is will be paid by the Washington Airport Corporation?

Mr. WILCOX. Yes. The Washington Airport Corporation is to pay $25,000.

Mr. BROOKS. I would like to ask the gentleman whether or not this bill requires leasing by the Department of Agriculture?

Mr. WILCOX. It authorizes the Secretary of Agriculture to negotiate a lease of 53 acres of the land now used for an experimental farm upon such terms and conditions as he may work out. If the Secretary of Agriculture and the corporation do not agree upon terms and conditions there would, of course, be no lease of this part of the lands.

Mr. BROOKS. Does it permit the leasing of the entire Department of Agriculture experimental farm?

Mr. WILCOX. Only 53 acres.

Mr. MAVERICK. Mr. Speaker, may I add to what the gentleman from West Virginia has stated that we worked on this matter a long time. The solution was offered by the gentleman from Florida [Mr. WILCOX] and everyone thinks it is a good settlement. It does not cost the Government a cent.

Mr. THOMASON of Texas. May I ask if the bill in its present language still provides that the Government does not give up its fee-simple title to the road?

Mr. WILCOX. It provides for a 25-year lease only.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Florida [Mr. WILCOX] for the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That (a) the Secretary of War is authorized and directed to convey by quitclaim deed to the National Airport Corporation, a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Delaware, the lands forming that part of Military Road, Fort

Myer Military Reservation, Arlington County, Va., described as follows: Beginning at a point on the easterly line of the Arlington Reservation north 16° west 75.29 feet from the stone marking the southeast corner of said reservation; thence with said easterly line of said reservation north 16°0′ west 71.73 feet; thence north 85°35′ east 263.25 feet; thence by a curve to the right of 608.7 feet radius 336.42 feet; thence south 62°45′ east 1,253.11 feet; thence by a curve to the left of 406.7 feet radius 454.27 feet; thence north 53°15′ east 32.09 feet to a point; thence south 31°27′ east 8.96 feet to the northwest corner of the right-of-way of the Virginia approach to the Highway Bridge; thence with the westerly line of said right-of-way south 20°55′ west 110.91 feet; thence south 66°15′ west 45.85 feet; thence by a curve to the right of 476.7 feet radius 424.3 feet; thence north 62°45′ west 1,253.11 feet; thence by a curve to the left of 538.7 feet radius, 297.73 feet; thence south 85°35′ west 247.63 feet to the point of beginning. The above-described parcel of land comprises a strip of land 70 feet in width, the center line of said 70-foot strip being coincident with the center line of the highway from the Highway Bridge to Arlington National Cemetery, and contains 3.7165 acres of land, more or less.

(b) The Secretary of War is further authorized and directed to lease to such corporation for airport purposes, under such terms and conditions as he may prescribe, for a period not exceeding 50 years, and only for such period as the adjoining land shall be used for an airport, at a rental of $1 per annum, that part of such Military Road lying east of the Washington & Southern freight branch of the Pennsylvania Railroad and which is not included in the conveyance provided for in paragraph (a) of this section.

(c) The Secretary of War shall not make such conveyance or lease until he shall have received from such corporation, to be paid to the Board of Commissioners, Arlington County, Va., such sum as may be necessary, but not to exceed $25,000, for the construction of a substitute road.

SEC. 2. The Secretary of Agriculture is authorized and directed to lease to such corporation for airport purposes, under such terms and conditions as he may prescribe for a period not exceeding 50 years, and only for such period as the adjoining land shall be used for an airport, at a rental of $1 per annum, that part of the lands (originally known as the Arlington Plantation and commonly known as the Arlington Experimental Farm) lying east of the Washington & Southern freight branch of the Pennsylvania Railroad containing 53 acres more or less.

SEC. 3. The Secretary of War is authorized and directed to lease to such corporation for airport purposes, under such terms and conditions as he may prescribe, for a period not exceeding 50 years and only for such period as the adjoining land shall be used for an airport, at a rental of $1 per annum, the portion of the bed of the Potomac River adjoining the Washington Airport, commonly known as the lagoon area of the Boundary Channel, better described as the area lying south and east of the following-described arc: Beginning at a point which is the center of the west face of the south abutment of the Mount Vernon Memorial Highway Bridge over Boundary Channel at its mouth, thence upstream in a straight line south 54°35′ west (true meridian) a distance of 200 feet, thence in a series of curves to the right (upstream) the chords of which bear south 70°55′ west 150 feet; north 81°35′ west 200 feet; north 62°30′ west 300 feet; north 51°35′ west 400 feet; and north 38°10′ west 250 feet to intersect the approximate high-water shore line on the west bank of the said Boundary Channel. Such lease shall contain express conditions that the corporation if deemed necessary by the Secretary of War, will widen and deepen the Boundary Channel, and will construct a retaining wall along the above-described arc, without expense to the United States, under the supervision of the Secretary of War and in accordance with such terms and conditions as he may prescribe.

With the following committee amendment:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert the following:

"That the Secretary of War is authorized and directed to lease to the National Airport Corporation, a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Delaware for airport purposes, under such terms and conditions as he may prescribe, for a period not exceeding 25 years, and only for such period as the same shall be used for airport purposes, at a rental of $25,000, payable in advance, the lands forming that part of Military Road, Fort Myer Military Reservation, Arlington County, Va., described as follows: Beginning at a point on the easterly line of the Arlington Reservation north 16° west 75.29 feet from the stone marking the southeast corner of said reservation; thence with said easterly line of said reservation north 16°0′ west 71.73 feet; thence north 85°35′ east 263.25 feet; thence by a curve to the right of 608.7 feet radius 336.42 feet; thence south 62°45′ east 1,253.11 feet; thence by a curve to the left of 406.7 feet radius 454.27 feet; thence north 53°15′ east 32.09 feet to a point; thence south 31°27′ east 8.96 feet to the northwest corner of the right-of-way of the Virginia approach to the Highway Bridge; thence with the westerly line of said right-of-way south 20°55′ west 110.91 feet; thence south 66°15′ west 45.85 feet; thence by a curve to the right of 476.7 feet radius 424.3 feet; thence north 62°45′ west 1,253.11 feet; thence by a curve to the left of 538.7 feet radius, 297.73 feet; thence south 85°35′ west 247.63 feet to the point of beginning. The above-described parcel of land comprises a strip of land 70 feet in width, the center line of said 70-foot strip being coincident with the center line of the highway from the Highway Bridge to Arlington National Cemetery, and contains 3.7165 acres of land, more or less.

"SEC. 2. There is hereby authorized to be appropriated such sum as may be necessary, but not to exceed $25,000, to be paid to the Board of Commissioners of Arlington County, Va., for the construction of a public road as a substitute for that portion of Military Road authorized to be leased to the National Airport Corporation.

"SEC. 3. The Secretary of Agriculture is authorized and directed to lease to such corporation for airport purposes, under such terms and conditions as he may prescribe, for a period not exceeding 25 years, and only for such period as the adjoining lands shall be used for an airport, at such annual rental as the Secretary of Agriculture and the said National Airport Corporation shall agree upon, that part of the lands (originally known as the Arlington Plantation and commonly known as the Arlington Experimental Farm) lying east of the Washington & Southern freight branch of the Pennsylvania Railroad, containing 53 acres, more or less."

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment, which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. NICHOLS: Page 8, after line 12, insert a new section, as follows:

"SEC. 4. The Secretary of War is authorized and directed to lease to such corporation for airport purposes, under such terms and conditions as he may prescribe, for a period not exceeding 50 years and only for such period as the adjoining land shall be used for an airport, at a rental of $1 per annum, the portion of the bed of the Potomac River adjoining the Washington Airport, commonly known as the lagoon area of the Boundary Channel, better described as the area lying south and east of the following-described arc: Beginning at a point which is the center of the west face of the south abutment of the Mount Vernon Memorial Highway Bridge over Boundary Channel at its mouth, thence upstream in a straight line south 54°35′ west (true meridian) a distance of 200 feet, thence in a series of curves to the right (upstream) the chords of which bear south 70°55′ west 150 feet; north 81°35′ west 200 feet; north 62°30′ west 300 feet; north 51°35′ west 400 feet; and north 38°10′ west 250 feet to intersect the approximate high-water shore line on the west bank of the said Boundary Channel. Such lease shall contain express conditions that the corporation, if deemed necessary by the Secretary of War, will widen and deepen the Boundary Channel, and will construct a retaining wall along the above-described arc, without expense to the United States, under the supervision of the Secretary of War and in accordance with such terms and conditions as he may prescribe."

Mr. COLE of Maryland. Mr. Speaker, I make a point of order against the amendment just offered by the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. NICHOLS], that it is not germane to the bill. As I understood the gentleman from Florida, the bill deals with one isolated subject, while the amendment seems to go into the permanent establishment of an airport and into leasing a part of the Potomac River, as well as giving certain authority to the Secretary of War, which the bill, as explained by the gentleman from Florida, does not contemplate.

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Speaker, the amendment which has just been read is a part of the original bill as introduced and considered by the Military Affairs Committee, and comprises section 3 of that bill. It provides that the Washington Airport Corporation, or whoever the owners of the Washington Hoover Airport are, may take a lease on the lagoon area in the Washington Hoover Field.

There may be just one question. I presume that when the bill was drawn the framers of the bill found that the title to the lagoon was in the War Department.

The SPEAKER. The Chair is ready to rule.

The gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. NICHOLS] offers an amendment which has been reported by the Clerk and is set forth in the RECORD in full, to which the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. COLE] interposed the point of order that it is not germane to the committee amendment or to the bill.

The attention of the Chair has been called to the fact that originally this was a bill "To promote air commerce by providing for the enlargement of Washington Airport" and, as reported by the Committee on Military Affairs, among other things contained the identical language and provision now offered by the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. NICHOLS] as an amendment to the committee amendment.

The Chair is clearly of the opinion from reading the text of the bill, as well as the committee amendment which relates to the same subject, that the amendment offered by the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. NICHOLS] is germane, and, therefore, overrules the point of order.

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Speaker, time is very limited, but here is what I propose to do by this amendment.

In the first place, may I say everyone is agreed that the present airport for the District of Columbia is inadequate and dangerous. All this bill was originally introduced for was to give the corporation which now operates the airport authority to do three things, all of them tending only to make this airport as safe as possible, not for the purpose, if you please, of making this a permanent airport for the District of Columbia but for the purpose of meeting the practical situation which faces us. This airport is the third busiest airport in the United States. Only Newark, N. J., and Philadelphia exceed it in the amount of traffic which flows in and out of the airport. It was testified before the Committee on Military Affairs by Mr. Johnson, Assistant Secretary of Commerce, by Eddie Rickenbacker, whose authority certainly has been recognized, and by other witnesses, that these three things were necessary to be done in order to make this a safe airport. Keep in mind that this does not cost the Government or the District of Columbia one red cent.

All my amendment does beyond what is provided for in the bill is permit the airport corporation to take a lease on that little lagoon which runs in back of the blimp hangar, a little neck of water running in there, which, incidentally, the Department of Health has declared insanitary. My amendment permits this airport company, with its own money and at its own expense, to fill this lagoon, thus through the filling of the lagoon and the use of the experimental farm transforming the 4,000-foot runway, which now runs in this direction, into a 5,000-foot runway in this direction, and there will also be a 3,100-foot runway in this diretcion. This change makes the airport safe and adequate for good-weather landings and take-offs.

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. NICHOLS. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. ANDREWS. I am under the impression that the lagoon adds a comparatively short distance which would be available for a new directional runway. Is the gentleman informed on this?

Mr. NICHOLS. Yes. I wish I had known this question was coming up. In this month's issue of Life magazine there is a full-page cut showing the layout of these runways as they will be if the lagoon is filled, if 53 acres of the experimental farm are taken over, and if Military Road is closed. If there is one question I have been close to since I have been in this House, it is the question of the airport for the District of Columbia. Every day the airport stays in the condition in which it is now we are flirting with dire disaster, we are flirting with the fact that on almost every take-off or landing there may be an airplane crash which will cost one or many lives.

This thing cannot cost the Government a cent. It is simply meeting an emergency which confronts us now. We are charged with the duty of taking care of this matter. If you have any confidence in my judgment, believe me when I tell you, having nursed this thing for 3 years, that this is an adequate solution. The only group which objects to the lagoon's being filled, and I say this with all respect, is the National Parks and Planning Commission, which does not want the lagoon filled because this small area is a place where people can anchor little boats.

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. NICHOLS. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. ANDREWS. Would it not be true that if the lagoon were filled and used as a portion of the runway you would have the same situation on the Memorial Highway that you have on the present roadway?

Mr. NICHOLS. No.

Mr. ANDREWS. You would have a take-off going up over the Memorial Highway.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 2 additional minutes in order to answer the question of the gentleman from New York.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma?

There was no objection.

Mr. NICHOLS. The gentleman from New York raises the proposition that if the lagoon were filled the Memorial Highway would form the same sort of hazard Military Road now forms. Of course, this is not correct, for the reason that Military Road runs squarely through the present airport and cuts it in two. Say my hand is the airport, then Military Road runs through the middle of it. Memorial Highway runs around it, and runs around it anyway. It is still there. This would not create the same hazard at all. The only difference it could possibly make would be that if the lagoon were filled the end of the airport which was formerly the lagoon would be a little closer to a portion of the Memorial Highway than it is now, but it would not be closer to the Memorial Highway than other portions of the airport are now.

Mr. BROOKS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. NICHOLS. I yield to the gentleman from Louisiana.

Mr. BROOKS. Does not the gentleman recall other witnesses testifying that even with the lagoon filled the airport is entirely unsafe for navigation by airplanes?

Mr. NICHOLS. I recall the testimony of many witnesses. I do not say that by doing this we shall have a perfect airport. I recall Eddie Rickenbacker's testimony that there was no such airport in the United States as a perfect airport. I also recall his stating, when he was asked whether if this were done in his opinion this would be a good airport, that it would be one of the best in the United States.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. WILCOX. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. Speaker, the amendment offered by the gentleman from Oklahoma is eloquent evidence of the many difficulties which are involved in this airport problem. There are all sorts of questions involved. Many people think the present airport ought to be abandoned and one established at Camp Springs. Others believe one should be put at Gravelly Point. Others believe this present airport can be properly developed. All of these are highly controversial questions. This is exactly the reason the committee in reporting this bill undertook to limit it to one specific proposition, that is, the elimination of the hazard in the middle of the runway.

We had all these questions before us. There is all sorts of conflicting testimony as to whether or not this little lagoon should be filled or should not be filled. I do not know whether the War Department has title to the land or not. I do know that the National Park Service objects to the filling of the lagoon.

Because of these objections and because of all these complicated questions, the Committee on Military Affairs said, "We will settle the one question that we have jurisdiction over, which is the closing of Military Road, and we will leave all of these other questions to be dealt with at a later date when there is more time for Congress to consider them and when some appropriate committee can go into all of these matters." In the meantime, this session of Congress is about to come to a close and this hazard has not been removed. All we are seeking to do before the close of this session is to close that road in the middle of the runway and remove that hazard. Then, next year we can settle all of these other questions about how the airport should be enlarged or whether there should be a new airport, and all of the other questions that are involved and have been raised.

Mr. RANDOLPH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WILCOX. I yield to the gentleman from West Virginia.

Mr. RANDOLPH. And in bringing this bill here you have done what the private corporation and the authorities of Arlington County are agreed upon.

Mr. NICHOLS. Oh, that is not correct.

Mr. WILCOX. Just a moment. I beg the gentleman's pardon. I understand the airport corporation and Arlington County have agreed that if the airport corporation will contribute $25,000 for the construction of a new highway the county is agreeable to the closing of the present highway. There is some question between them as to whether it should be by lease or deed, but the property belongs to the Federal Government and Arlington County and the airport corporation have no right to tell the Congress whether it shall make a lease or deed. We are settling that question in this bill.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I ask that this amendment be voted down for the reason, as I have already pointed out, when you get into these controversial questions you open the matter for all these other questions, and you go into all sorts of things. We are simply trying to settle one thing, and that is whether Military Road, which goes through the runway of the airport, shall be closed.

Mr. COLE of Maryland. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WILCOX. I yield.

Mr. COLE of Maryland. In view of what the gentleman has said, I think if the title of the bill as reported had been amended, a point of order against the pending amendment would have been sustained.

Mr. WILCOX. The gentleman's point would have been sustained.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the amendment to the committee amendment offered by the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. NICHOLS].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. NICHOLS) there were—ayes 9, noes 78.

So the amendment to the committee amendment was rejected.

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. MAVERICK and Mr. LUECKE and Mr. MICHENER of Michigan asked and were given permission to extend their own remarks in the RECORD.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. BURDICK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that on next Thursday, after the legislative business of the House has been disposed of, and following any special orders heretofore entered, I may address the House for 15 minutes on the subject of farm legislation.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Dakota.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. Under the previous order of the House, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. JONES] is recognized for 1 hour.

THE FARM SITUATION

Mr. JONES. Mr. Speaker, I have rather hurriedly collected some information and I may have to present it in a more or less broken way, but I ask to be permitted to proceed for a while before being interrupted. It is my desire at this time to place in the RECORD what the Congress has done at this session in behalf of agriculture, and to make some comment upon the picture as it exists today.

AMERICA'S LARGEST BUSINESS

Agriculture is the biggest business in America. There are more than 200 different agricultural commodities. The annual production is valued at about nine and a half billion dollars. The value of the lands upon which these products are produced is around $40,000,000,000. There is no business in this country comparable to it in value, volume, or number of people affected.

Together with a number of others, I have taken part in the long, heartbreaking struggle for recognition of equal rights for agriculture. That problem is as old as the tariff question in this country, more than 75 years old, and some phases of it are as old as history.

If there had been no special favoritism in legislation, if there had been no tariff laws—and I am not speaking of the merits of these things—if there had been no trusts and no monopolies and no unfair trade practices, we probably would have needed little, if any, agricultural legislation. But for more than a half century special groups have descended on our State and National capitals and have demanded and secured special favoritism in legislation, which has caused a lopsided condition to develop.

This disadvantage runs more or less through all the farm commodities, although it runs much more severely into the great surplus commodities. The farmers produce all these different commodities I mention. Take the matter of wheat. Wheat varies from the winter wheat of the Southwest and the spring wheat of the Northwest to the so-called special wheat that is grown on the Pacific coast. There are more than 60 different types and varieties of wheat grown by farmers 2,000 miles apart. That is just one of the commodities. Others might be gone into in respect to different types. Cotton has a great many different types, grades, and lengths of staple.

LEGISLATION

To secure equal operation of the laws of this country has been one of the purposes of the drive for legislation in respect to agriculture. That legislation, if it is to be had in a sound and constructive way, cannot be obtained overnight. You can grow a morning glory overnight, but it withers in the afternoon. If we are to have sound economy in this country, we really need to have a planting of something in the nature of oak trees rather than morning glories.

INDUSTRY INTERESTED

It is just as important to the industrial sections of this country to have a fair farm program as it is to the farming sections. It took us a long time to convince the American people of that and they really had to be finally convinced by being met face to face in the middle of the road with the collapse of the whole system in the country, but they believe it now and understand it.

In order to secure legislation, however, we have to be fair to the industrial groups. We have to be fair to all groups, and they have to be fair to us. If one would know the effects of the farm program one should go into building up of business in the sections where the farm program has applied. Then it can be followed through to the great industrial centers in the stimulus that has come to industry through increased purchasing power of the farm and ranch.

I mention these things as a sort of background to show that there is a philosophy behind the farm program, a real philosophy. The question of equality was written into the Declaration of Independence before we had a Constitution in this country. I believe that it is the most fundamental of all of the principles that were written into the original laws of our land.

You cannot in every wind-blown thing that comes up rush through half-baked legislation without doing injury to the long-range situation rather than helping it. You cannot take care of the many-sided phases of the agricultural problem by one piece of legislation. It is too many-sided for that.

THE RECORD OF THIS CONGRESS

I have heard the statement made by some people, and even echoed by some Members of Congress, that there has been nothing done in the way of farm legislation at this session. I do not fall out with them for that. There are so many things going on here that it is hard to keep up with anything except that of which you are making a special study.

To show how utterly fallacious this is, I submit herewith a list of the more important farm bills which have been acted upon by the House at this session:

LEGISLATION HANDLED BY HOUSE AGRICULTURAL COMMITTEE, SEVENTY-FIFTH CONGRESS, FIRST SESSION

H. R. 3687: Amend Soil Conservation Act (postpones period 4 years); passed House April 5; became law June 28, 1937.

H. R. 5722: Agricultural Marketing Act, 1937; passed House April 19; became law June 3.

H. R. 1645: Agricultural Reserve Note Act; reported to House February 19.

H. R. 7562: Farm tenant; passed House June 29; became law July 22.

H. R. 6763: Interest reduction; passed House finally July 13; Senate July 22; became law July 22.

H. R. 6762: Amend Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act; passed House June 21.

H. R. 7667: Sugar Act of 1937; passed House August 6.

H. R. 7697: Great Plains Drought Act; reported to House August 6.

H. R. 7909: Farm Credit Act of 1937; passed House August 2.

H. R. 1545: Crop loans for 1937; passed House January 25; became law January 29.

S. 1500: Cotton classification; passed House April 5; became law April 13.

S. 1397: Crop insurance; reported to House August 10.

H. R. 4728: Farm forestry (S. 1504); passed House May 5; became law May 18.

S. J. Res. 75: Provision to destroy grasshoppers ($2,000,000); passed House March 15; became law April 6.

S. 2439: Continue Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation; passed House June 21; became law June 28.

This does not include the entire list, but it shows some of them, and I shall mention a few. One of them is the extension of the present Soil Conservation Act for a period of 4 years. I do not know what others may think, but in my judgment the present law is the best law we have ever had for agriculture. I believe it needs some supplemental legislation. Some additional provisions are vitally needed in connection with the price structure, but it formulates a sort of offset to the tariff system, and it does a tremendously important task of conserving our natural resources.

THE MARKETING ACT

Then we passed the Agricultural Marketing Act. We took an entire year to pass that before. Gentlemen will remember the controversy that arose about it. It affects more of American agriculture than either of the general bills now pending before the committee. That may be a surprise to some of you, but it is a correct statement.

I want to talk to you a minute in that connection about the value of the different agricultural commodities. The greatest value over a 10-year period, and that gets a pretty good test of values, in the way of cash income received from farm products is the dairy business, amounting to $1,350,000,000.

They were vitally interested in that piece of legislation. Then, too, fruits, nuts, vegetables, trucking, and many other farm commodities are aided by these marketing provisions. It is not a simple matter to work out a complicated piece of legislation and keep it sound and in workable form.

The second in cash income value is cotton lint and seed, $931,000,000. Third, hogs, $915,000,000. The fourth, cattle and calves, $825,000,000. Fifth, poultry and eggs, $677,000,000. Sixth, wheat, $492,000,000.

ACTUAL VALUE

That does not altogether present an exact picture of the six leading commodities. I am going to give it to you on the basis of value. Some of these commodities are utilized through livestock, and therefore the cash income does not show the exact figure.

Taking it from the standpoint of value—that is, the number of bushels or units multiplied by the value—first, dairy products again, $1,796,000,000. Corn, $1,556,000,000. Hogs, $1,107,000,000. Cottonseed and lint, $979,000,000. Hay, $870,000,000. Sixth, cattle and calves, $868,000,000. Seventh, wheat, $638,000,000.

You may ask any of the farm groups that are interested in dairying, and they will give you some slant on the real value of farm production. If you include both poultry and eggs, poultry and eggs come pretty high in the total value of the various farm commodities. So establishing these marketing agreements is a very complicated process. This is a very important thing.

FARM TENANT ACT

Another one of the bills that we passed was the Farm Tenant Act. That was the beginning of what we hope will be a successful program. It is more or less of an experiment. We all agreed on the objective, but there was very great division of opinion as to the method. To iron these out was quite a task. That bill was passed.

INTEREST RATES

Then we passed a provision for reduction of interest rates on farm mortgages. I think that was of some consequence. Agriculture is interested in a just price for certain commodities. It is also interested in taking care of every phase of all commodities on a fair basis.

Then, as you all know, we passed the Sugar Act, in which many beet and cane farmers are interested.

The committee has reported the Great Plains Drought Act.

FARM CREDIT ADMINISTRATION

We passed the Farm Credit Act of 1937. That is a bill of about 40 pages that contains many provisions. It also extends the time of payment of commissioners' loans.

The Farm Credit Administration takes care of the five great wings of credit for agriculture, the first institution in the history of the whole world that has formed a complete and satisfactory credit structure for the products of agriculture of every kind, including the land. It is a tremendously important thing. To go over these technical features has taken time.

CROP LOANS

Then we passed the Crop Loan Act for 1937. We passed the Cotton Classification Act. The crop-insurance bill has been reported. The farm-forestry bill became a law. We passed a provision to destroy grasshoppers. Then we passed a bill continuing the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation, which provides for the use of funds for disposal of surpluses. You are all familiar with its operations, and I will not go into detail.

COMMODITY LOANS

Then this Congress extended the life of the Commodities Credit Corporation for 2 years, which enables loans to be made in emergencies on different commodities.

Those are some of the things that this committee has reported at this session; and I say without fear of successful contradiction that this committee has reported out more important farm legislation at this session of Congress than has ever been reported and acted upon in any other session in the history of the United States Government. [Applause.]

You may question the wisdom of our action or the action of Congress in ratifying it. You may question whether we devoted our time to the important things, but anyone who says that the Committee on Agriculture has not been at work simply does not know what he is talking about. I will submit that to anybody who keeps up with the situation.

ADMINISTRATION RECORD

This administration has done much for agriculture. We no longer have 5-cent cotton, 31-cent wheat, and 18-cent corn. I have, and would like to put into the RECORD here, the December 1932 prices for certain farm commodities and the July 15 prices.

Farm prices of basic agricultural commodities

Commodity		December 1932	July 15, 1937
Wheat	per bushel	$0.31	$1.12
Rye	do	.21	.81
Flaxseed	do	.82	1.85
Barley	do	.19	.64
Cotton	per pound	.05	.12
Corn	per bushel	.18	1.18
Hogs	per hundredweight	2.73	10.70
Beef cattle	do	3.41	7.46
Rough rice	per bushel	.40	.80
Peanuts	per pound	.01	.04
Wholesale milk	per hundredweight	1.26	1.81
Butterfat	per pound	.21	.31
Butter	do	.21	.29

Wheat was 31 cents a bushel. These are farm prices. It is now $1.12 a bushel, or was on July 15.

Cotton was 5.4 cents per pound. On July 15 it was 12.4 cents per pound. It is now a little above 10 cents per pound, an unsatisfactory price but still twice as high as in the dark days of 1932.

Corn was 18 cents a bushel. December corn is about 66 and a fraction this morning.

So, whatever else may be said, this administration has done a wonderful job for agriculture. We have the present Soil Conservation Act, which is in full force and effect. We have the Commodity Credit Corporation, with ample funds to make essential loans.

I regard the general farm legislation now pending as the most important piece of legislation that we shall adopt.

It rather seems to me that in working out this long-range program for agriculture we ought to work it out carefully and on a sound basis. That just seems like A B C to me.

COMMITTEE WORK

Some question has been raised about adjournment. I have been working daily, and my committee has been working daily on this general farm program trying to whip it into shape. I expect to continue to do so; so it makes little difference to me personally whether we adjourn next week, or next month, whether we have a recess, or whether a special session is called. I expect to continue this work because I regard it as important enough to require that action on my part; but in all frankness, if we are to do the job right it is going to take some time. I cannot see any good reason for holding the other Members here unless they want to stay. That is my personal judgment. As I say, it makes little difference to me. I am perfectly willing for you to stay or to go, but I do say this: That I feel, and I believe that my committee feels, that in working out the long-range program, since we have the stopgap so the situation can be handled, the long-range legislation should be carefully wrought out. Much is at stake.

FARM BUREAU BILL

We had placed on our desks by a certain farm group a bill that has some good features. I did not intend to mention it, but I understand that a discharge petition has been placed on the Clerk's desk and you have been asked for signatures on this bill. It is all right with me if you want to discharge the committee with reference to that bill. It has some good features. But it has what many of the committee members feel are unworkable features. Some members of the committee do not feel that it provides a fair distribution of payments to farmers in the different sections. But waiving that question, it provides certain additional payments to be made and then formulates what is called a control system to protect the United States Treasury in these payments and in mandatory loans. I want you to understand what that control feature is.

It provides that there shall be an allotment of marketing to the producers of each of the five major listed commodities. This allotment is made only when there is a normal carryover plus a certain percentage of excess. First, there are certain payments, then a loan; then, when the surplus reaches a certain stage, the bill provides what is called a surplus or marketing control. I want you to follow me in this. It is control not so much of production as of marketing—it undertakes to reach the same end. Each farmer is given his market allotment, but is permitted to sell whatever he wants above that; but anything he sells above his marketing allotment is classed as an unfair trade practice, and it is the duty of the United States attorneys to file suit to collect substantially $40 a bale on excess cotton and approximately 50 cents a bushel on wheat and 40 cents a bushel on corn. It is a civil suit.

CONTROL

I do not know about its application in the various sections of the country, but I do know that there are about 2,000,000 cotton farmers in the South who produce an average of five bales of cotton apiece. About 60 percent of them are tenants in the old South, according to figures, and about half—between 40 and 50 percent at least—are colored people. I ask, as a practical proposition of anyone in this group who is familiar with the situation, if it would not cause a million lawsuits in the cotton South? It would take an army of lawyers to handle the lawsuits. That would seem inevitable.

The South is probably the most unfortunate section in that regard; and I say it with regret. After the War between the States the South was without money. It had to be financed from outside. It has never fully recovered from that situation. Even the landlord whom we sometimes criticize was laboring under the same handicap; he had to get his money elsewhere to finance the tenant, whether he was white or colored. I do not know of anybody from the South who thinks you can sue one of these little fellows and get satisfaction on the judgment.

ILLUSTRATION

To make the illustration a little more specific let us take the case of a man who has an allotment of five bales, which is the average crop; but the sun shines and the rains fall, as they have this year, and the season is good, and he makes seven bales; his children need shoes and his wife has a faded gingham dress. He sells those two extra bales of cotton, which he has a perfect right to do under that bill. It immediately becomes the duty of the United States attorney to sue him for between $80 and $100. They go into court. Maybe they cannot get judgment. Maybe if they do they cannot collect it. I do not know, but I do not believe they can. Do you?

They talk about control. That is all the control there is in the bill about which there has been so much propaganda spread over the country. I have not said anything about it up until this hour because I love the cause so much that I am willing to take a clubbing over the head, and I have taken a good deal of it.

Mr. LUTHER A. JOHNSON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JONES. I yield.

Mr. LUTHER A. JOHNSON. Regarding the bill the gentleman is now discussing, I heard figures given by the chairman of the committee as to the various commodities affected. I believe the dairy industry was first and cotton was second in volume.

I did not catch just where corn appeared in the relative values throughout the country. I understood that under this bill corn received practically half of all the benefits while the other commodities received the remaining half. Is that true?

Mr. JONES. I did not intend to go into that.

Mr. LUTHER A. JOHNSON. I would like to ask the gentleman to go into that.

Mr. JONES. I made the request and I have the information from the Secretary of Agriculture.

Mr. LUTHER A. JOHNSON. I have heard that charge made.

Mr. JONES. Those matters could be corrected, of course. I made the request of the Department of Agriculture, and here is a letter over the signature of the Secretary which gives the amount of payments that would be required if all five commodities were 15 percent below parity, what would be necessary when they are 20 percent below parity, and what would be the payment if they are 30 percent below parity.

In the case of cotton, if 15 percent below parity, the amount would be $156,000,000; wheat, $117,000,000; field corn, $296,000,000. Then rice and the different forms of tobacco would be much less.

Mr. PATMAN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JONES. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. PATMAN. How much was field corn?

Mr. JONES. Two hundred and ninety-six million dollars.

Mr. PATMAN. Cotton?

Mr. JONES. One hundred and fifty-six million dollars.

Mr. PATMAN. Wheat?

Mr. JONES. One hundred and seventeen million dollars. Those are the principal commodities. If it went 30 percent below parity, the payment on cotton would be $312,000,000; wheat, $233,000,000; and field corn, $591,000,000.

Of course, if the price equaled parity there would be no payments.

Mr. BOILEAU. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JONES. I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. BOILEAU. The gentleman referred to the figures on field corn. I would like to remind him of the fact that in the dairy sections of the country a good deal of the corn that is planted is not matured, but is cut up and siloed before maturing. Is that corn included in that figure?

Mr. JONES. I rather think not, although I would not be positive.

Mr. BOILEAU. I do not believe it is either, and although the Farm Bureau is asking us to pass this bill, so far as I have been able to investigate and secure information, I have not yet been able to find out, and the men who are proposing this legislation do not seem to agree on the point as to whether or not corn other than corn that is matured for grain is provided for under the bill. Every time I have asked questions of these men who advocate the bill, requesting them to state their position, they do not give us a very satisfactory answer. That is just one more reason why in the interest of the dairy country particularly this bill should be given further thought and consideration, because the proponents of the measure do not know in which direction they are going.

Mr. JONES. May I say in that connection, there are some very fine features to that bill? With the help of the members of the committee, I have undertaken to draft a bill which utilizes and gives full credit to what we regard as the meritorious features of that measure. I have not discussed all of them, but we took out those that we thought were impractical and added two or three new features.

I do not believe a single Member will sign the petition that has been placed on the desk here if he will but read the bill.

Mr. LUCAS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JONES. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. LUCAS. Is it not a fact that the bill which is now on the desk, as submitted by the Farm Bureau, applies only to the crops of 1938, 1939, and 1940?

Mr. JONES. I understand so.

Mr. LUCAS. In other words, if we pass the bill they are now asking us to pass, it would in no wise affect the corn crop or the cotton crop of 1937 and it would be necessary for the Congress to pass emergency legislation in order to meet this problem if there is a problem?

Mr. JONES. That is correct. Of course, all the production of this year has already been made or is in the process of making and cannot be stopped in any practical way. The only new crop that will go into the ground this year is winter wheat; and winter wheat, on account of world conditions, does not present an emergency situation. I think it could be very well handled in January.

Mr. WEARIN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JONES. I yield to the gentleman from Iowa.

Mr. WEARIN. The gentleman has cited the amount that would be paid to the producers of the various products under the terms of the bill for which petition or motion to discharge has been filed.

Mr. JONES. Yes.

Mr. WEARIN. How would those payments, in the gentleman's opinion, compare with the annual value of the crops that he cited a few moments ago in connection with his remarks?

Mr. JONES. If you include all the corn that is fed on the various farms to livestock, it would be on the basis of value, but I claim that would not be fair for the reason in justifying payments to commodities as such—I am not talking about soil-conservation payments—the question must necessarily come in as to the load and the tariff which that commodity carries. [Applause.]

The main, basic reason for a farm bill with a provision for benefit payments is the fact in the case of certain great commodities the product is produced in a world market, carrying the load of the tariff, carrying a double burden. It carries the added cost of the machinery, equipment, and facilities that is occasioned by the tariff wall, and it carries the added burden of competing with foreign production that does not have such burdens. That is the reason I think the soil-conservation payments with their $500,000,000 is not a subsidy for agriculture. It is a restoration, a restitution. [Applause.] It is restoring to the farmer what is taken away from him under the tariff system. When a man grows a bushel of wheat or a bale of cotton, harvesting the one under the hot July sun and picking the other under the blazing September sky, and carries them into the market in a free country, he has a right to sell them on a basis of equality with other commodities.

Then, too, an important item that is frequently overlooked is the cottonseed, which is definitely a part of the harvested crop and which has a value of about $200,000,000 annually.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JONES. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Does the bill to which the gentleman referred in any way deal with the crop of 1937?

Mr. JONES. It does not.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. That is where the emergency at the moment is supposed to lie?

Mr. JONES. That is my understanding, and it is my belief from the conversation of those around us; and, of course, that is correct.

Mr. MASSINGALE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JONES. I yield to the gentleman from Oklahoma.

Mr. MASSINGALE. The gentleman has inveighed heavily against a certain bill concerning which a discharge petition is on file on the Speaker's desk. I think the gentleman should be a little more clear in his statement and let the Members of the House know to which bill he refers.

Mr. JONES. I suggest the gentleman tell them.

Mr. MASSINGALE. I think I can tell them.

Mr. JONES. I do not mind stating, and I state this because the question has been asked and honesty compels me to answer. This is a bill submitted by the American Farm Bureau Federation.

I have worked with these men for years. I hope to work with them in the future. I know that they have rendered great service in the cause of agriculture. I had felt they would admit that I had endeavored to be of some service, and that the committee had.

I did not intend to mention this bill. The general attorney for the Farm Bureau Federation went down to the district which I have the honor to represent and held a big farmers' meeting in my home town, and then went to Waco and various other places in Texas. I said not a word. One of my friends wrote me about a criticism which had been leveled at me by this attorney at the Waco meeting. In replying to my friend's letter I stated that I regretted this attorney saw fit to criticize me but that I preferred to believe it was due to the enthusiasm of the moment rather than any desire to promote discord. I would not have gone into this measure at all at this time, preferring to present the general principles, but for the fact that the whip-and-spur method has been invoked by this organization. I had hoped they had retired from the use of this method and had thought they would do so. I do not think the matter was presented in exactly a correct way; that is, both sides of the picture were not presented down there. I thought I would say nothing because I have worked for 18 years for the cause of agriculture, and I have wanted above all things to keep agriculture sound in such a way that the 30 percent of our people who live on the farm could appeal to the people who live in the cities and to their representatives for a fair deal. I have tried to keep it on this basis. He does the cause of agriculture no service who lights the torch of intolerance. The whip-and-spur method is all right if it is necessary in an emergency situation, but it seems to me this method is wrong when it is undertaken on a vast, far-reaching, and complicated piece of legislation which probably affects the economy of this country more vitally than any other legislation which will be presented at this session. [Applause.]

Mr. LUTHER A. JOHNSON and Mr. LUCAS rose.

Mr. JONES. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. LUTHER A. JOHNSON. Is the lawyer who criticized the chairman of the Committee on Agriculture in his own district and in his own State a lawyer from Texas who is familiar with agricultural conditions in Texas, or is he a lawyer imported from some other State?

Mr. JONES. I would rather not use such terms, but I understand his home is in Chicago. I did not say he criticized me in my own home town. I think he was generous enough not to do that, although he did go down into other parts of the State and present the side of the picture in which he was interested.

Mr. LUCAS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JONES. I yield to my colleague on the committee, the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. LUCAS. I hope the gentleman from Texas will explain to the Members of the House the diversified opinion of the different farm groups when they were called before our committee, about 10 days ago, on this very question.

Mr. JONES. Yes; I shall be pleased to do so.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. If the gentleman will yield, is the proposition it is proposed to whip through now a bill dealing with crops in 1938?

Mr. JONES. That was the purpose when it started, and as far as there is any whipping done, it is with reference to a program in 1938.

Mr. BOILEAU. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JONES. I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. BOILEAU. The bill which is generally known as the Farm Bureau Federation bill provides for the 1938 crop, but also has some provisions with reference to loans that may be effective on this year's crop.

Mr. JONES. The gentleman is correct.

Mr. BOILEAU. These provisions are the only ones which apply to this year's crop, but I understand there are already provisions in the law which cover the same things, so that the bill being advocated by the Farm Bureau will have absolutely no effect on this year's crops?

Mr. JONES. That is my understanding.

Mr. NELSON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JONES. I yield to the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. NELSON. Is it not also true that we have the necessary provisions of law and that ample funds are available?

Mr. JONES. Ample funds are available for this purpose, and I have been assured by the man in charge that that is true. The members of the Committee on Agriculture are eager to prepare and to carry through a long-range program at the earliest possible moment, and will bend all their energies to do so. We are not shirking and we are not trying to avoid the responsibility.

Mr. DOXEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield for a brief question in the nature of an observation?

Mr. JONES. I yield to my colleague, the gentleman from Mississippi.

Mr. DOXEY. Is it not a fact that the first draft of the bill of the Farm Bureau was not submitted to our committee until May 17, and that thereafter there were numerous drafts of the bill as finally submitted. Also that there has not been much change from the first draft to the last draft, which was introduced by our friend, the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. FLANNAGAN].

Mr. JONES. The gentleman is correct, according to my understanding.

Mr. DOXEY. Never in a conference with us has a farm group outside of the Farm Bureau agreed on the general provisions of this specific bill.

Mr. JONES. The gentleman is correct.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JONES. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. SABATH. As one who has in season and out of season for many years supported every measure for farm relief and aid, I cannot quite understand why it is necessary at this time to rush through legislation to relieve the farmers, when in 1935 and 1936 the farmers received from 100 to 300 percent higher prices than in years gone by. This applies to wheat, corn, hogs, beef, and nearly every commodity I know of.

I feel that the farmers have been benefited and are now in splendid position due to the high prices which they have been receiving for their commodities. So where does the need come from?

Mr. JONES. May I say to the gentleman that I cannot agree with his facts. There have been one or two commodities above parity, and parity is the 1909–14 price, which is frequently spoken of as the golden age of agriculture. The prices were nearer right then than at any other period, with the exception of one or two commodities. However, the price has been below parity for most of the time with the exception of one or two commodities. Then, even if they had been up, the great drought had considerable to do with this, and, as the expression was used by the President, it is wise to make hay while the sun shines. Additional legislation is needed to assure a fair price at all times, and connected with such legislation should be the assurance that there will be an adequate reserve supply in order that the consumer may be protected.

I think it is wise to have legislation and I think it is wise to have provision made just as early as possible, and I honor the Farm Bureau Federation for working on this. I honor the members who are at the head of that organization for the fine work they have done heretofore.

VARIOUS GROUPS

These farm groups met here, and while I recognize the responsibility of the Committee on Agriculture with respect to farm legislation, I have made the statement that if these various farm groups could agree, I would be disposed to help report out the legislation with practically no material change, being willing to take their judgment. They agreed on certain general principles, but on the measure that was submitted to us none of the other four major groups has presented any endorsement whatever. The dairy groups, which handle the most valuable commodity in America, did not present any endorsement and have not to this day.

The Council of Cooperatives which handles the actual commodity itself—that is, the affiliated groups that actually handle the marketing of farm commodities has never endorsed this bill to this day. The Farmers' Union has not endorsed this bill. The Grange has never endorsed the bill. While the leaders of these groups have their preferences in public matters, the organizations are nonpartisan, and I believe a majority of the rank and file of all of them have cooperated in the farm program.

So when the statement is made that the farm groups are together, you may realize that if they were together, bless your heart, I would go along; or if a majority of them were together, I would yield a good deal in a practical way in order to get long-range legislation that these spokesmen favor, but we were left with this situation.

THE COMMITTEE'S WORK

We have taken what I regard as the best features of the Farm Bureau bill. I do not care who gets the credit for it. If they would rather, I will let the name of someone else be on the bill and help report it out. I do not care who gets the credit for the legislation if we get the job done, but I want the job done right.

The committee has taken those provisions and has been trying to practicalize them. While we have been trying to do this they have been out whipping fury into the wild waves, and, of course, situations have developed.

I was told that it would hurt me if I took this position. I realize this is true whichever way it goes. Whether we pass legislation now or pass it later or do not pass legislation now or do pass it, with the situation in the form it is, it probably means that. But a man who cannot make some sacrifice for a cause as important as this, is not of much account. [Applause.]

In framing the new legislation we are endeavoring to embody the principles set out in the message of the President, whose fine interest has made a farm program possible. We are also including suggestions by farmers and farm groups. The committee bill will be truly a farmers' bill.

Mr. ANDRESEN of Minnesota. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JONES. I yield.

Mr. ANDRESEN of Minnesota. In connection with the bill proposed by the Farm Bureau, is it not a fact that the Secretary of Agriculture also appeared before our committee in behalf of virtually all the provisions in that legislation?

Mr. JONES. Well, I would not put it that way. He endorsed it in principle, but, of course, we cannot pass a bill in principle. We have to pass a bill in terms. [Laughter.]

Mr. ANDRESEN of Minnesota. He has proposed no legislation other than what is contained in the Farm Bureau bill?

Mr. JONES. He has recommended a number of changes, and, I think, is anxious to be helpful.

Mr. PARSONS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JONES. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. PARSONS. I have been very much interested in what the chairman has said about the various farm groups, and I am also impressed with his statement that he expects to continue to investigate and conduct hearings on the legislation. When does the gentleman expect to have it ready, after the opening of the next session?

Mr. JONES. We have no doubt we will have it ready not later than the very first part of the session. As a matter of fact, I have given assurance to everyone that seemed to want it that we would work on it and have a bill ready for consideration not later than the first part of the next session of Congress. We will have it ready as soon as possible.

Mr. PARSONS. Of course, the gentleman realizes that if there should be any serious break in the prices of farm commodities a special session could be called for early enactment of the legislation, if necessary.

Mr. JONES. That is true, or the powers with respect to loans on a reasonable basis, with such assurance, could be used. Either of those steps can be taken.

Mr. PATMAN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield.

Mr. JONES. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. PATMAN. It has been contended that the Government cannot safely make a loan on these products until some kind of control bill has been passed or agreed upon; that the Government cannot be protected in any other way. I wish the gentleman would state whether or not he is in favor of such commodity loans now; and if so, can the Government safely make them without the passage of a control bill at this time?

Mr. JONES. That depends upon the standard of measure at which the loans are made. Of course, if you make high loans, there must be rigid control. If you make reasonable loans in emergency, I think, if proper care is used, with a proper control program, they can be safely made. I ask the gentleman, if he does not mind saying, whether he thinks the control provisions in the Farm Bureau bill on the desk are control provisions?

Mr. PATMAN. I do not believe they are effective control provisions. They would be wholly ineffective, if I understand it correctly.

Mr. PIERCE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JONES. I yield to the gentleman from Oregon.

Mr. PIERCE. I think the country is entitled to know how much time these various groups spent before our committee and how recently. I recall it was but one forenoon.

Mr. JONES. We had conferences with the groups on two different occasions and when their bill was submitted we had several days of hearings by different groups that appeared before the committee on the suggested bill.

Mr. COLE of Maryland. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JONES. Yes.

Mr. COLE of Maryland. I want to know from the gentleman if it is his intention to report a bill, say, the 1st or the 4th of next January, or to ask for the passage of a resolution making it mandatory on his committee to investigate this subject and report back to the House at the convening of the next session.

Mr. JONES. They can make it mandatory if they want to. I have taken it up with the committee. The committee have all agreed they would be for it. I do not think there was a dissenting note, and if there is any member of the committee here that cannot agree to that I wish he would say so. We have that understanding, and we assured the leadership of the House and others that we were willing to do that, but if the House wants to make it certain by passing the directing resolution, I do not mind it. Further, the House leadership has issued a statement in which they have assured us that they will give the matter right-of-way for immediate consideration when it is presented.

Mr. COLE of Maryland. And during the interim between the adjournment of Congress and the convening of the next session, January 4, the committee will want to have hearings, and I ask the gentleman what authority there would be for that?

Mr. JONES. Does the gentleman mean in the next 2 weeks?

Mr. COLE of Maryland. No; in the interim between adjournment and the next session.

Mr. JONES. I think the House would give us permission to do that.

Mr. COLE of Maryland. That is what I had in mind.

Mr. JONES. I should favor that. I think that should be given.

Mr. HILL of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JONES. Yes.

Mr. HILL of Oklahoma. It is said that there are $106,000,000 now that can be used for the purpose of subsidy for the farmers who have surpluses that are being sold at less than their value. What about that?

Mr. JONES. There is a larger sum than that that is available for any sort of supplementary payments that may be desired. There is much more than that available for loans. The Commodity Credit Corporation would have the authority to make any reasonable loans, but the gentleman understands the position taken by those who have control of that. There is some reason for their wanting assurance, and I do not blame them for wanting some assurance as to what the Congress is going to do if they exercise that privilege. I have done my best to give that assurance.

Mr. HILL of Oklahoma. I know the gentleman has.

Mr. JONES. That is a matter in their hands. They might want to know that we are going to have a program that would not call for a continuation of these things indefinitely. I can understand the reason for this interest.

Mr. PIERCE. I think the membership should realize that if we are entering on a program of controlling agricultural products it will take untold millions and run into the billions to control them.

Mr. JONES. There might be a difference of opinion about that.

Mr. TOBEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JONES. Yes.

Mr. TOBEY. Mr. Speaker, I wish to address myself to the House at this time with reference to the Agricultural Committee. It has been my privilege to be a member of that committee for the last 5 years. It is a great experience to be a member of that committee, and I pay tribute here and now to MARVIN JONES, its chairman, a high-minded man of great ability, motivated with but one passion, and that is the welfare and well-being of agriculture in this country. [Applause.] Mr. Speaker, when the Members of this House who happen to be absent this afternoon read the RECORD tomorrow morning and realize the fairness and understanding with which Mr. JONES has presented this matter, I am confident that they will all go along with the committee, regardless of political affiliation. I speak as a Republican and gladly testify that partisan politics has no place in the committee's work. We all have the greatest confidence in the leadership of our chairman. [Applause.]

Mr. JONES. Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the generous compliment of my friend and coworker on the committee. I would rather have the good will of the committee and of the House of Representatives, which I believe is the greatest legislative body in the world, than to have anything else. I have always felt that the only way to earn the respect of this body is to be completely fair and honest with the body, and that is what I have tried to do. I have told those gentlemen of the danger in throwing the Treasury under these payments, with a control system that is doubtful. I have fear, and have so expressed myself, that if we did that and had a lot of obligations to the farmers which we could not meet, it might wreck the new program as well as the old. I would dislike to see the work that has been built up through the years lost in that way. In other words, I do not believe we ought to be stampeded into adopting a program that might imperil what we already have. Many people who have studied this question feel that the proposed bill might do just that. We cannot afford to find ourselves in the attitude of having promised the farmer a dollar and giving him 40 or 50 cents. If we promise him a dollar, I want to give him a dollar. [Applause.]

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JONES. I yield.

Mr. SABATH. I fully agree with the statement of the gentleman from New Hampshire [Mr. TOBEY] in the compliment he has paid to the chairman of the committee. I, too, have utmost confidence in the chairman of the Committee on Agriculture, and because I have that confidence I am going to ask him a question, whether he is not of the opinion that if consumption should be increased, and the purchasing power as well, that the prices of the products of the farmer naturally would increase?

Mr. JONES. I thoroughly agree with the gentleman.

Mr. SABATH. Would it not be advantageous to the farmer if we would bring about legislation that would increase the wages of wage earners?
